The rule contains a king of the hill procedure, an amendment to an amendment to an amendment, a series of amendments that amend two pieces of legislation at once. And you sit here and you deal with a piece of legislation this important, and you wonder why all these tricks to try to predetermine the outcome of the vote?

Why not allow the Members of the House of Representatives to have a free, open debate and decide for themselves without twisting the rules around, to try to determine the outcome?

I am pleased that several good amendments are made in order by this rule.

I have certainly seen rules come out here where nothing was permitted. But why not make all amendments in order by issuing an open rule so the House can work its will in a democratic fashion?

Mr. Speaker, let us have open procedures through which all Members and their constituents can participate in the work of making laws.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this rule.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to add one thing. I thought that I remembered being on the House floor when there was an oral announcement made of the procedure, and indeed I have found it in the RECORD.

Congressman FROST came to the floor and at the very beginning, during 1-minute's, when most people watched, he did make an oral announcement that this was going to be happening too. So I think that is important too.

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. What day was that?

Mrs. SCHROEDER. It was Monday, May 7, when the House was in session, reminding people that this was going on.

I think that is important to point out.

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. It may be an important comment. But I think the gentlewoman misses the point.

The point is we should not have legislation of this significance on the floor under trick rules. We should have open rules where we can offer amendments, where people on your side and my side can offer amendments and debate them in front of the American people and have votes on them. Not a king of the hill, amendment to amendment to amendment to amendment. Then you amend two things at once. That is silly, that is game playing.

Why not have an open debate where we can have the will of the House set forth?

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield momentarily?

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY].

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, unless I am mistaken, if the gentlewoman is referring to Monday, May 7, this Monday, May 7, we were in session for roughly 12 minutes that day. Were we not?

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. I am not sure how long we were in session. But it is right there on the very first page, and it was oral. I was here and I heard it.

Mr. GRANDY. I just take this time to confess that I did not read the full text of Monday's RECORD to know that that was there.

I would stress that when the House is in session for 12 minutes, there is a tendency not to pay close attention when the prayer and the 1-minute's and maybe a statement such as Mr. FROST made constitute the entire session.

□ 1940

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. Actually, the gentlewoman from Colorado and I both read every word of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that day, but I fear that most of our colleagues did not.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, it did not take long to read. It was extraordinary.

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. That was our point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). The gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER] has 16 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN] has 8 minutes remaining.

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield 4½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. BOXER].

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER] has done such a good job on this rule. I could tell Members many reasons and in many ways why it is really important to adopt this rule, and what family leave is all about, and what this bill is all about, but I think that sometimes a picture will help make the point. Here it is.

It is about kids. It is about children. That is what this rule is about. We can argue whether a Member got a particular amendment. I think the Committee on Rules is there for a purpose. They synthesize various requests down to size. They granted a lot of options, many options. Many Members do not like some of the options, and we are working hard to see that the committee bill prevails.

However, I think if we look at these children and we look at their faces, we understand why this bill is so important, because really it is the families of these children that make them healthy. It is the families of these children that make them secure. I have the privilege of chairing the Budget Committee Task Force on Human Resources. Before our committee came a doctor named Terry Brazelton. Dr. Brazelton taught members a lot about what bonding means, bonding between mother and child, bonding between father and child. He expressed it very clearly that this bonding is key to the security of that child, that hearing those voices of the parents, their loving voices, feeling those arms of those parents is what it is all about, it is what parenting is about. It is what makes these children secure, it is what makes their future bright. Because without that, it costs everyone a lot in the end to try to substitute for that bonding and that love.

What does this bill say? It is so simple. It says that either parent can take just a few weeks off to bond with these children. The mother could take some time off, the father could take some time. What is the obligation of the employer? Nothing, other than to hold the job open for that parent so the parent does not have to choose between economic security and that child. It is unbelieveable to me that people have a problem. Niney-five percent of the employers are not even affected. We are taking care of small business. We understand the needs of small business. This is so simple. Bonding between parents and children. It is critical in the first few months, and this bill will make that possible for the two-thirds of families where both parents work.

These are changing times. This bill is responding to the new family. Most families, where both parents have to work, and if one of these children is sick, very ill, cancer, a serious long-term illness, everyone knows that child needs its parents. Is that parent going to choose between a sick child and job security? That is not what we should be about.

I listened carefully to my colleagues who say this should be voluntary. Should child labor laws have been voluntary? Should Social Security have been voluntary? I do not think so. What about minimum wage? Should that have been voluntary? I do not think so. Safety in the workplace. should that be voluntary? We all saw what happened in the newsreels. We saw the fire that took place in New York, The Triangle fire, where people were killed. Deregulation, is that the answer? If we believe in family, if we believe in children, if we believe in the image that George Bush put forth with his grandchildren during the campaign, then we should pass this rule. We should be proud to pass this rule. We should be proud to pass this bill.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON].

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to object to this rule. I would hope my colleagues would support me in this. The Committee on Rules has a tough job, and somebody must be the gatekeeper. I understand that.

This may sound self-serving, and I do not really mean it to be this way, but I had proposed an amendment which I thought made a real contribution to the debate. I have been in business. I have set up these parental leave programs. I have been involved in this thing for 35 years. I really felt that what I had was the contribution to debate, and it was turned down.

Now the gentlewoman from California said that the rule is about kids and about bonding. I accept the fact that kids and bonding are important, but that is not what the rule is about. The rule really is about who will have a chance to make an addition, to make a contribution, to this debate. The gentlewoman from Colorado says the bill has been around for 5 years. What I would like to say to the gentlewoman from Colorado is that I have not been around for 5 years. I have been in business. I have been involved in the very thing we are talking about, and the rule has been a gag on me, and I resent it. I am sorry, and I object to it.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS].

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I join with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN] and with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] in denouncing the rule that has been forced upon Members, because in its final analysis, it deprives the Members of Congress, the rank-and-file Members of the House, from offering alternatives to the family leave problem.

All Members want to see every employer in the land adopt some kind of policy for parental or family leave, but what are the proper alternatives? Should that be a situation left only to the whims of the employer, or should it be one that the employer and the employee together work out in a kind of an agreement? Or should the Government of the United States or State governments intercede and force and mandate certain procedures? Those questions will not be fully addressed here on the floor of this House because the rule deprives Members of alternatives.

Who are we? We are the representatives of the American people. Do the American people have different versions and ideas of how this family leave policy should be undertaken?

In the survey that I conducted for 1990, I posed, in 1 of the 10 questions to my constituents, this very issue. It was outlined to them that they had a choice of a, b, c, or d. A, should the present plan that the Congress has before it, be adopted? Only 27 percent responded favorably. Forty-seven percent want the Government to stay out of the employer-employee relationship in this issue.

So whether that is important to Members or not, the letters Members receive, the opinions Members receive, I believe that the American people are being deprived of a full complement of debate through their elected representatives, because this opinion, their opinions, will not be given an opportunity to be reflected in proper amendments as to the number of employees in an affected enterprise, as to the number of months or weeks that should be granted as part of leave. A whole host of questions, and the American people whom we are pledged to represent, are concerned about the issue. Mostly, they want, in my survey of the people of the 17th District of Pennsylvania, they want limited, limited intrusion by the Federal Government in the employer-employee policy to be adopted with respect to family leave.

We are being deprived, we representatives of the people, of a full debate on this issue.

□ 1850

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA].

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, some form of the Family and Medical Leave Act was introduced in the 99th Congress and the 100th Congress. I am pleased that today in the 101st Congress, H.R. 770 is being brought to the floor for consideration. I speak in support of the modified open rule, which makes in order two amendments in the nature of substitutes and five amendments. These amendments are substantive and allow for expression of a number of points of view.

The support for this legislation is evident. A recent Gallup survey by the Employee Benefit Research Institute showed that 81 percent of the people surveyed believed that family and medical leave should be provided by an employer. In addition, 77 percent of those surveyed believed that health benefits should continue to be paid during the time of unpaid leave.

The need for this legislation is clear. Those people most in need of this legislation include lower income workers, especially unmarried mothers, part-time employees, and younger workers. In the recent study, Unnecessary Losses, initiated by the Institute for Women's Policy Research, the lost earnings from childbirth to American women workers is estimated to be $31 billion annually. Total earnings losses per employee experiencing illness are estimated at almost $5,000 over a 3-year period.

The Family and Medical Leave Act would assist those employees, often women, who are a part of the "sandwich generation." These employees are both raising children and caring for elderly parents. A 1987 report by the Select Committee on Aging, of which I am a member, concluded that the average woman today can expect to spend 17 years taking care of children and 18 years taking care of parents. And we know that America is aging. The fastest growing segment of the American population is Americans 85 and older. By the year 2000, the estimate is that there will be 5 million Americans 85 and older, a significant increase from 2.9 million now. Nearly 64 percent of women aged 45 to 54 years old—those most likely to have parents needing care—were working outside the home in 1984. We should not force people to have to choose between their work and their family.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote yes on this rule so that this important legislation may be considered.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY].

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, let me thank the distinguished minority member of the Rules Committee for allowing me to make an amendment in order and fighting for that amendment. I suppose because of that, I should fight for this rule. But I oppose this rule. Although I was one of the Members that was allowed to tinker at the margins of this legislation, I must align myself with Members who were denied that right, like the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON], who knows as an employer and now as a Member of Congress that there are many options that could be provided in the work place in this legislation and will not be provided.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON] tried to set a threshold of 100 Members. He could not do it. There are three States that have decided to adopt 100 employees as a threshold. There are many other States that have decided on 50 employees, and some at 25. And there are probably over 25 States, every one of them with a different plan, and yet because of this rule we cannot mix and match from those State plans and perhaps create a piece of legislation that all of us could agree to because we do not have that right. And we do not have the right to consider the substitute of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] which says perhaps we need more data. Some Members will disagree with that, but I do not. I would have supported the Carr substitute because I would say, rather than this bill which mandates the study simultaneously with the legislation, why not for a change put the horse before the cart?

And we will not, Mr. Speaker, get a chance to consider what I think is the best amendment of all, the Parker amendment, which would have said, "This is a crazy idea, but let us have Congress conduct this study for themselves in Congress before they pass it on to America." But that amendment will not be in order, and we cannot consider that amendment.

So I have to oppose this rule. It is a modified open rule, depending on which side of the aisle we stand on. But it is not enough. This is an issue which goes right into the workplace and attempts to bargain collectively. It cannot do that under this rule. I am in favor of parental leave.

Mr. Speaker, let me just say that if this bill is as good as the proponents claim it is, if it is as strong as the Members who have offered would-be compromises say it is, then it should be able to survive this debate and it should be able to survive an open rule. Why can we not have the opportunity to do what all these States have done, to see if there is a common denominator, not a ceiling?

This mandated leave bill is stronger than any State law on the books. It is not a floor, it is a ceiling, and yet we do not have a chance in this debate to take it apart and see what works and what does not work. That is a shame, because I do not question the motives of anyone in this body who believes in parental leave. I believe in parental leave, but I do question the methods, and that is what this debate is about. And I have to question this rule because our motives are precluded by the method that is contained in this resolution.

So again, Mr. Speaker, I thank the members of the Rules Committee for making my amendment in order. I appreciate being one of the lucky ones, but I cannot support those colleagues who feel that this is enough. It is too little, and it is too late.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN] still has 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I urge a no vote on the rule, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from New York for granting me this time.

I was concerned when I heard some of my colleagues, particularly our friends on the Republican side, say that they were going to vote against this rule because it was unfair and did not give Members an ample opportunity. So I have been visiting with the members of the Rules Committee to determine what that charge is all about, and I think it is important for me to share with my colleagues the fact that when the Rules Committee met, they had 11 requests for amendments. Of the 11 requests, 7 were made in order. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], the chairman of the subcommittee, asked that two amendments be made in order, and only one of those was granted to him. However, on the Republican side, all of the requests they had for amendments, they only failed to achieve one of them, and that is because that one was nearly identical to another one that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTLETT] will be offering.

So it seems to me that those of our friends, particularly on the Republican side, who want to defeat the rule do not want to do so because the rule is unfair or because they have not been given ample opportunity but, rather, because they want to defeat this bill.

Mr. Speaker, let me speak for a minute about the bill. There has been within the past 10 to 15 years an evolution in the American workplace. For example, 72 percent of mothers with children 18 years or younger now work; 72 percent of them now hold jobs outside the home. That is an evolution that never happened before in the lifetime of anyone in this Chamber.

Prior to the turn of the century or, rather, just after the turn of the century, when we had a similar evolution in the workplace, the Congress of the United States moved in to supply workers with adequate protections. Again, in the 1930's we had an evolution in the American workplace and Congress moved in to provide this new work force with adequate statutory protections.

Mr. Speaker, this time has now come again. We have two-worker families in this country. We have single-parent mothers and single-parent fathers that are in the work force because they are required to be in the work force. The time has come again for this Congress and, yes, for this President to stand up and recognize the changes that must be made in the statutes of the United States in order to protect this work force of ours.

□ 1900

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I want to say this: As a father of teenaged children and children who are past their teens now, I have never quite understood what bonding is all about. Like many of the fathers in this country, I practiced something that in these years is now called bonding, and so I recognize the importance of it.

However, Mr. Speaker, let me say that I do not think it is for the purpose of bonding that we will find this bill receiving most of its use from American workers. Rather it will be from that mother or dad who has the desperately sick child in the hospital. He or she has already taken a week or two off from work, and now they must decide, if this bill does not become law, between that child and the need for that child to have their parent sitting by that bed in that hospital or that parent deciding instead for his or her job.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill will not be just bonding. It will be so America's workers can take time off to be with their elderly and desperately sick parent who needs them in their final days and final hours. It is not fair that America's workers should have to choose between their job or their desperately sick, elderly parent.

Mr. Speaker, this bill will right those circumstances.

Will some people be able to bond better with their children? Absolutely. And that, too, will be good.

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 251, nays 151, not voting 31, as follows:

[Roll No. 104]

YEAS—251

Ackerman	Guarini	Pease
Akaka	Hamilton	Pelosi
Alexander	Harris	Penny
Anderson	Hatcher	Perkins
Andrews	Hayes (IL)	Pickett
Annunzio	Hayes (LA)	Pickle
Anthony	Hefner	Poshard
Applegate	Hertel	Price
Aspin	Hoagland	Rahall
Atkins	Hochbrueckner	Rangel
AuCoin	Hoyer	Ray
Barnard	Hughes	Regula
Bates	Hutto	Richardson
Bellenson	Jacobs	Ridge
Bennett	Jenkins	Rinaldo
Berman	Johnson (SD)	Roe
Bevill	Johnston	Rose
Bilbray	Jones (GA)	Rostenkowski
Boggs	Jones (NC)	Roukema
Bonior	Jontz	Rowland (CT)
Borski	Kanjorski	Rowland (GA)
Bosco	Kaptur	Roybal
Boucher	Kasich	Russo
Boxer	Kastenmeier	Sabo
Brennan	Kennedy	Saiki
Brooks	Kennelly	Sangmeister
Browder	Kildee	Sarpalius
Brown (CA)	Kleczka	Sawyer
Bruce	Kolter	Scheuer
Bryant	Kostmayer	Schroeder
Bustamante	LaFalce	Schumer
Byron	Lancaster	Serrano
Campbell (CO)	Lantos	Sharp
Cardin	Laughlin	Shays
Carper	Lehman (CA)	Sikorski
Chapman	Lehman (FL)	Sisisky
Clay	Levin (MI)	Skaggs
Clement	Lewis (GA)	Skelton
Coleman (TX)	Lipinski	Slattery
Condit	Lloyd	Slaughter (NY)
Cooper	Long	Smith (FL)
Costello	Lowey (NY)	Smith (IA)
Coyne	Luken, Thomas	Smith (NJ)
Darden	Markey	Smith (VT)
Davis	Martinez	Snowe
de la Garza	Matsui	Solarz
DeFazio	Mavroules	Spratt
Dellums	Mazzoli	Staggers
Derrick	McCloskey	Stallings
Dicks	McCurdy	Stark
Dixon	McDermott	Stenholm
Donnelly	McGrath	Stokes
Dorgan (ND)	McHugh	Studds
Downey	McMillen (MD)	Swift
Durbin	McNulty	Synar
Dymally	Mfume	Tallon
Dyson	Miller (CA)	Tanner
Early	Miller (OH)	Tauzin
Eckart	Mineta	Taylor
Edwards (CA)	Moakley	Thomas (GA)
Engel	Mollohan	Torres
English	Montgomery	Torricelli
Erdreich	Moody	Traficant
Espy	Morella	Traxler
Evans	Morrison (CT)	Unsoeld
Fascell	Mrazek	Valentine
Fazio	Murphy	Vento
Feighan	Murtha	Visclosky
Flake	Nagle	Volkmer
Foglietta	Natcher	Walgren
Ford (MI)	Neal (MA)	Washington
Ford (TN)	Nowak	Watkins
Frost	Oakar	Weiss
Gaydos	Oberstar	Weldon
Gejdenson	Obey	Wheat
Gephardt	Ortiz	Whitten
Geren	Owens (NY)	Williams
Gibbons	Owens (UT)	Wilson
Gilman	Pallone	Wise
Glickman	Panetta	Wolpe
Gonzalez	Parker	Wyden
Gordon	Patterson	Yates
Gray	Payne (NJ)	Yatron
Green	Payne (VA)

NAYS—151

Archer	Bateman	Brown (CO)
Armey	Bereuter	Buechner
Baker	Bilirakis	Bunning
Ballenger	Billey	Burton
Bartlett	Boehlert	Callahan
Barton	Broomfield	Campbell (CA)

Carr	Horton	Roberts
Chandler	Houghton	Rogers
Clarke	Hubbard	Rohrabacher
Clinger	Hunter	Ros-Lehtinen
Coble	Hyde	Roth
Coleman (MO)	Inhofe	Saxton
Combest	Ireland	Schaefer
Conte	James	Schiff
Coughlin	Johnson (CT)	Schneider
Courter	Kolbe	Schuette
Cox	Kyl	Schulze
Crane	Lagomarsino	Sensenbrenner
Dannemeyer	Leach (IA)	Shaw
DeLay	Lent	Shumway
DeWine	Lewis (FL)	Shuster
Dornan (CA)	Lightfoot	Skeen
Douglas	Lowery (CA)	Slaughter (VA)
Dreier	Machtley	Smith (NE)
Duncan	Madigan	Smith (TX)
Edwards (OK)	Marlenee	Smith, Denny (OR)
Fawell	Martin (IL)	Smith, Robert (NH)
Fields	Martin (NY)	Smith, Robert (OR)
Fish	McCandless	Solomon
Frenzel	McCollum	Spence
Gallegly	McCrery	Stangeland
Gallo	McMillan (NC)	Stearns
Gekas	Meyers	Stump
Gillmor	Michel	Sundquist
Gingrich	Miller (WA)	Tauke
Goodling	Molinari	Thomas (CA)
Goss	Moorhead	Thomas (WY)
Gradison	Morrison (WA)	Upton
Grandy	Myers	Vander Jagt
Grant	Nielson	Vucanovich
Gunderson	Olin	Walker
Hall (TX)	Oxley	Walsh
Hammerschmidt	Packard	Weber
Hancock	Parris	Whittaker
Hansen	Pashayan	Wolf
Hastert	Paxon	Wylie
Hefley	Petri	Young (AK)
Henry	Porter
Herger	Quillen
Hiler	Ravenel
Holloway	Rhodes
Hopkins	Ritter

NOT VOTING—31

Bentley	Hall (OH)	Neal (NC)
Collins	Hawkins	Nelson
Conyers	Huckaby	Pursell
Craig	Leath (TX)	Robinson
Crockett	Levine (CA)	Savage
Dickinson	Lewis (CA)	Towns
Dingell	Livingston	Udall
Dwyer	Lukens, Donald	Waxman
Emerson	Manton	Young (FL)
Flippo	McDade
Frank	McEwen

□ 1922

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Nelson of Florida for, with Mr. Lewis of California against.

Mr. Frank for, with Mr. Dickinson against.

Mr. Manton for, with Mr. Craig against.

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask for this time for the purpose of inquiring of the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAY] in order to receive from the majority the schedule for tomorrow, and I think Members may want to listen to hear precisely what we will be doing on tomorrow's schedule.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, will the distinguished Republican whip yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the distinguished minority whip, the gentleman from Georgia, that after discussions with his side, we would suggest that there would be an hour and a half of general debate this evening, and after that we would conclude and resume tomorrow at 10 a.m., and that after limitation on 1-minute addresses to the House, perhaps five and five, we would than go back into general debate, conclude the general debate hopefully around 11 or 11:15, and then proceed with the rest of the schedule as outlined in the rule with the various substitutes and amendment process.

It would be our expectation that we would follow that schedule and perhaps adjourn around 5 o'clock tomorrow depending on whether all of the amendments and substitutes are offered and whether all of the time is used.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

If we proceed in the order that the rule provides for the time, that means that the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA] and I would not be on until tomorrow. Is it fair for us to tell our folks that?

Mr. GINGRICH. No. The understanding we worked out earlier was that we would do an hour of the Education and Labor debate this evening and then do the Post Office and Civil Service debate, and then tomorrow morning would have 1 hour of Education and Labor debate to be divided equally on both sides. That was the agreement, to be able to rise this evening.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. If the gentleman will yield further, could we prevail on you to consider the possibility, since you are dividing it that way, to put us after you finish the debate on this? you see, we are not fighting with each other like the other bill.

Mr. GINGRICH. Candidly, we are caught a little bit in trying to accommodate the majority's legitimate desire to get all of us out of here early enough tomorrow to be able to go home at a decent hour to our districts, and so I am not sure whether people would be willing to come in at 9:30 rather than 10 in order to continue that schedule. I am willing, if the majority is, and we sort of hate to negotiate.

Mr. GRAY. If the gentleman will yield further, I believe the gentleman is allocated under the rule for 30 minutes, and perhaps what we could do, if it is agreed upon by the distinguished minority whip, is that the 1 hour tomorrow, we could nominally allocate one-half of it under the heading of the Post Office debate, and thus each side would allocate whichever way they want to, if that might solve the gentleman's problem. I do not know. The fact would be that he would still have the 1 hour of debate.

Mr. GINGRICH. For our purposes, I think, though, our side wanted very strongly to have the 1 hour of the Education and Labor debate. Let me suggest, if it is not dramatically inconvenient, I think our side would be willing to come in at 9:30, and that way the gentleman could have his entire half hour in the morning, and then we would pick up with the 1 hour of Education and Labor at 10 o'clock.

Mr. GRAY. If the gentleman will yield further, I believe that that might pose some problems on our side to come in at 9:30. Our view would be to come at 10, and it would not, from this side of the aisle, be a problem if the gentleman wanted to take that hour and say one-half of it is Education and Labor, and one-half of it is Post Office.

Mr. GINGRICH. Let me offer one other possibility, and again I apologize for negotiating in public, but this came up, and I think we ought to solve it. What if we were to allow, since they only have 30 minutes, to allow the Post Office and Civil Service folks to go first this evening, then take up the hour of Education and Labor, and we would still get out earlier than Education and Labor would have originally, and come in at 10 o'clock in the morning? Can we do that by unanimous consent?

Mr. FORD of Michigan. If the gentleman will yield further, the gentlewoman says fine.

Mr. GINGRICH. Post Office and Civil Service will go first this evening, Education and Labor will then have an hour this evening, and we will then end legislative business, and in the morning we will come in at 10 and go to general debate, control half on each side with Education and Labor.

Mr. GRAY. If the gentleman will yield further, we would have tomorrow 1 hour general debate Education and Labor, begin the day with a limited number of 1-minutes, five on the minority side, five on the majority side, and then follow the rule subject to whether people want to offer their amendments or not.

Mr. GINGRICH. It is a pleasure to do business with the majority.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. If the gentleman will yield, I must ask, since unfortunately the rule did not provide me the time that had been requested by the distinguished ranking minority member of the committee, there had been a gentlemen's agreement between the majority and myself that I would have at least 30 minutes equally divided between this evening and tomorrow. Does the agreement just made with the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service protect my 30 minutes?

Mr. CLAY. If the gentleman will yield, the inquiry the gentlewoman made is correct. The agreement still stands. The gentlewoman is protected.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. I thank the gentleman; 15 tonight and 15 tomorrow?

Mr. CLAY. The gentlewoman is correct.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Do I understand that Post Office and Civil Service will take their complete half-hour this evening?

Mr. CLAY. If the gentleman will yield further, if the gentlewoman stays on the floor, she can use some of her time during that debate.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. I thank the gentleman, and I thank the distinguished whip.

□ 1930

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGRICH. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, it was also our understanding that in light of this agreement, we would move immediately into the 1-minutes limited, not have a Journal vote, and debate of 1 hour. Is that also the understanding of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, it is. It is our intention on the Republican side that we would not ask for a Journal vote and it is our intention to not ask for any procedural votes during the day. Obviously individual Members on either side are always free agents, but we would do all we could on this side to expedite the process and go into legislative business and stay on legislative business.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, it would be our hope and expectation that we avoid a vote on the Journal and procedural votes so that we could move through the various amendments, substitutes, and allow the House to work its will, so we could reach a conclusion at a reasonable hour, so Members who are seeking to return to their districts could make early planes to do so. So my understanding is the same as that of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH].

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, that is exactly right. Our hope is by this bipartisan agreement to get through as fast as we can and expedite Members getting home.

HOUR OF MEETING ON TOMORROW

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 10 a.m. on Thursday, May 10, 1990.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1989

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 388 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 770.

□ 1931

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 770) to entitle employees to family leave in certain cases involving a birth, an adoption, or a serious health condition and to temporary medical leave in certain cases involving a serious health condition, with adequate protection of the employees' employment and benefit rights, and to establish a commission to study ways of providing salary replacement for employees who take any such leave, with Mrs. KENNELLY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] will be recognized for 60 minutes; the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] will be recognized for 60 minutes; the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] will be recognized for 15 minutes; and the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA] will be recognized for 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY].

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, the bill before us today is about workers and working families. It's about the ability of those workers to spend time with close family members in time of crisis and not sacrifice their employment in the process. It's a question of choice. During very special moments such as the birth of a child or the serious illness of a spouse, or parent, a person should not be forced to choose between their families and their jobs. It's about justice and fairness in the workplace. This bill does three things: Permits employees to take unpaid leave during emergencies; requires the company to continue paying the health coverage during the leave period; and guarantees the person his or her job at the conclusion of the leave.

Recent surveys reveal that 80 percent of the public agrees with the concept of protecting job rights during times of emergencies and they also support this legislation.

Madam Chairman, political rhetoric about the need to reestablish family values is abundant. It's too bad that some of those most vociferous on the subject are also the ones most opposed to improving the welfare of families.

This bill addresses problems caused by a profound change in the composition of the work force and the effect that has had on families. The great infusion of women, married, single, mothers, into the work force will continue to have a profound effect on all levels of our society. At the beginning of the new decade, we must come to terms with the fact that in the vast majority of families today, all adult members work outside the home. The conditions under which they work must be a high priority.

A minimum standard for allowing workers the option of taking family and medical leave is a critical part of any sound family policy. It is a well established principle in more than 100 other countries in the Free world. The argument by opponents of this legislation that it is anticompetitive is a smokescreen, a distortion. If every industrialized nation already have similar workers rights and most of them allow for paid leave, not unpaid, how will imposing this requirement disadvantage us. Our competition is not in Third World countries—our main rivals are West Germany and Japan. In both countries, workers get 14 weeks of paid family leave to care for newborn or adopted children. In Germany they receive 100 percent of their wages and in Japan they receive 60 percent.

Madam Chairman, there is virtually no cost to employers under this bill. The GAO has determined that it will cost $5.30 a year per covered employee. A Federal leave standard helps business retain a loyal, experienced and productive work force. Providing job security at times of great family need and perserving jobs save the Government billions of dollars in social welfare costs.

The principal argument that we hear against this legislation is that "Congress should not mandate benefits." But that is precisely what Congress has done for more than 60 years and employers, employees' and the country have prospered as a result. "Mandating benefits" is a code word that is designed to stir businessmen, even those responsible, compassionate businessmen to oppose all legislation intended to improve the quality of life for the workers of America. Establishing a minimum standard of family and medical leave is no different than other laws which impose standards such as the Fair Standards Act, the Occupational Safety and Health, Coal Mine Safety Act, Social Security and a host of others. Requiring employers to meet a minimum standard family leave policy which extends the principle of labor standards to meet a new and pressing reality confronting today's workers is neither new nor is it radical. This is precisely how labor standards have come about in the past. To back away from mandating benefits, Congress would have to repeal 60 years of labor law.

Demands for a family leave policy have been growing steadily. In the past 5 years, 17 States have enacted laws establishing minimum standards for parental or medical leave and leave legislation is pending in more than 30 State legislatures. But attempting to resolve a national problem in such a piecemeal fashion is not desirable. State by State labor standards present problems of uniformity and consistency. Labor standards should be national in scope.

Many employers have implemented leave policies that far exceed the requirements of the bill before us today. They have benefited from these policies in the form of improved employee morale, higher productivity, and retention of an experienced work force. Unfortunately the majority of employers have failed to act. Broad coverage will not come about voluntarily.

We have worked on this legislation for more than 5 years. Several committees of both the House and the Senate have held dozens of hearings. Our study of the issue has been thorough and extensive. We have made extensive compromises and changes in the legislation to meet concerns that have been expressed.

The bill before us reflects a broad consensus that has grown significantly since the bill was first introduced in 1985. It is supported by more than 150 organizations representing the interests of women, the religious community, the medical profession, organized labor, senior citizens, the disabled, State and local legislators and many employers. The support is diverse and extensive. The legislation before us is carefully considered, widely supported and most significantly addresses a critical need. I urge the adoption of the bill.

Mrs. MORELLA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I am pleased to join today in expressing my strong support for H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

As an original cosponsor of the bill, I want to particularly commend you for scheduling this legislation for action this year. A family and medical leave policy is needed in both the public and private sectors.

As society has changed, we have always adjusted our labor protection standards to meet the changing work force. According to a Bureau of Labor Statistics study, 64.7 percent of all women with children and 51.1 percent of mothers with infants under the age of 1 are employed. The average working, married woman with children contributes 41.3 percent to the total family earnings. In fact, the majority of women with children work because of economic need. However, H.R. 770 is not just a bill for women; men need the same minimum protection in our society. As a matter of fact, this is a family bill.

Clearly, a minimum standard is needed, similar to child labor laws, the minimum wage, and health and safety standards. The United States and South Africa are the only industrialized Western nations that do not offer this minimum protection to their workers. Most of the 75 countries with a leave policy also offer some paid leave as well. In fact, paid maternity leave is an entitlement in 28 European countries.

The American public views family and medical leave as a top priority. A Gallup Poll of registered voters indicated that 81 percent of those surveyed favored unpaid leave for employees who need the time to care for a newborn, recently adopted, or seriously ill child—or illness of a family member.

The Federal Government should serve as a model for the rest of the country's employers. I am pleased that the provisions of the original bill—providing up to 18 weeks of unpaid leave for the birth or adoption of a child or the serious illness of a child, and up to 26 weeks for an employee's serious illness—are retained for Federal employees.

Within the past 6 months two of my employees became parents. I have provided each of them with several months of paid leave. I believe that the family and medical needs of our employees must be met to ensure a productive and loyal work force.

I believe that the provisions of H.R. 770 which affect the Federal work force will also prove to be a real morale booster in the public sector.

The time for debate is over. The time for positive action is now. I urge my colleagues to support this vital legislation and to join in working to ensure that this is the year when the Family and Medical Leave Act is enacted into public law.

Madam Chairman, I am pleased to note that the Committee on Education and Labor approved an amendment which provides House employees the same family and medical leave rights, including restoration of benefits and reinstatement guarantees, as are provided for Federal employees. However, the Gordon-Weldon substitute gives House employees the same leave provisions as the private sector.

Madam Chairman, these provisions are not as comprehensive as those for Federal employees; it is certainly a step in the right direction, although I would like to see our employees be treated on par with other Federal workers. We must not force our people to choose between their economic needs and their family needs.

□ 1940

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. MORELLA. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Did the gentlewoman suggest when she said that House employees were covered under this legislation that House employees and members of congressional staffs receive 18 and 26 weeks?

Mrs. MORELLA. What I suggested is in the original bill they would be given the same protection and benefits, if we want to call them that, although I think they are rights, as Federal employees would have.

However, there will be a substitute that under the rule will be allowed, and that will not give the congressional employees those benefits that we hope to give to the Federal employees, but rather they would be given the protections that would be given to the private sector. So there is a distinction we are talking about.

Mr. GRANDY. If the gentlewoman will yield further, as this gentleman understands it, there will be an amendment offered to reduce congressional employees' benefits to 10 weeks and 15 weeks?

Mrs. MORELLA. Twelve weeks.

Mr. GRANDY. Twelve weeks per the Gordon-Weldon amendment?

Mrs. MORELLA. Twelve weeks as per the Gordon-Weldon substitute that will be offered.

My point to the gentleman is that I believe that congressional employees should be given the same benefits as are public sector employees. That is not being done as in the course of the chronology of events. However, I believe that they should be given some of the benefits and they will be given the benefits if this House acts accordingly under the substitute to be offered.

Mr. GRANDY. I thank the gentlewoman for answering my question. I am still confused as to why there are two standards, 18 and 26 weeks for one set of employees, all be they Federal employees, and another set for private. But I will not pursue it at this point. I just wanted a clarification.

Mrs. MORELLA. The reason is because we believe it can pass for the private sector, but for the public sector, which should be the model, we believe that the provisions as originally stated in the bill are appropriate, and frankly are minimal.

Mr. GILMAN. Madam Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. MORELLA. Yes indeed, I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990. And I commend the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor-Management Relations, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] and the ranking minority member, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], and the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Compensation and Employee Benefits, the gentleman from New York [Mr. ACKERMAN]. As ranking minority member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service and cosponsor of H.R. 770, I have followed the evolution of this legislation over the past 5 years. Advocates of the legislation have worked diligently to achieve a fair and equitable measure which reflects the needs of families and parents as well as the demands of the public sector and the business community.

The United States has lagged behind other Western countries in creating a work environment responsive to family needs. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, more than 96 percent of all fathers and more than 60 percent of all mothers work outside the home. Virtually all major industrial nations have some type of liberal leave policy which is superior to our own current patchwork of State and local regulations. H.R. 770 establishes a minimum national standard for unpaid leave to allow working people to care for a newborn or seriously ill child, a seriously ill parent, or their own illness, without fear of losing their jobs.

H.R. 770 contains several measures affecting both the public and private sectors of our work force. As ranking minority member of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, I take a special interest in the benefits accorded our Federal workers and the impact of this legislation on the ability of our Government to function effectively.

The Federal Government has, in the past, instituted benefits for its workers which have later served as the model for private sector employers. In recent years, however, Federal pay and benefits have begun to seriously lag behind those offered in the private sector. Title II of its legislation, while providing unpaid leave, should help restore the competitive edge to the Federal Government recruiting and retention efforts.

In 1986, the Office of Personnel Management undertook a review of leave options available to employees with ill children, childbirth, emergency medical, and other problems. I laud OPM for issuing in its Federal personnel manual provisions for "leave for parents and family responsibilities" and "leave without pay" which urged agencies and managers to be flexible and compassionate in meeting employees' needs for leave.

Guidelines, however, do not have the same force and effect of law. H.R. 770 establishes a minimum standard below which the Federal Government cannot sink in accommodating important family needs of employees. The bill creates reasonable periods of time during which a Federal employee may take leave for reasons of family and medical leave, medical emergency, childbirth, early childcare, or to care for a seriously ill child or parent without the risk of job termination or retaliation.

In brief, Madam Chairman, H.R. 770 effectively balances the needs of employees with family responsibilities against those of the employer with business related interests. If we are to be a nation which encourages the growth and sustenance of the family, we must recognize the special needs which go hand-in-hand with familial responsibilities. H.R. 770 strikes such a delicate balance. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support this worthy measure.

Mrs. MORELLA. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN], ranking member of the full Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, for the leadership he has shown in diligently pursuing this bill.

I certainly also want to congratulate the chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, also the prime sponsor in the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] for this bill, and the chairman of our subcommittee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. ACKERMAN].

I want to point out in response to what I anticipated would be asked about cost with regard to the Federal sector that the CBO has stated that leave for Federal employees will result in no significant costs.

We certainly must not force our people to choose between their economic needs and their family needs.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute for the purpose of answering the question of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY], as to why there are differences between the treatment of Federal employees and the private sector employees.

The focus of the debate today has been the basic premise of mandated family and medical leave for employers in this country. If we accept the notion that unpaid family and medical leave is a proper employee benefit—even if only at the full discretion of the employer—we must not lose sight of the fact that the Federal Government, too, is an employer in its own right when it comes to 2.1 million active civilian employees and their families. While the Office of Personnel Management notes that existing Federal personnel guidelines encourage managers to accommodate the needs of individual workers in a flexible manner, title II is intended to ensure fairness and equity in the administration of that policy. Title II is not intended in any way to limit any other leave time available to Federal employees under other existing provisions of law.

It is true that title II of the bill, as it relates to Federal civilian employees, differs in some significant respects from the guidance generally applicable in title I of the bill. But title I is just that—guidance. Title I sets forth the bare minimum standards which American employers must meet in order to comply with the letter of the law. As under existing law, any employer is free to implement or negotiate almost any leave plan which exceeds the minimum standards required by law.

Title II represents the best judgment of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service in devising an appropriate plan for Federal civilian employees based upon the best available information. The plan crafted by the committee would result in no cost to the Federal Government. In its review of title II, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that, "in aggregate, granting employees leave without pay for extended periods does not result in costs greater than if the employees continued to work—in part because the salaries and benefits of temporary replacements will sometimes be less than those of the permanent employees and in part because sometimes replacements will not be hired."

FAMILY LEAVE—18 WEEKS OVER ANY 24-MONTH PERIOD

The family leave provisions of title II—18 weeks of unpaid leave during any 24-month period—are primarily based on the period that child development experts suggest as a minimum for newborns and new parents to adjust to one another. Hearings by the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service over the past 5 years serve as the basis for the specifics of title II.

In our 1986 hearings, Dr. T. Berry Brazelton, a widely respect authority on child development and associate professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School, recommended 4 months parental leave, explaining that the early months of adjustment to a newborn infant are a crucial opportunity for family bonding. In addition, given the current problems of availability and affordability of child care, 18 weeks of leave may be required to secure a proper situation.

Since 1982, the General Accounting Office has provided its employees up to 26 weeks of unpaid, job-protected parental leave without serious managerial difficulties.

MEDICAL LEAVE—26 WEEKS OVER ANY 12-MONTH PERIOD

The medical leave provisions of title II—26 weeks within any year—are intended to accommodate all types of illnessess and injuries while providing employees with the maximum opportunity to return to work for a portion of the day or week. The leave, again unpaid, can be taken on either continuing or intermittent basis. While the "serious health conditions" covered by title II are broadly defined, included in the provisions is a strict requirement that the illness or condition must include care or continuing treatment or supervision.

CONCLUSION

The Committee on Post Office and Civil Service believes its product will enhance the productivity and morale of the Federal work force and make the Federal Government a more attractive employer. The standards of title II are not the most generous nor will they be the bare minimum required of other employers under the bill. Where the Federal Government has the potential to grasp a competitive edge at minimal cost—according to the Congressional Budget Office—we would be foolish not to take advantage of that opportunity.

Madam Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. ACKERMAN].

Mr. ACKERMAN. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time to me and for his leadership in bringing this to the floor today.

Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 770. I would like to share with my colleagues a personal experience that is appropriate to the legislation we are considering today.

Lauren is going to be 21 in November. Lauren is my daughter. She happened to be born on election day, way before the time I was a politician. I was a teacher at the time. I taught in the New York City public school system, I taught in the ghetto. I taught for 5 years and I taught social studies and mathematics and journalism. I thought I was a pretty fair teacher.

After Lauren was born and after the summer break I thought it was an extraordinary experience spending a little bit of time watching my first child, my newborn daughter grow, and I decided I would like to spend a little bit more time doing that.

□ 1950

I decided that I did not want to be a burden upon the system, the board of education, the city of New York. And I decided that I wanted to take a leave of absence without pay.

I checked the leave of absences that were available in the city of New York at the time for teachers, and there was none that was called child care. There was one that was called maternity-child care.

Having no recourse but to use that particular application, I filled it out. There was a place on the form for a physician to fill out his report and his evaluation. I needed an obstetrician. I used a gynecologist who my wife used.

He thought it was a terrific idea for fathers to be involved in raising their children and their families.

On the part of the application where it said "Technical designation for this infirmity"—imagine the enlightenment, to have a baby was considered an infirmity—he put down that the technical designation was fatherhood and said, "Will be incapacitated until," and he put down "does not apply."

He filled out the entire physician's part of the application.

I submitted it to the principal of my school, and she denied it. I then went through the appeals process. I appealed to the local community school superintendent, who thought it was some kind of a trick or a prank. I assured them that I was very, very serious about taking my new responsibilities as a father very seriously.

They asked me to come in for an interview. I asked them if that was a normal part of the procedure. I thought they approved child care leaves of absence as a matter of course.

They told me it was unusual, but they wanted to talk to me. So I went in.

They asked me a lot of questions during the interview. They asked me a lot of questions about my wife: Why would I want to take a leave of absence? Is my wife capable? Is she competent? I will tell you she is the most competent individual that I have ever met.

But I refused to answer those questions. I told them I thought the questions were discriminatory and that I would answer only questions that they would be able to tell me they asked of every other applicant and not because they were singling me out because I was a father rather than a mother. They did not understand that.

I explained that I thought that they were singling me out because it was an unusual application up until that time. Why would a man want that kind of a leave, they asked? Why didn't I just quit and stay home for whatever time I wanted and then come back and take the test over and become a schoolteacher and forget about the seniority and the hard work I had put into the system, forget about the right to come back to the same school that I had taught in every day 5 days a week for 5 years, start all over again from scratch?

That was my choice. Give up my career, give up the seniority, give up the tenure, give up everything that I had gone to school for and worked for, or become a father for a while. A difficult choice to make, a choice that I do not exactly think anybody looks forward to.

But I made the choice. They had gone into a huddle. They came out with a decision. They said on the basis of precedent they would have to turn down my application.

I asked them why. They said, well, the precedent is, "We have never approved an application for a man for this kind of a leave of absence before."

So I said, "On the basis of precedent, I think you should approve it." They said, "How so?" I said, "Well, you have never turned down a man before."

They did not see the wisdom of my logic and proceeded to turn me down.

I then appealed to the chancellor of the New York City public school system; biggest system in the country, thousand schools, million kids. I received an answer within a month from the chancellor, and they turned me down. They said, "Application denied."

The official reason, typed in across the bottom of the application, was that this type of leave of absence for child care is not intended for fathers.

That raised a great deal of anger in me. Why would my employer, why would the board of education, why would my city tell me what my responsibilities should be? Why should they take away the choice that my wife and I had made that I take a leave of absence? Why should they deny me the right to choose? Why should that be the city's choice? Why should that be my employer's choice?

Should that not be the choice of myself and my wife as to who should do the childraising at any particular given time? It is grossly unfair to deny families that kind of a choice.

So it was that in 1970, I took the New York City school system and the board of education to court and we established a precedent. It was the first time a man had ever won a suit of that nature before. It was on the front page of the New York Times, and most major newspapers carried it.

Madam Chairman, I have very strong feelings about the bill that is before us. The Family and Medical Leave Act addresses fundamental shifts in the demographics of the American work force.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 96 percent of fathers and 60 percent of mothers work outside their homes. The participation of women in the work force has risen from 19 percent at the turn of the century to 52 percent today.

Between 1950 and 1980, the labor force participation of mothers has tripled.

The fastest growing segment of this group is comprised of women with children under the age of 3.

Another demographic change profoundly affecting the American family involves the number of elderly in our society. Currently, more than 2.2 million family members provide help to elderly relatives; about 38 percent of those caring for elderly relatives are adults caring for their own parents.

The burdens of child care and elder care create tensions between the family and the workplace. H.R. 770 represents a reasonable approach to balancing the conflicting demands of both work and family by providing adequate amounts of leave and the right to return to an equivalent job.

Madam Chairman, here is our chance to be both profamily and prochoice. I urge my colleagues to remember the American family and to support the Family and Medical Leave Act.

Mrs. MORELLA. Madam Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman for that very eloquent, moving statement and personal testimony.

Madam Chairman, I believe I have 6 minutes remaining on this side.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mrs. BOGGS). The gentlewoman is correct.

Mrs. MORELLA. If I may, Madam Chairman, I would reserve that time and relinquish it at the proper time to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA].

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Without objection, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] will be recognized.

There was no objection.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I do not understand what is happening here.

Mrs. MORELLA. Madam Chairman, I am reserving the remainder of the time that I have, which is 6 minutes.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman I rise in strong support of H.R. 770 and take particular pride in those portions of the bill reflecting the work of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, which I chair. The committee, in crafting title II of the bill in a bipartisan manner, establishes a universal floor for the Federal Government in accommodating important family needs of its employees. The measure gives the Federal employer the tools to respond to the evolution of the American workplace.

The Federal Government is too often an also-ran in the labor marketplace. Few Federal compensation and benefit programs compare with our private sector competitors. Federal salaries lag far behind those of even nonprofit employers. The Federal Employees' Health Benefits Program has been found lacking when measured against private sector health plans.

Title II of the measure before us today will allow the Federal Government, as an employer, to get in on the ground floor of a benefit which meets both its own needs and those of its employees: people who, at a personal sacrifice already, have chosen careers in public service.

The provisions encompassed in title II provide the minimal framework to ensure that all Federal employees are treated equally. The bill recognizes the new responsibilities of two-wage-earner families. While some would argue that the bill limits the discretion of managers enjoyed under current law, the Government stands to benefit through enhanced worker moral, productivity, and retention of quality employees. A new clear Federal policy on family leave means that an employee's opportunity for obtaining adequate time off will no longer be subject to chance.

Many of our employment laws do not apply to the Federal Government. Private employers are far ahead in sustaining employee benefits and compensation. For these reasons, it gives me great pride to join in this effort to strike a partnership between the Federal Government and other employers. In the name of fairness, equity, and family values, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the bill before us.

□ 2000

Mrs. MORELLA. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR]. However, I do want the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] to know that she is in good hands, and that she is going to ultimately get 15 minutes of time, since she has been so important in this compromise that has been worked out.

Ms. OAKAR. Madam Chairman, I think one of the areas of confusion is that what this bill attempts to do is to cover all employees, and that certain committees have jurisdiction over certain employees. Our Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, I am proud to say, was the first committee that reported out of committee the Family and Medical Leave Act that gives Federal employees, for a change—for a change, Federal employees get what I do not consider a benefit but a right, because we are not giving them any pay while they are on leave, but get the full right of 18 weeks medical leave if necessary.

It is interesting to me that this bill has taken 5 years to pass. This is a profamily, all-American bill that invests in people for a change. Not weaponry. We want to invest in people. We want to invest in children. We want to invest in our older parents. We want to invest in our families. If they are critically ill, a worker has the responsibility of caring for that family. Is it not interesting that it is taking Members 5 years to pass a bill wherein we are the only industrialized nation that does not provide any period of job-protected leave for mother or father with a new child, an employee who is medically unable to work for a period of time?

What we are trying to say is that we just want people to have this leave at a time like the areas that I have just described, and not even get paid during that period, and have the opportunity to go back to that place of employment and get back their job. Now, Members would think that this was a monumental event that we were trying to promote. The fact is, we are the only country in the Western world, industrialized world, that does not do it.

I thought it would be interesting to show my colleagues and the American people what other countries do. Chile, for example, and we sometimes cite Chile as a violator of human rights, Chile offers 18 weeks of parental leave and gives 100 percent of the pay. We ask that people give the opportunity and have the opportunity to have leave without pay. Poland offered, before their quest for democracy, and they will probably do even more now, offered 16 to 26 weeks at 100-percent pay. Ireland offers 14 weeks at 80 percent. Austria offers 20 weeks at 100 percent. Canada, northern neighbor and friend, offers 15 weeks at 60-percent pay. France offers 16 weeks at 90-percent pay. West Germany, 14 to 19 weeks at 100-percent pay. Italy, 22 weeks at 80-percent pay. Japan, 12 weeks at 60-percent pay. Sweden, 38 weeks at 90-percent pay.

What the compromise calls for is a minimum number of weeks. What we are asking for Federal employees is 18 weeks with no pay. Here we have all these groups, these lobbying groups acting as if we are trying to do something that is not in the best interest of our country. We are really at a crossroads in this country because the fact is, we are way behind other countries in the manner in which we treat our own people. We are way behind in the manner in which we treat our families. We are way behind other countries, some less developed countries, in the manner in which we are profamily.

We had a lot of talk about being profamily and investing in children and in our parents, in our loved ones, and yet we have all this lobbying going around this Hill now, scurrying around, saying we think this is somehow an un-American activity.

I say we will never be globally competitive, we will never be globally competitive unless we invest in our own people. We know there are examples of businesses that we can cite. Merck & Co., a pharmaceutical company based in New Jersey, a pioneer in family policy that has child care and flextime, and parental leave, they have an annual turnover rate of 6 percent, compared to the national average of more than 14 percent. We can cite other businesses. We say that it is good for the American people, and it is good for the businesses to be humane and decent to your employees. We say that it is not going to cost a nickle to do it, because it gives the people leave without pay.

Let Members start there. So Madam Chairman, it is about time. It has only taken Members 5 years, and it would be very, very shameful in my judgment if somehow or other we did not pass this bill tomorrow. It would be very shameful. I ask my colleagues to support the bill as it has been written.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mrs. BOGGS). The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] for 60 minutes.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY].

□ 2010

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, may I make a parliamentary inquiry?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mrs. BOGGS). Certainly. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I am terribly concerned about the time of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA]. Does she have 4 minutes under the time of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service or 6 minutes under the time of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. That time has been consumed.

Mr. GRANDY. Then, Madam Chairman, do I understand she has no time?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA] has expired. The 15 minutes that were allotted to the gentlewoman from Maryland has been consumed.

Mr. GRANDY. Then I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Madam Chairman.

Does this mean that the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] is now proceeding under the time of the Committee on Education and Labor, and that agreement begins now?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. GRANDY. I thank the Chair.

I did not want my colleague to get shorted. In spite of all the things she will say during this debate, I want to make sure that she has the right to say them.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair agrees with the gentleman.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HAYES].

Mr. HAYES of Illinois. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the passage of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1989.

I often wonder how it is that in a so-called developed and civilized society such as ours, how we, as a country, lag so far behind other enlightened countries when it comes to our social responsibilities. We have yet to appropriately address the need for national health care, we are still working on resolving the issue of child care, and for many in poverty, the reforms to the welfare program still represent piecemeal support in times of need.

Sadly, statistics from divorce to child poverty to teen pregnancy tell us that our families need attention.

Finally, after 4 long years of trying we have reached an agreement on family and medical leave for our Nation's workers. The Family and Medical Leave Act will allow America to join more than 135 other nations in providing essential job protection to people with families.

I have always believed in a national policy that recognizes the reality that both men and women have family responsibilities that must be balanced with their work. Too often, when a child is born or suffers a serious illness, parents are forced to choose between job security and family responsibility. I believe that the Family and Medical Leave Act, which provides for job protection for all employees as a result of disability, caregiving, childbirth or adoption, represents sound social and much needed family policy.

My support for family leave is consistent with my active support for childcare legislation, my ongoing struggle to support worker's rights and my role in ensuring women's economic progress. In my opinion, family and medical leave is a minumum labor standard akin to minimum wage and child-labor laws.

The Family and Medical Leave Act requires private firms with 50 or more employees and State and local governments to provide employees with up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave per year. In addition, it allows employees to take leave in order to care for a new child or a seriously ill child, parent or spouse. Finally, the legislation allows medical leave if employees are temporarily unable to perform their job due to a serious health condition. All of this leave is allowed, and the employees' job will be there when he or she returns.

The American work force has changed dramatically over the last 25 years. The workplace must begin to reflect these changes. Establishing a minimum standard which provides working men and women with the assurance that making their families a priority does not mean losing their jobs, is certainly an important message that this Nation must send.

The Family and Medical Leave Act is consistent with American values and the cost of this measure to employers is minimal. I consider this legislation to be a very modest step in a direction that will benefit families, workers, and businesses.

I am hopeful that my colleagues, particularly those that are so profamily, will stop giving lipservice to family values and begin to see the need for a more realistic policy approach to the needs of our Nation's families. Our futures and our families may depend on it.

In closing, I encourage my colleagues support for the compromise legislation before us today. The President is, as usual, threatening a veto of this measure. My position is to vote my conscience in support of this bill and let the President suffer the wrath of the working men and women who so desperately are in need of this legislation.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY].

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, for the purpose of verification, I have 30 minutes beginning now; is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair would like to advise the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] that under the rule they each have 60 minutes. It is the understanding of the Chair that they will use 30 minutes each this evening and reserve the rest for tomorrow.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I oppose this rule. I have said this before, and I will say it again. I do not oppose the motives of this legislation, and I would take issue with my colleague, the gentleman from Michigan, who asked, how can Members who oppose this legislation come to the floor with a clean conscience and vote against this when they espouse family values and traditional families and all the things that supposedly the President and this party are about? He asks, how can we possibly vote no?

I can tell the Members, Madam Chairman, that my conscience is clean because I have been a part of this body and many of the Members of this body have been Republicans who have worked hard to craft a child care bill that provides a choice, not mandates. I am part of a team, again as a member of the Education and Labor Committee in particular, that has worked hard to create an Americans for Disability Act that the entire Congress can pass. Yes, there will be a dispute, but that bill will pass. And I am part of the Human Resources Subcommittee of the Education and Labor Committee that is for full funding of Head Start, and I am one of those members who ultimately supported the Family Support Act because I felt that our low-income families deserved a chance to get off welfare rolls and onto payrolls.

So my conscience is clean. I can say to the American working men and women that this legislation hurts them more than it helps, and in my position of responsibility I do not want to see it pass. But I can also say to their employer that I understand his needs, and I understand that what we do with this legislation will not mean that this is the only piece of legislation that this Congress passes that will affect his livelihood.

I would remind this body that we have passed, with this gentleman's support, a minimum wage bill, and we have passed mandated plant closings, again with this gentleman's support. We will pass the ADA, as I said earlier. We are going to pass a clean air bill at some point and in some form that will impose costs on those employers who will also provide benefits. And at some point we will consider mandated health benefits in the workplace? And we will consider mandated asset reversions in the workplace, which means that employers will not be allowed to retain surplus pension benefits.

So I am not concerned about my motives, but I am concerned about the motives of this Congress, which thinks we can continue to pass on to the employer these responsibilities and costs and think they do not have a cumulative effect.

Ironically, Madam Chairman, it so happens that this week is National Small Business Week, and it so happens that the national winner of that National Small Business person of the year award happens to come from my district. His name is Barney Roberts. He is from Storm Lake, IA, a community of about 10,000 people, and he has won this award because he has combined growth in the workplace with community service and dedication to his employees, and that includes a mandated benefit which he himself has imposed. I called him today and I said, "Barney, what is your leave policy?

He said "Well, normally we make it a practice to give 6 weeks unpaid leave, but we like our employees to the point where we will offer them what they need. If someone is sick, if someone has a sustained problem with a child or a relative, of course we allow them to go home."

Why? Because the work force is changing, even in a State like Iowa. We require more skilled people, we know that the demographics are such that there are more women in the workplace, more child-bearing individuals, and we need to retain those individuals.

Madam Chairman, I believe this Congress ought to listen more to Barney Roberts and figure out what he knows rather than try to tell him what to do. That is my objection to this legislation, because it tells him what he knows better than we.

We have tried to insert some of those kinds of comments through our colleagues like the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLENGER], who runs a small business, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON], who runs a large business, and they have been denied.

Madam Chairman, I will at this point reserve the balance of my time and continue later.

□ 2020

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mrs. BOGGS). The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has consumed 5 minutes of his time.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 20 minutes of our debate time to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA].

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Without objection, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] is recognized.

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, each day, hard-working Americans lose their jobs because a family medical emergency requires that they take time off to give temporary care to a seriously ill member of the family. It may be a child dying of cancer who needs a mother's loving care. It may be a beloved parent who is terminally ill and requires home care.

In a day and age when the majority of American families need two paychecks to get by, it is inconceivable that we do not have a minimum guarantee of job security when a medical emergency strikes. The debate over the Family and Medical Leave Act is not about mandates or benefit packages. It is about values and a standard of decency to protect the jobs for workers trying to capture a piece of the American dream.

This week, the House will vote on compromise legislation that would protect the jobs of working Americans who must take short, unpaid leaves because of the birth of a child, the serious illness of a family member or their own serious illness. The Family and Medical Leave Act would require companies of 50 or more employees to allow their permanent workers 12 weeks of unpaid leave per year for birth of a baby, or serious family illness.

I speak as a Republican and also as a woman who at one time chose to leave my profession as a teacher to become a full-time mother. It was a decision I never regretted. My years at home with my children were the happiest and most rewarding years of my life. I was fortunate to have the choice. Unfortunately, most women today are not in a position to make the same choice. They are working because of economic necessity.

LIPSERVICE

Members of both political parties talk a good game and give lipservice to family values but turn their backs when a concrete proposal to give much needed support to working families comes forward.

COMPELLING CASE

An objective look at the facts presents a compelling case for a family leave. Two-thirds of women today have jobs outside the home because of economic necessity. Job security for both wage-earners is more crucial than ever!

But this is only part of the new equation. Those over age 75 are the fastest growing segment of society. Americans are healthier and living longer. But the reality is that an overwhelming majority of these elderly will need the care of a family member when serious illness strikes. If they cannot be cared for at home they will require expensive nursing home treatment which relatively few can afford.

These are not abstract problems. Families are stressed and strained by the competing demand of jobs and caring for family members. Families are thrown into crisis when serious illness strikes. I know. I've been there. When my son was stricken with lieukemia and needed home care, I was free to remain at home and give him the living care he needed. But what of the millons of mothers who work for the thousands of companies that do not have family leave policies?

Are we in Congress going to tell a pregnant women or the mother of a child dying of cancer to go find another job? Why should we take a hard-working, productive, taxpaying worker who happens to have a medical crisis and thrown them off the payroll? You cannot deny that for many of them. It may be just a short drop onto public assistance.

LET'S SEPARATE FACT FROM FICTION

Is this a radical departure from the traditions of American labor law? Not at all. It is completely consistent with established labor standards which gave us such protections as child labor laws, antisweatship codes, and the 40-hour work week. As society has changed, we have always adjusted our labor protection standards to meet the new circumstances. The talk about being against mandates and for choice is simply a fiction!

BUSINESS LOBBY

The organized business lobby in Washington is out of step with the real world and that includes conscientious, no-nonsense, bottom-line business people at the grassroots. The lobbyists have over reacted in a way that no one can explain to me.

I was the architect of the committee compromise bill which dealt with every legitimate small business concern. The compromise contains the flexibility needed to continue productive, uninterrupted operations: First, key employee exemption; second, medical certification; third, specialized Divisions; and fourth, permanent employees.

Some have argued that granting this job security guarantee will force employers to cancel or curtail other benefits. not one State, not one business, has come forward to say that adopting a similar or more far-reaching leave policy has caused disruptions or declines in productivity.

WHO'S CHOICE?

This debate is not about giving choice to an employer at the expense of an employee. It is about giving working families the right to protect their job when a medical crisis strikes the family!

Finally, Madam Chairman, the business community has legitimate concerns about the potential long list of imposing new mandates that strain their competitiveness. But this is not one of them.

Family leave is an idea whose time has come.

Madam Chairman, now to the specific requirements of the legislation.

As the architect of the compromise embodied in H.R. 770, the bill is a modest minimum Federal labor standard that simply responds to demographic changes in the American work force. At the same time, the Family and Medical Leave Act takes fully into account the legitimate concerns of business for flexibility.

The Family and Medical Leave Act provides unpaid leave with continued health insurance and job security during a family medical crisis. It strikes a careful balance between the need for working families for unpaid leave and job security with the legitimate concerns of business. Let me outline those provisions which are of particular benefit to employers:

The bill only covers businesses with 50 or more employees. Small businesses won't be covered—only 5 percent of all firms in the United States have over 50 employees. Only 39 percent of the American labor force will have family and medical leave. While opponents have painted a false picture of this bill as injurious to small business, the fact is that a minority of firms will be covered, and a minority of working Americans will in fact have Family and Medical Leave.

To accommodate the legitimate needs of business for flexibility. I fought very long and hard for a key employee exemption for all employers covered by this bill. An employer may deny reinstatement to the highest paid 5 employees or top 10 percent, whichever is greater, to avoid serious economic harm from an employee's being out on leave. Let me illustrate how this provision works:

A highly compensated engineer at an architectual firm needs medical leave as a result of having a heart attack. However, at the time the engineer is taken ill, she is working on an important project that means a tremendous fee to the firm and any cessation of work on this project may result in the business losing its contract. The employer in this instance may allow the employee to go out on leave, but will not keep the job open for her return at the end of the leave period. Instead, the employer will hire another engineer to continue the work.

Employees, in order to be eligible to take family and medical leave, must have at least 1 year of service to the employer with 1,000 hours of work. That translates into working at least 20 hours per week for 1 year. An employee must demonstrate a commitment to the employer in the form of longevity, before being eligible for leave. This is the same standard as required for vesting in ERISA. Seasonal employees are thus not covered by the Family and Medical Leave Act.

An employee must give reasonable notice of the intent to take family or medical leave so as not to unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Moreover, either the employer or the employee may elect to substitute accrued paid leave for part of the unpaid allowance. Paid leave counts toward total leave available under the Family and Medical Leave Act.

An employee must obtain medical certification of serious illness and present such certification to the employer when requesting family or medical leave. This certification must include the nature of the illness and the need for hospital and home care and the expected duration of such medical care. If an employer has reason to doubt the veracity of the first certification, she can require a second opinion. Any conflict between first and second certifications may be resolved by a third, binding opinion.

The growing number of women in the work force—the makeup fully 50 percent of all workers—has dramatically changed the structure of the family. Childbirth or serious illness in a family can mean the loss of a job which can plunge an entire family into financial uncertainty. This is not merely an abstract theory—it happens day after day all over the country. The sad truth is that business has not responded voluntarily by creating family and medical leave policies. It is for this reason that we are here today—to create a minimum Federal labor standard, just like the minimum wage, laws on worker health and safety, and child labor laws—that give job security and unpaid leave for a modest period of time to workers who experience a family medical crisis.

And by family medical crisis I don't mean a child with the sniffles or the flu—but an illness serious enough to require hospitalization or extended home convalescence. I mean a child or employee who has cancer and needs time for chemotherapy treatments. Serious illness means an elderly parent who is terminally ill—is sent home from the hospital and needs home hospice care. Serious illness means the employee who is in a car accident and requires hospitalization beyond the standard 2 weeks of paid sich leave typically given to employees. Serious illness means a newborn child with heart deficiencies that threaten the child's life.

What we are talking about here are severe medical emergencies involving an employee or their parent or child. What we are saying is that under limited circumstances, working Americans shall not lose their jobs and their health insurance. In the name of human decency we have got to muster the courage and the political will necessary to provide this minimum protection for working families.

Opponents of family and medical leave are fond of saying that moderate and lower income workers can't afford to take unpaid leave. This is a red herring issue. In fact, it is lower and moderate income workers who have no family and medical leave policy. It is these workers who, in the event of a family medical crisis, are put in the position of having to choose between their jobs and taking care of a sick child or parent. What these employees cannot afford is to lose their jobs.

Opponents of this bill also state that the Family and Medical Leave Act will result in a decrease of other employee benefits. First of all, what other benefit can be purchased for $5.30 per covered worker per year? In every State with generous family and medical leave laws, States such as Oregon, Connecticut, New Jersey, Wisconsin, and Rhode Island, not one Governor, not one business has come before the House Education and Labor Committee and said "Family and medical leave standards are bankrupting my business, destroying jobs and eroding productivity, causing me to cancel other benefits!" Not one business in a State with family and medical leave laws has come to us and complained. Not one business who voluntarily adopted plans have regrets. Family leave is good business! The arguments against this bill simply are not supported by the facts.

Critics also talk against mandates. Let me remind them that the minimum wage is a mandate. Overtime restrictions are mandated. Child labor laws are mandates. OSHA regulations are mandates. Social Security is a mandate. Indeed, virtually every bill signed into law is a mandate of one form or another. And, some of the same people who will stand before us today and argue against the Family and Medical Leave Act are key supporters of the Americans and Disabilities Act—a bill with universal employer coverage that will impose compliance costs on business that no one even has had the courage to estimate. It's time to get behind something to help working American families in a meaningful, realistic fashion. We can ask them to foot the bill for the S&L bailout; the least we can do is help them keep their jobs, so they can pay the mortgage and the medical bills.

This bill is opposed by the beltway crowd; a cadre of paid special interest lobbyists for the business community who are out of touch with what is going on in the real world. In contrast, the bill is supported by a tremendous coalition of church organizations, medical groups, women's groups, and educational organizations—the types of people who are closely in touch with the effects of dire illness on family life, and who see firsthand what the loss of a job during a medical crisis means to a struggling family.

The time has come to pass a strong, bipartisan Family and Medical Leave Act. The support for this bill is considerable, and it is bipartisan. Fundamental job security during a family medical crisis. It is the least we can do for families who are working so hard to make ends meet. I urge my colleagues to oppose weakening amendments and vote in favor of the Family and Medical Leave Act.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY].

Mr. PENNY. Madam Chairman, several years ago, as a member of the House Education and Labor Committee, I saw the genesis of mandated leave for the birth or adoption of a child, or for the care of an ill relative. The debate dates back several years and involves several permutations of the proposal before us today. After studying the issue and assessing the need, I first came to the conclusion that mandating family and medical leave would force an employer to reduce other benefits, benefits that may be more valuable to a majority of employees of a firm.

Over the ensuing years as family and medical leave has been debated and amended. I became convinced to support job protections for women in the work force, and I introduced legislation, H.R. 3445, to that effect. Since the introduction of that bill almost 1 year ago, I have had many Members of Congress indicate their support for a limited leave benefit for the birth or adoption of a child. Many sectors of the business community have also indicated support. The administration, while generally unreceptive to any compromise, expressed interest. The Rules Committee has made an amended version of my legislation in order as a substitute to H.R. 770.

Unfortunately for the House and for those Americans who struggle with a choice between a child and a career, the debate over this legislation has become a political screaming match. Both opponents and proponents appear primarily interested in scoring political points for November. During the 1988 campaign, the President said "We also need to assure that women don't have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child or caring for a child during serious illness." Now, the President tells us he strongly opposes a Federal mandate to provide even maternity leave. Evidently, the President's policy on parental leave is: "Just say nothing." The administration has no policy other than to oppose all amendments, all substitute motions, and H.R. 770.

On the other hand, the proponents of the Family and Medical Leave Act will try to persuade us their approach can become law. But most of us know better. If it passes, no assurance has been given for Senate consideration and the President's veto threat will be carried out thereby stopping this legislation. In any case, barely a majority, if that, will vote for this bill—far short of the two-thirds required to override a veto.

I sincerely appreciate the fact that the House leadership and the Rules Committee have granted a rule making my amendment in order. But I will not offer my amendment. The debate we will have today and tomorrow is about key votes by special interest groups and gamesmanship by the political parties; it is not a serious attempt to address the issue; and I will not be party to it. This issue is going nowhere this year. Despite the claims of the supporters of H.R. 770, no mandated leave policy will be signed into law by President Bush. But someday we may approach this question with a bit more sincerity on both sides. If so, I'll be ready with my substitutes.

Madame Chairman, I ask that a copy of my amendment and supporting materials follow these remarks.

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Family Leave Act of 1990".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—

Sec. 1. Short Title; Table of Contents.

TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR MATERNITY LEAVE

Sec. 101. Definitions.
Sec. 102. Family leave requirement.
Sec. 103. Employment and benefits protection.
Sec. 104. Employee's failure to return to work.
Sec. 105. Effect on existing maternity benefits.
Sec. 106. Effect on other laws.
Sec. 107. Special rules concerning employees of local educational agencies.

TITLE II—ENFORCEMENT

Sec. 201. Enforcement provisions.
Sec. 202. Effective date; regulations.

TITLE III—COVERAGE OF CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES

Sec. 301. Family leave for certain congressional employees.

TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR MATERNITY LEAVE

SEC. 101. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title, the following terms have the following meanings:

(1) The term "eligible employee" means any employee (as defined in section 3(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(e)) who has been employed by the employer from which leave is sought for at least—

(A) 1,250 hours of service during the previous 12-month period, and

(B) 12 consecutive months.

(2)(A) The term "employer" means any person who employs 50 or more eligible employees and is engaged in commerce or any industry affecting commerce.

(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "person" includes, among other things—

(i) any person who acts, directly or indirectly, in the interest of an employer to any of the employer's employees,

(ii) any successor in interest of an employer; and

(iii) any public agency, as defined in section 3(x) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(x)).

(C) For purposes of subparagraph (A), a public agency shall be deemed to be a person engaged in commerce or in an activity affecting commerce.

(3) The term "employment benefits" means all benefits provided or made available to employees by an employer, and includes group life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, sick leave, annual leave, educational benefits, and pensions, regardless of whether such benefits are provided by a policy or practice of an employer or through an employee benefit plan as defined in section 3(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1002(1)).

(4) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Labor.

SEC. 102. MATERNITY LEAVE REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1)(A) An eligible employee shall be entitled, subject to section 103, to 10 workweeks of unpaid leave during any 24-month period because of the placement of a son or daughter with the employee for adoption.

(B) An eligible employee shall be entitled to such workweeks of leave during such period because of the birth of a son or daughter of the employee.

(2) An eligible employee must exhaust all accrued sick leave, vacation leave, or other paid leave before using the leave provided under paragraph (1).

(3) The 10-week period of unpaid leave provided in this section shall be reduced by the amount of paid leave substituted pursuant to paragraph (2).

(b) LEAVE SCHEDULE.—The unpaid leave provided under this section must be taken in consecutive workweeks.

(c) NOTIFICATION OF INTENT TO USE LEAVE.—At least 30 days before the day on which the leave provided under this section is to commence, an eligible employee shall notify the employer in writing of—

(1) the intent to take the leave,

(2) the date upon which leave is to commence, and

(3) the reason for taking leave.

(d) NOTIFICATION OF INTENT TO RETURN.—An employee must provide notice in writing of intent to return from the leave provided in this section at least 21 days before the intended date of return.

(e) FAILURE TO NOTIFY OR INADEQUATE NOTIFICATION.—(1) An employer may deny restoration under section 103 if an employee fails to provide the notice under subsections (c) and (d) or submits a false statement in such notice.

(2) Good faith errors in the notices described in this section shall not constitute false statements.

SEC. 103. EMPLOYMENT AND BENEFITS PROTECTION.

(a) RESTORATION TO POSITION.—(1) Any eligible employee who takes leave under section 102 for its intended purpose shall be entitled, upon return from such leave—

(A) to be restored by the employer to the position of employment held by the employee when the leave commenced, or

(B) to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment.

(2) The taking of leave under this title shall not result in the loss of any employment benefit earned before the date on which the leave commenced.

(3) Except as provided in subsection (c), nothing in this section shall be construed to entitle any restored employee to—

(A) the accrual of any seniority or employment benefits during any period of leave, or

(B) any right, benefit, or position of employment other than any right, benefit, or position to which the employee would have been entitled had the employee not taken the leave.

(4) As a condition to restoration under paragraph (1), the employer may have a policy that requires each employee to receive certification from the employee's health care provided that the employee is able to resume work.

(b) EXEMPTION CONCERNING CERTAIN HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—(1) An employer may deny restoration under this subsection to any eligible employee described in paragraph (2), if—

(A) such denial is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the employer's operations,

(B) the employer notifies the employee of its intent to deny restoration on such basis at the time the employer determines that such injury would occur, and

(C) in any case in which the leave has commenced, the employee elects not to return to employment after receiving such notice.

(2) An eligible employee described in this paragraph is a salaried eligible employee who is among the—

(A) highest paid 10 percent of employees, or

(B) 5 highest paid employees,

whichever is greater, of the employees employed by the employer at the facility at which the employee is employed.

(c) MAINTENANCE OF HEALTH BENEFITS.—Subject to section 104, during any period an eligible employee takes leave, the employer shall continue coverage for such employee under any group health plan (as defined in section 162(i)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (29 U.S.C. 162(i)(2)) for the duration of such leave at the level and under the conditions coverage would have been provided if the employee had continued in employment continuously from the date the employee commenced the leave until the date the employee is restored under subsection (a).

SEC. 104. EMPLOYEE'S FAILURE TO RETURN TO WORK.

In the case of an employee who fails to return to an employment position described in section 103(a) after taking leave under section 102, the continuation of the employee's health care coverage as provided in—

(1) section 4980B(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 4980B(f)); or

(2) title XXII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300bb-1 et seq.), shall be reduced by the length of such leave.

SEC. 105. EFFECT ON EXISTING MATERNITY BENEFITS.

(a) MORE PROTECTIVE.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to diminish an employer's obligation to comply with any collective bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan which provides greater maternity leave rights to employees than the rights provided under this Act.

(b) LESS PROTECTIVE.—The rights provided to employees under this Act may not be diminished by any such agreement, program, or plan.

SEC. 106. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Act shall not preempt any provision of any State or local law that requires employers to offer more extensive maternity leave than provided for in the Act.

(b) NO VIOLATION OF CERTAIN EXISTING DISCRIMINATION LAWS.—An employer who complies with any provision of this Act shall not be considered to be in violation of title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended by the Pregnancy Discrimination Act of 1978.

SEC. 107. SPECIAL RULES CONCERNING EMPLOYEES OF LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the rights, remedies, and procedures under this Act shall apply to any local educational agency (as defined in section 1471(12) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2891(12))) and its employees, including the rights under section 103, which shall extend throughout the period of any employee's leave under this section.

(b) LEAVE DOES NOT VIOLATE CERTAIN OTHER FEDERAL LAWS.—A local educational agency shall not be in violation of the Education of the Handicapped Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.), section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 794), or title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.), solely as a result of an eligible employee of such agency exercising such employee's rights under this Act.

(c) RULES APPLICABLE TO PERIODS NEAR THE CONCLUSION OF AN ACADEMIC TERM.—The following rules shall apply with respect to periods of leave near the conclusion of an academic term in the case of any employee employed principally in an instructional capacity by any such educational agency:

(1) If the employee begins leave under section 102 more than 5 weeks before the end of the academic term, the agency my require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of a least 3 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 3-week period before the end of such term.

(2) If the employee begins leave under section 102 during the period that commences 5 weeks before the end of the academic term, the agency may require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of greater than 2 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 2-week period before the end of such term.

(3) If the employee begins leave under section 102 during the period that commences 3 weeks before the end of the academic term and the duration of the leave is greater than 5 working days, the agency may require the employee to continue to take leave until the end of such term.

(d) RESTORATION TO EQUIVALENT EMPLOYMENT POSITION.—For purposes of determinations under section 103 (relating to an employee's restoration to an equivalent position) in the case of a local educational agency, such determination shall be made on the basis of established school board policies, practices, and collective bargaining agreements.

TITLE II—ENFORCEMENT

SEC. 201. ENFORCEMENT PROVISIONS.

(a) CIVIL PENALTIES.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), any employer who violates any provision of this Act may be assessed a civil penalty of not more than $10,000.

(2) In determining the amount of any penalty under paragraph (1), the Secretary of Labor (hereinafter in this title referred to as the "Secretary") shall take into account the previous record of the person in terms of compliance with this Act and the gravity of the violation.

(3) Any civil penalty assessed under this subsection shall be collected in the same manner as is required by subsections (b) through (e) of section 503 of the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act (29 U.S.C. 1853) with respect to civil penalties assessed under subsection (a) of such section.

(b) INJUNCTIVE ACTIONS BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary may bring an action under this section to restrain violations of this Act. The Solicitor of Labor may appear for and represent the Secretary in any litigation brought under this Act. In any action brought under this section, the district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction, for cause shown, to issue temporary or permanent restraining orders and injunctions to require compliance with the Act, including such legal or equitable relief incident thereto as may be appropriate, including, but not limited to, employment, reinstatement, promotion, and the payment of lost wages and benefits.

(c) PRIVATE CIVIL ACTIONS.—(1) An employer who violates this Act shall be liable to the eligible employee affected by such violation. Such employer shall be liable for such legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate, including, but not limited to, employment, reinstatement, promotion, and the payment of lost wages and benefits.

(2) An action to recover the liability prescribed in paragraph (1) may be maintained against the employer in any Federal or State court of competent jurisdiction by an employee or prospective employee for or on behalf of such employee, prospective employee, and other employees or prospective employees similarly situated. No such action may be commenced more than 3 years after the date of the alleged violation.

(3) The court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party (other than the United States) reasonable costs, including attorney's fees.

(d) WAIVER OF RIGHTS PROHIBITED.—The rights and procedures provided by this Act may not be waived by contract or otherwise, unless such waiver is part of a written settlement agreed to and signed by the parties to the pending action or complaint under this Act.

SEC. 202. EFFECTIVE DATE; REGULATIONS.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Except as provided in subsection (b), this Act shall become effective 6 months after the date of its enactment.

(b) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall issue such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out this Act.

TITLE III—COVERAGE OF CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES

SEC. 301. FAMILY LEAVE FOR CERTAIN CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The rights and protections under titles I and II shall apply to any employee in an employment position and any employing authority of the House of Representatives.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—In the administration of this section, the remedies and procedures under the Fair Employment Practices Resolution shall be applied.

(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "Fair Employment Practices Resolution" means House Resolution 558, One Hundredth Congress, agreed to October 3, 1988, as continued in effect by House Resolution 15, One Hundred and First Congress, agreed to January 3, 1989.

COMPARISON OF PENNY SUBSTITUTE AND H.R. 770

Provision	Gordon-Weldon	Penny amendment
Employees covered	All eligible	All eligible.
Length of leave	12 weeks per year for sick and family leave including leave for birth, adoption, care of a sick child, parents, or spouse.	10 weeks every two years for birth or adoption of a child only.
Notification to employer	No notice required	Written notice to start leave and resume work required.
Businesses covered	Businesses with 50 or more employees at facility or within 75 miles of the facility.	Businesses with 50 or more eligible employees.
Existing leave	Accrued paid and other leave not effected.	Eligible employee must use up existing leave before eligible for maternity leave.
Job protection	Requires employees to be restored to previous job or equivalent.	Same
Continuation of health benefits.	Requires continued health insurance benefits for workers on leave.	Same.
Incentives for employees to return to work.	None	If employee does not return as agreed, then COBRA health benefits are reduced by the period of the leave.
Federal and House employees.	18 weeks in 2 years for family leave and 26 weeks in 1 year for medical leave.	Federal employees and House employees entitled to same leave as private employees (10 weeks over 2 years).
	House employees permitted same leave period as for private employees (12 weeks).
Enforcement	EEOC style enforcement, with multiple appeals through Department of Labor and right to appeal adverse rulings in Federal courts.	Enforcement mechanism same as polygraph law: up to $10,000 civil penalty.

FOOD MARKETING INSTITUTE,
Washington, DC, May 8, 1990.

Hon. TIMOTHY PENNY,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE PENNY: I am writing to urge you to oppose the "Family and Medical Leave Act," H.R. 770 and to support H.R. 3445, the "Maternity Leave Act of 1989" sponsored by Rep. Tim Penny, which will be offered as a substitute to H.R. 770 when it is considered by the full House.

The Food Marketing Institute (FMI) is a nonprofit association conducting programs in research, education and public affairs on behalf of its 1,600 members—food retailers and wholesalers and their customers in the United States and around the world. FMI's domestic member companies operate approximately 19,000 retail food stores with a combined annual sales volume of $180 billion—more than half of all grocery sales in the United States. FMI's retail membership is composed of large multi-store chains, small regional firms and independent supermarkets.

The "Maternity Leave Act of 1990" provides for ten weeks unpaid maternity leave for the birth or adoption of a child. The employee would be required to use all paid leave before turning to unpaid leave for the remainder of the ten week period. Unlike H.R. 770 the Penny bill would provide the employer some assurance that the employee would return to the job because the employee would be required to sign an intent to return, twenty-one days before the intended date of return. There is also an exemption for small businesses employing fewer than fifty employees.

This bill is narrowly drawn and addresses the real issue at hand. A woman should not lose her job for taking maternity leave. H.R. 3445 assures this without the negative consequences and excess provisions of H.R. 770.

We urge you to oppose H.R. 770 and support the Penny alternative when this issue is considered on the House floor.

Sincerely,

HARRY SULLIVAN,
Senior Vice President and General Counsel.

□ 2030

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. SNOWE].

Ms. SNOWE. First of all, I want to congratulate the gentlewoman from New Jersey for doing yeoman's work on behalf of this very significant legislation.

Madam Chairman, I rise and heave a sigh of relief at finally having the opportunity to speak in favor of the passage of the Family and Medical Leave Act. In fact, this bill has been on the shelf longer than most canned goods could last. The gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] and I have been working on scheduling this legislation since the summer of 1988, so we are very grateful for having the opportunity to consider it.

I am also looking forward to hearing some of the comments from my colleagues who opposed the recent Child Care bill because it discriminated against those parents, principally mothers, who chose to spend time with their children, for here we have legislation which is designed to bolster the American family by better enabling parents to be with their children, spouses, or their own parents in times of need, and now the opponents are saying this choice should not be mandated. Well, what kind of choice is it for a woman who will end up losing her job?

This bill will recognize in a substantive form the changing composition of the American work force and the corresponding new pressures on American families.

With 50 percent of mothers of children under age 1 working outside the home and with one-quarter to one-third of workers responsible for the care of an elder, the working world of today was not designed with family in mind.

In the past, women cared for children and elders at home. Even today it is expected that the average woman will spend 18 years caring for a dependent child, and 17 years caring for a dependent elder. Yet when can women provide such care if they enter the work force in ever-increasing numbers?

The fact is that times have changed, and Federal Government policies have to change as well.

Many States, not surprisingly, already have done so. In my own State of Maine, for example, there is a leave policy substantially similar to the proposal we will be considering tomorrow. It even applies to businesses with 25 or more employees, not 50, as the substitute will recommend.

Yet the State of Maine is predominantly a small business state. What has been the experience in Maine? It has been a very positive experience. I have not received one complaint concerning that State's policy, even though I actively solicited comments in that regard. When the State legislature met recently and was considering elimination of the sunset provision in that legislation, the State official who oversees the law said that their original concerns had not materialized.

Recently Maine State employees demonstrated the need and desire for increased flexibility in the workplace. Over 1,800 employees expressed interest in a program in which they can take one day off without pay every 2 weeks, without losing their benefits or their jobs. Clearly, that demonstrates the need and interest for workplace change exists.

Other countries, as has been mentioned here this evening, have realized this as well. Until recently the United States was alone among industrialized nations, with that well-known center of enlightened government, South Africa, in lacking a family leave policy. Now even South Africa has adopted a more progressive policy than we have, leaving us in shameful isolation.

What is stopping us from adopting a family leave policy? Well, that is the concern that this bill will lead to discrimination against women. Well, companies that discriminate do so at their own peril, because two-thirds of the new entrants into the work force over the next decade will be women, so the company that discriminates against them discriminates against its own future.

We hear that family leave represents an inordinate cost to business. Yet these costs are already being borne by society. One study found that the lack of leave costs workers involved in birth or adoption some $607 million, on top of the costs of pregnancy or adoption itself.

Workers who cannot return to their jobs wind up receiving unemployment and other forms of public assistance, all at a cost to the taxpayer. In effect, tax dollars now subidize the business decision not to provide job protection.

Now, we have also heard that this legislation will only benefit middle income workers, that it will not benefit low income workers. Well, we know that low income workers need family and medical leave. The fact is, and I quote from a letter that the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] and I are distributing to our colleagues tomorrow, that the least privileged, most vulnerable workers, are most likely to be without employer-provided job-protected leave. A 1986 study found that the average earnings of female employees without leave was only $10,765, compared to the $16,000 for female employees with leave.

Fact: Employees without adequate leave suffered increased unemployment.

Fact: While all employees who must be absent from work because of pressing family and medical leaves lose income, the loss is particulary severe for those without job protected leave. In fact, the annual earnings of women who do not have job protected leave fall an average of 29 percent after giving birth, compared to 18 percent for women who do have job-protected leave.

In conclusion, I understand the concerns raised by business and employers concerning this legislation. That is why I am very pleased with this compromise that will be offered tomorrow in the form of the Gordon-Weldon substitute. In fact, it has been one of several compromises that has been offered and developed over the last few years in response to the number of concerns that have been raised.

The plain fact is that short run adherence to the status quo will mean long-term losses in productivity for our society. It represents a cost to the worker.

It represents a cost to the employer. It represents a cost to society. It represents a cost to our government. With this legislation we have a chance for a change, to grapple with a very serious situation that ultimately will become a societal crisis.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLENGER].

Mr. BALLENGER. Madam Chairman, I would like to thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

I rise in opposition to the Family and Medical Leave Act.

There is a critical distinction between supporting family and medical leave as a good employee benefit and viewing these benefits as Government-directed and controlled by mandate. Congress should not mandate the particular employee benefits that a business can or cannot provide. Any mandate undermines the voluntary, flexible, and creative benefit system currently in place in this country today. The comprehensive benefit policies of today have helped many employers and workers. The legislation before us today threatens employee benefits and acutally may hinder an employer's ability to meet the needs of our changing work force.

□ 2040

I was a small businessman before, in my pre-Capitol days, and I would like to point out some of the cost problems in this legislation.

Supporters of this legislation keep citing again and again a GAO study that estimates an average cost to the employer under this bill to be $5.30 per employee annually. According to the GAO, there is little cost to the employer due to replacement of workers, hiring, training costs, lost productivity, or overtime.

I would like to point out a few problems with this fairy-tale estimate. First, I would like to say that the large majority of businesses in this country today already have some form of family leave, and I would like to know where those millions of women who are dissatisfied are. I have received no mail at all concerning this.

One more thing that I would like to say is nations; we keep citing Chile and South Africa and everybody else; nations do not provide benefits. Businesses do.

Let me get to one of the many distortions in this bill. The GAO report of $5.30 per employee per year, first of all, I need to say that if the job does not need a replacement, then one does not need the job. In other words, business people do not have people on their payroll who do not need to be replaced in case they disappear.

GAO says there is almost no difficulty at all in their discussion with business of replacing these people. There will be no cost.

Bryant Gumbel on TV this morning quoted this GAO report saying $5.30.

As a businessman, I took my own company and sat down to figure this out. My average wage is $8 an hour. To replace this worker takes time and a half. It has got to be overtime by that individual. Time and a half would produce $12 an hour. That is $4 over the standard cost. So I had used the $4. My fringe benefits run another 25 percent, and that is another $3, or $7 an hour for 12 weeks times 40 hours, instead of $5.30. This thing figures out to $3,360 per employee. The $5.30 is idiotic.

The premiums in my company alone, the insurance premiums paid by the company per individual, are $83 a month times the 3 months if they stay out the whole time, which is $249. At the present time, my company has fringes that include health benefits, life insurance, retirement, and the bill says these will be frozen. One cannot freeze benefits. They will continue.

At the present time, I offer maternity leave up to 6 months, paid time up to 60 days, flexible work schedules for sick children.

To pay for this, the mandated costs, what do we cut? Weight-loss classes, blood screening, cancer screening, physicals after 4 years. Workers who do not want and cannot use this benefit, like unmarrieds and elderly workers, should have a choice. They should be allowed to pick the benefits they want to spend their money on. It is their decision to make, not the politicians' in Washington.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes and 20 seconds to the gentlewoman from Washington [Mrs. UNSOELD].

Mrs. UNSOELD. Madam Chairman, I rise today to join my colleagues in support of the Family and Medical Leave Act—legislation that has been a long time in coming for America's families.

We live in a nation where we value the family above all else. Or at least we say we do. We wax poetic about how important strong families are—important for building healthy lives for our children, for building productive futures, for building a better America.

Today many claim the American family is falling apart. They blame our social and economic ills on the demise of the family. Well, families are facing new challenges and I believe there is a connection between strong families and our social and economic success.

Families are our most important resource. They are this country's infrastructure. Yet if families are so important why do we not, as a nation, provide better support systems? The United States is conspicuous among advanced industrialized countries, in our failure to develop policies responsive to the family. We are the only country on Earth where you can be fired for having a baby.

We need to help parents and their children get off to a good start. They need to spend more time with their newborns or newly adopted children than a few token hours bonding in the delivery room. Parents need to be able to care for their families in times of medical crisis. We need to allow parents to be both a good parent and a good employee. Let us face it, parents are better employees if their family obligations are taken care of. We need to help parents live up to their family responsibilities. If we do so, our entire society will be better off.

THE SHIRLEY RECTOR STORY

The need for family leave never hit home more strongly than when one of the members of the Washington State Legislature, Shirley Rector, took the floor and related her personal story. At 26, Shirley was the family breadwinner, putting her husband through school, when she found out she would never be able to have children. She and her husband desperately wanted a family so they decided to adopt. They applied for adoption and were encouraged by the agency to begin to plan for their first child.

They bought baby clothes, picked out names, set up a nursery, and made all the plans excited new parents make. Rightfully, the agency required parents to take a 3- to 4-month leave of absence from work to spend time bonding with their new child. But when Shirley asked her employer for time off because she and her husband wanted to adopt a child, she was flatly told no.

The Rectors had to make the choice between having a family and working to provide for themselves. What kind of a choice is that? The Rectors were heartbroken. They were forced to give up the child they had always wanted. They never did adopt. They were denied a family, even a future, because no one would give them a few weeks out of their lives to care for a new child. This is unforgiveable.

Shirley says today that family and medical leave is not a male/female issue. It is not a business/union issue. It is an issue of simple human concern. Families are the real issue here. In our zest to remain strong in an ever increasingly competitive world, we must not lose sight of the fact that our families are our most important resource.

Let us live up to the courage of our convictions and pass this bill. This bill is sensitive to the concerns of small business, while making a renewed commitment to families. Strong families and a sound business community are the foundation for a strong, productive, and competitive country.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL], a member of the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. FAWELL. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 770.

I must confess that I am a bit confused as I listen to the very fine arguments on both sides of this issue, but it seems to me that the issue here is not the family or choice in regard to a family as has been suggested. The issue, it does not seem to me, is parental leave or even bonding between parents and children. By the way, as one person testified in our committee, bonding between parent and child is a lifelong responsibility.

It seems to me that the real issue, at least as I see it here, the overwhelming issue is whether Congress should mandate, and I will use that word, not a parental leave program, but an inflexible, one-way, for all national Federal employee leave program for all of America's employers, for-profit businesses, not-for-profit companies, charities, all State and local governments, hospitals, schools, colleges, universities, and the list goes on and on. We will start with those that have more than 50 part-time and full-time workers, but we all know that we are going to try to include them all eventually.

The mandate assumes that the job responsibilities and the employee leave programs of a fire department in Albuquerque or a hospital trauma team in San Francisco are the same as a manufacturer of widgets in Boston or a college in Florida, as if the unique and dangerous challenges of a drug or homicide team in Chicago or New York and their leave policies pose the same personnel problems and needs as a department store in Philadelphia or a major-league baseball team operating out of Houston.

It seems to me that it is audacious for Congress to assume that it has the wisdom or the right to directly mandate in detail, and read the details of that bill, a Federal leave program for all of the diverse employment structures of America.

These employers are obliged to meet the thousands of distinct and differing needs of millions of private and public job functions in America where the leave policies have to dovetail with the various job responsibilities.

Now, this is especially true with local governments all over America. Local governments have vital public health, safety, educational, and social responsibilities to fulfill, and these local officials know a lot more than Congress about crafting of their employee leave policies to fit the unique and the distinct public missions which may be entrusted to them as mandated by local and State laws.

What makes Congress believe it can tell a public hospital in Chicago or for that matter any hospital anywhere in the country when and under what circumstances badly needed physical therapists or ambulance drivers or paramedics or emergency room personnel may take 12 weeks of leave, in one chunk, or intermittently, if you please, and fully expect to have the same demanding jobs for which, by the way, replacements are extremely difficult to find, waiting for them when and if they choose to return.

I recently spoke to a fire chief of a mid-sized city in Lisle, IL, who pointed out that without flexible local control over employee leave, the fire department, unable to control its own employee leave program, could fail to meet the manpower requirements dictated by State laws and be forced to close for a day or two until the employee came back or they found a replacement.

Health and safety mandates though make replacement workers next to impossible to find. The probationary period for a fireman is 10 months. Paramedics have to have at least 480 hours of training to even draw blood from a needle.

Madam Chairman, we are working with the public health and safety all over this Nation. How does a fire department or a nuclear powerplant respond if its emergency personnel have taken leave under a rigid one-way-for-all Federal mandate coming from where we know it all, Washington, DC.

Now, obviously the proponents realize the unworkability of this proposal, but, alas, only to a tiny degree, because they set forth special rules of the unique needs of leave programs affecting elementary and secondary schools.

But what about the million and one unique needs of the rest of our local government employers who are attempting to fulfill their equally unique public duties, not to mention the varied and diverse private employers of America?

Madam Chairman, the United States is a little United Nations. The millions of private and public employers of this nation are diverse, they are all unique, and they are all free, at least much more so than most of the nations in this world. They are not perfect, but they know their distinct public and private callings, far better than Congress.

They are not insensitive to their employees or the many employee benefit programs employees desire, of which, as the previous speaker brought out, employee leave is only one.

Madam Chairman, there is a reason why few states have laws as restrictive and as confining as this bill, and that is because they know better than we in Washington the varied and distinct needs of the diverse employment structures within their state, urban, rural, or otherwise. We should understand that.

Madam Chairman, the question of employee leave all across this vast Nation of ours cannot be met by a one-way-for-all edict out of Washington. The cure of this bill is, I agree, far worse than any of the wrongs it is intended to cure.

□ 2050

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

Ms. MOLINARI. Madam Chairman, today I rise in support of the Family and Medical Leave Act, and in particular the Weldon-Gordon substitute we will be discussing tomorrow.

Years ago Congress could perhaps give businesses the latitute of making the decision to grant parental and medical leave, but those days are gone. According to a recent Census Bureau report, only 28 percent of new mothers quit working from 1981 to 1985. Compare that figure to the figure of 60 percent of new mothers who were able to quit work from 1961 to 1965.

I daresay looking at the last 4½ years, the need for working mothers to stay employed has increased. We can no longer leave this discretion to the business person.

Now, God bless the good and sensible businessman or woman that my colleague from Iowa described who understands it is good and smart business to take care of his or her employees. He or she should no longer fear the mandates of this legislation, but rather welcome the equity that it would bring in the marketplace.

But what about those less cautious, less concerned businessmen and women who will not rely and give the benefit of the doubt to their employee who needs that special time? That employee will fall through the cracks and ultimately become a greater societal burden and contribute to a multitude of problems.

If we are going to encourage growth in our economy and encourage productivity in our work force, we must send a message of encouragement to all families. It is a tragedy when a young couple must postpone their dream of having a child for fear of losing a job or losing a real needed income. Let us send a message to the working people of this country that we will not force them into that harsh decision, and if a worker suddenly becomes ill or family member needs love and attention, they will not be hurt by the system.

This does not send a signal of government interference, but rather it sends a message that Congress has a lot of compassion and a little common sense.

I only need 1 more second to answer the important recollection that the gentleman from Iowa made in correctly pointing out that this week we in Congress celebrated Small Business Week. I would also like to remind the gentleman that this Sunday we celebrate through our Nation Mother's Day.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON].

Mr. HOUGHTON. Madam Chairman, I am disturbed the way this discussion is going. If you are for a particular feature which is not incorporated in this bill, you are against family planning and family leave. I think that is a mistake.

I don't know who I am talking to. There are not too many people here tonight, and most people I suppose have sort of made up their mind on this darn thing. But I really feel we all recognize the elements here. There is a change in the work force. Mothers and fathers should not be separated and you should not make the change or the decision that it is a job or a family.

But we also know that there are people who receive and people who provide, and small businesses particularly are the ones who are going to be hurt by this. Small businesses are fragile. They produce 70 or 80 percent of the new jobs in this country, and we cannot compare ourselves to our foreign partners, because we have grown so breathtakingly faster than they have. There is absolutely no comparison.

But it all sounds so simple, that we produce a law, the employer pays, the employee receives. But it is not that simple at all.

I was associated and I had part of my skin in a plan, which is pretty good plan, but it was a relatively large company, and we could maneuver around all the different features. If somebody was pregnant and was having a child, she would get 6 weeks, full pay, and then after that another 6 weeks where the insurance would kick in, and after that another 20 weeks so she could be with the child, and the same features would apply to many people who had family problems in terms of illness.

□ 2100

H.R. 770 is not going to provide medical leave. Let us not be arrogant about that.

Most people do this anyway. The ones who do not are the ones that are small and are growing. There was a fellow in my office today and I was talking about this, and I said what do you think about it. He said: "A terrific plan, I want to do it." But he said, "I can't do it now, I can't afford it, but I will do it someday, I am going to do it because it is right for the employees."

That is the type of attitude there is. What this bill does is universalizes the concept and affects not only the very large companies but the tiny, struggling companies that cannot afford this, and it shoves another regulation down their throat.

The thing I ask is really can we not trust people to do this? Do we think that by passing this law people are going to be better off?

Most people want to do it. They want to take credit for it whether it is a company or a union.

I read the other day about George McGovern. He is running a small motel, and he said:

> You know, I never knew what it was like to run a business before. I never had to meet a payroll, I never had to go down to Hartford and pay taxes, I never had to do any of the things which are required of a business. I only wish I had known this before I ran for the Presidency.

Most people do not know this. Most people have never had to meet a payroll. The larger companies can do anything. We can do anything. It is the smaller firms that I am worried about, and they are not protected in this particular act.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, is the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] no longer seeking time?

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, the gentleman from Missouri is reserving his time for closing debate tonight.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. HOLLOWAY].

Mr. HOLLOWAY. Madam Chairman, I really do not know how to approach debate on this except to say maybe I have a great idea for us trying to balance our budget, and maybe we can become the AFL–CIO and start charging union dues, because that seems to be what we are trying to accomplish in this Chamber, not only with this bill, but bill after bill after bill. We are going to mandate the benefits to the employees.

Why do we need unions? Why do people out there in the public sector need unions? The unions can just depend on us.

I am a small businessman and a typical small businessman as the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON], just talked about, an employer of 40 to 60 employees in a very heavy labor-intensive business.

Minimum wage came along. I had very few people on minimum wage, even though I am a farm-type employer. But yet I took all 40 of my employees and I had to increase them because it was right, because I had to increase 5 or 6 that were making minimum wage and I increased all of my employees. My expenses for operating a small business went up 10 percent this year and will go up 20 percent next year. I will give those benefits, I have no problem with doing that, until I go broke, and then there are 60 people left out on the street. I have no problem giving mandated benefits to my employees.

They come to me and they tell me they have a problem. I, as 90 percent or 99 percent of the businesses in this country, as a good employer, I am not going to run a good employee off. No one wants to lose an employee that is productive for him. We are sounding like the businesses of this country just want to run people off. That is not what it is all about in America.

I have no problem giving a lady as much time off as she needs or a gentleman who works for me if they have problems, or if they are pregnant, or have a sick mother or whatever it may be. But if we continue down the road we are going with this, with ADA, mandatory health, the other issues that we keep putting on businesses such as mine, they will not be able to operate in this country. Maybe a business with 5 people can, maybe they will be able to do the benefits, or maybe a company with 500 or 600 will be able to operate. But we are going to put the backbone of this country out of business, and that is the small businesses like Holloway Nursery who pays 50 employees and who is a very important part of Rapides Parish in Louisiana. There will not be any of us around or there will be a few. Maybe in a State where there is great economic growth there will not be a problem. But in the oil patches of Louisiana, Texas, and Oklahoma, today there is a problem. We have a problem staying in business, and you do nothing here to help it.

I suggest we start collecting union dues and go ahead and represent the employees of the country, cut out the AFL-CIO, the Teamsters, we do not need them anymore. We will do it for them. Maybe we can collect the $20 a week or the $20 a month it takes.

Mr. DELLUMS. Madam Chairman, the Congressional Black Caucus today appeals to the Congress to take a stand for the American family and the future well-being of our Nation by voting for passage of the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The balance between work and family responsibilities is a precarious one. Over the past 25 years, the demographics of the American work force and American families have changed dramatically. These changes hold significant implications for both American public policy and for every individual.

The once typical American family, where the father worked for pay and the mother stayed at home with the children, is vanishing. Today, less than 10 percent of the population fits the classic family model headed by a single male breadwinner. The majority of American families are comprised of two-earner couples working outside the home and, as of 1987, a majority of mothers with children under 1 year of age are in the work force.

Between 1950 and 1985, the number of women in the labor force increased by 178 percent, while the number of men rose by only 47 percent. Women make up 44 percent of the work force and by 1990 are expected to make up one-half of the work force. Over half of all mothers with children under the age of 1 are working outside the home.

Most women work out of economic necessity. In today's economy, most couples need two incomes to maintain the standard of living their parents enjoyed with only one income; single parents are struggling to survive. In addition to child care responsibilities, many families also provide unpaid care to elderly parents and relatives who are seriously ill.

Most employees cannot afford to leave their jobs when they must care for a new child or a seriously ill family member, or when they must be absent because of their own medical conditions. Most families cannot afford to forfeit the income that enables them to pay the rent, make car payments, and put food on the table. The obstacles facing working families are daunting enough. Families need the security of knowing that caring for their families and themselves will not jeopardize their economic well-being.

Employers generally have failed to adapt their policies to meet the family and medical needs of their employees and their dependents. Employed women have borne a disproportionate share of the burden as they have struggled to fulfill both their traditional family responsibilities and maintain paid jobs.

According to one national survey, just half of large employers offer unpaid job-protected parental leave for women after childbirth. Paternity leave allowed by large employers is generally limited to a few days, according to another study; and a General Accounting Office study shows that more than 60 percent of employees are not covered by short-term disability plans.

Existing labor standards are inadequate to meet the needs of today's working parents. Currently, no Federal policy exists that guarantees family leave or medical leave. A handful of States require some job guarantees for pregnancy, parental and general medical leave; however, these laws are both inconsistent from one State to the next and inadequate.

Under the Federal Pregnancy Discrimination Act, employers must treat pregnancy-related disabilities just as they would any other temporary disability. Unfortunately, many employers do not provide their workers with leaves for temporary disabilities. Employees are too often dismissed because they are unable to work due to medical conditions, such as pregnancy, childbirth, heart attacks, and cancer.

The United States is alone among advanced industrialized countries in the lack of development of parental leave benefits. The United States still provides no national health insurance, minimum maternity or parenting benefits, or job-protected leaves at the time of childbirth of for other serious health conditions. Over 100 countries, including all the industrialized nations, guarantee workers some form of job-protected, partially paid maternity-related benefits. By 1986, nine European Community countries provided paid parental leave to both men and women.

The Family and Medical Leave Act is needed to respond to employers' current ad hoc policies left by the vacuum in Federal and State parental leave legislation, and to address the new realities of working parents. Both mothers and fathers will be able to take a period of leave from their jobs in order to participate in the early care of newborn or newly adopted children or to attend to a son, daughter, mother, or father with a serious health condition.

The Family and Medical Leave Act will provide job protection for all workers, assuring them if that they suffer a sudden illness or if they have a temporarily disabling accident, they will be able to return to their jobs when they have recuperated.

Strong families are the foundation for a strong, productive, and competitive company. The Family and Medical Leave Act is a positive response to the new social and economic realities, and reflects family policy that seeks a preserve and reinforce a wide range of family patterns present in our society.

Mr. KYL. Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition today to the Family and Medical Leave Act. I will be the first to agree that there are countless situations in which workers need the opportunity to care for family members in a time of crisis. However, in the vast majority of instances, these situations are already accommodated by employers. Many different studies, including several by the Department of Labor—Bureau of Labor Statistics—have indicated that most employees in this country have access to a leave policy. Indeed, the trend in business is toward greater flexibility in family and medical leave policies.

H.R. 770 will mark Congress' most dramatic attempt at mandating employee benefits. One effect will be to limit traditional negotiations on benefits between employers and employees. Currently such negotiations often take place within a cafeteria style selection of benefits whereby an employee chooses the benefits he or she wants.

The passage of H.R. 770 would eliminate family and medical leave as a choice. Of course, the cost associated with this mandated benefit would lead employers to withdraw other, perhaps more wanted, benefits from the cafeteria choices in order to offset the costs of the mandated benefit.

Certainly some employees would take advantage of this benefit. GAO estimates 1 in 300 to be exact. But the remaining 299 employees who may have wanted another benefit may not get their choice due to the H.R. 770 mandate.

Finally, the very legitimate concerns of businesses must be taken into account. We have all heard proponents say that this legislation will cost businesses across America only $188 million according to GAO. However, this estimate fails to take into account such factors as lost productivity, costs of replacement temporary workers, the unemployment insurance costs of taking care of these temporary workers once the permanent workers return from their leave, and the rising costs of health insurance.

On the horizon, businesses see Congress expanding on this legislation by requiring paid family and medical leave. Combined with a rising sentiment in Congress to mandate employer-provided health benefits, American businesses are more suspicious than ever before about congressional intentions.

H.R. 770 is feel good legislation that will not be beneficial to either employers or employees. At a time when the American work force and business and industry have all taken great strides to accommodate each other in today's ultracompetitive world, mandated benefit legislation is outdated and unproductive.

Mr. DREIER of California. Madam Chairman, in March the Washington Post reported about a work and family seminar offered in Washington, DC, to executives. When the seminar was offered 3 years ago, an exhaustive search was conducted to find a CEO willing and able to speak on the subject. A lot has changed since then. The conference board was inundated by phone calls from well-qualified executives who wanted to speak at the 1990 conference. Registration had to be temporarily closed to find larger rooms to accommodate the over 400 executives, academics, and consultants.

U.S. employers have begun adjusting their benefit policies in response to the changing demographics of the American work force. Companies are being forced to update their benefit policies, not by the Federal Government, but in order to compete for employees in a shrinking and changing labor force.

Yet, Congress refuses to recognize the efforts of managers across the country and is, instead, pushing through a rigid Federal parental leave standard that will apply to all workers in all jobs in all companies, thereby eliminating any flexibility at the bargaining table.

Let us not fool ourselves into thinking that we are increasing the total benefit package of employees by mandating a new parental and family leave benefit. We have seen the error of this logic in the nearly 700 State mandates for health insurance, ranging from such commendable benefits as alcoholism treatment and prenatal care, to wig benefits. These mandates are responsible, in part, for the high cost of health insurance, and the inability of many small businesses to cover their employees. In fact, one of five small businesses that don't offer health insurance say they would have plans if they could eliminate the State mandates.

The truth of the matter is that our Nation's employers devote 37 percent of their payroll costs to benefits. For many companies, reducing other benefits may be the only way to absorb the cost of any new benefit required by the Federal Government. A federally mandated parental leave entitlement discriminates against those who do not want or need this benefit and who would otherwise choose a different benefit option.

Madam Chairman, the Parental and Medical Leave Act assumes that Congress knows what is best for 126 million workers. I believe this and other well-intentioned mandated benefits that Congress is considering are best addressed at the bargaining table, where flexibility is maintained and employers and employees can determine the benefits that best meet their individual needs.

Mr. CRAIG. Madam Chairman, tomorrow the House will vote on H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act. Proponents of the bill often misleadingly refer to it as a "parental leave" bill, or "family legislation." In fact, this bill is just another attempt by big government to interfere with families and private initiatives by imposing Federal mandates.

Yes, there have been great changes in the family structure, and many employers have responded on their own accord, without Government prompting. Unfortunately, H.R. 770 will only serve to disrupt this trend and create some unwanted side effects.

I cannot overstate my frustration with a process that continues to attempt to solve problems by increasing the Federal Government's involvement in our lives. This issue has come up time and again over the last few Congresses and the same concerns have been expressed. Yet Congress continues to force the mandate approach to this issue when a sound alternative policy exists.

Madam Chairman, Congress can assist America's families without this sort of Federal intrusion. H.R. 1141, the Family Leave Benefits Assistance Act of 1989 is a voluntary approach. It would offer incentives, helping employers and private organizations to meet the needs of working men and women and their families.

Mr. SHUMWAY. Madam Chairman, I appreciate having this opportunity to discuss my criticisms of the Family and Medical Leave Act. This is yet another example of bad policy masquerading as a noble goal. Indeed, as one of our colleagues has pointed out, this bill has all the earmarks of becoming our next great regret, a repetition of the disastrous catastrophic care effort, which created far more of a problem than it resolved.

What is wrong with the Family and Medical Leave Act? Just about everything, in my view. First, it is neither appropriate nor desirable for the Government to determine family leave policy. The Federal Government, by its very nature, can only issue broad edicts. They are necessarily inflexible, unsuited to every situation, and therefore erosive of liberty and freedom for some Americans. Freedom of choice for parents and freedom of contract between employer and employee make far more sense. Such liberty enables potential employees to negotiate for the benefits they require. It also allows parents to determine the most appropriate action to take concerning their families.

Perhaps the most ironic consequence of the bill is that it would be counterproductive. Instead of helping women in the labor market, the bill would hinder their advancement. Similar laws in European countries have effectively decreased the ability of women to compete in the labor market. Since leave benefits are an added cost, employers probably would avoid hiring candidates who appear likely to require those benefits: women, especially married women of child-bearing age.

Women would be hurt in many ways. If more of them are encouraged to enter the work force as a result of this legislation, wage rates in some occupations they dominate could decline. Older women, or those with older family members more likely to develop chronic or disabling illnesses, would hardly be favorable candidates for hire. And women most in need of assistance would be those most affected: those with little experience, education, or skills.

Business and industry employing large numbers of women, particularly retail and service industries, would be forced to increase prices to offset the cost of the new benefits. The resulting decrease in demand could lead to layoffs, the majority of whom would be women. Employers attempting to avoid higher prices by absorbing the cost of benefits might be forced to decrease output—another erosion of jobs, and a detriment to the entire economy.

Finally, if enacted, the bill would create a costly administrative nightmare, one which encourages lawsuits and associated expenses, and which decreases productivity.

In summary, when Uncle Sam dictates inflexible policies like these, there are few winners and many losers. If this bill becomes law, some women may benefit greatly, but at the expense of many other Americans, including many other women. Individual liberty will suffer, as the State removes personal choice from the hands of women, parents, employers, and workers. The vast majority of American firms already have some parental leave policy, in response to market demands. Those policies, some formal, some informal, are able to adapt to the changing dynamics of the workforce and the marketplace. There is no need to legislate a costly, intrusive, restrictive compulsory program which is incapable of recognizing individual differences. We need less Federal meddling into family decisionmaking, not more.

Mr. MARLENEE. Madam Chairman, the Family and Medical Leave Act, H.R. 770, reminds me of castor oil. My mother used to tell me, "take it—it's good for you." Sorry, I didn't buy it then, and I don't buy it now! Castor oil just made me realize how bad things could get.

I have absolutely no intention of forcing a barrel of castor oil down the throats of American employers and employees. The American work force has a few aches and pains, I will admit, but H.R. 770 is no solution. Rather than benefiting our work force, this legislation will diminish our Nation's international competitiveness, make the work environment unstable, and create a backlash against the very people it is designed to help.

Today, our younger generation falls into two categories. They are either not willing to settle for anything but the best, or they are simply trying their best to keep up with the high cost of living. Because of this, we see more and more young couples attempting to raise families while both parents maintain full-time jobs. As the American family changes, the demands shift. In an effort to address these changes, supporters of H.R. 770 suggest a huge interference between employer and employee relations. This is a dangerously misguided precedent.

Let's get down to specifics. H.R. 770 would entitle non-Federal employees to 15 weeks and Federal employees to 10 weeks of unpaid family leave for birth, a serious health condition of a child or parent, and adoption. It would also entitle non-Federal employees to 18 weeks and Federal employees to 10 weeks of unpaid temporary medical leave for a serious health condition of an employee. This bill would impact all businesses which employ 35 or more workers.

Currently, most American employees work 48 of the 52 weeks in a year—2 weeks of paid vacation, 1 week of sick leave, and 1 week of observed holidays. If H.R. 770 becomes law, 10 to 18 weeks can be taken off—plus 2 weeks of vacation. This means an employer can count on each employee to work only 35 weeks out of the year.

This leave can be taken with reasonable notice, and the employee will be guaranteed the same or comparable job immediately after returning from leave. There are no definitions to these vague concepts. Is any protection offered for the employer against employees who will abuse this new privilege? No. In fact, the bill contains onerous enforcement provisions that would fine employers four times the salary level to make up for loss of back pay and mental anguish. Where is the concern for the state of business in America? This enforcement provision is unheard of in any Federal labor law, and I believe this would set a new negative precedent for more contentious labor/management relations.

What will this bill do to our Nation's competitive ability? The creation of an unstable work environment and a huge decrease in productivity has dangerous potential for our ability to compete in the world marketplace.

I realize this bill is not gender specific, but the majority of family and medical leave will justifiably be taken by the traditional caregivers of our society—women. This legislation has many good intentions to help these young women balance responsibilities, but those who will be hurt the most will be the entry-level young married people who will be passed over for more mature employees.

Forcing employers to offer special benefit packages hurts the very people we try to help, and discriminates against those who have no interest in such benefits—couples without children, the elderly, and the single person. We should ask ourselves what present benefits provided by the employer will be surrendered because of parental leave.

Many employers have offered employees generous benefits without being dictated by Federal mandate. Life insurance, group health plans, pensions, profit-sharing plans, vacation time, sick leave, flex time, education assistance—all of these have been freely agreed upon in negotiations between employees and employers, and they are being widely offered despite the absence of a mandate from Washington.

I am sensitive to the changing needs of our American work force, and I am committed to meeting those needs. However, I believe these needs can be met without Government mandates. I strongly support businesses who expand benefits to include family and medical leave on their own. This is the appropriate place where these benefits should be negotiated—not imposed upon all businesses with 35 or more employees by bureaucrats in Washington.

Parental leave is a misguided effort by those who do not understand family structure or who have very little understanding of business management. If we get right down to the dollars and cents of this legislation, H.R. 770 will not help anyone. Rather, it will penalize businesses by decreasing the productivity and stability of the American work force, and it will ironically hurt employees by making wages lower and jobs more difficult to obtain.

Madam Chairman, like castor oil, this legislation leaves me with a bad taste in my mouth. I urge my colleagues to vote against H.R. 770.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Madam Chairman, I might say to the last speaker that the reason that it is becoming increasingly necessary for this Congress to get into the labor/management relationship that exists in our country is because the laws have been so tilted that the labor unions no longer have influence in terms of setting labor policy. At one time when the organized labor movement represented approximately 33 percent of the people in this country, whenever they negotiated benefits for their workers, it had a carryover effect that affected the rest of the nonorganized workers. Now that they represent approximately 15 percent or 16 percent, that 80 percent to 90 percent of the work force in this country, that 80 million to 90 million people in the work force are not represented by labor unions and the effects of the negotiated agreements do not spill over into the rest of the labor sector.

Most of the labor unions that are supporting this piece of legislation already have negotiated for their membership better benefits than what we are talking about presently in this piece of legislation. It is the 80 to 90 million people out there that are not represented by organized labor that this piece of legislation is for, and mandating this type of a benefit is no different than the other types of benefits that we have been mandating for some 60 years in this country.

Demands for a family leave policy have been growing steadily in the last 5 to 6 years. In the past 5 years, 17 States have enacted laws establishing minimum standards for parental or medical leave and leave legislation is now pending in more than 30 States. But attempting to resolve a national problem in such a piecemeal fashion is not desirable. State-by-State standards present problems of uniformity and consistency and labor standards should be national in scope.

It is true that many employers have implemented leave policies that far exceed the requirements of this bill before us. But they have benefited from those policies in the form of improved employee morale, higher productivity and retention of an experienced work force. I think it is time that we realized the problem that exists, Madam Chairman, and that we enact this legislation.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Madam Chairman, let me read a statement that was made as part of the record by a female in the workplace who said this: "I was directly told what a shameful thing it was to continue working when I was pregnant, and that it doesn't look good to be working."

Madam Chairman, this woman was not in the district of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. HOLLOWAY], in the district of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON], in the district of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], or in my district. This woman is an executive in Japan. This woman is one of those 40 percent of the Japanese work force that even with their generous, mandated benefits finds herself discriminated against, and in many cases people who are not lucky enough to be an executive find themselves wearing uniforms in Japan. I doubt very seriously that leave benefits and relative economic growth notwithstanding, that anybody here would emulate that policy. I doubt any of us would actually go out on point and say we want to be like this nation that appears to be so chauvinistic, and I doubt very seriously that any of us would want Sweden's growth rate or the rest of Western Europe for that matter.

□ 2110

Why is it that when Eastern Europe leaves the Soviet bloc they do not go to Stockholm? They come here. They want to find out what we are doing right. They want to emulate the policies of the United States.

Some of those policies are not done by Government.

Mr. CLAY just mentioned that labor had not been successful in negotiating benefits. Well, that is not borne out by some of the collective bargaining agreements that have taken place in just the last year and a half. AT&T and the Communication Workers of America, a hallmark agreement guaranteeing flexibility and choice, including benefits such as child care resource and referral services, elder care resource and referral services, adoption assistance, expanded employee assistance, preretirement, I could go on and on. But, Madam Chairwoman, here is the problem: A benefit decreed is a benefit denied.

If we put the Federal Government into the collective bargaining process, if we insist that 12 weeks of unpaid leave becomes part of the mix, then we do not necessarily ensure all of the benefits that are being offered by these unions such as the agreement that the UAW carved out with Navstar International: 7,000 employees were given a leave of absence not to exceed 12 months; or Merck and the OCAW agreed, reached an agreement May 1988 for a leave of absence up to 18 months.

My point is this: There are as many leave benefits options as there are workplaces, almost as many as there are employees. And we do not have the data that creates a one-size-that-fits-all mandate.

The GAO study, which acts as the database for this study, was conducted in Charleston, SC, a community of roughly 200,000, and Detroit. Detroit is larger than my State. It has no relevance to Rock Rapids, IA, a small town in northwest Iowa, 2,500 people, which has small firms, most of them around 50 in the businesses. That is not just a small business or a big business, in many cases that is the only business. And they fight to retain skilled employees; not all of them, by the way, highly compensated; not all of them key employees under Mrs. ROUKEMA's provision. But they are important to that community, and it would be devastating to that community if for some reason a business decides that because there is not an accessible labor force or labor pool, they have to go 80 miles and move back to Sioux Falls. Perhaps not a problem that concerns Members from affluent districts, Members from urban districts, Members from areas that have large pools of skilled labor, but it concerns me.

I would dare say it concerns Mr. HOLLOWAY and other Members of this body who are coming out, by the way, out of about 10 years of an economic downturn particularly in agricultural areas, where we are just beginning to see the light of day.

In return for that innovation we are now offering more mandates.

I cannot go along with that, Madam Chairwoman. I can go along with the States offering the policy, I can go along with the 16 or so States which offer a variety of leaves. I can go along with Oregon, which has offered a plan which offers employees a nondiscriminatory cafeteria benefit plan, which includes as one of its options a parental leave benefit. And if you have that, you are exempt from their family leave plan.

Madam Chairwoman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from New Jersey is recognized.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I do not know, they are trying to make this a negotiating collective bargaining process issue. It is not that at all. The chairman has correctly stated, most contracts, labor union contracts, far exceed, exceed what is provided for in this bill. We are writing a minimum labor protection not for the good business citizens or for the labor unions who are negotiating contracts. We are writing protection for the weak and the vulnerable in this country, just as we did with minimum wages, child labor, with a whole host of labor protections throughout our history. It is humane, and it is good business, and that is what we are talking about.

So let us not get this mixed up with the union bargaining.

Second, we keep repeating something about benefit packages, as though $5.50, which is the average—and the GAO has reported—is going to buy something in a benefits package. It is not. We are talking about a minimum job protection standard.

Again I want to repeat what I said in my statement earlier, there was not one business nor one State who has already adopted leave policies far more generous than this one proposed who came before our committee, even after being invited, and said to us that it either interfered with their productivity or the operations of their business or that they would abandon their practice.

I think that is proof.

Finally, I want to stress there is a whole list of organizations that support this bill. And they are not labor unions. They are the Catholic Conference, just to name a few, the Conference of State Legislators, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Association of University Women, the Junior League, the Federation of Business and Professional Women, the American Psychiatric Association, the American Nurses Association, United Methodist Church, the National PTA.

These are not labor unions. These are people out there who understand the stresses and strains of family living today and who want to repair the fabric of society, family life in this country and want to protect the children who are our future.

Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, may I ask the indulgence of the Chair to inquire, as we are about to rise, is it the Chair's understanding that on resumption of the debate tomorrow each side has 30 minutes remaining of general debate? There is 1 hour left in general debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa is correct.

Mr. GRANDY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore. (Mr. OLIN) having assumed the chair, Mrs. KENNELLY, chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 770) to entitle employees to family leave in certain cases involving a birth, an adoption, or a serious health condition and to temporary medical leave in certain cases involving a serious health condition, with adequate protection of the employees' employment and benefit rights, and to establish a commission to study ways of providing salary replacement for employees who take any such leave, had come to no resolution thereon.

ANNUAL REPORTS ON ACTIVITIES OF DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH REVIEW COMMISSION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore, laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

(For message, see proceedings of the Senate of today Wednesday, May 9, 1990.)

□ 2120

INTRODUCING THE BUDGET PROCESS REFORM AND SOCIAL SECURITY PROTECTION ACT OF 1990

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. OLIN). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I am introducing legislation today which reforms the Federal budget process and protects the Social Security Program. As you know, I presented a budget challenge several weeks ago which would reduce the budget deficit by over $500 billion over 5 years. As I have publicly stated, I welcome responsible modifications and alternatives. I do not pretend that it is a perfect plan. However, I strongly believe that we need a bold deficit reduction plan to reduce our massive borrowing, reduce our dependence on foreign investors, restore our country's international competitiveness, and enhance the standard of living of our children and future generations of Americans.

The legislation I am introducing today is intended to be a companion to my deficit reduction challenge and implements many of the suggestions on budget process reform that I made today in testimony before the Committee on Rules, and previously to the Committee on Government Operations.

REFORMING THE BUDGET PROCESS

As I have said in the past, no amount of budget process reform will substitute for strong political leadership on deficit reduction at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue. I am pleased to say that we have made great strides in that direction in the last several days. I am encouraged that the President and the bipartisan congressional leadership have begun serious discussions about the budget deficit.

In the Rostenkowski challenge, I suggested that Gramm-Rudman be repealed because Gramm-Rudman would no longer be necessary if a bold deficit reduction plan is enacted. Others, including the administration, feel that Gramm-Rudman should be retained even if a responsible deficit reduction plan is enacted. They feel that Gramm-Rudman is ncessary to protect against any inclination the Congress might have to spend the budgetary savings. Although I feel that concern is overstated, I fully agree that any enacted budgetary savings and revenues increases must be dedicated to reducing the deficit and not to increased spending. The legislation I am introducing today insures that all budgetary savings and increased revenues are in fact used to reduce the deficit.

PROTECTING SOCIAL SECURITY

I strongly believe that deficit reduction is in everyone's best interest. Thus, my deficit reduction package asks for a modest sacrifice on the part of all Americans, including senior citizens.

The reaction that I have received from senior citizens across the country indicates a willingness to sacrifice, as long as everyone else in the country sacrifices as well. Senior citizens recognize that reducing the deficit is the best way to achieve a healthy economy and ensure that the Social Security trust funds are properly funded rather than filled with IOU's that our children and grandchildren cannot afford to pay.

Once this one-time sacrifice has been made, however, Social Security should be fully protected from further cuts. Thus, the legislation which I am introducing today removes the Social Security trust funds from any budget calculations beginning in fiscal year 1992. Thus, the trust funds could not be used in the future to mask the size of the Federal deficit. Moreover, changes in the Social Security Program, whether related to benefits or administration of the program, could not be used to help balance the Federal budget. With the enactment of this legislation, the Social Security trust funds would be protected once and for all.

In addition, the bill would make social security an independent agency run by a three-member, bipartisan board. This is a step which I believe will insulate Social Security from short-run political influence and reenforce our long-run commitment to the program.

Finally, the legislation would improve the quality of services provided to social security beneficiaries. Social Security beneficiaries have come to expect, and deserve to receive, the highest quality service from the Social Security Administration.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to describe more fully my proposals relating to budget process reform, taking social security off budget, and making improvements in social security services.

First, the legislation includes a provision to remove Social Security from the budget. It also removes from the budget other self-financed trust funds such as the Medicare trust funds, the airport and airway trust fund, and the highway trust fund. I feel that if social security is removed from the deficit calculations, other self-financed trust funds where dedicated revenues—not counting interest earned—comprise at least 90 percent of the trust fund's total receipts should be removed as well.

By enacting this provision, the buildup in the Social Security trust funds and other trust funds will no longer be used to mask the true size of the Federal deficit. Such action should reassure the public that we are serious about reducing the deficit in the Government's operating budget.

Second, in conjunction with removing the social security trust funds from the budget, the legislation establishes a point of order in the House and a super majority point of order in the Senate against the consideration of any bill or amendment which would increase social security benefits or decrease social security revenues, thereby violating trust fund neutrality, on either a 5-year or a 75-year basis. This concept was embodied in H.R. 3505, a bill I introduced last year which has been endorsed by many groups representing the elderly.

A similar pay-as-you-go concept would apply to other trust funds as well, on a 5-year basis. An exception would be made to allow additional spending from a trust fund, other than Social Security, with a substantial trust fund balance.

Third, the fixed deficit targets in Gramm-Rudman would be replaced with specific deficit reduction targets of $30 billion in the first year of each budget cycle and $40 billion for years 2 through 5 in each budget cycle. The budget process would be tightened to eliminate budget gimmicks and to change the focus from a 1-year deficit reduction process to a 5-year process. Changes in social security outlays or revenues would not count toward reaching these deficit reduction targets.

Fourth, until a balanced budget is achieved, revenues would be included in the Gramm-Rudman sequestration formula. Half of the required sequestration amount would come from increased tax revenues. Corporate and individual income tax liabilities would be increased by a uniform percentage. The other half of the required deficit reduction would be achieved by sequestering equal amounts of defense and domestic spending using the existing sequester formula.

The rationale for the original Gramm-Rudman law was that Members favoring defense programs and those interested primarily in domestic programs would compromise on a rational deficit reduction package and thereby avoid sequestration. Now, however, due to our changing defense commitments in Europe, defense programs will receive large reductions and mutual interest in substantive budgetary compromise under the threat of sequestration may no longer exist.

Fifth, deficit reduction would no longer be required when a balanced budget is achieved. A balanced budget would be defined as a deficit of less than 1 percent of the gross national product [GNP]. That would imply a residual deficit of approximately $60 billion.

For purposes of determining when a balanced budget is reached, the following trust funds would be excluded: Social Security [OASDI], Medicare [HI and SMI], Airport and Airway Trust Fund, Highway Trust Fund, Hazardous Substance Superfund, Unemployment Trust Funds, and several other smaller trust funds. This accounting is consistent with my earlier proposal with respect to 90-percent financed trust funds.

Sixth, I sincerely hope that the President and the Congress will be able to agree on a bold multiyear deficit reduction plan this year. If that happens, we do not want to be confronted next year with a requirement to do another $30 billion of deficit reduction or to pass another increase in the public debt limit. This bill provides for a revised definition of the public debt—the amount that is actually borrowed from the public. In addition, it provides phased increases and eventually decreases the public debt over the next 10 years, consistent with the Rostenkowski challenge. These numbers can be changed of course, to fit the contours of any negotiated deficit reduction plan.

As a result, public debt would actually be retired, and new reconciliation bills or public debt increases would not be necessary. However, if increases in the public debt ceiling were needed due to an increase in Federal spending, a super majority would be required to pass such an increase. Thus, the public debt limit would be used to enforce a deficit reduction agreement and to ensure that the budgetary savings and revenue increases are in fact used to reduce the deficit.

Seventh, the bill would require pay-as-you-go financing of new or expanded spending programs or tax cuts. The Ways and Means Committee has a long history of budgetary prudence and responsibility—a history of which we are collectively and justifiably proud. The committee has developed its legislation on a pay-as-you-go basis for the last 9 years—long before it become fashionable elsewhere.

Consistent with my "Challenge," this bill requires pay-as-you-go financing as a necessary complement to a serious deficit reduction plan. Under this requirement, all major spending increases or revenue reductions must be paid for by an equivalent amount of spending reductions or tax increases. Otherwise, a point of order would apply in the House and a super majority point or order would apply in the Senate.

Eighth, the Social Security Administration would be removed from the Department of Health and Human Services and would become an independent agency under the authority of a three-member, bipartisan Social Security Board.

Ninth, the bill would make improvements in a number of social security beneficiary services including Social Security Administration procedures for collection of overpayments; contacts with SSA teleservice centers; SSA outreach to potentially eligible homeless persons for benefits; notices sent to social security beneficiaries; and inaccurate information provided to SSA claimants.

Tenth, the bill would make improvements in the social security representative payee system including more thorough investigations of, and stricter standards of fitness for, representative payees.

Mr. Speaker, I want to emphasize that this budget process bill does not violate the existing balance of power between the executive and legislative branches of Government. It contains no line-item veto, credit reform or enhanced recission authority. It provides a simple mechanism to insure that the deficit reduction enacted in a bold plan does not translate into spending increases in some future year. It holds the promise that no public debt increases or reconciliation bills would be necessary for the foreseeable future.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, our Nation's most important domestic priority should be the enactment of a real deficit reduction plan. I hope that I have made a positive contribution to the debate with the Rostenkowski challenge which I presented several weeks ago and in the legislation I am introducing today. What is absolutely essential is that we develop a serious, responsible deficit reduction plan in the national interest. Nothing less is at stake than the economic well-being and competitiveness of our children and our country.

THE TOTAL FORCE POLICY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to continue to share with my colleagues a series of articles which appeared in the Roll Call newspaper in the April 30, 1990, edition in a special policy brief, titled "National Guard and Reserves In a Changing World". This brief was developed to describe the roles and missions of the Reserve components and to educate the readers. I wrote the lead article in hopes of generating interest by the readers to learn more about the Guard and Reserve. I commend my colleagues to read these articles to gain a better appreciation of the Guard and Reserve. Today I'm sharing another in the series of articles that appeared in that April 30 Roll Call edition.

THE TOTAL FORCE POLICY

(By Stephen M. Duncan)

The Defense Department's policy to rely heavily on National Guard and Reserve units for fighting in any future conflicts, known as the Total Force Policy, has recently come under close scrutiny.

And examination of the policy is essential if we are to ensure that fundamental decisions about how we man the Armed Forces rest on a general consensus.

Surprisingly, however, much of the participation in the debate is uninformed, or at least insufficiently focused. An understanding of the realities which affect the planning for the forces is critical.

BALANCE IN TOTAL FORCE POLICY

Much of the recent discussion has centered on the lack of readiness of certain Army Reserve units.

Lost in the noise of the debate is the fact that in addition to the Army Reserve, the Reserve components of the Armed Forces consist of the Air National Guard, the Naval Reserve, the Marine Corps Reserve, the Army National, the Air Force Reserve, and in times of war, the Coast Guard Reserve.

For most missions and most units, the Total Force Policy has been very successful. The policy was never intended to make Active career soldiers and Reserve soldiers fungible items or mirror images of each other. Due to limited training and the constrained budgetary environment at the Defense Department, it is unrealistic to attempt to make them equal.

Rather, the goal of the Total Force Policy is to integrate the capabilities and strengths of Active and Reserve units in the most cost-effective manner, i.e., one that provides the most total military capability within the limitations of the budget.

In order to discuss the Total Force Policy in a meaningful way, it is imperative that broad generalities be avoided. Far too often analysts frame the issue of the debate as whether we are currently placing too much reliance on Reserve Forces.

Some observers urge greater reliance on Reserve Forces. Some urge greater reliance on Reserves simply because part-time soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines are generally less expensive. Others express doubts about the current mix of Active and Reserve personnel.

A balanced analysis of the Total Force Policy must start with a focus on particular missions. Some missions are ideal for National Guardsmen and Reservists. Some are clearly unsuitable.

Yet others can be reasonably assigned to either Active or Reserve units.

ASSIGNING MISSIONS TO THE RESERVES

In deciding which wartime missions to assign to Reserve Forces, planners must start with assumptions about the nature and scope of the most likely future conflicts and the intentions and capability of the most likely adversaries.

Planning for a general conflict in Europe is obviously different from planning in the Persian Gulf, Korea, or other smaller areas.

Assumptions must also be made about the amount of warning time the nation would have before actual fighting begins, the speed with which Reserve units could be called to Active Duty and deployed to the scene of the conflict, etc. These assumptions are usually subjective and hardly fail-safe. Force planners inevitably accept some risks.

Since resources are finite and limited, planners who assign resources for one kind of conflict accept the risks inherent in not assigning the same resource elsewhere.

Planners must also deal with the reality that we simply cannot afford to maintain Regular Armed Forces in sufficient numbers to fight all possible wars in which the nation might become involved.

Americans have traditionally resisted efforts to maintain a large, professional standing army in peacetime. Once a conflict starts, however, we must clearly be able to generate enough force to bring it to a successful conclusion.

Whether a particular mission should be assigned to Reserve or to Active forces depends generally upon the nature of the mission, i.e., the specific military capability that is required.

Those in a position to make these decisions must consider a broad range of factors, such as the comparative costs of Active vs. Reserve Forces; whether the mission requires forward-based forces; the urgency with which the mission must be performed; the availability of sufficient modern equipment appropriate for the mission; the availability of sufficient fully trained personnel with the military skills required; the existence of an adequate US sustaining base to ensure equitable overseas tours for the Active Forces; and other similar factors.

In determining whether to assign Active or Reserve units, it is easy to overlook the fact that the amount of training time required to perform some missions creates unacceptable pressures in the Reservists' civilian workplaces.

But sometimes factors which enhance the importance of Reserves are not taken into account. Because of previous service on Active Duty, for example, many National Guardsmen and Reservists bring much greater experience to the performance of particular missions than do Active soldiers currently serving on Active Duty.

It is widely recognized, for example, that many Reservists and National Guardsmen are among the best fighter, attack, and transport pilots in the world.

MAKING RESERVISTS READY TO PERFORM

In recent months, certain readiness problems involving combat service support units in the Army have received public attention.

These units are responsible for maintenance, medical, motor transport, and other support functions. Although the units constitute some 70 percent of the Army's combat service support capability, they have not received sufficient resources to permit a state of readiness equal to most Army combat units.

Their readiness problems, however, are not "Reserve" problems. They are "Army" readiness problems, and they say little or nothing about the capabilities of other Army Reserve units or Army National Guard units, much less about the capabilities of the Reserve components of the other services.

Logically, of course, there should be no difference between the types of forces needed to deter conflicts and the forces needed to win them. A potential adversary's perception of his chances of succeeding in a conflict is usually related directly to his ardor to being in it. Moreover, we can't afford two types of forces, one devoted to deterring war and one to winning it.

Readiness is one of the four "pillars" of military capability; the others are force structure, modernization of equipment, and sustainability.

It includes tangible components, such as leadership and morale. Fiscal constraints prevent the correction of many of the readiness challenges which face the Reserve Forces.

Some readiness problems are the result of factors which are unique to Reserve units, such as limited training time, the geographic dispersion of individual Reservists and the fact that Americans generally and Reservists in particular are mobile.

Such challenges are usually not insurmountable. A little common sense, some innovative thinking, and old-fashioned leadership can go a long way to resolve them.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

As late as 1980, the theory behind the Total Force Policy had not been effectively implemented.

By almost any standard, the condition of the Reserve Forces was serious. A combination of austere procurement budgets during the previous decade and de facto policy of allocating almost all modern equipment to the Active Forces had created both obsolescence and a major shortage of equipment in the Reserve Forces.

There was an urgent need for improvements in the overall readiness and sustainability of those forces.

Today, the circumstances of the Reserve Forces are dramatically different. The increased appropriations of the early 1980s permitted the purchase of substantial amounts of modern equipment for the Reserve components.

Improved training opportunities, the assumption of important missions and responsibilities, and certain incentive programs have brought into the Reserve Forces the highest quality personnel in their history.

There can be no doubt that across the spectrum of military capabilities, the Reserve Forces of the United States are the best in the world.

The world, of course, changing.

Recent developments have encouraged our hopes for a prolonged period of peace.

President George Washington reminded our forefathers on several occasions, and recent history had clearly demonstrated the fact there is nothing so likely to produce peace as to be prepared to meet an enemy.

The challenge before us to be coldly realistic and balanced in our judgments as we seek to mold the strengths of our Active National Guard, and Reserve soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines into a Total Force that is capable of protecting the national security interests of our nation during a period of uncertainty and instability.

ALLEGHENY CITY SESQUICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. COYNE] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, on a spring day in 1840, a small group of Pennsylvanians gathered together to found and incorporate a new city called Allegheny. The Nation was young then. None of them could have imagined that the Allegheny area would grow and prosper, and eventually become an important part of one of the most vital metropolitan areas in the country—Pittsburgh.

Perhaps the first role Allegheny played in the national drama was as the last urban stop for many settlers bound for the West. While thousands came through Allegheny, many of them stayed. Allegheny soon became a melting pot of Scots, Irish, African Americans, Germans, eastern Europeans, and more.

Allegheny was—among other things—the home of some very distinguished Americans. One was Gertrude Stein, novelist and author of "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas." Although Stein lived much of her adult life in Paris, she was born in Allegheny.

Another notable Alleghenian was Andrew Carnegie, the guiding spirit of United States Steel and leading philanthropist. Allegheny has also been home to dance pioneer Martha Graham, food manufacturer H.J. Heinz, and Pittsburgh Steelers owner Art Rooney.

Today, Allegheny is the north side of Pittsburgh, but Allegheny's memory survives. This year, the area is celebrating the sesquicentennial of Allegheny's founding. The Allegheny City Sesquicentennial Committee, under the leadership of Director Nancy Burns, has prepared a series of events to commemorate the anniversary. Upcoming events include Jubille Day, June 8–9, the Jazz Festival, July–August; an ongoing photo contest; Oktoberfest, September 21–23; Christmas season in Allegheny City, November–December; Fasching, February 1991; and a Triathlon, spring, 1991.

I know that my colleagues join me in congratulating Alleghenians on the 150th anniversary of their town, and in wishing them well as they celebrate this special occasion.

NEW TECHNOLOGY IN SDI RESEARCH PROGRAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KYL] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. KYL. Mr. Speaker, last week the main hearing room of the Committee on Armed Services was modified to present to Members of this body much of the new technology that has been produced through the research effort of the Strategic Defense Initiative Research Program. For 2 days that hearing room was filled with examples of the technology that has been developed in the SDI Program. Among the first people to visit the hearing room to see that technology was the Vice President.

As a matter of fact, in the May 7 issue of Space News there is a fine photograph of the Vice President with Dr. Edward Teller, father of the H bomb, and Dr. Lowell Wood, who is the person primarily responsible for the idea behind the brilliant pebbles which are a part of the SDI Program. I would like to quote just a couple of paragraphs from this issue of the Space News which reflect the Vice President's view after observing the examples of technology which he saw on that visit. He said, "Anyone who observes this display knows that SDI is beyond the theoretical stage. It can be done and it should be done." He used the opportunity, as the reporter notes, to stump for President Bush's request for $4.5 billion for the U.S. strategic defense for this budget year. The Vice President went on to say, "The Strategic Defense Initiative will defend America. It will add to our deterrence. It will increase the prospects for peace. It will give the President far more flexibility in a critical situation. Therefore," he continued, "the naysayers in the Congress are going to have to come up with a different rationale for trying to emasculate the President's SDI budget. No longer will they be able to advance the argument that we are not prepared to go forward."

Mr. Speaker, that was the primary reason why I helped to organize this display of technology last week, to demonstrate in real terms that the technology is at hand, in terms that people could see and feel and visit with the sponsors of that, because there were many defense contractors and their representatives, and representatives of the National Laboratories who have been involved in this effort, who were present to describe and to discuss much of the material which they had been working with, and which was on display last week.

It was interesting to me that many Members of the Congress saw fit to come by and visit it, as did many members of the press, most coming away very much impressed with the quality and the degree of progress that the program has brought about, much of it, by the way, to miniaturization, which is one of the real themes of this display. Ultra minichips and components were brought in by the contractors to demonstrate progress in this area, for example.

Mr. Speaker, the SDI Program is now in its sixth full year of research to determine the feasibility of developing effective defenses against ballistic missiles. The SDI Program continues to make excellent progress against a broad spectrum of technologies. Tonight I would like to highlight some of that very important progress.

During fiscal year 1989, for example, the SDI organization conducted a record number of tests and experiments. The growing number of tests indicates that the program is moving away from mere paper feasibility and studies to laboratory tests, toward the real tests of hardware. There are four primary challenges to a ballistic missile defense. The first is to acquire, track, and intercept a missile in the boost and postboost phases of flight. Second, as the missile travels through its trajectory, a defense system must be capable of discriminating, tracking, and intercepting the nuclear warheads as they proceed through the midcourse phase. Third, a ballistic missile defense system must be capable of discriminating, tracking, and intercepting remaining warheads as they enter the Earth's atmosphere in the terminal phase of its flight. Fourth, software must be developed to command and control the ballistic missile defense system.

These are not easy requirements. Time and money has been wisely spent by the SDI organization to answer the question, whether ballistic missile defense are feasible. After 6 short years, the SDI research program has conducted successful tests in each of the areas that I outlined above, and it believes with moderate confidence that ballistic missile defense are now feasible.

The first challenge was to detect, trap, and intercept missiles in the boost phase. Well, the SDI organization conducted the Delta 181 experiment which collected booster plume signature data. The Delta 180 experiment, which intercepted a thrusting booster, The Janus experiment, which collected postboost vehicle data, and the SBI hover test, called ontarget demonstrating the capabilities of space-based interceptor. This ontarget test vehicle, incidentally, was part of the SDI display last week. This test demonstrated that a space interceptor using a high-speed computer could find and track a ballistic missile in the presence of the bright rocket plume, and that that data can be processed and utilized to control the attitude and the position of the interceptor. This was a major demonstration of the potential capabilities of a space-based interceptor.

The second and third challenges for ballistic defense are to discriminate, track, and intercept warheads in a midcourse and terminal phase. The SDI organization has come a long way toward proving the feasibility of a technology to accomplish this mission. SDI organization conducted the Delta 181 experiment which observed reentry vehicles and decoys in space, and this provided the data which will assist in discriminating between the two. Sounding rockets were launched in the program to evaluate the effectiveness of various countermeasures. Warheads have been destroyed in midcourse by a ground-based interceptor, and targets have also been intercepted in the atmosphere by a ground-based interceptor.

In January, a test of the HEDI interceptor was conducted. The actual nose cone of this HEDI interceptor was on display in the House Committee on Armed Services hearing room last week. The fundamental obstacles of endoatmospheric interceptors is the phenomenal heat which is created over the sensor as the interceptor is hurled toward the incoming reentry vehicle.

□ 2130

The heat in effect has a tendency to blind the sensor, thereby preventing it from protecting the enemy warhead. Some thought it would be impossible to ever cool that sensor window enough in order to prevent the heat from blinding the sensor, but the test showed they were wrong. The January tests proved that through transperation, a process that allows the aluminum to sweat much like your skin does, the window could be cooled to allow the sensor to see its target. The test data indicated that one-tenth of a second after launching the interceptor the window temperature was 900 degrees. After transperation the window had cooled to 100 degrees, a real technological accomplishment.

The fourth challenge that I mentioned for success in establishing a ballistic missile defense system is indeed challenging, and is perhaps the most controversial requirement of a ballistic missile defense: developing software capable of controlling the system. To meet this formidable requirement, the SDI Organization has established the National Test Facility [NTF] in Colorado Springs. The NTF offers a comprehensive capability to develop, simulate, and verify strategic defense concepts and software.

Facilities at the ARC in Huntsville have also conducted early version command and control experiments which demonstrate the feasibility of controlling a ballistic missile defense system.

Although it is at an early stage of development, the SDI Organization feels assured that reliable and trustworthy software for the SDS can be achieved by experienced computer and software professionals implementing a software development program based on careful consideration of the most successful software engineering efforts from both DOD and industry and utilizing the extensive simulation and checkout facilities of the National Test Bed.

All of the challenges of ballistic missile defense have been addressed in the SDI Program. The American Institute for Astronautics and Aeronautics [AIAA], which is the largest group of aerospace scientists and engineers in the United States, performed an exhaustive analysis of the SDI Program, and they found that "no fundamental obstacles were found that a well planned technology program could surmount."

Similar findings have resulted for the Brilliant Pebbles concept after being reviewed by the Defense Science Board and the JASON's, a preeminent group of university professors. The conclusions of these three groups was that "no showstoppers were identified."

As the SDI Program continues to make excellent progress toward its goal of defending against ballistic missiles, it has also yielded tremendous technical progress in areas such as miniaturization, reduced manufacturing costs, and development of lightweight structures, and is helping American industry to attain a competitive edge. Three examples of this progress are the SDIO-sponsored IMU, which I will describe in a moment, the infrared detector, and computer programs.

First, research into navigation technology has ushered in a whole new class of miniaturized inertial measurement units [IMU's] for navigation and guidance in this decade and beyond. Units for example, that weighed 40 pounds and cost $70,000 in 1970 now weigh only 1 pound and cost approximately $5,000

A unit of the 1970's that I mentioned is the kind that flies in the F-16, a very modern fighter aircraft, and yet the size of that, which is larger than a bread box, could not work for SDI. As a result, this very, very small object, which weighs only one pound, was developed for the satellites of SDI, and progress is pointing to even further miniturization in the IMU in the future. And it is noteworthy that with each of these developments and breakthroughs, the cost does not go up, the cost comes down.

Second, through the SDI program, we are learning how to manufacture large quantities of infrared detector elements known as pixels, at greatly reduced costs. Prior to SDI, for example, the costs of such pixels were in the range of a few hundred dollars each. Today, we are looking in the range of a few dollars to a fraction of a dollar each.

Third, computer advances achieved through the SDI Program offer the possibility of producing high speed computers that can be assembled in very small packages—about the size of a deck of playing cards—and have the processing speed and data throughout of a Cray-1 computer, if you can believe it. But it is on display.

In many cases, SDI technology is not only helping to reduce the cost and size of components, but the man days that it takes to develop them. For example, communications component development has been reduced from 180 production days to 2 man-days.

All of this of course, again reduces the cost.

In addition to the tremendous technological advances which assists the SDI Program in achieving its defense mission, the SDI Program is helping American industry remain competitive on the world market. One example is the semiconductor industry.

At one time, the United States dominated the world market in semiconductor electronics; today the U.S. share of the world market is less than 40 percent. In an industry that supports 2.6 million jobs—more than double that of the combined steel and auto industries—losing additional portions of the world market could have serious economic impact on the United States.

Using technology developed in the SDI Program, American industry is fighting back.

Market success in modern semiconductor electronics rests on the ability to fabricate a large number of tiny active electronic circuits on a small silicon chip and to mass produce those chips reliably and cheaply. The process in use today to produce these circuits is based on optical projection lithography.

Over the next 7 years it is the goal of U.S. industry to recapture some of the world market and drive the size of circuits down to about 0.25 microns. But it does not stop there.

Using SDI-developed free electron laser technology, the Los Alamos laboratory has developed an alternative approach to submicron lithography that could drive circuit sizes down to 0.5 microns.

Dr. Sig Hecker, the Director of Los Alamos, testified before the HASC that this technology "offers the potential of leap-frogging the Japanese who now dominate this market."

Through the SDI program, U.S. leadership in the free electron laser technology offers a competitive advantage that could be translated to market success by the end of this decade.

Another manner in which SDI technology has helped U.S. industry maintain a competitive edge is by creating new technology for business.

SDIO sponsored the first diamond film research and development company in the United States—Crystallume, at Menlo Park, CA.

By the way, the Japanese are spending about $100 million a year to develop diamond coatings.

There are many potential uses in industry for diamond coating research—tooling, electronics, materials, et cetera.

Most importantly, SDIO's diamond technology initiative has created a potential for a $16 billion market by the late 1990's.

Industry is not the only market which is benefiting from the SDI program today. The medical community has been greatly enriched by advances achieved through SDI research funds. There are many examples of this.

The Loma Linda University Medical Center in southern California has constructed a facility using the SDI-developed RFQ LINAC for a proton therapy cancer treatment facility. Construction of the facility is complete and use of the LINAC in a clinical setting is expected this year.

Massachusetts General's Wellman Laboratory is utilizing the CO_2 pulsed laser in the treatment of burns. This unique method of removing burn eschar replaces multiple surgical operations, reduces scarring, and provides a better base for skin grafts than conventional methods.

Through the SDI Program, a laser-treatment process is being developed that cleanses donor blood bank supplies of the entire family of viruses which includes herpes, measles, hepatitis-B, and the virus that causes AIDS.

SDI spinoffs to the industrial and medical communities alone, of course, do not constitute a reason to fund SDI. There are other rationale, particularly strategic reasons, for funding SDI. But what is clear is the fact, when you consider the impact of these spinoffs that I have just given a few examples of, that the SDI Program is the best technological development program that American universities and industries have participated in since the days of Apollo.

Can we afford not to responsibly support this program? On what basis should we in the Congress pick some arbitrary number and say, "That's enough"? The President's well thoughtout request, as articulated by Secretary Cheney, is far too much, and we need to spend much less than that.

We are going to be having a discussion on this in the next several weeks when we debate the authorization for the Department of Defense, and I would submit, Mr. Speaker, that we and our colleagues cannot be for SDI if we are not willing to fund it. The Bush administration has requested $4.5 billion for fiscal year 1991.

□ 2140

If fully funded, this request will enable the United States to proceed with research to field a full-scale, phase one ballistic missile defense system or a limited missile defense system, whichever the national leadership decides is in the best interest of the United States, and the Congress, of course, will be participating in that decision.

Whatever is decided at some future date, Mr. Speaker, $4.5 billion is needed this year to get from the research point to a system in which we could have a high level of confidence of the effectiveness of a program so that the President can meet his goal of determining whether or not it is feasible to deploy SDI at the end of 4 years.

Four and one-half billion dollars is a relatively small number when one considers the $325 billion, and this is the latest GAO estimate, $325 billion estimate, for the savings and loan bailout or the 5-year, $30 billion cost for child care which some propose that we pass this year. And $4.5 billion is reasonable compared to the $5 billion this country pays farmers not to grow food.

Can we afford to spend $4.5 billion? Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the question is: Can we afford not to, and I would like to close by discussing why I agreed with President Bush when he said recently that in the 1990's SDI makes more sense than ever before because the reasons why he is correct demonstrate why we cannot afford not to fund SDI. All of the technological progress that is applicable to other areas that I have been discussing and that was on display last week is good reason to go forward with the research of this project. But ultimately we are proposing that SDI be developed because it will need to be deployed.

Now, Mr. Speaker, why is that so, and why does the President believe that it is more important now than ever before? There are essentially four reasons, Mr. Speaker.

The first has to do with the continuing threat posed by the Soviet Union. Now I know that many of our colleagues say that times have changed. The Soviet Union is no longer a threat. For example, look at all of the changes occurring in Eastern Europe. The Warsaw Pact has ceased to be a dangerous force. The Soviet Union is withdrawing some of its equipment from the Eastern Pact countries.

Mr. Speaker, all of that is true, but that relates to the probabilities and potentialities for conventional warfare on the European plain. It does not have anything to do with the strategic modernization program of the Soviet Union which both Secretary Cheney and CIA Director Webster have agreed has proceeded apace; in other words, has not slackened one bit during the 5 years that President Gorbachev has been in office. Indeed the Soviet Union's strategic modernization program has continued at a very robust pace, far more than the United States.

The Soviet Union, for example, has developed and fielded the most destructive weapon ever devised by man, the MOD-5, modified version of the SS-18 intercontinental ballistic missile. In addition to that, the Soviet Union is deploying two different versions of mobile missiles, the SS-24 and SS-25, the former on rail cars, and the latter on trucks. One hundred forty missiles deployed last year alone, the year of great peace breaking out all over.

How many missiles did the United States deploy in the same period? Twelve.

In addition to that, the Soviet Union has continued to develop the other legs of its triad, its submarine force and its bomber force.

Mr. Speaker, CIA Director Webster, Gen. Colin Powell, Secretary of Defense Cheney, the President of the United States, have all pointed out that, as long as the Soviet Union maintains this massive, strategic capability, it would be folly for those who have responsibility for the security of the people of the United States to decide that, based upon a few statements on a thawing day in early spring, that it is time to get rid of the coat; that is to say that because of the good news that came out of Eastern Europe last year we can assume that this massive Soviet strategic weaponry poses no threat anytime in the future to the people of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, it would be folly, and that is another reason why the President has asked both for strategic modernization of our own forces, the offensive forces which have maintained deterrence to date, as well as the development of SDI, and it does make sense that, if in fact the world is becoming more peaceful, that the Soviet Union and the United States are warming to each other, that the best way to deter the use of these massive weapons that are possessed by both sides is not to have a mutually threatening retaliation should one side attack the other; in effect, neighbors with pointed and cocked guns at each other, but rather, Mr. Speaker, a regime which says defenses make good neighbors; that is to say, a defensive system, a system that says, "If you want to have missiles, have them, but they're not going to be effective in ever attacking us, and, therefore, you might as well not have them because we have a defensive system known as SDI which, while it may not absolutely stop every single missile that you can throw at us, it will so disrupt any attack, it will destroy so many, such a high percentage, that obviously the attack could not succeed, and therefore, you may as well not conduct it in the first place."

Mr. Speaker, that is the essence of deterrence, and that is why SDI is so important now even though feelings between the Soviet Union and the United States seem to have warmed.

The last few days, Mr. Speaker, illustrate that times do indeed change. The situation in Lithuania, the situation in Estonia, in Latvia, President Gorbachev's inability to make any economic changes during his tenure in office that would improve the economy of the Soviet Union, and generally a pulling back of many of the proposals that he himself had laid on the table, a sense that actually the Soviet Union is now looking more inward again and does not have the confidence of making agreements with the United States that it seemed to have earlier, a sense that all is not well and moving forward to a peaceful time, the destabilization in the southern republics and some of the other republics in the Soviet Union; all of this suggests that there is potential for change in the Soviet Union that could result in President Gorbachev leaving the scene, and the military acquiring more power, or any of a number of other scenarios developing over the next many, many years which we cannot foresee at this point any more than we can foresee the thawing of relationships in Eastern Europe which means that, as long as the Soviet Union has the strategic capability which could destroy every living thing in this United States in a period of about 1 hour, any responsible public official has the obligation to ensure that that massive force of destruction is never used, and today SDI is a better way to deter than the threat of massive offensive retaliation.

Mr. Speaker, the second reason that President Bush was correct when he said that SDI makes more sense now than ever before is because we want to reduce the number of nuclear warheads in the world on both sides. We want to reduce this massive offensive capability and thus reduce the threat that either side would never ever have to use such weapons. To have the confidence that we can draw down the number of warheads sufficient to achieve a stable and nonoffensive capability, we need SDI as a hedge both against breakout and against cheating by the other side. Unfortunately, the Soviet Union has admitted to a lot of cheating in the treaties that it has had with the United States, and of late, as I say, it has actually admitted to this.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Soviet leadership has not been averse to cheating in the past. They admitted that the Krasnoyarsk radar, for example, was a violation of the ABM treaty, the same treaty they want to hold us to so that we do not deploy SDI. They said they would deploy the Krasnoyarsk radar, but they have yet to do so, so we do not need a hedge against cheating.

Mr. Speaker, why is that important to assist us in reducing the number of warheads? The START negotiations currently underway plan to reduce the number of warheads from approximately 12,000 down to 6,000, so that both sides would have about 6,000 warheads still modern enough to do the job. Some people are already envisioning START-II where we would perhaps cut that in half, reduce the 6,000 down to 3,000 or, perhaps, even less.

Mr. Speaker, there is a phenomenon known as horizontal proliferation that enters in here, and it is that many more nations will be acquiring missile technology and nuclear technology as time goes on, and thus two reasons arise for us to need SDI as we push the number of nuclear warheads down during the START or arms negotiation process. The first has to do with the Soviet Union. The second has to do with other nations which acquire this technology. If the Soviet Union were to cheat when both sides were reduced in warheads to the neighborhood of, let us say, a couple thousand, that cheating makes a lot of difference, a lot more difference than it does if both sides have, let us say, 12,000 warheads.

□ 2150

And it is fairly easy to understand why. Feature two cowboys on a dusty street with sixguns aimed at each other and they both have five bullets in the chamber, and one of them cheats and slips another bullet in the chamber. Well, it does not make a whole lot of difference. One has five, one has six; but suppose we want to reduce the number of warheads to ease tensions. So we keep taking bullets out of those chambers until we get down to one apiece. They have got one and we have got one.

Now suppose they cheat and they put an extra bullet, just one, in the chamber. They have got a 2-to-1 advantage over us. So at low levels of warheads a little bit of cheating matters a whole lot.

Having SDI would give us the confidence, nevertheless, to reduce those numbers of warheads, knowing that even if they did cheat it would not do them any good because SDI would prevent any missile from coming through, and at those very low levels SDI would indeed prevent a missile from getting through because it could be very effective against a much smaller offensive force on the other side.

So this is the first reason why it is a good hedge in a START regime, in an arms negotiation regime. It gives us the confidence that we need to agree to much lower levels of warheads.

The second reason here deals with this horizontal proliferation. The fact that at least 15 Third World nations will acquire ballistic missile technology before the end of this decade, as CIA Director Webster has said, and when you add to the nations that already possess it, you get into a fair number of countries which not only are going to have ballistic missile capability, but the ability to put nuclear warheads or chemical or biological warheads on these missiles.

Colonel Qadhafi, for example, said that if he had had such a missile, he would have launched it at New York when we attacked him about 3 years ago.

This horizontal proliferation becomes important with respect to both the Soviet Union and the United States if nations acquire even relatively small numbers of these weapons. As I said, we have about 10,000 warheads today, the Soviets about 12,000. Suppose we reduce that to 6,000 or 3,000, but these other nations acquire say 500. Well, 500 is not all that many, but 500 is one-fourth of 2,000, and you are going to have a lot of countries in the world becoming pretty big-time players in the ballistic missile game by the end of this century. Horizontal proliferation could become a real problem, because our threat of massive deterrence is not going to work against some of these people. That is why you need a strategic defense which can prevent the missiles of these countries from attacking the United States successfully.

So it is not only the Soviet Union, but other countries who might acquire a few missiles and a few warheads in a regime where the United States and the Soviet Union had in bilateral talks reduced their weapons down to a very small level, but obviously they cannot control what other nations might produce.

The third reason that the President is correct that SDI makes more sense in 1990, than ever before relates to these Third World countries. There has been a lot of talk about the potential for blackmail; the threat, for example, that Manuel Noriega might have hurled at us when he knew that we were coming down to Panama to get him. What if when we announced our intention to capture Manuel Noriega and bring him back here that he had said to us, "Look, I have a bill of sale from the Chinese Government for one of their ballistic missiles," and we know they have them, they have sold them all over the world, "and I have another bill of sale here for a chemical warhead from Libya, and I am telling you folks here in the United States, President Bush, if you dare to try to come down and get me, I am going to launch this missile against some United States city, and you have the proof that I have got it."

It will cripple the capability of the United States to conduct its foreign policy if lots of other people in this world acquire this kind of technology and are willing to use it against us in this kind of blackmail sense.

It will also be very difficult for U.S. forces all over this world in close proximity to countries which will acquire this capability. It will pose a threat to our allies. Indeed, it will pose a threat to the Soviet Union, because many of these relatively unstable countries are in the area, in close proximity to the Soviet Union, and they are going to have some beefs with the Soviet Union, particularly as its Moslem republics begin to try to break away, and some of the Moslem nations that I am speaking of here acquire this technology.

So there is the threat from a Third World country to the United States, to its allies, and even to the Soviet Union.

There is also the threat of a destabilized Soviet Union. Many of its missiles are in its southern Moslem republics, and with the destabilizing situation that exists in that part of the world right now, nobody can predict who might get hold of some of those missiles and what they might choose to do with them.

One of the things that has bothered me most, Mr. Speaker, is the possibility of an accidental launch. For 40 years now we have escaped an actual missile launch with a nuclear warhead on it, but there have been several instances where there have been serious mistakes occur. What if in the future any country accidentally launches one of these missiles? We have absolutely no way of stopping it, absolutely none. They cannot call it back and we cannot destroy it. We would have to accept the horrible damage that would result on some American city because of that accidental launch.

How much is it worth to protect the people of America's cities? For approximately $10 billion we could deploy a minimum protection system that would protect all Americans against an accidental launch and a launch of the kind that would be threatened by a Third World power. It would not deter a strategic attack by the Soviet Union, but it would provide that kind of protection, just $10 billion.

Well, what is the value of American life? I think that comes out to something like $40 for every person here in the United States. Is a $40 insurance policy, paid one time for that kind of protection, not worth it, Mr. Speaker?

So you see, the cost of this kind of program does fit into the concept of protecting American lives, which was one of the reasons that President Reagan first proposed it. Well, that is the third reason that President Bush has said that it makes more sense now than ever before.

It makes more sense now than ever before.

What is the fourth reason? This brings me to the close, Mr. Speaker. It is where I started, that the technology is here. It is at hand, and as this technology has been developed it has also significantly reduced the costs. A full-up, robust system costing $55 billion over the course of the years that it would be deployed would still be a relatively insignificant part, maybe 1½ percent of the entire defense budget in the years of its deployment, the most costly years.

So through the technology that has been developed and through the reductions in cost that have resulted from that technology, the President is right. There is no longer any question about the technological feasibility or the ability to afford to deploy an SDI system. All that remains, Mr. Speaker, is the will of this Congress to support the President's relatively modest request to fund the SDI program at the levels requested. The funding level for this next fiscal year will provide the money necessary to conduct the tests that will literally determine the feasibility of this program. By the time the President's first 4 years are up, he will be able to make a deployment decision based upon the schedule that has been laid out for the conduct of these tests.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, it is important for us to support the President's funding request in the next few weeks when the Defense authorization bill comes before this body and why, as President Bush has said, SDI makes more sense now than ever before.

I urge my colleagues if they are interested in the technology that has been developed, to inquire as to where they might see it in the future. I am informed that the other body may have a similar kind of display as the laboratories and contractors put on display here in the House last week.

It is, of course, also possible for any Member to visit the sites where these things are produced and developed and to observe them firsthand, including in their operational mode, as I have done. If any of my colleagues are interested in going on a trip to the facilities to see these things or just to be briefed by the SDIO, I would urge them to contact my office so that we can help to arrange that.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that you will agree that SDIO has done a good job with the money that we have provided in the past and that we should continue to fund it at the level the President has requested.

□ 2000

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. ALEXANDER (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT), for today, on account of attending the organizational meeting of the U.S. Alternative Fuels Council.

Mrs. BENTLEY (at the request of Mr. MICHEL), for today and the balance of the week, on account of official business.

Mr. DICKINSON (at the request of Mr. MICHEL), for today, on account of personal reasons.

Mr. EMERSON (at the request of Mr. MICHEL), for today and the balance of the week, on account of a death in the family.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. KYL) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. PARRIS, for 20 minutes, on May 10.

Mr. DELAY, for 60 minutes, on May 15.

Mr. IRELAND, for 60 minutes, on May 10.

Mr. DELAY, for 60 minutes, on May 10.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana, for 60 minutes, on May 10.

(The following Members (at the request of Mrs. UNSOELD) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. MONTGOMERY, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ANNUNZIO, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. COYNE, for 5 minutes, today.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, permission to revise and extend remarks was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. KYL) and include extraneous material:)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN in two instances.

Mr. BEREUTER in five instances.

Mr. MCEWEN.

Mr. CONTE.

Mr. BROOMFIELD.

Mr. CRANE.

Mr. BILIRAKIS.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey in two instances.

Mr. FIELDS in two instances.

Mr. DOUGLAS.

Mr. SUNDQUIST.

Ms. MOLINARI.

Mr. SKEEN.

Mr. PARRIS.

Mr. MILLER of Washington.

Mr. SOLOMON in three instances.

Mr. DANNEMEYER.

Mr. SCHUETTE in two instances.

Ms. SNOWE.

Mr. BARTLETT.

(The following Members (at the request of Mrs. UNSOELD) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota.

Mr. CLEMENT.

Mr. HAMILTON.

Mr. SOLARZ.

Mr. DOWNEY.

Mr. MILLER of California.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts.

Mr. YATRON.

Mr. BOSCO.

Mr. FASCELL.

Mr. BERMAN in two instances.

Mr. SLATTERY.

Mr. ATKINS.

Mr. LEVINE of California in three instances.

Mr. MATSUI in three instances.

Mr. KOLTER.

Mr. LAFALCE.

Mr. WEISS in two instances.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

Joint resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S.J. Res. 267. Joint resolution to authorize and request the President to designate May 1990 as "National Physical Fitness and Sports Month"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 993. An act to implement the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and Their Destruction, by prohibiting certain conduct relating to biological weapons, and for other purposes, and

S. 1853. An act to award a congressional gold medal to Laurance Spelman Rockefellar.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. KYL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 10 o'clock p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, May 10, 1990, at 10 a.m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

3137. A letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting the annual report on foreign investment in U.S. agricultural land, pursuant to section 5 of the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act of 1978; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3138. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Installations, Logistics and Environment), transmitting notification of emergency munitions disposal, pursuant to 50 U.S.C. 1512(4); to the Committee on Armed Services.

3139. A letter from the Under Secretary of Defense, transmitting a request for T45TS Defense Enterprise Program baseline approval, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2437(d)(2); to the Committee on Armed Services.

3140. A letter from the Assistant General Counsel (Legal Counsel), Department of Defense, transmitting a report of individuals who filed DD Form 1787; report of DOD and defense related employment, for fiscal year 1989, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2397; to the Committee on Armed Services.

3141. A letter from the Secretary of Defense, transmitting a copy of a report entitled, "Defense Advisory Panel on Government-Industry Relations"; to the Committee on Armed Services.

3142. A letter from the Chairman, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System, transmitting the 76th annual report of the Board of Governors, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 247; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

3143. A letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting the annual report on the Youth Conservation Corps Program in the Department, fiscal year 1989, pursuant to 16 U.S.C. 1705; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

3144. A letter from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting the Department's 13th report, "Comprehensive Program and Plan for Federal Energy Education, Extension and Information Activities," pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 7373(2); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

3145. A letter from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting the annual report on the activities of the Office of Alcohol Fuels for fiscal year 1989, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 8818(c)(1); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

3146. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to extend and amend programs under the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

3147. A letter from the Assistant Administrator for Legislative Affairs, Agency for International Development, transmitting notification that there is now a proper basis to designate formally the Polish-American and Hungarian-American Enterprise Funds to receive SEED Act funds and support; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, May 9, 1990.

3148. A letter from the Director, Human Resources, Department of the Army, transmitting the annual report for the U.S. Army nonappropriated fund employee retirement plans for the year ended September 30, 1988, pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 9503(a)(1)(B); to the Committee on Government Operations.

3149. A letter from the Acting Administrator, General Services Administration, transmitting a report on its activities under the Freedom of Information Act for calendar year 1989, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552(d); to the Committee on Government Operations.

3150. A letter from the Chairman, National Credit Union Administration, transmitting the activities of the Office of Inspector General for the period October 1, 1989 through March 31, 1990, pursuant to Public Law 95-452, section 8E(h)(2) (102 Stat. 2525); to the Committee on Government Operations.

3151. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to provide for increases in appropriation ceilings for land acquisition and development in certain units of the National Park System, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

3152. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting notification that the $16 million for tribal conversion costs in the Indian Health Service Appropriations for fiscal year 1990 satisfied the need for additional obligational authority; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

3153. A letter from the American Chemical Society, transmitting the society's annual report and financial audit for the calendar year 1989, pursuant to 36 U.S.C. 1101(2), 1103; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3154. A letter from the Secretary of Transportation, transmitting the Airport Noise Compatibility Planning Program, pursuant to 49 U.S.C. app. 2104 nt.; to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

3155. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting the United Nations Environment Program's current financial and operational status; jointly to the Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Affairs.

3156. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend title 13 of the United States Code and the International Investment and Trade in Services Survey Act to provide for sharing statistical establishment list information with the Bureau of Economic Analysis to augment, and improve the quality of, its international data, and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committees on Post Office and Civil Service, Foreign Affairs, and Energy and Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. MOAKLEY: Committee on Rules. H.R. 4636. A bill to authorize supplemental economic assistance for fiscal year 1990 to support democracy in Panama and Nicaragua, and for other purposes (Rept. 101-470, Pt. 2). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. HAWKINS: Committee on Education and Labor. H.R. 4151. A bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1991 through 1994 to carry out the Head Start Act, the Follow Through Act, the Community Services Block Grant Act, and the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. 101-480). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 5 of rule X and clause 4 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BARTLETT (for himself, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. SHAW, and Mr. BROWN of Colorado):

H.R. 4755. A bill to amend title XVI of the Social Security Act to permit disabled people to maximize their independence; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TAUZIN (for himself, Mr. SWIFT, Mr. COOPER, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. HALL of Texas, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. CHAPMAN, Mr. OLIN, Mr. WEBER, Mr. WILLIAMS, Mr. GORDON, and Mr. GALLO, and Mr. DEFAZIO):

H.R. 4756. A bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to provide for the competitive development of direct to home satellite television communications; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. BROOKS (by request):

H.R. 4757. A bill to provide permanent authority for the U.S. Supreme Court Police; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. COLEMAN of Texas:

H.R. 4758. A bill to provide for the construction, operation, and maintenance of an extension of the American Canal at El Paso, TX; jointly to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CRANE:

H.R. 4759. A bill to amend the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965 to abolish the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Council on the Arts; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI:

H.R. 4760. A bill to amend the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 to reform the budget process, to amend the Social Security Act to enhance and protect the Social Security Program, and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committees on Ways and Means, Government Operations, and Rules.

By Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota (for himself and Mr. CHANDLER):

H.R. 4761. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow individuals who do not itemize deductions a deduction for charitable contributions to the extent in excess of $100 per year; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FAWELL:

H.R. 4762. A bill to make technical changes to Public Law 81-874; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. FOGLIETTA (for himself, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. SCHEUER, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. FASCELL, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. GUARINI, and Mr. MORRISON of Washington):

H.R. 4763: A bill to provide emergency Federal assistance to drug emergency areas; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GEJDENSON:

H.R. 4764. A bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to prohibit commerce in high-definition televisions that do not contain minimum levels of domestic content; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. DE LUGO (for himself, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. UDALL, Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mr. BLAZ, and Mr. DARDEN):

H.R. 4765. A bill to enable the people of Puerto Rico to excerise self-determination; jointly, to the Committees on Interior and Insular Affairs and Rules.

By Mr. GONZALEZ (for himself and Mr. WYLIE (both by request), Ms. OAKAR, and Mr. SHUMWAY):

H.R. 4766. A bill to amend the Defense Production Act of 1950 to support mobilization of the defense industrial base of the United States; to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. HEFLEY (for himself, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. SCHAEFER, and Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado):

H.R. 4767. A bill to improve the water quality of the water flowing from the Leadville Mine drainage tunnel in Colorado; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. HOYER:

H.R. 4768. A bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to revise the pay structure for the police forces of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the U.S. Mint; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

H.R. 4769. A bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to increase the limit on the uniform allowance payable to Federal employees; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. ROYBAL (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. STARK, Mr. DOWNEY, Mr. RINALDO, Mr. REGULA, and Mr. BRUCE):

H.R. 4770. A bill to amend the public Health Service Act to provide assistance for biomedical and health services research, education, treatment programs and for other purposes relating to Alzheimer's disease and related disorders; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. JACOBS:

H.R. 4771. A bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale, delivery, or importation of certain motor vehicles and railcars that do not have seatbelts, and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committees on Energy and Commerce and Ways and Means.

By Mr. KOLTER:

H.R. 4772. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to repeal the requirment that all nonparticipating physicians file Medicare claims on behalf of all of their patients who are Medicare beneficiaries; jointly, to the Committees on Energy and Commerce and Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFALCE (for himself and Mr. CONTE):

H.R. 4773. A bill to authorize the President to call and conduct a National White House Conference on Small Business; to the Committee on Small Business.

By Mr. LEVINE of California (for himself, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. WAXMAN, and Mr. BLILEY):

H.R. 4774. A bill to ban volatile alkyl nitrites; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. PARRIS:

H.R. 4775. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to repeal the limitation on the amount of separation pay that may be paid to an officer of the Armed Forces involuntarily separated before becoming eligible for retirement, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. POSHARD:

H.R. 4776. A bill to establish a National Coal Institute which would address the current and future problems and challenges of the Nation's high-sulfur coal industry; jointly, to the Committees on Energy and Commerce; Science, Space, and Technology; and Education and Labor.

By Mr. SKEEN:

H.R. 4777. A bill to amend the Act of June 20, 1910, to clarify in the State of New Mexico authority to exchange lands granted by the United States in trust, and to validate prior land exchanges; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of New Jersey:

H.R. 4778. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Army to conduct a study of the feasibility of implementing flood control measures on the Manasquan River to alleviate flooding in Freehold, Howell, and other affected townships in New Jersey; to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

By Mr. STUDDS (for himself and Mr. YOUNG of Alaska):

H.R. 4779. A bill to provide congressional approval of the Governing International Fishery Agreement between the United States and the Government of the People's Republic of China; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

H.R. 4780. A bill to provide congressional approval of the Governing International Fishery Agreement between the United States and the Government of the German Democratic Republic; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. WISE:

H.R. 4781. A bill to assure the continued involvement of State, county, and local governments in the war on drugs; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BILIRAKIS:

H.J. Res. 565. Joint resolution designating July 22 through July 28, 1990, as "National Invent America Week"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. ESPY (for himself, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. WOLF, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. HORTON, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. WEBER, Mr. TALLON, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. LENT, Mr. PICKETT, Mr. SPENCE, and Mr. TAYLOR):

H.J. Res. 566. Joint resolution acknowledging the sacrifices that military families have made on behalf of the Nation and designating November 19, 1990, as "National Military Families Recognition Day"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. CLEMENT:

H. Res. 389. Resolution expressing the Sense of the House of Representatives that the sponsors and participants of the first National Conference on Environmental Sensitivity in Construction should be commended; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

383. By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the 15th Legislature of the State Senate of Hawaii, relative to the enhancement of national and community services; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

384. Also, memorial of the Assembly of the State Legislature of California, relative to leveraged buyouts; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

385. Also, memorial of the Assembly of the State Legislature of California, relative to the right of self-determination of the Lithuanian people; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

386. Also, memorial of the State Senate of Colorado, relative to designation of additional wilderness areas in the State; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 220: Mr. MCGRATH.

H.R. 446: Mr. COURTER, Mr. MILLER of Washington, Mr. HOLLOWAY, and Mr. APPLEGATE.

H.R. 467: Ms. MOLINARI, Mr. DICKS, Mr. LENT, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. MARTINEZ, and Mr. COYNE.

H.R. 505: Mr. CONDIT.

H.R. 1068: Mr. DERRICK, Mr. HALL of Texas, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. MOODY, Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. PURSELL, Mr. GEREN, Mr. ANTHONY, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. BARTON of Texas, and Mr. ESPY.

H.R. 1083: Mr. WHITTAKER, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. PRICE, Mr. GILLMOR, Mr. IRELAND, Mr. GRAY, Mr. LEWIS of Florida, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. STANGELAND, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. SYNAR, Mr. HALL of Texas, and Ms. MOLINARI.

H.R. 1249: Mr. DELLUMS.

H.R. 1287: Mr. SPENCE and Mr. HORTON.

H.R. 1317: Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. FLIPPO, Mr. SHAW, Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. COURTER, Mr. HOLLOWAY, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. VANDER JAGT, Mr. ANDREWS, and Mr. SUNDQUIST.

H.R. 1574: Mr. VENTO and Mr. ROE.

H.R. 2269: Mr. RIDGE.

H.R. 2273: Mr. BARTLETT.

H.R. 2284: Mr. WALSH.

H.R. 2336: Mr. CONDIT.

H.R. 2353: Mr. HORTON, Mr. CARR, and Mr. TOWNS.

H.R. 2380: Mr. FROST, Mr. VOLKMER, and Mr. PASHAYAN.

H.R. 2499: Mr. AUCOIN.

H.R. 2575: Mr. NAGLE, Mr. TANNER, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. CAMPBELL of California, Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas, Mr. PICKETT, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. DE LUGO, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. WILSON, Mr. HUTTO, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. PAXON, and Mr. MARKEY.

H.R. 2761: Mr. ASPIN.

H.R. 3119: Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH.

H.R. 3437: Mr. DREIER of California, Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming, and Mr. WISE.

H.R. 3500: Mr. KASTENMEIER, Mr. RHODES, Mr. DEWINE, Ms. MOLINARI, Mr. CAMPBELL of California, Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. HERTEL, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, and Mr. FAWELL.

H.R. 3693: Mr. VENTO.

H.R. 3734: Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. EVANS, Mrs. SCHROEDER, Mrs. BENTLEY, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. EMERSON, and Mr. OWENS of New York.

H.R. 3766: Mr. ESPY and Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire.

H.R. 3859: Mr. SERRANO.

H.R. 3912: Mrs. UNSOELD.

H.R. 3914: Mrs. BYRON, Mrs. SCHROEDER, Mr. DYMALLY, Ms. MOLINARI, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. BENNETT, and Mr. OBERSTAR.

H.R. 3977: Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. LANCASTER, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. HUGHES, and Mr. WEISS.

H.R. 4049: Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado and Mr. HOYER.

H.R. 4095: Mr. DICKS, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. MURTHA, Mrs. LLOYD, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. ENGLISH, Mrs. MORELLA, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. LANCASTER, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. FRANK, Mr. YATRON, and Mr. DEWINE.

H.R. 4149: Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. EMERSON, Mr. MCDADE, and Mr. ROE.

H.R. 4151: Mr. TOWNS, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. CLEMENT, Mrs. SCHROEDER, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. SWIFT, Mr. HERTEL, Mr. CLAY, Mr. TANNER, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. CONTE, Mr. DINGELL, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. MAVROULES, Mr. TALLON, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. JONES of Georgia, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. WYDEN, and Mr. SKAGGS.

H.R. 4224: Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. EVANS, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. LOWERY of California, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. PANETTA, Mr. SKEEN, and Mr. SMITH of Florida.

H.R. 4226: Mr. SHARP.

H.R. 4254: Mr. CLARKE.

H.R. 4262: Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota and Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.

H.R. 4340: Mr. SAXTON.

H.R. 4345: Mr. PENNY and Mr. RICHARDSON.

H.R. 4347: Mr. CLINGER.

H.R. 4362: Mr. BRUCE, Mr. OWENS of Utah, and Mr. DIXON.

H.R. 4470: Mrs. BOGGS and Mr. FUSTER.

H.R. 4475: Mr. DYSON, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. KYL, Mr. FASCELL, Mr. JENKINS, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. STALLINGS, Mr. HUTTO, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. DANNEMEYER, Mr. GOSS, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. SHUMWAY, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. PARKER, Mr. OXLEY, Mr. SMITH of Vermont, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. HENRY, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. STEARNS, and Mr. SPRATT.

H.R. 4493: Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota, and Mr. POSHARD.

H.R. 4506: Mr. FRANK.

H.R. 4516: Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. FRANK, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. LANTOS, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. RANGEL, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. GREEN, Mr. SOLARZ, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. DELLUMS, and Mr. MILLER of Washington.

H.R. 4564: Mr. KANJORSKI and Mr. GONZALEZ.

H.R. 4566: Mr. CHANDLER.

H.R. 4570: Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. EVANS, Mr. LEVIN of Michigan, Mr. LAGOMARSINO, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, and Mr. BROWN of Colorado.

H.R. 4595: Mr. SERRANO and Mr. RANGEL.

H.R. 4640: Mr. HORTON, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. NIELSON of Utah, Mr. DYSON, and Mr. PAYNE of Virginia.

H.R. 4690: Mr. AKAKA, Mr. DEFAZIO, and Mr. TOWNS.

H.R. 4721: Mr. DICKINSON, Mr. GREEN, and Mr. SPENCE.

H.J. Res. 372: Mr. COURTER.

H.J. Res. 431: Mr. DURBIN, Mr. JAMES, Mr. BRUCE, and Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA.

H.J. Res. 452: Mr. MCDADE, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. STANGELAND, Mr. JENKINS, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. MCCOLLUM, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mr. TALLON, Mr. YATRON, Mr. HILER, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. DUNCAN, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. SHARP, Mr. MARKEY, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. HUTTO, Mr. MFUME, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. UDALL, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. SNOWE, Mr. ACKERMAN, and Mrs. SAIKI.

H.J. Res. 467: Mr. WAXMAN and Mr. SHAW.

H.J. Res. 476: Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. LIVINGSTON, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. STAGGERS, Mr. TRAXLER, and Mr. WEISS.

H.J. Res. 489: Mr. KOLTER, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. FASCELL, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. WATKINS, Mr. UDALL, Mr. NOWAK, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. STOKES, Mr. HENRY, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. WEISS, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. HORTON, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. SKELTON, Mr. DYMALLY, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. FROST, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. CHAPMAN, Mr. CROCKETT, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. SAVAGE, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. KILDEE, and Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado.

H.J. Res. 508: Mr. ARCHER, Mr. BAKER, Mr. BALLENGER, Mr. BARLETT, Mr. BATEMAN, Mr. BATES, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. BOSCO, Mr. BOUCHER, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BROOMFIELD, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mrs. BYRON, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. CLEMENT, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. COBLE, Mr. COLEMAN of Texas, Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. COURTER, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. DARDEN, Mr. DAVIS, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. DE LA GARZA, Mr. DELAY, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. DE LUGO, Mr. DICKS, Mr. DIXON, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. DREIER of California, Mr. DUNCAN, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. DYMALLY, Mr. EMERSON, Mr. ESPY, Mr. EVANS, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. FIELDS, Mr. GALLO, Mr. GEKAS, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. GINGRICH, Mr. GOSS, Mr. GRANT, Mr. GRANDY, Mr. GUNDERSON, Mr. HALL of Texas, Mr. HALL of Ohio, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. HEFLEY, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. HENRY, Mr. HOLLOWAY, Mr. HOYER, Mr. HUCKABY, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. IRELAND, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. KLECZKA, Mr. KASICH, Mr. LEHMAN of California, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. LENT, Mr. LEVIN of Michigan, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. LOWERY of California, Mr. MCCOLLUM, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. MCHUGH, Mr. MCMILLAN of North Carolina, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. MANTON, Mr. MARKEY, Mr. MARTIN of New York, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. MICHEL, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. MOORHEAD, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut, Mr. MORRISON of Washington, Mr. MRAZEK, Mr. MURTHA, Mr. NAGLE, Mr. NATCHER, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. ORTIZ, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. PACKARD, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. PANETTA, Mr. PASHAYAN, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. PICKLE, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. REGULA, Mr. RITTER, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. ROSE, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Mr. SABO, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. SARPALIUS, Mr. SCHAEFER, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. SHAYS, Mr. SHUMWAY, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. SKELTON, Mr. SLAUGHTER of Virginia, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. SOLOMON, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. STUMP, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. VANDER JAGT, Mr. WALSH, Mr. WELDON, Mr. WHITTEN, Mr. WOLF, Mr. WOLPE, and Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas.

H.J. Res. 519: Mr. ASPIN, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. GEJDENSON, and Mr. SMITH of New Jersey.

H.J. Res. 531: Ms. LONG.

H.J. Res. 534: Mr. FLAKE.

H.J. Res. 535: Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. FROST, Mr. WEISS, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. JONES of Georgia, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. WALGREN, Mr. NAGLE, Mr. FAZIO, Mr. ECKART, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado, Mr. RHODES, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. NOWAK, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. WEBER, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. PAXON, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. WATKINS, Mr. EVANS, Mr. SHAW, Mr. GREEN, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. MCCRERY, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. TRAXLER, and Mr. DANNEMEYER.

H.J. Res. 540: Mr. REGULA, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. DERRICK, Mr. GREEN, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. ASPIN, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mrs. SAIKI, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. FROST, Mr. BATES, Mr. HYDE, Mr. GEREN, Mr. ESPY, Mr. WILSON, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. GINGRICH, and Mr. KASICH.

H.J. Res. 555: Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. ASPIN, Mr. BATES, Mr. BEILENSON, Mr. BENNETT, Mrs. BENTLEY, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. BOSCO, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mr. CARPER, Mr. COBLE, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. CONTE, Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. COURTER, Mr. DERRICK, Mr. DICKS, Mr. DONNELLY, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. DYMALLY, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. FEIGHAN, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. FROST, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. GEKAS, Mr. GRANT, Mr. HANCOCK, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. HORTON, Mr. HYDE, Mr. IRELAND, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. KASICH, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mr. LEHMAN of California, Mr. LENT, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. PANETTA, Mr. PASHAYAN, Mr. RHODES, Mr. SOLOMON, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. WEBER, Mr. WOLF, Mr. YATRON, Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma, and Mr. VANDER JAGT.

H.J. Res. 556: Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. APPLEGATE, Mr. ASPIN, Mr. AUCOIN, Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. BATES, Mrs. BENTLEY, Mr. BEREUTER, Mr. BILBRAY, Mr. BLAZ, Mr. BLILEY, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. BOSCO, Mr. BRENNAN, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. BRUCE, Mr. BRYANT, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. BUNNING, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. CARPER, Mr. CLARKE, Mr. CLEMENT, Mr. COUGHLIN, Mr. COURTER, Mr. COYNE, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. DE LUGO, Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota, Mr. DOWNEY, Mr. DREIER of California, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. DYMALLY, Mr. EDWARDS of California, Mr. ERDREICH, Mr. EVANS, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mr. FEIGHAN, Mr. FLAKE, Mr. GALLO, Mr. GONZALEZ, Mr. GORDON, Mr. GRANT, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. HILER, Mr. HOAGLAND, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Mr. HOYER, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. JONES of North Carolina, Mr. KANJORSKI, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. KENNELLY, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. KLECZKA, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mr. LAUGHLIN, Mr. LEHMAN of California, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mr. MARKEY, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MAVROULES, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. MCCOLLUM, Mr. MCGRATH, Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland, Mr. MFUME, Mr. MILLER of California, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. MOODY, Mr. MOORHEAD, Mr. MORRISON of Washington, Mr. NATCHER, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Ms. OAKAR, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. PANETTA, Mrs. PATTERSON, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. PRICE, Mr. ROYBAL, Mr. RUSSO, Mr. SABO, Mr. SARPALIUS, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. SKAGGS, Mr. SLATTERY, Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. SPENCE, Mr. STARK, Mr. STUDDS, Mr. TALLON, Mr. TORRES, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. TRAXLER, Mr. UDALL, Mr. VISCLOSKY, Mr. WHEAT, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. SOLOMON, Mr. FISH, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. SOLARZ, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. KASICH, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. HUTTO, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. MAZZOLI, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. FORD Tennessee, Mr. WISE, Mr. SIKORSKI, AND Mr. GEPHARDT.

H. Con. Res. 128: Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. HANCOCK, Mr. SMITH of Florida, and Mr. DORNAN of California.

H. Con. Res. 246: Mr. FAZIO and Mr. CONDIT.

H. Con. Res. 252: Mr. DYMALLY, MR. MURPHY, AND MR. OBERSTAR.

H. Con. Res. 291: Mr. HORTON.

H. Con. Res. 316: Mr. FLIPPO, Mr. CARPER, Mr. FORD of Tennessee, Mr. GONZALEZ, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. HORTON, Mr. GEPHARDT, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. LEHMAN of California, Mr. LEVIN of Michigan, Mr. KANJORSKI, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. MARKEY, Mr. BATES, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. SKAGGSMr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. GEJDENSON, AND MR. FEIGHAN.

H. Res. 134: Mr. ROTH.

H. Res. 387: Mr. THOMAS of California, Ms. SNOWE, MR. RAVENEL, MR. MCMILLAN of North Carolina, Mr. ROBERTS, MR. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. MADIGAN, MR. HILER, Mr. ARCHER, MRS. MARTIN of Illinois, and Mr. HENRY.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 3736: Mr. OLIN.
H.R. 3737: Mr. OLIN.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

166. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Township of Wayne, Passaic, NJ, relative to urging Congress to open the cable industry to more competition in the marketplace; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

167. Also, petition of the Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America, relative to urging full U.S. funding for the International Labor Organization; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

168. Also, petition of the Town of Penney Farms, FL, relative to the payment by Florida residents of Federal taxes; to the Committee on Government Operations.

169. Also, petition of the Levy County Board of Commissioners, Florida, relative to the payment of Florida taxes regarding the interstate allocation of grant funds; to the Committee on Government Operations.

170. Also, petition of the Board of Alderman, city of New Haven, CT, relative to praising the Congress for repealing the catastrophic health insurance surtax, but urging enactment of a comprehensive national health plan with no-cost catastrophic coverage for senior citizens; jointly, to the Committees on Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

PUERTO RICO STATUS PLEBISCITE GENERATES INTERNATIONAL INTEREST

HON. JAIME B. FUSTER

OF PUERTO RICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. FUSTER. Mr. Speaker, in recent days my colleagues have heard me speak of the many dimensions of the political status debate in and about Puerto Rico—dimensions that have been explored in the last month alone in such national publications as the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Wall Street Journal, and Time magazine. But there is also an international dimension to this issue, legislation about which is pending in the Congress that would set up a political status plebiscite in Puerto Rico next year between the choices of statehood, independence, or an enhancement of the existing commonwealth status.

This international interest in and growing awareness of the plebiscite has been promoted in part by supporters of the independence option for Puerto Rico. To that end, Mr. Speaker, I am inserting in the RECORD today two interesting articles from newspapers in Puerto Rico about the proindependence aspect of the status debate, and I commend them to the attention of my distinguished colleagues.

[From El Mundo, Apr. 17, 1990]

THE DAYS OF COLONIALISM IN PUERTO RICO ARE COUNTED

MEXICO.—Rubén Berríos, president of the Puerto Rico Independence Party (PIP), said in Cuba that "The days of colonialism in Puerto Rico are counted," according to the Cuban press agency "Prensa Latina."

"The days of colonialism in Puerto Rico are counted. We are facing the 21st century and there are virtually no colonies left. Only six million people live under colonial regimes, of them, three and a half live in Puerto Rico," Berríos told the Cuban media during his visit to Havana.

According to Berríos, "The United States is faced with the problem of colonialism in Puerto Rico and the current process in the United States Congress towards a plebiscite in the Caribbean island is symptomatic of the degree of colonial deterioration that weighs heavily on Washington."

Berríos added that "spokespersons and ideologues of U.S. conservatism have stated that statehood is not a viable economic or political alternative for the United States."

"And since colonialism in the world is bankrupt, Washington will have to confront the fact that the only way out-for the Puerto Rican problem, short term or long term, is independence," Berríos stated.

Berríos and PIP Vice President [Puerto Rico Senator] Fernando Martín (PIP at-large), travelled to Havana during the weekend as part of a tour to create "a common Latin American front for the independence of Puerto Rico."

In Havana, Berríos met with President Fidel Castro and, prior to that meeting, had met with eight other Latin American presidents.

During his meeting with Castro, Berríos said the Cuban President "ratified the support of the government in Havana for the cause of Puerto Rican independence."

[From El Nuevo Día. Apr. 17, 1990]

PUERTO RICAN INDEPENDENCE PARTY MAKES APPEAL TO LATIN AMERICA

HAVANA, CUBA.—During a visit to Cuba this past weekend, Puerto Rico Independence Party (PIP) President Rubén Berríos stressed the need for Latin America's support for Puerto Rico's independence.

The PIP leader travelled to Havana with Senator Fernando Martín, the PIP's Vice President. The PIP is one of the three parties participating in the process towards a plebiscite in Puerto Rico. Berríos and Martín are on a tour of several countries in the region with the purpose of seeking support for the creation of a "common Latin American front for the independence of Puerto Rico." During his Latin American excursion, Berríos has visited Jamaica, Perú, Bolivia, Ecuador, Argentina, Venezuela, Colombia and Cuba, and has met with nine presidents.

In his meeting with the Cuban president, Fidel Castro, both politicians examined possible endeavors towards Puerto Rican independence, according to a report which appeared today in Cuba's official newspaper, "Granma."

During their meeting, Berríos said he was convinced that the contradictions of the U.S. presence in Puerto Rico, exposed during the plebiscite process, have served as evidence of the failure of the colonial system as well as of the "annexionist" (or pro-statehood) movement, according to the source. In his statements to the local media, Berríos indicated that Fidel Castro had ratified the support of his government to Puerto Rican independence. Rubén Berríos stressed that, in Puerto Rico, "the days of colonialism are counted."

"We are facing the 21st century," he added "and there are virtually no colonies left. Only six million people live under colonial regimes, of them, three and a half live in Puerto Rico." According to Berríos, the U.S. government is faced with the problem and the current process in the U.S. Congress towards a plebiscite in the Caribbean island is symptomatic of the degree of colonial deterioration that weighs heavily on Washington. He also explained that the option for the referendum, scheduled for next year if Congress approves legislation to that effect, would be statehood, Commonwealth and independence.

TRADE SANCTIONS AND THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, the President must decide by June 3, 1990, whether to grant a waiver of the Jackson-Vanik amendment in order to extend China's most-favored-nation [MFN] status for another 12 months. The Jackson-Vanik amendment does not allow MFN status to be granted to countries who do not allow their citizens to emigrate freely, unless a waiver is granted by the President. Following the Tiananmen Square massacre in 1989, Chinese leaders have further restricted emigration and increased their disregard for basic human rights.

While these actions have been very disappointing and could easily justify a decision to revoke MFN status, a May 3, 1990, editorial from the Journal of Commerce illustrates some interesting points which could support continuation of China's current MFN status. Most notably, MFN status makes textiles, electronics, sneakers, and toys manufactured in China competitive in the United States. These goods are manufactured by semiprivate companies which make up China's entrepreneurial sector which has developed as a result of economic reforms. Loss of the Jackson-Vanik waiver would render these firms uncompetitive in the U.S. market. United States support for these entrepreneurs, the Journal suggests, could be best illustrated by granting a waiver of the Jackson-Vanik amendment and extending MFN to the People's Republic of China for an additional 12 months. I submit this editorial to be printed in the RECORD.

SELF-DEFEATING SANCTION

Using trade policy to do a foreign policy job is a tricky business: The United States could end up hurting itself by imposing broad trade sanctions to make a narrow political statement. That's what will happen if President Bush follows the advice of some in Congress who want to punish the hardliners in Beijing by canceling China's most-favored-nation tariff status.

Most-favored-nation status, which grants imports from China the same tariff treatment accorded goods from most other countries, was extended in 1980 under the U.S.-China Trade Agreement. That privilege has enabled China to become America's 10th-largest trading partner. Without it, high tariffs would make many Chinese goods uncompetitive: Customs duties on cotton sweaters, a major Chinese export, would rise from 6% to 60%.

Under the Jackson-Vanik Amendment, a 1974 law aimed at the Soviet Union, most-favored-nation status may not be granted to any country that restricts its citizens' right to emigrate. Each year since 1980, the United States has granted China a waiver of the Jackson-Vanik requirement, renewing its tariff preferences with little debate.

Beijing's murderous repression in Tiananmen Square last June and the subsequent crackdown on the emigration of students and dissidents, mean that the Jackson-Vanik waiver is no longer a routine matter. By June 3, President Bush must decide whether to issue a waiver for another 12 months. The president is under pressure to vindicate himself for his mistake in sending two secret missions to Beijing for high-level talks last year while publicly proclaiming a moratorium on official visits. But responding to that pressure by stripping China of its most-favored-nation status would be a mistake.

A reversal in U.S. trade policy, effectively abrogating the 1980 trade agreement, would play into the hands of the Chinese leadership, which has been waging an anti-American campaign since last June. China might well retaliate in kind, interrupting the flow of U.S. exports to China, which totaled $6 billion in 1989.

The injured parties would include U.S. farmers, who sold $1 billion worth of wheat to China last year, exporters of mining and construction equipment, which have contracts for hundreds of millions worth of goods over the next two years; and airplane manufacturers, which stand to lose about $500 million in sales. In every case, China could find alternative sources for these products with little difficulty.

Reverting to old tariff rates would cut U.S. imports of Chinese toys, sneakers, apparel and electronic products by an estimated 50%, according to the U.S.-China Business Council. The biggest losers would not be the state-controlled factories, but semi-private enterprises in the south, many of them joint ventures between Chinese and foreign firms. Tariff hikes thus would harm the very entrepreneurial sector the United States has been trying to support over the past decade and weaken the position of China's liberal economic reformers.

Maintaining trade relations with China is in the United States' long-term foreign policy and economic interests. Seeking to humiliate the Chinese by stripping them of their favored tariff status would be self-defeating. There are less damaging and less expensive ways to send the message that the United States does not support the regime of Premier Li Peng.

HONORING THE LATIN AMERICAN CIVIC ORGANIZATION

HON. HOWARD L. BERMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is a special privilege for me to rise today to honor the Latin American Civic Organization [LACA], for its outstanding work as the Head Start agency in the north San Fernando Valley. LACA has helped thousands of preschool children of low income families break the cycle of poverty. It is a distinct honor for me to pay tribute to LACA as Head Start's 25th anniversary is celebrated in our community by the Los Angeles Early Childhood Federation of Teachers, American Federation of Teachers Local 1475, AFL/CIO. Local 1475 is the collective-bargaining agent for Head Start agencies in Los Angeles County.

From its inception, the originators of Head Start realized that they would only succeed if the child's entire family as well as the community were involved. In the San Fernando Valley, LACA has instigated comprehensive programs designed to meet the emotional, social, health, nutritional, and psychological needs of the preschoolers it serves.

In addition to the Federal funding that it receives, Head Start has to generate an amount equal to 25 percent of the financing it receives from Washington. LACA has done sterling work in soliciting volunteer donations and community services contributions. They have also enlisted the direct participation of families in the program, as classroom volunteer aides and members of parent policy groups.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to ask my colleagues to join me in saluting the Latin American Civic Organization—a community agency helping thousands to reach their potential and achieve their dreams.

INTRODUCTION OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEE UNIFORM EQUITY ACT

HON. STENY H. HOYER

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce legislation to provide a higher uniform allowance for Federal employees who are required to wear uniforms on a daily basis.

Thousands of Federal employees are now required to wear unfiroms either for safety reasons or so that they can be easily identifiable to the public that they serve. Nurses in Indian hospitals, firefighters, and security guards at the Department of Defense and technicians in the Bureau of Land Management are only a few examples of those in uniforms today. These employees are required to bear the cost of this requirement, except for a minimal allowance provided by agencies.

The allowance was raised in 1966 and is currently capped at $125. This amount is clearly inadequate. For example, a security guard in St. Louis at the GS-4 level earns $14,500 a year. The cost for keeping two uniforms, the minimum necessary for presentability, is more than $200 over the current allowance.

Mr. Speaker, the Congress has already recognized the inadequacy of this cap in 1976, 1982, and 1983, when it raised the cap to $400 for Park Service, Forest Service, and Corps of Engineers employees respectively. Last year, the Congress gave the Department of Defense the authority to pay the higher cap for its employees. This has created an inequitable situation which we should quickly move to redress. All employees should be protected and included in this $400 a year allotment for uniforms. Clearly, the cost of living has greatly increased since 1966, when the current cap was established. It is only fair that a proper uniform allotment be allowed for every hard working, uniformed Federal employee. This legislation would do just that.

I urge my colleagues to join with me in cosponsoring this legislation and in working to secure its speedy passage.

DR. JOHN MATOCHIK, JR., HAS EXEMPLIFIED THE SPIRIT OF SCOUTING

HON. GERALD B.H. SOLOMON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, like many of you, my first introduction to community involvement, my real apprenticeship in life, was in Scouting. That's why I've been involved on one level or another of Scouting nearly all my life. But when it comes to contributions to Scouting, I and nearly everyone must bow to Dr. John Matochik, Jr., a veterinarian from Fort Edward in my district. Let me tell you a little more about him.

At a Saturday, June 9 dinner, the Mohican Council, Boy Scouts of America, will present Dr. Matochik with its Distinguished Citizen Award. I could not think of a more appropriate recipient.

Dr. Matochik has been involved in Scouting for more than 20 years. He was president of the Mohican Council from 1974 to 1988. He is now vice president of finance for the council and vice president of Scouts Area 2, Northeast Region. In 1967, he took 26 local scouts across the country to the Philmont Boy Scout Camp in New Mexico, an experience those young scouts have never forgotten. Dr. Matochik has received Scouting's Silver Beaver Award and the Pelican and St. George medals.

His contribution to Scouting would be enough, but there is more to his story.

He has served on the Fort Edward Chamber of Commerce, the regional development board of Glens Falls National Bank, and the Glens Falls Hospital board of governors. He is current president of the Tri-County United Way, a trustee and past president of the Fort Hudson Nursing Home, a Eucharistic minister of St. Joseph's Church, past president of the Washington County State Committee of the American Cancer Society, and past president of the Capital District Veterinary Medical Society.

He is a self-described farm boy, and that's a good background for entrance in the field of veterinary medicine. He graduated from Cornell University's New York State Veterinary College in 1954, and opened his local practice.

He and his late wife, Sarah, had two sons, John and Mike. He is now married to the former Magdalena Cox, who has three sons, Tom, Michael, and Pat. John, Mike, Michael, and Tom all became Eagle Scouts.

Earlier this year, the Adirondack Regional Chambers of Commerce named Dr. Matochik the first recipient of the first ever J. Walter Juckett Community Service Award. And soon it will be the turn of the Mohican Council to single out this true pillar of the community.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I ask you and Members of this House to join me today in saluting Dr. John Matochik, Jr., who exemplifies more than any man I know the spirit and ideals of Scouting.

STUDY ON MANASQUAN RIVER BASIN

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation which would authorize the Corps of Engineers to conduct a feasibility study on the Manasquan River Basin in New Jersey, for the purpose of determining potential flood control measures.

In both 1987 and 1989, heavy rains forced the Manasquan River to overflow its banks and caused severe damages in Howell Township, Freehold Township and other New Jersey communities. In June 1989, both Freehold and Howell Townships declared states of emergency in order to clear the streams of debris and sediment. These measures, while helplful in the short term, will not resolve the long-term flood problems.

Mr. Speaker, in March, after meeting with the local officials and representatives of the corps to discuss the possible options for preventing future flooding, it was determined that a study must be conducted to identify the most comprehensive and effective way to prevent future flooding events. Because there is no current Report of the Chief of Engineers on the Manasquan River Basin, the corps has advised me that new congressional authorization is required, either as separate legislation or as part of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990.

Accordingly, I am introducing legislation today to direct the Secretary of the Army to conduct a study of the feasibility of implementing flood control measures on the Manasquan River to alleviate flooding in Freehold, Howell, and other affected townships in New Jersey. In addition, I am requesting that the House Public Works Subcommittee on Water Resources incorporate my legislation into the Water Resources Development Act of 1990, now under review by the subcommittee.

Mr. Speaker, both Freehold and Howell Township are committed to conducting such a feasibility study and I would urge my colleagues to support my legislation authorizing the corps participation in this project.

ON BANNING VOLATILE ALKYL NITRITES

HON. MEL LEVINE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce legislation which will ban recreational use of the drug "poppers" once and for all. When alkyl nitrites were restricted under the 1988 Omnibus Drug Act, popper manufacturers switched to using other forms of nitrites that had the same effect, thus effectively circumventing the intent of the legislation. The time has come to close the loophole—to let manufacturers and marketers know that we will no longer tolerate the sale of these products to our children.

For years, poppers have been used as a gateway drug. They are seen by many young people as harmless ways to experiment with drugs. Their easy availability and legal sale makes them safe in the eyes of many unknowing young people. Unfortunately, there is no such thing as a safe or harmless drug. Once the trap is set, pushers can get these kids into harder drugs: crack, heroin, ice.

Research tells us that poppers are far from harmless. Among their damaging side effects are delirium, severe headaches, profound hypertension, dermatitis, and methemoglobinemia, the impairment of the ability of blood cells to carry oxygen to the brain. A number of deaths have resulted from users ingesting these nitrites. Use of nitrites has also been linked to the development of Kaposi's sarcomo, a rare cancer frequently occurring in AIDS victims. Of further concern in the AIDS high-risk groups is the recent linkage of poppers to the inability to fight off infectious diseases such as tuberculosis, among the leading killers of AIDS victims.

As a nation we have already taken the lead to restrict the use of similar nitrites, such as amyl and alkyl nitrites. Congress must now again take the lead to restrict all volatile alkyl nitrites and rid our Nation of the grave threat to health they pose. I urge my colleagues to join me in another battle in the war on drugs by supporting this legislation.

AWARD WINNERS

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to this year's United Teachers Los Angeles North Area Asian-Pacific Scholarship Winners. These outstanding individuals deserve to be recognized for their dedication to the pursuit of academic excellence.

On May 31, 1990, this very elite group of 11 high school students will be honored at the UTLA awards banquet in Los Angeles, CA. They have all demonstrated that worthwhile achievement requires hard work and dedication. Their accomplishments represent excellence in education which can only be attained through continued commitment to their studies. It is assuring and inspiring to know that these outstanding students are role models for other students by their fine academic examples.

The first place winner: Chanh Vuong, Franklin High School; second place winner: Kathy Ng, Eagle Rock High School; third place winner: Anna Lisa Biason; along with the eight honorable mentions: Mona K. Wong, Eagle Rock High School; Taeyon Kim, Marshall High School; Alice Jade Alburo, Marshall High School; Chuen-Yen Lau, Marshall High School; Francis Kim, Central High School; Ba Van Hoang, Lincoln High School; Sau Pik Lau, Marshall High School; and Lawrence Kim, Central High School are to be congratulated for their outstanding achievements.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the 1990 UTLA Asian-Pacific scholarship winners for their many accomplishments. I am sure that my colleagues join me in saluting these students, and I extend my best wishes for their continued success in all their future endeavors.

A TRIBUTE TO THE DEWITT COMMUNITY CHURCH: 150 YEARS OF MINISTRY

HON. BILL SCHUETTE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SCHUETTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the DeWitt Community Church in DeWitt, MI, whose sesquicentennial inauguration will take place on May 13, 1990, at 11 a.m. For 150 years, they have been reaching out to the people of DeWitt, providing a place to worship, share, and serve.

Originally a Baptist congregation, their first service was held May 10, 1840, at the home of J.K. Pearsall. They continued to meet at the Pearsall's house until 1852, when they raised the $13,000 needed to build a church on the town square. For the rest of the century, the church and the town grew together, with the church promoting strong values in the growing community. In 1884 they reorganized and in 1908 they incorporated.

In 1928 the Methodist church across the street burned down. For the next year, the Baptist congregation invited the Methodists to come and worship with them, which resulted in the congregation becoming interdenominational. This willingness to share with others, especially those in need, characterizes the church today.

By the 1970's the town square had become the bustling center of DeWitt and the church was left with little room to expand and no parking space. So in 1971 they began the long process of moving to a new location by purchasing 14 acres on Webb Drive. This move took place under the direction of Pastor Murl Eastman. Three years later, on June 2, 1974, they celebrated the move with a parade which wound from the town square to the new location just outside of town.

Today, the 130 members of the DeWitt Community Church, led by Pastor Frederick C. Nose, are working on a new mission statement. They are reaching out to the people in DeWitt who need guidance, help, and understanding. This statement will allow them to achieve their goals at an accelerated pace. They desire above all to address the biblical mandate to reach out to the community, not wait for the community to come to them.

Mr. Speaker, it is an honor for me to draw the attention of my colleagues to the DeWitt Community Church. Their 150th anniversary celebrates a long history of providing the people of DeWitt with a place to worship, share, and serve together. Please join me in recognizing the success of their noble efforts to promote the values of the church in DeWitt, MI.

BRIDGES UNDER SURVEILLANCE

HON. BOB McEWEN
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of my colleagues a fascinating article about bridge inspection technologies in the May 1990, Civil Engineering magazine, the monthly publication of the American Society of Civil Engineers [ASCE]. This article by Paul Tarricone, "Bridges Under Surveillance" reports on some of the exciting research now underway in the United States to develop new expert bridge detection systems.

The development of new and improved bridge monitoring systems may lead us to a point where bridge collapses and costly repairs can be prevented. This article also contains a striking graphic that may be familiar to those of you who share my concern about the Nation's deteriorating infrastructure, and that is the report from the Federal Highway Administration which says that 41 percent of the Nation's 577,710 bridges are either structurally deficient or functionally obsolete.

Mr. Speaker, a troubling thought comes to mind as I peruse this article about innovative technology that can benefit our Nation's surface transportation system, and that is even if we can assess with better precision the condition of America's bridges, we are hamstrung to do anything more because we have so many billions of dollars tied up in the highway trust fund. As I have indicated before, the balance in the highway account of the highway trust fund has grown to over $10 billion—money which should be paid through the trust fund for highway work and apportioned to the States for highway improvement projects.

In taking the opportunity to share this material with my colleagues, I would like to commend the efforts of American researchers and civil engineers to improve bridge inspection technologies, while also deploring the ongoing manipulation of the highway trust fund to make the deficit appear smaller on paper. The American people pay user fees with the understanding that these fees, the gas tax in this case, will be expended in a timely fashion to upgrade our highway system. Now is the time to put the trust back into the highway trust fund.

The material follows:

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CIVIL ENGINEERS,
Washington, DC, May 2, 1990.

Hon. BOB McEWEN,
House of Representatives, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE McEWEN: On behalf of the more than 100,000 members of the American Society on Civil Engineers (ASCE), the oldest national engineering society in the United States, I want to express ASCE's strong support for H.R. 286, the "Infrastructure Protection Act of 1989."

As design professionals serving on the front lines of America's infrastructure crisis, civil engineers fully appreciate the importance of investing in our vital public works facilities. Our nation's transportation system are an essential link in America's economic growth and international competitiveness. Unfortunately, there is mounting evidence to show that America's transportation systems are being neglected.

A first and positive step we, as a nation, can take in addressing our public works infrastructure crisis, is to remove the federal transportation trust funds from the unified federal budget. H.R. 286 would achieve this worthwhile goal and free up billions of dollars for needed infrastructure investment. Until the transportation trust funds are liberated from the unified budget process, billions of dollars in user fees dedicated to improving U.S. transportation will be locked away in an effort to make the budget deficit only appear smaller. ASCE believes that it is time to put the trust back in the trust funds.

ASCE commends your leadership on this important issue and is ready to assist you in any way.

Sincerely,

JOHN A. FOCHT, Jr.,
President.

[From the Civil Engineering Magazine, May 1990]

BRIDGES UNDER SURVEILLANCE

(By Paul Tarricone)

Last year, Mrinmay Biswas and several of his graduate students took an unusual class trip to a Pennsylvania bridge located near the Harrisburg Airport between Lancaster and the state capital. When they arrived, workers methodically loosened bolts from a splice connection of a girder to simulate a bridge failure. All the while, traffic continued as usual.

The Duke University professor admits there was some initial apprehension, but the project was highly supervised. "There were more people watching than working," Biswas says. That's because Pennsylvania DOT was funding the imitation bridge failure. With many bridges failing on their own, it seems bizarre that a DOT would want to create more. But before vowing never to travel on a Pennsylvania bridge again, understand that Biswas was testing his expert detection system—one of many techniques now being used and researched throughout the nation to spot structural flaws before disaster strikes. Only a few bolts on one of the bridge's seven continuous girders were loosened, and travelers, of course, were not in danger. Drivers on many of the country's other bridges, however, may not be so fortunate.

The grim statistics released last fall by the Federal Highway Administration revealed that 238,357 (41%) of the nation's 577,710 bridges are either structurally deficient or functionally obsolete (Table 1). The definitions don't mean the bridges are necessarily unsafe, but many are restricted to carrying lighter vehicles because of deteriorated structural components.

TABLE 1.—BRIDGES ON THE BRINK?

State	Total bridges	Structurally deficient	Functionally obsolete	Total deficient	Percent deficient	Rank
Alabama	15,534	3,949	3,602	7,551	49	13
Alaska	800	86	27	111	14	49
Arizona	5,623	160	252	412	7	51
Arkansas	13,017	1,596	4,225	5,821	45	17
California	22,261	1,666	4,055	5,721	26	37
Colorado	7,428	2,208	460	2,668	36	27
Connecticut	3,749	2,394	1,368	2,401	64	2
District of Columbia	237	48	1	49	21	39
Delaware	738	79	96	175	24	43
Florida	10,188	610	1,605	2,215	22	41
Georgia	14,226	3,520	2,518	6,038	42	21
Hawaii	1,043	115	161	276	26	37
Idaho	3,745	560	514	1,074	29	33
Illinois	25,428	5,313	2,042	7,355	29	33
Indiana	17,517	3,807	3,939	7,656	44	19
Iowa	25,865	6,040	6,336	12,376	48	15
Kansas	25,648	5,386	7,347	12,733	50	12
Kentucky	12,591	2,207	5,252	7,459	59	5
Louisiana	14,139	3,959	2,443	6,402	45	17
Maine	2,583	436	331	767	30	32
Maryland	4,574	707	1,169	1,872	41	23
Massachusetts	4,964	1,714	209	1,923	39	26
Michigan	10,581	2,628	683	3,311	31	31
Minnesota	12,994	1,911	1,787	3,698	28	35
Mississippi	16,994	6,421	2,563	8,984	53	10
Missouri	23,682	12,347	2,718	15,065	64	2
Montana	4,632	495	2,240	2,735	59	5
Nebraska	15,843	7,636	1,158	8,794	56	8
Nevada	1,073	50	109	159	15	48
New Hampshire	2,572	522	603	1,125	44	19
New Jersey	5,997	1,352	752	2,104	35	28
New Mexico	3,439	410	334	744	22	41
New York	17,326	10,409	1,403	11,812	68	1
North Carolina	16,115	1,107	7,382	8,489	53	10
North Dakota	5,283	1,959	582	3,041	58	7
Ohio	29,180	4,494	1,504	5,998	21	43
Oklahoma	22,981	8,229	4,677	12,906	56	8
Oregon	6,608	577	558	1,135	17	47
Pennsylvania	22,457	5,990	2,917	8,907	40	24
Rhode Island	702	98	38	136	19	46
South Carolina	8,886	939	836	1,775	20	45
South Dakota	6,822	1,660	1,530	3,190	47	16
Tennessee	18,547	4,366	3,023	7,389	40	24
Texas	44,314	6,572	8,581	15,153	34	29
Utah	2,543	262	96	358	14	49
Vermont	2,665	503	808	1,311	49	13
Virginia	12,652	3,933	1,610	4,284	34	29
Washington	6,898	920	941	1,861	27	36
West Virginia	6,513	2,795	1,196	3,991	61	4
Wisconsin	12,963	3,978	1,455	5,433	42	21
Wyoming	2,826	320	356	676	24	39
U.S. Total	577,710	135,826	102,531	328,357	41

Source: Federal Highway Administration, U.S. DOT.

To make matters worse, experts are becoming disenchanted with standard visual inspections and conventional bridge analysis. Biswas hopes his system will eventually detect cracks that the naked eye will miss during a visual inspection. "A lot of times the bridge could be cracked, and the crack is hiding under paint or rust."

"The degree of deterioration cannot be assessed from a visual inspection alone," agrees George Goble of University of Colorado, Boulder. "Quantifying structure damage can eliminate a great deal of very tenuous judgments currently left to the inspection engineer."

Meanwhile, conventional analysis (skeptically called the cookbook method) is in question because it doesn't consider the entire structure system. Although it has served bridge inspections for some 60 years, John O'Fallon, a program manager in the structures research division of FHWA, says the conventional method is "relatively crude. It employees only two-dimensional analysis and uses empirical factors to test live-load effects. The specs treat beams and girders individually, but to a large extent ignore load sharing of the members." However, projects are under way within FHWA, O'Fallon says, to revise the bridge-rating manual.

Traditional analysis takes for granted that a structure will behave according to design assumptions—for example, how loads are transmitted through a structure. "Tests results sometimes verify the assumptions," says Ronald Rolsing of McDonough Associates, Chicago, "but other times the assumptions don't bear up."

STRONGER THAN WE THINK?

Ironically, preventing disasters may not even be the most important reason to monitor bridges. Flaw-detection systems also signify when a bridge or critical structure is not in imminent danger of collapse. Indeed, because of passed inspection techniques, many experts believe FHWA's estimate of deficient bridges is actually bloated. Bridge strength, they say, is "grossly underestimated" because rating methods are punitive. "If you're an inspector and you see signs of deterioration, you would be foolish not to rate the bridge conservatively, especially considering liability," sayd Goble. "The public's safety must be assured, but the cost of overconservative posting limits can be substantial."

With overall infrastructure rehabilitation costs (highways, sewers, et al.) estimated at a dizzying $3.3 trillion, the lack of a foolproof bridge-monitoring system may create a vicious circle: Ineffective inspection techniques beget overconservative ratings, which beget unnecessary bridge replacement/repair, which begets less money for other public works in even more dire need to rehab.

But changes are on the drawing board. A report prepared by Raths, Raths & Johnson, Willowbrook, Ill, for the National Cooperative Highway Research Program sounds the alarm for more efficient nationwide bridge monitoring and rating. Although Florida, New York and Pennsylvania have tested bridges in recent years, there are no specific guidelines and procedures available to bridge owners and engineers in the U.S. for physically testing bridges to determine load rating and based on field tests, RR&J has in fact found that "bridge often possess far greater strength than can be predicted by conventional analytical rating procedures, despite their age and apparent deterioration." Says Suresh Pinjarkar, "Bridge monitoring tells us a structure may only need to be upgraded, not torn down."

RR&J's report outlines eight recommendations that should be incorporated into AASHTO's revised Manual of Maintenance Inspection of Bridges. One spells out the huge financial savings that would result from more precise ratings: Load restrictions on many bridges could be eliminated; overload and permit applications policies could be improved; impending replacement/strengthening projects could be postponed or canceled; most importantly, the service life of existing bridges could be extended.

UNIVERSITY TESTS

Experts agree the quintessential detection system should provide global, not just local, bridge inspection, meaning the entire structure must be monitored for flaws. "Ultrasonics, magnetic particles and other nondestructive testing techniques are effective after a global test has already detected a problem at a certain spot on the bridge—if you're already looking for something," says Biswas. NDTs are also effective for testing parts of a bridge before it's built; for instance, x-ray or gamma-ray radiography and ultrasonics are often used during steel fabrication.

At Duke University, Biswas's research concentrates on a 2,000 lb, 8 ft long replica of a girder bridge. Three steel girders, each held together with bolted splices, support a reinforced concrete deck. During tests, bolts are selectively removed from a girder splice, while Biswas watches a spectral analyzer for unusual readouts to determine if it's detecting the flaw. An experiment planned for this year will create cracks in the girder splices by cutting them selectively with an acetylene torch or power saw. Started in 1987, the research is funded for $387,000 by PennDOT and FHWA as part of the Highway Planning Research program.

According to Biswas, a bridge may fail because a crack develops in a steel girder or the bolts on the girders become too loose. The expert detection system equipment reportedly is able to find which girder has the problem and in what area. With the cooperation of the respective DOTs, Biswas first calibrated the equipment on a North Carolina bridge closed to traffic, then tested it—without shutting down travel—on a Pennsylvania bridge. After creating a failure by loosening bolts, researchers tapped the bridge with a hammer, sending vibrations through the girders that can be detected by an accelerometer—an instrument placed on the bridge that provides a time history of accelerations. The frequency of the vibrations was measured and charted with the spectral analyzer. Biswas then found the bogus cracks by examining the frequency charts generated by the signals.

The Duke researcher admits that accurate data interpretation is still a problem. "The charts are like an electrocardiogram, which shows whether or not a patient is having a heart attack," Biswas says, "but only a doctor can properly interpret the chart. We cannot expect every highway department to replace high school-educated technicians with PH.D.s." To make the system easier to use, researchers will soon design a computer program—based on artificial intelligence concepts—which wil interpret the readouts. The program will be able to recognize the patterns of normal and cracked bridges; the bridge signature, as it's called, will be monitored through tests as often as the pattern dictates. For day-to-day use, a van equipped with $100,000 worth of computer hardware and software has been transformed from a "cargo van to a mobile laboratory," says Biswas, and plans are under way to deploy vans for statewide bridge testing.

FHWA and PennDOT are also sponsoring research conducted by Goble at the University of Colorado. Funded from July 1988 through March 1991, the $825,000 project is rating the load capacity of 30 bridges across the country and determining whether or not the trucks riding on these bridges are at overload. To date, 14 bridges have been tested.

According to Goble, the key is to measure the girders' structural/strain response to trucks with known wheel loads and to use these measurements to get an improved computer respresentation of the bridge superstructure. The idea is to compare recorded strain measurements from a field test with the results of a structural-analysis computer program. The problem today, Goble says, is that "each computer analysis program may produce a different result. We've got to make our analysis agree with what we actually measure." Once there is an accurate model of the bridge, the response to any other load configuration (rating and overloads) can be calculated.

The test is performed by running a truck with known axle weights across the bridge, but only at crawl speed (3-5 mph) to prevent dynamic responses. A test operator walks alongside the vehicle and presses a button each time the front axle reaches a specified point. Every time the button is pressed a counting mark is stored along with the strain measurements. In this way, the location of the truck can be recovered from the test data, and strain can be determined as a function of vehicle position. The number of paths required for the vehicle is dependent on bridge width, however, each path is run at least twice.

Instrumentation and preparation time before the test ranges from 4 to 8 hr. Strain gages—between 16 and 48, depending on the condition of the bridge—must be attached to the girders, cables are laid out, and key work points are marked on the deck surface. The test takes about an hour, and traffic is usually shut down in the right lane. The process may cost between $4,000 and $6,000 per bridge in labor and equipment.

TRANSIT-BRIDGE TESTS

Raths, Raths, & Johnson recently performed nondestructive diagnostic load tests on a typical 100-year-old single-span train structure. The tests were part of a $2.3 million pilot-study program and condition assessment of the Chicago Transit Authority's rapid-transit system, which includes roughly 40 mi. of elevated steel structures and bridges. Test results should provide a better estimate of the remaining fatigue life/rating of the structure. Once again, in keeping with its government report recommendations, RR&J found the bridge was actually stronger than conventional analysis would have inspectors believe.

RR&J monitored the behavior of the elevated structure under both static and dynamic loads. The static tests were run by stopping an empty four-car train at known positions along the track. Strain was measured at critical locations in the stringers, columns and cross-bracing members. Vertical deflections were measured at the stringer midspans. The dynamic tests were performed by moving the test train across a test span at crawl speed and various operating speeds. Strains were measured in the stringers to evaluate impact load for the test train and for normal in-service train movements. Dynamic tests were also performed by braking the moving test train and measuring column flexural strains caused by both normal and emergency braking. Although that bridge was deteriorated, test data showed that it was in better shape than anticipated; impact loading was just 5-10% for the test train and in-service train movements, compared with the proposed design impact of 55%.

Instrumentation, however, isn't exclusively used for global inspection. Weidlinger Associates, New York City, used strain gages to investigate a spot-specific problem on the Manhattan Bridge. "The bridge had a terrible maintenance history, and we knew that secondary stresses caused by bridge twisting caused the fatigue failure," says Weidlinger's Herb Rothman. "But the deterioration was much greater than we could explain. We had to look for something more before committing to such an expensive project." The strain gages were attached, Rothman says, because they're effective in crack-prone areas that can't be analyzed by conventional methods and they often point to unexpected sources of distress. Rothman says anywhere from four to 400 postage-stamp-size gages can be used during a test, which lasts one or two days and can cost $10,000.

On the Manhattan Bridge, strain gages on cracked floor members showed that live-load stresses didn't return to zero after subway trains left the bridge. The surprising readings indicated that intermittent freezing and release of steel sliding bearings amplified the twisting stresses and caused the excessive cracking. Consequently, rubber bearings were installed to replace the steel, eliminating one of the principal causes of fatigue failure on the bridge, Rothman claims.

WHERE DO WE STAND?

Although monitoring has gained in popularity and prestige with DOTs over the past five years, progress and application is crawling, not sprinting, along. David Beal of New York State DOT is cautiously optimistic. "The promise of these things is good, but we're not there yet," he says flatly. "Are there devices available? Yes. Should we be using them? Yes and no. If we want a device to tell us a bridge is about to fall down, then the answer is yes, but is it worthwhile using these devices to find such gross structural problems? In New York, if we find a crack, we fix it, we don't monitor it."

According to Beal, the state of the art is simplistic. "If a bridge is damaged in some area, the vibration-frequency pattern will be influenced. But how great does damage have to be before [a change in] vibration is detected? What sensitivity can we actually achieve? It's in this area that people are floundering." Before bridge-monitoring systems are universally adopted, Beal says, they will have to be able to detect subtle bridge flaws, not just the large flaws introduced during tests. While Duke's Mrinmay Biswas is making strides, loosening girder bolts produces what's esssentially "a clean failure," says Beal; and Biswas concedes that at the moment his equipment can't distinguish between degrees of severity in a crack. The best systems, Beal believes, would have to find small structural flaws "like a hair-line crack in a tension flange remote from the sensor."

As for future research, one project involves jacking up a bridge and then releasing it to simulate its reaction to an earthquake. Abandoned bridges would be used for the test. "People are looking for a magic thing to hang on a bridge or a bell to go off when the bridge is about to fail," says FHWA's John O'Fallon. Research is nowhere near that point, but O'Fallon and other experts hardly think the work is fruitless. "If we felt that way, we'd still be using oxcarts and bows and arrows."

IN SUPPORT OF THE ARTS IN NEBRASKA

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, this Member, like all other Members of Congress, is receiving hundreds of letters with regard to the controversies surrounding the National Endowment for the Arts. Much of this mail is written by constituents who have been deliberately misinformed about the congressional process and the intentions of Members of Congress. This Member appreciates how important local arts programs are to Nebraskans who don't have access to the Kennedy Centers and Lincoln Centers of the Nation. Thus, as one way to actively combat the disingenuous strategy that would destroy Federal support for the arts, this Member seeks to share persuasive comments from home. The following letter speaks eloquently of the important role the arts play in Nebraska:

APRIL 9, 1990.

Hon. DOUGLAS BEREUTER,
Rayburn House Bldg., Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN BEREUTER: I am writing to urge you to support the National Endowment of the Arts, and therefore, public support of the arts.

You know well the citizenry of Nebraska, and the geography of Nebraska, and the hunger for equal opportunity for quality art programs in rural schools and communities. State Art Councils are in place to monitor the funding, and the Nebraska Council members know what Nebraskans feel, need, and want, but funding is essential. We take the delegation of federal monies as a moral obligation to do what is best for Nebraska.

To burn all books because of the words in one;

To halt all music because of the content of one song;

And to silence all art in Nebraska because of one non-Nebraskan artist is to stifle the quality of life for our most important product, the children.

Please study the issue and give thought to the possibility of school children in our state having to do without opportunities to hear, see, and learn the greater forms of art.

Respectfully,

(Signed by a Nebraska constituent.)

THE PUERTO RICO SELF-DETERMINATION ACT

HON. RON de LUGO

OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. DE LUGO. Mr. Speaker, as you know, I am introducing a bill today to enable the people of Puerto Rico to exercise self-determination with your support and that of the minority leader and with the bipartisan cosponsorship of the other leaders of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee on this issue as well as the leaders of the Rules Committee.

The bill would fully respond to the request of the leaders of Puerto Rico's three political parties early last year for the Federal Government to authorize a referendum on the island's future political status and, importantly, to commit to act on implementing the winning status according to a specific and expeditious timetable.

It would, further, clearly define the three status options as they would apply to the island: an enhancement of the current commonwealth relationship with the United States; statehood; and independence so that the people of Puerto Rico can make an informed choice.

The bill provide for a self-executing, binding process to act on their self-determination decision; but it does not contain the perceived flaws that have bogged down a Senate committee bill on this important issue.

As Members will recall, President Bush endorsed Puerto Rico's self-determination request in an address to us. I understand from the minority leader that the White House is happy that we are proposing this legislation.

It would enable the stalemate on the complicated Puerto Rican status issue—that has effectively prevented action on the many serious needs of the island for so long—to finally be broken. And it would do this in a realistic and fair way.

Last year, as chariman of the Insular and International Affairs Subcommittee, I agreed with the chariman of the Senate committee of primary jurisdiction to have the Senate act first on this sensitive matter, with House action to follow to minimize confusion over the differences in the Senate and House bills.

Chairman JOHNSTON drafted three bills on this issue, all calling for a referendum among the status options next year.

One, S. 710, would call for the choice to be made among three undefined options and provide for negotiations to develop implementing legislation. The legislation would only be effective if approved by the people of Puerto Rico as well as the Federal Government.

Another bill, S. 711, is similar except that it would define the three status options.

A third bill, S. 712, would preapprove each of the three status options—and related changes in law—and automatically put the status that won the referendum next year into effect the same year.

Although you, Mr. Speaker, expressed concern about S. 712's unprecedented process, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee narrowly approved S. 712 last summer.

Your concerns were shared by other Members of Congress. And the changes in law that S. 712 proposed for the statuses generated even greater concerns about the bill, in the Senate as well as the House.

Chairman JOHNSTON, who has done the Nation a great service by his work on this issue, intended to have S. 712 sent to the House by last fall, in keeping with our understanding on scheduling; but the Senate still has not acted on it. The bill remains in the Finance Committee to which it was referred after the Energy and Natural Resources Committee's action.

Because of the delay, other leaders of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee and I asked the leaders of Puerto Rico's parties last November to agree on a more realistic alternative to the bill.

But the promises of S. 712 made it understandably impossible for them to do so.

Now, time for the Federal Government to respond to their request to enable their people to finally make a status choice next year is running out.

The reason for the inaction is clear to us up here; but less clear to the people of the island: Both the process and the principles set forth in S. 712 are so skewed that the prevailing view is that the Washington Post was right when it said that it would be better to pass no bill at all.

And that would be a tragic result for the people of Puerto Rico and for the United States. So, I decided to go ahead and sponsor an alternative to S. 712 that would enable the people of Puerto Rico to exercise self-determination next year; but would also have a realistic chance of becoming law.

I discussed the need to do this with my friend Chairman JOHNSTON and he completely understood my need to shift the approach I agreed to with him last year and introduce an alternative bill at this time.

The new bill is based on another of his bills, S. 711; but it is, I believe, an improvement on that original bill, particularly in that it would provide commitments and timetables for final action on this issue.

I am joined in introducing this bill today by the ranking Republican of my subcommiittee, BOB LAGOMARSINO, and by the chairman and the ranking Republican of the full Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, MO UDALL and DAN YOUNG, respectively. The chairman and ranking Republican of the Rules Committee, which may also have to act on this matter, JOE MOAKLEY and JIMMY QUILLEN, are sponsors as well and a number of other sponsors will be added to it shortly. Finally, you, Mr. Speaker, and the minority leader have also indicated support of this bill.

Our bill would do what the people of Puerto Rico have asked for—provide a chance for them to exercise meaningful self-determination next year.

It would authorize a referendum between options that are clearly defined in 1991. I had originally intended for this date to be in May—a time earlier next year than the Senate committee bill provides for—but there are those in Puerto Rico who have suggested that more time or an education process prior to the referendum is needed because of the delay in completing action on this legislation due to the Senate. I want it to be as early as possible. But whatever date in 1991 we finally select, it will not delay the effective date of status development proposed in this bill.

Our bill would require the development of legislation to implement a winning status next year after the referendum in consultation with the Puerto Rican party advocating that status, with the other two parties, and with the President.

It would commit the Federal Government to quick action on that legislation in early 1992.

But it provide that this final Federal action would only take effect if it is approved by the people of Puerto Rico in a second vote in July 1992, so that they make the final decision on this issue. The status development would then be effective in October 1992.

As introduced, the bill provides for—but does not contain—definitions of the statuses. These definitions will be added by the subcommittee after consultation with the leaders of Puerto Rico's status-based political parties.

The Insular and International Affairs Subcommittee can be expected to act on this bill shortly. We have had extensive briefings on the many issues involved. We have also had many hours of hearings both here and in Puerto Rico on them.

We will have other hearings next month—in New York at the request of our colleagues CHARLIE RANGEL, STEVE SOLARZ, BILL GREEN, FRANK HORTON, and JOSE SERRANO so that we can hear from the many Puerto Ricans in that State—and in Washington to hear from the administration and once again from Puerto Rico's parties on the details of the bill.

I intend for the subcommittee to act as quickly as possible on the bill immediately afterward so that a law can be enacted this year that will enable the people of Puerto Rico to exercise self-determination.

In concluding, I want to express my special appreciation and admiration for my subcommittee's ranking Republican, BOB LAGOMARSINO, for his patriotic cooperation in developing this legislation. This is an example of the reason I value his friendship so highly.

THE PUERTO RICO SELF-DETERMINATION ACT

HON. ROBERT J. LAGOMARSINO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I unequivocally support self-determination for the people of Puerto Rico. They have abided patiently for the realization of the words of General Miles when he arrived in Puerto Rico in 1898 during the Spanish-American War to establish United States sovereignty over Puerto Rico.

In the prosecution of the war against the Kingdom of Spain, the people of the United States in the cause of liberty, justice, and humanity, its military forces have come to occupy the Island of Puerto Rico. They come bearing the banner of freedom. * * * They bring you the fostering arm of a nation of free people, whose greatest power is in justice and humanity to all those living within its fold. * * * We have not come to make war against a people of a country that for centuries has been oppressed, but on the contrary, to bring you protection * * * to promote your posterity, and to bestow upon you the immunities and blessings * * * of our government.

The people of Puerto Rico have undergone a slow process of increased self-government and economic development over the years. In 1900, they were authorized to elect a "Resident Commissioner" to Washington but not a "Delegate" as the term delegate was believed to have an implied promise of statehood.

The people of Puerto Rico were finally bestowed United States citizenship in 1917, primarily due to America's participation in World War I and the need for additional forces to protect the Panama Canal. Thousands of Puerto Ricans served with distinction with many losing their lives in defense of their long-awaited and cherished United States citizenship.

However, the Supreme Court's 1922 decision in Balzac versus People of Puerto Rico created a different type of citizenship than that which was enjoyed by the residents of the then territories of Alaska and Hawaii. The Court determined that the United States Constitution did not fully apply to the United States citizens of Puerto Rico. The reasoning was that the law extending citizenship to the people of Puerto Rico did not include the certain phraseology which had been earlier applied to Hawaii and Alaska.

The Constitution of the United States, and all the laws thereof which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the said Territory as elsewhere in the United States. (37 Stat. 512.)

The result was the creation of a third-tier citizenship. Those in the several States enjoyed the protection of the Constitution and full political representation and voting rights; residents of Alaska and Hawaii were accorded the full application of the Constitution, but lacked the right to vote for President and voting representation in Congress, while the third-tier citizens could only claim limited constitutional protection.

The people of Puerto Rico have endured this anamalous citizenship for over 73 years because most of them have believed in the American system of equality. To be sure, some have been impatient at times yielding to the specter that racism and bigotry would prevail over their quest for equal rights among their fellow citizens elsewhere in the several States.

I have worked with my colleague from the Virgin Islands to develop legislation which provides a legitimate and meaningful response to both the people of Puerto Rico and the leaders representing the status options. I strongly support the legislation even though I introduced H.R. 3536 in October 1989 to provide a referendum on the status question. H.R. 3536 is nearly identical to Senate bill S. 712, introduced by Senators JOHNSTON, MCCLURE, and SIMON, which provides the implementing provisions of each of the three options and is considered to be self-executing.

The Puerto Rico Self-Determination Act being introduced today provides a commitment by the United States to expeditiously implement the majority will of the people of Puerto Rico.

The time limits for action required of Congress by the bill is extremely unusual but demonstrates the sincerity of Congress to act on the people's choice. This proposed process is very complex. Members of Congress will need to make decisions which affect the future relationship of the United States and the nearly 2½ million United States Citizens of Puerto Rico. The change in status is also of enormous concern to the 2½ million Americans of Puerto Rican ancestry who reside throughout the 50 States.

This is a matter which the Congress has a moral and constitutional responsibility to address. There are profound political consequences to both Houses of Congress and to the executive branch. The cost of the three options vary considerably and corporations who now enjoy annual tax credits of nearly $2½ billion will be fighting to prolong their benefits. Positive net revenues to the U.S. Treasury are projected under one status. The international implications, of fair treatment by the United States of the Puerto Rican people in respecting their right to self-determination, will have positive consequences, particularly in Latin America and developing countries.

It will be difficult to grapple with these numerous issues. But the level of complexity, possible political ramifications, and cost of the statuses should not deter Members of Congress from confronting a self-determination issue as profound as that of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia or in a number of other countries throughout the world.

France recently dealt with the complicated self-determination of the people of the French territory of New Caledonia, in the South Pacific. A referendum has been scheduled for 1998 and funding of $1 billion per year is being provided to the 150,000 residents for local self-government. If the United States followed the French formula, the proportionate level of funding for the 3½ million residents of Puerto Rico would total an astronomical $23 billion per year. However, Puerto Rico is at a significantly higher level of economic development and therefore such funding would not be appropriate and the length of time is unacceptably long.

Many individuals have participated to varying degrees in bringing Puerto Rico's self-determination before the Congress. President Bush requested action by the Congress in his first address to a joint session of the Congress on February 9, 1989:

There's another issue I have decided to mention here tonight. I've long believed that the people of Puerto Rico should have the right to determine their own political future. Personally, I strongly favor statehood. But I urge the Congress to take the necessary steps to allow the people to decide in a referendum.

This was not the first time George Bush had requested congressional action on Puerto Rico's status. In 1987, then Vice President Bush asked me to introduce legislation to provide a referendum for the people of Puerto Rico. I introduced H.R. 2849 to provide a referendum on statehood and a second ratifying vote on terms defined by the Congress. I am pleased to note that the bill being introduced today follows in the 1987 bill in many ways.

I must also emphasize that the introduction of the 1987 legislation was based on the receipt of over 350,000 individually signed petitions for statehood submitted by a nonpartisan grassroots organization, Puerto Ricans in civic action. The president of the nonprofit, nonpartisan organization is Dr. Miriam Ramirez de Ferrer, a tireless pursuer of equal citizenship rights for the people of Puerto Rico. Over the years that I have known Dr. Ramirez de Ferrer, I have been impressed by her zeal and passion for the enligthened cause of Puerto Rico statehood. She exemplifies the United States citizens of Puerto Rico who are unquestionably patriotic and fiercely proud of the rich culture and heritage of Puerto Rico.

In addition to agreeing with President Bush's support for Puerto Rico statehood, I join the President in defending the right of the people of Puerto Rico to freely choose their desired status with the United States, whether it be independence, commonwealth, or statehood.

I commend the leaders of Puerto Rico's three political parties for their diplomatic approach to this often locally partisan matter.

I have discussed the legislation being introduced today with two individuals in the White House who President Bush has charged with the collateral responsibility for Puerto Rico. Andrew Card, Assistant to the President and Deputy to the Chief of Staff and Chase Untermeyer, Assistant to the President for Presidential Personnel, both expressed delight in action by the House to further the objective of the President to provide a meaningful referendum to the people of Puerto Rico which results in the timely implementation of the will of the majority. Both Andrew Card and Chase Untermeyer have devoted themselves to carry out the President's commitment to the United States citizens of Puerto Rico. The level of the President's commitment is indeed indicated by the assignment of Puerto Rico to individuals in the highest levels within the Executive Office of the President.

I want to acknowledge the energetic cooperation of RON DE LUGO of the Virgin Islands, chairman of the Subcommittee on Insular and International Affairs. RON DE LUGO has worked closely with me in developing the legislation in a bipartisan manner. Our goal is to provide for the self-determination for the people of Puerto Rico. We will continue to work together to refine the legislation as necessary to provide a responsive mechanism for the self-determination of the people of Puerto Rico. My appreciation also to the Speaker and Republican leader, and the chairman and vice chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs for their bipartisan support of this initiative.

By timely addressing this measure, the Congress will have responded to the 350,000 first amendment petitions from the people of Puerto Rico, the President's request to "take the necessary steps to let the people of Puerto Rico decide in a referendum," and the echoing 1898 promise of General Miles for "justice and humanity to all those living within its fold."

The following is the text of the legislation:

H.R. —

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Puerto Rico Self-Determination Act".

SEC. 2. REFERENDUM ON STATUS OPTIONS.

(a) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Executive Office of the President $4 million for grants to the Government of Puerto Rico for the conduct of a referendum on the following proposition, to be presented to the voters:

Which political status do you favor for the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico on terms mutually agreed to by the people of Puerto Rico and the Congress of the United States?

Independence;

Statehood;

an enhanced Commonwealth relationship with the United States; or none of the above.

(b) The referendum shall be conducted on _____ 1991 pursuant to the electoral laws of Puerto Rico.

SEC. 3. INITIAL DEFINITIONS OF STATUS OPTIONS.

For the purpose of the referendum (and the negotiations provided for in Section 4) it is understood that the initial position of the people of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and of the Congress of the United States is that the status options encompass the principles which follow:

(a) Independence— _____;

(b) Statehood— _____; and

(c) Enhanced Commonwealth— _____.

SEC. 4. DEVELOPMENT OF IMPLEMENTING LEGISLATION.

(a) If the referendum results in a majority for one of the three status options, representatives of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the United States House of Representatives shall draft legislation to implement the selected status encompassing the principles set forth in Section 3 in full consultation with representatives of the Puerto Rican political party advocating that option and with representatives of the other two political parties of Puerto Rico, representatives of the President, and other interested parties as may be appropriate.

(b) Such legislation shall be drafted no later than _____ 1991.

(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for the conduct of these negotiations.

SEC. 5. CONSIDERATION OF IMPLEMENTING LEGISLATION.

(a) No later than seven legislative days after the legislation provided for in Section 4 is drafted, the legislation shall be introduced in the House of Representatives by the Chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs (by request, or otherwise) or by another Member or Members of the House and by the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources (by request, or otherwise) or by another Member or Members of the Senate.

(b) If any committee to which the legislation has been referred has not reported it by the end of 180 calendar days after its referral to such committee, it shall be in order at any time thereafter for any Member of the House of Representatives or of the Senate, respectively, to move to discharge the committee from its further consideration.

(c) Seven legislative days after the last committee has reported the legislation, or has been discharged from further consideration of the legislation, it shall be in order at any time thereafter for any Member of the House of Representatives or of the Senate, respectively, to move to consider the legislation.

(d) Enactment of this section constitutes a commitment that the United States will proceed to implement the political status selected by the people of Puerto Rico pursuant to Section 2 through action on legislation establishing the appropriate mechanisms and procedures to that effect.

SEC. 6. RATIFYING VOTE ON IMPLEMENTING LEGISLATION.

(a) Upon enactment, the legislation provided for in Section 4 as approved by the Congress shall be submitted to the people of Puerto Rico for ratification according to the electoral laws of Puerto Rico not later than July 7, 1992. The legislation shall take effect on October 1, 1992 but only if it is approved by the people of Puerto Rico.

(b) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for the conduct of the ratification vote provided for by this section.

THE PUERTO RICAN SELF-DETERMINATION ACT

HON. JAIME B. FUSTER

OF PUERTO RICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. FUSTER. Mr. Speaker, Delegate RON DE LUGO, chairman of the Insular Affairs Subcommittee, has introduced today an important bill, the Puerto Rican Self-Determination Act, which I am cosponsoring. If enacted, this bill would authorize a referendum on Puerto Rico's future relationship with the United States, giving the people the opportunity to choose between the options of statehood, independence, or enhanced Commonwealth status and committing Congress to implement the winning option.

Chairman DE LUGO's bill as introduced does not fully meet the expectations of my constituents in Puerto Rico. However, it is a well-intentioned bill that was drafted taking into consideration not only the concerns of the leaders of the three political parties in Puerto Rico but also the realities of the legislative process in Congress. It is a bill that stands a reasonable chance of being enacted.

I have cosponsored Chairman DE LUGO's bill because I feel it is a strong step forward in Puerto Rico's renewed quest for self-determination and because I am hopeful that as we proceed along in the process of discussing and approving this bill, we will be able to improve upon it and work out a final piece of legislation that will be fully acceptable to my constituents.

In my view, the end result must include the following three fundamental elements:

First, a clear and adequate definition of each of the three options to be presented to the people of Puerto Rico, so that they will be able to choose intelligently, with a full understanding of what each formula means and what they concretely entail.

Second, an unequivocal commitment from Congress to respect and abide by the result of the plebiscite. This process must be a real act of self-determination, not a mere popularity contest. The bill must be binding enough so as to insure that Congress will implement whatever option is chosen by the majority of the people of Puerto Rico.

Third, finally, the options presented to the people of Puerto Rico must all be of equal dignity and fairly balanced. All the options must be free from any colonial taint, and Congress in setting them up cannot in any way show preference for one over the others.

Chairman DE LUGO has expressed to me his commitment to see that these three requirements are fully met. I am hopeful that with his support and that of the other cosponsors we will be able finally to enact a bill that the people of Puerto Rico find acceptable and that will allow us to exercise true self determination.

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION RE PUERTO RICAN SELF-DETERMINATION

HON. MORRIS K. UDALL

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, today we are taking an important step in the history of Puerto Rico and of the United States.

We are introducing a bill to permit the people of Puerto Rico to exercise the right of self-determination. By agreement with the major political parties of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, we are, by this legislation, providing for a referendum which will ask the people of Puerto Rico to select their preferral political status—independence, statehood, or enhanced commonwealth—or none of the above—"on terms mutually agreed to by the people of Puerto Rico and the Congress of the United States."

The general principles on which each status option would be based will be briefly outlined in the legislation as it proceeds through consideration by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. That outline is intended to provide the people of Puerto Rico with an overview of what each status option means and what the Congress will seek to incorporate about that option into any subsequent implementing legislation.

If the referendum results in a major vote for one of the three major political statuses, then representatives of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee would develop the terms of implementing legislation to be considered by those respective committees. If the Congress approves the legislation and it is signed into law by the President, final approval of whether to implement it would depend on the people of Puerto Rico voting to approve or disapprove the final version of an implementation act.

There are few actions which the House may take this year which would more directly affect virtually every aspect of life of a group of people within the American political family than this legislation. Because of our concern over the advisability of its self-implementation procedures over the lack of balance provided for in the Puerto Rico status bill under consideration in the Senate, and over our desire to move the process forward without delay, we will be encouraging our colleagues to join with us to pass the bill we are introducing today.

That bill recognizes the inherent rights of the people of Puerto Rico to determine the political status under which they wish to live but also recognizes that the status selected must be mutually agreeable to both the United States and Puerto Rico. In the past there have been frustrating episodes in the history of Puerto Rico regarding its political status. Status questions have long been the source of interminable political discussions throughout the island. It is our intent today to provide an outlet for an expession of self-determination by the people of Puerto Rico and to do all that we can to obtain enactment of appropriate implementing legislation of the status the people choose.

I do not wish to raise the expectations of the people of Puerto Rico beyond that which we can be assured of achieving; therefore, it must be made very clear that the exact details of status-implementing legislation cannot be determined with precision in advance, and that while we can assure through this legislation that a winning status will be considered by both Houses of Congress, we cannot assure enactment or that the bill will be precisely what the winning political party would prefer.

The people of Puerto Rico have my commitment to do all that I can to obtain passage of this legislation and appropriate implementation legislation.

I look forward to working with the people of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in their quest to determine under which political status they would like to live.

I urge my colleagues to study the implications of this important and historic legislation and assist in the work that faces the Congress in coming months regarding it.

RECOGNIZING ENTENMANN'S "PROUD TO BE DRUG FREE" PROGRAM

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, today I want to bring to your attention a program which proves that a business can care. On January 16, 1990, Entenmann's, the people that have been baking for us since 1898, initiated a strong program encouraging the youth of America to live their lives free of drug use. The theme of the campaign is "Proud to be Drug Free" and the initiative they have displayed in this project is immense and highly commendable.

Six markets have been targeted for this program in the southeast. These cities include Miami, West Palm Beach, Tampa, Orlando, Jacksonville, and Atlanta. One of the first measures taken by Entenmann's was conducting research to determine how best to influence our youth. This wise decision lead the company to develop a campaign targeted at parents, as well as creating several parent and teacher programs. The study by Entenmann's concluded that intimate bonds with the family reduced the potential for drug use among youths. By encouraging strong family values, the "Proud to be Drug Free" program will bring parents and families together to help prevent drug dependencies.

One of the highlights of the program includes professional and local athletes visiting more than 500 elementary schools. With Marcus Allen, running back for the Los Angeles Raiders, as the official spokesman for the project, youth will undoubtedly be positively affected by this program.

I applaud Entenmann's for their hard work in assisting in our social problems. The "Proud to be Drug Free" project will certainly be beneficial for all who participate. The concern and interest in the people of America demonstrated by Entenmann's proves that the business community can help in the fight in the war on drugs.

WHAT GIVES? A CHARITABLE DEDUCTION FOR NONITEMIZERS

HON. BYRON L. DORGAN

OF NORTH DAKOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, today Mr. CHANDLER and I are introducing legislation to provide a Federal income tax deduction to taxpayers who make charitable contributions, but who are now prevented from deducting those contributions because they file a short form tax return. This bill would give nonitemizers the same tax treatment for supporting charitable organizations as already exists for itemizers.

Under current law, only those taxpayers who itemize deductions receive tax incentives for charitable giving. Consequently, only upper-income taxpayers, who generally itemize, are encouraged by the tax laws to make charitable contributions. It makes no sense to me that those with low to moderate incomes, who generally are unable to itemize, do not receive the same encouragement to make charitable contributions.

I've introduced this legislation for discussion in Congress because it's time we reexamined the rationale behind current policy which, in my view, is not in step with our efforts toward establishing a more equitable Tax Code.

The consideration of restoring the charitable deduction for the many Americans of modest incomes who do not itemize is now particularly timely, in light of recent studies confirming that tax incentives for nonitemizers would stimulate their charitable giving.

More than 77 million taxpayers who do not itemize their returns are now told by our Tax Code that their charitable giving is going to be treated less generously than the charitable giving by upper income folks. That doesn't make sense to me.

I believe a nonitemizer who contributes $500 to charity should receive the same tax benefit as the itemizer who contributes $500 to charity. The rationale underlying the deduction applies to all taxpayers, that is—all individuals should be encouraged to make donations by excluding from taxation the income they contribute for a public purpose.

Allowing a deduction for nonitemizers will stimulate more charitable giving which will provide more funding for worthwhile nonprofit organizations, many of which provide services that otherwise might have to be provided by the Federal Government. Studies demonstrate that lower income households—nonitemizers—have historically contributed a higher percentage of household income to charity than higher income households. Further, nonitemizers tend to give to causes that serve low and middle income individuals. These important social obligations require and deserve the same encouragement from tax policy as causes supported by upper income individuals.

Some argue that the standard deduction which is allowed nonitemizers already takes into account charitable contributions. But it is not clear how much, if any, attribution for charitable deductions is assumed in the standard deduction. And even if one would accept the proposition that a portion of the standard deduction includes charitable giving, a lower bracket taxpayer's charitable deduction represents significantly less value than the same deduction afforded upper bracket taxpayers. This legislation addresses any concern about double benefits by limiting a nonitemizers deduction to that amount exceeding $100 of their charitable contributions. The $100 floor will also help reduce IRS compliance concerns by reducing the number of potential returns for filing.

The point is, lower income Americans should be afforded the same opportunity under our tax laws to give to charities of their choice by allowing them the same charitable deduction available to upper income bracket taxpayers, and we should change our tax laws to provide for that.

DAVID KIRKWOOD: 15 YEARS OF JOURNALISM EXCELLENCE

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to a man whose service to the community has been unique and exemplary.

On May 11, the Scarsdale Public Library will honor David Kirkwood for his 15 years of leadership in the profession of journalism. Since 1975, David Kirkwood has served as editor and publisher of the Scarsdale Inquirer, a newspaper published in the 20th Congressional District. In this role, he has demonstrated enormous commitment and dedication both to the community and to the highest standards of journalistic excellence.

Under Kirkwood's leadership, the Scarsdale Inquirer has grown enormously. Kirkwood was instrumental in improving the newspaper by expanding its size and adding features, photos, and columns. In addition, he redesigned the newspaper to give it a more modern flair, and he also computerized its operations for the first time. The result is a paper that is admired and appreciated by all Scarsdale residents both for its appearance and the excellent reporting it provides.

It is always difficult to report news candidly and objectively, while at the same time maintaining positive relationships with a small community. However, Mr. Kirkwood excelled at this task. He never shied away from reporting on difficult stories, and his reporting inevitably contributed to a better understanding of community problems. Often, the Inquirer's coverage contributed to positive resolutions of difficult problems, as when a landlord decided not to evict an elderly woman as a result of a story in the Inquirer.

Kirkwood has given special attention in the Inquirer to covering trials and other legal issues. Under his leadership, the Inquirer was awarded first prize in the New York State Bar Association's competition for legal coverage by weekly newspapers for a story on a dispute involving public display of a creche, which resulted in a lawsuit that was eventually heard by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mr. Kirkwood was educated at Cornell and the University of California at Berkeley. His interest in a wide range of subjects drew him to the field of journalism in the early 1970's. He began his career reporting for Community Newspapers, a group of Long Island papers. He soon became editor and publisher of the Long Island Independent in Long Beach. He then moved to the Scarsdale Inquirer, where he started as associate editor. One year later, he was made editor and publisher of the Inquirer. Since that time, he has become close to numerous individuals throughout Scarsdale and Westchester County, who value him not only as one who contributes to the community, but as a friend on which they rely.

After 15 years of contributing to the Scarsdale community, Mr. Kirkwood and his wife are leaving Westchester to move to the Boston area, where they are both taking on new professional challenges. Mr. Kirkwood will be sorely missed. He has been a shining example of the best in American journalism, and he has been unswerving in his pursuit of excellence.

On the occasion of Mr. Kirkwood's departure, I want to pay tribute to his many accomplishments and to commend him for the enormous contribution he has made to Scarsdale. In addition, I would like to wish him and his wife the best as they pursue new challenges in a different part of the country. Thank you, David Kirkwood, for making Scarsdale a better place to live, and may you find much success in the future.

TRIBUTE TO BOB AND LILLIAN ZACKY

HON. HOWARD L. BERMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to salute two outstanding members of our community—Bob and Lillian Zacky. The Zackys are being honored by the Encino B'nai B'rith at the organization's annual dinner where they will receive the prestigious David Award.

Bob and Lillian Zacky are both native Californians. They were born in Los Angeles and attended Fairfax High School. They met while Lillian was still a senior and Bob was in the Army headed for Korea. After the war, Bob and Lillian renewed their friendship and have been married 34 years.

It has been a supremely successful marriage. Apart from their two sons, Gregg and Scott, the Zackys have flourished together both as business partners and community leaders. Bob is president and Lillian the spokesperson for the company they founded—Zacky Foods. They are also active supporters of the United Jewish Appeal, the Greater Los Angeles Zoo Association, the Women's Guild for Cedars Sinai, the California Museum Foundation, and Bob and Lillian serve as vice-presidents of the Food Industries Circle for the City of Hope.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure and privilege to ask my colleagues to join with me in saluting Bob and Lillian Zacky—community leaders and role models for all.

INTRODUCTION OF PAY ADJUSTMENT FOR BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING AND THE U.S. MINT POLICE FORCES

HON. STENY H. HOYER

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce legislation which will correct an inequity for Federal employees at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the U.S. Mint.

Mr. Speaker, in January the House approved S. 1521, which went on to become Public Law 101-263 on April 4, that provided for an increase in pay for the police at the National Zoo to a GS–7 level. This was a good bill.

The problem comes, however, in that the Treasury Bureau of Engraving and Printing Police and the U.S. Mint Police are now classified at a GS–5 level—the lowest of any law enforcement service in the Washington region.

Obviously, this makes it next to impossible to recruit and retain qualified individuals to carry out the very critical function of protecting our Nation's money supply.

This is verified by the fact that currently, there are over 37 vacancies out of 114 possible positions at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Since January, they have hired 10 employees, but lost 14.

Further, their mission and responsibilities are being increased in that they will also be responsible for protecting the new Holocaust Museum, as the police of first response. More work at bottom of the barrel pay—clearly we must redress this inequitable situation.

This legislation is very simple. It merely makes the rate of pay for the police at BEP and the Mint equal to that of the Zoo police. This will change their classification from a GS–5 special rate to a GS–7, entry level.

I urge my colleagues to join me moving forward this important bill to improve the security of our Nation's securities.

JUDGE RONALD STRAIGHT, ONE OF CORINTH'S FINEST SONS

HON. GERALD B.H. SOLOMON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, on Friday, May 25, the town of Corinth, NY, in my district will be honoring one of its finest sons, Judge Ronald Straight. I'd like to tell you all a little about him.

As I have said many times, a good way to measure a man is to note how much he gives of himself to his community. It is the spirit of voluntarism, which was reborn during the administration of Ronald Reagan and is maturing under George Bush. It is the force that meets society's needs and meets them on the local level, without the intrusion of higher levels of government.

Ronald Straight exemplifies that ideal of voluntarism as well as anyone I know. He was born and raised in Corinth, and has served the town for many years.

He has been a town justice for 22 years, and a 1989 nominee as New York State Magistrate of the Year. He is a member, first aid instructor, and former captain of the Corinth Emergency Squad and the Volunteer Emergency Ambulance Service.

Judge Straight is also an elder of the First Presbyterian Church of Corinth.

Almost invariably, a person who is active in his community turns out to be a devoted spouse and parent, too. Judge Straight is no exception. He and his wife Patricia are the parents of five sons, Bruce, Brad, Kerry, Kevin, and Andy.

Mr. Speaker, Judge Straight is one of the finest men I know. The town of Corinth is very proud of him, and so am I. Please join me in saluting Judge Ronald Straight, who has reflected honor on the court system, his family, his community, and his country.

"JUST SAY NO" TO DRUGS ASSEMBLY

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, recently I had the pleasure of attending a "Just Say No" to drugs assembly at the Peter Muschal Elementary School in Bordentown, NJ. The antidrug and alcohol abuse education program, which was presented by the first through fifth grade students at the school, stressed the positive aspects of remaining drug-free.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend all of the students of the Peter Muschal Elementary School who helped make this program a success. I was particularly impressed with a collection of short essays by some of the fourth grade students on the topic of "What I Like Best About Myself", each of which stresses the important role that a positive self-image plays in resisting the temptations of drug and alcohol abuse. Let me share six of these essays with my colleagues.

My name is Paul DiMattia and I am here to introduce the 4th grade students. We wrote essays telling what we like best about ourselves. We feel that sometimes too much is said about the bad things, so we decided to tell you some good things.

The students sharing their essays are Jennifer Ellmer, Stephen Myers, Michele Hanft, Paula Tudorof, and Jessica Woodward.

WHAT I LIKE BEST ABOUT MYSELF

(By Jennifer Ellmer)

What I like best about myself is, I'm my own friend, I live the way I want to live, I like things that know other person would like, I also do things that know other person would do, sometimes! I'm also like no other person! I like to talk, I'm also sometimes a pain! I also know that I'm always going to be one person, not like anyone else.

WHAT I LIKE BEST ABOUT MYSELF

(By Steve Myers)

I like myself because I am unique. I am the only one in the 4th grade who has red hair. All the other kids have darker or lighter hair than mine. I also have alot of friends. I like the way they treat me.

I don't like the way some people make fun of me because I'm different. I hope that changes. I like the way my hair sticks out in a crowd.

WHAT I LIKE ABOUT MYSELF

(By Michele Hanft)

The things that I like best about myself are I have my own ideas. I don't copy off of any bodys paper because who knows if anythings wrong. I like myself because I know if somethings right or wrong. When I ask someone something they don't even listen to me but at least when someone talks to me I listen. Everyone likes the people who are cool and I don't because they are the people who never get done their work and always get in trouble. I don't like to fight with other people, if I do I might hurt their feelings. Even the people who don't like me I still try to be nice to them but they aren't always nice to me. I also like myself best of all because I don't like to hurt other people. When people are mean to me, they don't realize that their hurting my feelings.

WHAT I LIKE ABOUT MYSELF

(By Paula Tudorof)

I like myself because I am the only one in this world and none can ever be like me. That's why I think I'm special. I like myself because I don't have to be like someone else. I can make my own decisions and I don't have to think like any other person. I like myself because I try my best and even if I don't do well I can know that I tried and that's all that counts. I like myself because I am a healthy girl and I don't have any disease like some kids in the world so that makes me very lucky. I like myself because I can speak two languages and I like myself because I can speak, hear, and see, unlike some people, who can't.

WHAT I LIKE BEST ABOUT MYSELF

(By Jessica Woodward)

What I like best about myself is that I help old citizens bring in the groceries and I also help my mom study for her tests. My mother is being trained to be a medical assistant, and she's going to work with a doctor. Best of all I really like to help my mother because I love her. My mother deserves the very best because she treats me well. When ever I am sick my mom stands or sits right next to me. So that's why I help my mom and love her so much. When ever my brother and sister bother my mother, I feel real sad, so that's why I try to cheer her up.

ANDREW GROVE'S STRATEGIC SECURITY BUDGET

HON. MEL LEVINE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, I would like to share with my colleagues a very insightful op-ed regarding America's high-tech future which appeared in the April 23, 1990, Los Angeles Times. The article was written by Andrew Grove, the president and CEO of Intel Corp.

He suggests that rather than limiting our security considerations to their military aspects, we should look at the issue more broadly. Specifically, that the military, technological, and economic components be included in a "strategic security budget." Although the military threat to our security is diminishing, thanks to recent events in the East bloc, we are facing the most serious threat to our economic security since the Great Depression. Grove's article examines an innovative option for dealing with the changed security threat.

Andrew Grove's article follows. I recommend it to my colleagues.

[From the Los Angeles Times, Apr. 23, 1990]

U.S. NEEDS SELF-SUFFICIENCY OF ITS TECHNOLOGICAL FABRIC

(By Andrew S. Grove)

The great changes sweeping the East Bloc augur major cuts in U.S. defense spending. But before we rush to spend the peace dividend, we should rename the defense budget the "strategic security budget." This would help us think of it as the pot of money we use to defend ourselves against any external force that, left unchecked, would lead to the subjugation of the United States.

The forces likely to determine our independence and security today are different from those of the past. The military danger is diminished, but the technological and economic threat has never been greater. How ironic it would be if the United States goes down in history as the country that succeeded in casting a protective military net over the Free World, only to lose its own economic freedom to the very nations it shielded.

For those of us who earn our living fighting foreign competitors, it is painfully evident that the United States is losing its leadership in one industry after another. American companies must contend with an unusual trinity of forces. Our most ferocious foreign competitors are frequently subsidized and steered toward markets in which the U.S. edge is slipping. We face trade barriers that limit our penetration of foreign markets. Finally, we work with an Administration whose laissez-faire view of the world makes ill-suited to cope effectively with the new realities of international trade.

It is instructive to re-examine some of the changes that occurred in the 1980s. In the electronics industry, for example, there is trouble up and down the industry's food chain. In 1980, there were several American suppliers of the silicon wafers used to make chips. Today, there are none. Ten years ago, U.S. semiconductor manufacturers controlled 75% of the world semiconductor market. Today, their market share is 35%.

Even more alarming is what's happening to our customers. In 1980, U.S.-based electronics companies consumed 42% of the world's semiconductors. The number today is 32%. There is practically no consumer electronics industry in this country. The computer industry, I'm afraid, is next to go.

Projecting these and other trends into the 90's, the United States emerges as a second-rate economic power importing most of its industrial goods and paying for them by selling its natural resources and dwindling corporate assets. That sounds a lot like the definition of a colony. It is difficult to imagine a military action by the Soviet Union, short of a nuclear strike, that could achieve a more damaging blow to the well-being of the United States.

To reverse these trends, we should aim to make America technologically self-sufficient by the end of the decade. A first step would be for the President to acknowledge that the deterioration of our industrial fabric is a threat to our strategic security. This may seem trivial, but for the current Administration it would be a major step.

We must also conceive of solutions that have measurable effects before the targeted problem becomes unmanageable. If we experience another decade like the 80's, it will be all over. So we can't rely on solutions that take longer than 10 years to work. For example, one of the most frequently mentioned—and certainly worthwhile—cures for what ails industrial America is to improve our education system. The benefits, however, would not begin to be evident until the next century.

Long before then, we need to inject funds into our industrial infrastructure to keep it alive and well. We need to make sure that companies like Intel, its U.S.-based suppliers and its customers will be around to employ the graduates of the improved education system.

So let's declare technological self-sufficiency the top priority of our strategic security spending. Then let's redeploy our current "defense" spending to achieve it, and let's hope we're not too late.

TRIBUTE TO BONNIE L. BERNS

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding community leader from my congressional district. Tonight, the Carmichael Chamber of Commerce is recognizing Bonnie L. Berns as their 1990 "Businessperson of the Year."

In her 33 years of residency in Carmichael, CA, Bonnie has served her community in a variety of ways. As an assistant bank vice president, the care and concern that she shows her clients helps strengthen the business community and assists Carmichael residents in meeting their financial goals. Bonnie has been an active leader in the Carmichael Chamber of Commerce having served on their board of directors since 1981. She has held office as the chamber's president, and once served as Carmichael's honorary mayor.

Bonnie has a long resume of community service having volunteered her time, energy, and considerable talents to numerous community organizations. Bonnie's contributions include serving from concerned parent in the PTA to financial chairman of the American River Hospital Foundation.

Bonnie, and others like her, are among the most valuable assets a community can have. I feel fortunate to have such leaders in my congressional district who possess the admirable qualities of a strong business sense mixed with an unwaivering commitment to their community. Smart business people recognize that a vibrant community makes good business sense.

Mr. Speaker, and fellow colleagues, please join me in congratulating Bonnie L. Berns as 1990 Carmichael "Businessperson of the Year."

TRIBUTE TO DR. WILLIAM C. PRATELLA

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has devoted his time and energy to the education of our youth. Dr. William C. Pratella, the superintendent of schools in Mount Vernon, NY, has dedicated almost 30 years toward serving that community.

During his tenure as teacher, guidance counselor, principal and—for the past 18 years—superintendent, Dr. Pratella has committed himself to providing quality education. He has worked to dramatically improve scores in reading and math at all levels. With the support of public officials, parents, teachers, and the community, he instituted the first magnet elementary school in the State of New York. He has developed programs to expand the opportunities available for gifted youth, and to focus close attention on the special needs of children with personal and educational problems. He has instituted a number of special programs for all grade levels, including a computer literacy program, a suicide prevention program, and an expanded kindergarten and prekindergarten program.

We are deeply indebted to Dr. Pratella. He has devoted 30 years to the Mount Vernon community. School districts across the Nation have much to learn from the models of elementary and secondary education which Dr. Pratella has developed in Mount Vernon. I am honored to be able to pay tribute to his work here today.

PANAMA INVASION STILL CONCERNS MANY AMERICANS

HON. TED WEISS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of my colleagues a recent article by Corliss Lamont and Beth Lamont about the United States invasion of Panama. This article argues, correctly in my opinion, that the invasion not only violated the U.S. Constitution, but was inconsistent with our international treaty obligations and our long-term interests in Central America as well.

The staggering costs of the United States invasion of Panama are still being tallied—in the tragic loss of American and Panamanian lives, in the economic dislocation of thousands of Panamanians, and in the massive physical destruction which continues to cripple that nation.

As we consider these costs, we should recall that many Americans—including the authors of this article—opposed this unwarranted and illegal invasion from the outset.

PANAMA—OPERATION INJUSTICE

(By Corliss Lamont and Beth Lamont)

While turmoils still shake a large part of the civilized world, we cannot afford to forget the folly and brutality of the U.S. invasion of Panama beginning December 20, 1989. President Bush's worst mistake since becoming President was his rash decision to send 27,000 American troops into Panama, supposedly to capture its scoundrel dictator, General Manuel Noriega. Noriega finally surrendered and was brought to the United States where he awaits doubtful prosecution at Miami. However, the truth about the American invasion is now a permanent part of history; and that historic truth tells us that the aggression must take its place in the shameful tradition of U.S. imperialism, with recent examples in Libya, Grenada, and Vietnam.

The cost of the U.S. invasion has been substantial in terms of American and Panamanian military casualties and especially among Panama's civilians. Owing to censorship by the U.S Army and the American media, precise figures were never released. Several American commissions that have gone to Panama estimate the total military and civilian dead in Panama at close to 2,000. Of these dead many were found in mass graves. The search for truth is complicated by continuing conditions which resemble a state of siege. Finding witnesses who worked in hospitals and morgues is almost impossible since they have all been fired from their jobs. They are sometimes traced to military camps and schools where 7,000 or more homeless and jobless refugees are existing. Neighbors are being turned against neighbors in a complexity of mixed loyalties, fears and suspicions.

The horror and tragedy of the invasion is well described in a Report issued by the National Lawyers Guild (February 1990) based on the account of a special Guild committee that went to Panama for a week's visit:

"At 12:30 a.m. on December 20, 1989, without any notice, the United States military began dropping bombs into the densely populated barrio of El Cholrillo, in Panama City. All that night, explosions blew apart buildings, and shook the wooden-frame houses where terrified people, clinging to their screaming children, lay face down on the floors, hoping they would survive. Tracer bullets flew through the streets, and Cobra helicopters circled, firing mortars into the cuartel in the center of the neighborhood, and into the homes surrounding it. Fires broke out, as the flimsy wooden homes, most of them built at the beginning of the decade, were bombed or hit by tracers. Smoke filled the streets, whole blocks burned to the ground. In the multi-family apartment buildings, fires raced up the stairways to trap the wounded or elderly who hadn't gotten down in time. Those that could, fled through the gunfire to safety. Many could not. By morning, much of El Chorillo was smoking rubble; more burned in the following days. As camouflaged American GI's took control of the city around daybreak, sixteen thousand civilians streamed out of their barrio, homeless and traumatized. A square mile was flattened, and thousands were wounded or dead."

As everyone knows, the atrocious American invasion brought ruin to the Panama economy, destroying thousands of shops, industrial plants and homes in Panama City and throughout the country. Experts estimate that it will cost the United States close to $2 billion to restore Panama's wrecked economy.

Meanwhile, we must recognize that almost all the governments of Central and South America opposed the Panama invasion as did the United Nations and various countries throughout the world. The general foreign opinion was that the U.S. invasion was another disastrous example of American imperialism as shown over the past century.

American imperialist ventures display the march of self-defeating folly; and the Government's cover-up policy in secretly undertaking interventions violates the most fundamental civil liberty—namely, the American people's right to know. These interventions stem from what President Eisenhower called "the military-industrial complex," aided by the C.I.A. Through intense White House propaganda appealing to patriotic passion they strengthen the party in power and the influence of the Pentagon.

Regarding the Panama invasion Chief Executive Bush totally disregarded the War Powers Act that calls on a President to notify the House of Representatives that he is about to order the use of armed force, and then violated the U.S. Constitution itself which states that only Congress has the power to declare war for the United States. While continually boasting about the values of American democracy, the Bush Administration continually violates its basic tenets.

Addressing the President in an Open Letter, Professor of Philosophy John Somerville states: "Did you not realize how hypocritical it was to launch an armed invasion while you were publicly telling other countries that they must respect human rights and practice democracy by peaceful means?" President Bush, while praising the downfall of dictatorships in Eastern Europe, acted like a dictator himself in regard to Panama. The invasion was a clearcut example of political hypocrisy.

In this Introduction, we could continue to condemn in detail the Panama invasion, but believe it is more effective to reprint three excellent advertisements that support our viewpoint and were published in the media. The first appeared in The New York Times on Jan. 10, 1990, a full page advertisement sponsored by the Ad Hoc Committee for Panama and signed by 69 eminent American citizens; the second ad was printed Jan. 12, 1990 on the Op-Ed page of the Times, sponsored by the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee; and the third ad was published Feb. 19, 1990 in The Nation and signed by more than 100 well-known Americans. The advertisements herewith follow:

[From the New York Times, Jan. 10, 1990]

JANUARY 10, 1990.

President GEORGE BUSH,
The White House, 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Your invasion of Panama is illegal.

This invasion, undertaken without consulting Congress, is a violation of the Constitution of the United States, Article 1, Section 8 which clearly states that Congress, not the President, has the power to declare war.

It also violates the U.N. Charter, the OAS Charter and the Canal Treaties.

In resorting to force rather than diplomacy against a Latin American neighbor, you have continued the disastrous pattern of your predecessors and the undermining of U.S. credibility abroad.

Small wonder that the people of Latin America distrust the U.S. For them this is not Operation Just Cause but Operation Just Business.

Granted General Noreiga's regime, like all too many around the world, was repressive.

But that does not justify your violating the U.S. Constitution. Nor does it justify interfering with the sovereign nation of Panama.

By sending 24,000 American troops into Panama, you have caused immense damage to this already damaged country. You have killed at least 400 Panamanians, injured hundreds more, caused more than $100 million in destruction, and left thousands homeless.

And 26 Americans lie dead and hundreds are wounded.

We object to this lawlessness, the carnage and the damage.

We object to the mockery of our Constitution and the freedom in safeguards.

We object to the idea that we can impose democracy on another nation.

We call on you to withdraw the troops now, restore sovereignty to Panama and make reparations to the civilian victims immediately.

[From the New York Times, Jan. 12, 1990]

WE BELIEVE—THE U.S. INVASION OF PANAMA VIOLATES:

1. The American War Powers Act.
2. The United Nations Charter.
3. The Charter of the Organization of American States.
4. The U.S. Panama Canal Treaties.
5. International law in general.
6. The historic American ideal of world peace.

Although the tyrant Noriega finally surrendered, it remains clear that President Bush's resort to military force against Panama was rash, immoral and unconstitutional. This flagrant aggression of one state illegally invading another state was condemned by the Latin American governments, the Soviet Union, China and public opinion throughout the world.

In the efforts to oust and seize Noriega 23 American lives were lost, while the dead in the Panama Defense Force numbered some 300, and civilians killed reached 400 with 2,000 wounded. "Gun Barrel Democracy," as The Nation puts it.

Further consequences of the invasion are to trap the United States into responsibility for helping to rebuild ruined Panama City and to restore the gutted economy. It is reliably estimated that for America to work its way honorably out of the Panama shambles will cost close to $2 billion.

A deplorable example of American irrationality was that U.S. troops violently broke into and searched the Nicaraguan Embassy in Panama City. This action itself showed a serious disregard for international law and diplomatic immunity, for which President Bush later apologized.

Any rational evaluation of the Panama invasion must conclude that in important ways it was a disaster. What the Pentagon probably claims as a military victory was clearly a serious defeat in terms of human values and international relations. The U.S. giant has managed to shoot itself in the foot and humiliate itself in dealing with a very small nation of 2,400,000 people.

Once again the U.S. government, with Vietnam looming in the background, has disregarded the many mistakes of the past in Central America, and without considering all the implications, launched a massive overkill. This tragedy will increase antiAmerican sentiment abroad, especially in the nations of Central and South America.

As Democratic Congressman Ted Weiss says, "Ultimately the decision to invade Panama will be contrary to the national security interest of the United States and will reflect poorly on the reputation and prestige of our nation."

[From the Nation, Feb. 12, 1990]

CALL TO ACTION!

To everyone outraged by the U.S. invasion and occupation of Panama: We must sharply escalate our resistance to U.S. aggression & intervention in Central America & throughout the world!

The U.S. government greeted the '90s with a brutal invasion and occupation of Panama. Reports of 1,000 or more civilians killed and thousands more wounded by U.S. bombing and strafing of poor neighborhoods filter through U.S. official lies and media censorship. Many of the dead were quickly buried, unidentified, in mass graves for "humanitarian reasons." Now the U.S. military is running the devastated country by terror and bribe. And what is the "official story"? That this "successful operation" was to "get a drug dealing dictator and protect U.S. lives and treaty rights." President George Bush proudly proclaims that the decimation of this tiny country of 2.3 million people was "worth it."

HERE IS THE REAL STORY:

U.S. Media highlights U.S. casualties while civilian suffering and death is still not reported. Network TV coverage of the invasion was a U.S. military video fed to the "press pool" holed up in the U.S. embassy. The media has virtually blacked out major opposition to the invasion amongst people in Panama and around the world (including mass protests in over twenty U.S. cities). They have instead focused all eyes on Manuel Noriega.

Noriega for years was a valued ally of the U.S., on the CIA payroll. He was a key player in the drug and Contra trade, endorsed and overseen by Bush as CIA director and vice-president. Before their "falling out" Noriega received a U.S. award for his role in the "War on Drugs." Endara, now installed by the U.S. in the midst of bombs and blood, served for ten years as a top aide in an earlier regime which openly promoted U.S. and oligarchy interests.

Panama is the biggest military operation since Vietnam. At the same time bombing and murder of poor people and religious workers by U.S.-supported death squads and Contras have increased in El Salvador and Nicaragua. Under the guise of "War on Drugs" the U.S. special forces lead helicopter patrols from a Vietnam-style fire-base against insurgents in Peru and Bush calls for an aircraft carrier group to be stationed off the coast of Colombia with high-tech planes to monitor the whole region.

The truth is that the U.S. aggression in Panama is a major escalation of military intervention in the whole region. The goal is to continue U.S. domination . . . "Yanqui imperialism" as people all over Latin America name it.

Whatever our political or organizational ties, we must dramatically intensify the scope and level of protest actions. We can and must mount a far more powerful resistance to the horror of U.S. imperialist crime. The oppressed people of Panama, Latin America, and the world expect nothing less!

INTERVIEW WITH PRIME MINISTER PINDLING

HON. MERVYN M. DYMALLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, recently Leaders magazine published an interview with Sir Lynden O. Pindling, Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas. Because the interview addressed a number of questions of concern to Members of Congress, I thought it might be helpful to bring this interview to the attention of the Members.

BANKING ON PINDLING

(LEADERS EDITOR'S NOTE.—The Honorable Sir Lynden Pindling, Prime Minister of the Bahamas, has in his 23 years in office seen the Bahamas enjoy a strong economy and a stable government. Legislation that went into effect in January makes investment in the Bahamas even more attractive. But, according to Pindling—who shares his thoughts on the future of the Bahamas in the following interview—the Bahamas is in a season of change. The Government is continuing to review financial legislation, with an eye to making more revisions to further strengthen banking and investment opportunities. In addition, the Bahamas' first large-scale agricultural venture, along with the construction of a flour mill and an animal feed mill, will help the Commonwealth to better feed itself, thus leading the Bahamas into its greatest era of self-sufficiency and economic opportunity.)

Q. There was a time when the Bahamas was the third-largest international financial center in the world after London and New York. Now you are ranked 11th by the I.M.F. What happened, and how do you plan to regain your leading position in the banking sector?

A. Despite the fact that between 1967 and 1988 bank and trust licenses increased from 187 to 391, we did become too complacent. The establishment of International Banking Facilities in New York did take away some business, but it did not represent any real loss in economic terms. Neither did the establishment of offshore banking facilities in Tokyo mean a loss for us. But we did not gain as much as we might otherwise have done. We also failed to keep pace with the changing requirements of the international financial community, and we failed to promote ourselves in the community.

A conscious decision has now been taken to remedy those deficiencies. All our financial legislation has either been revised or is being revised; our record-keeping is being fully computerized for both speed and accuracy; and we are establishing a special unit to promote around the world our superior environment for banking and financial services. We confidently expect to have significantly improved our I.M.F. rating over the next three years.

Q. Insurance is another area of former dominance. Where do you stand today?

A. What I said about our complacency in banking is also true about insurance services, but we have now begun to do in the insurance field what we did in the financial field. Our legislation is being reviewed with a view to updating it wherever it is necessary or advantageous to do so. In both banking and insurance we have an eye to the future. We anticipate that political and economic changes in Western and Eastern Europe will produce a need for new services and new methods of providing existing services, and we intend to be ready to provide both in a timely and efficient manner.

Q. The competition in banking and insurance is stiff. What can the Bahamas offer its clients that they can't get in Switzerland or Singapore?

A. That's not the point, really. As we see it, our efforts must be directed at offering everything Switzerland and Singapore can offer in this Atlantic region. Furthermore, there will be services available in the Bahamas which we anticipate will be less readily available in Europe after the Single Unified Market comes into existence in 1992.

Q. Banking secrecy is facing heavy criticism in some quarters. Do you believe there are legitimate reasons for such secrecy, and how do you propose to deal with the issue?

A. There are legitimate reasons for the criticisms, but there are also legitimate reasons for confidentiality. The criticisms arise from the perception that secrecy covers up criminality and skulduggery. Resolve the questions that give rise to such a perception, and legitimate business and personal confidentiality can be preserved.

Q. You have tightened your banking regulations to guard against money laundering. Has real progress been made in this area?

A. Without a doubt. When we were considered to be the third largest international financial center after London and New York, we were also thought to be the third largest in money laundering activities. We no longer have that dubious distinction. As early as in 1983, the Central Bank of the Bahamas prohibited the banks from accepting large cash deposits of U.S. dollars. As per the system, clearing banks have defined amounts in excess of U.S. $5,000 as large cash transactions. Attempts to make cash deposits in excess of the limit are required to be reported to the Central Bank promptly, with full particulars of the concerned party such as photocopy of passport, driving license, identity card, temporary address in Nassau, etc. The system is working very well.

The Central Bank also monitors the tenders of U.S. currency notes made by individual clearing banks from time to time and asks for explanations in cases of significantly large tenders. The Association of International Banks and Trust Companies has established a written Code of Conduct for its members which Code enjoins banks to identify their customers and obtain proper references before opening accounts and to prevent use of their institutions in the Bahamas for criminal purposes. The Central Bank maintains a close contact with the Association and supports it in securing adherence to the Code by the individual members.

We have also signed international agreements for the exchange of information in criminal matters and have enacted legislation which enables the seizure and forfeiture of assets that cannot be legitimately accounted for. As a result, Nassau is no longer a significant center for money laundering activities. The record will show that now banks in American, Canadian and European cities and other Caribbean countries have snatched that reputation from us.

Q. The Bahamas is a fairly recent player in international ship registration. Has this venture been successful?

A. International ship registration has been eminently successful. In less than 10 years we have registered over 1,000 ships and almost 16 million tons of shipping. The Bahamas now ranks tenth in the World Shipping League and fifth in the Free Flag League.

Q. Tourism is the major pillar of your economy. You are the number-one destination in the Caribbean, but you have a lot of islands that are not as developed as islands with cities like Nassau and Freeport. How do you intend to develop those islands?

A. The first part of our strategy was to put into other islands the necessary infrastructure of airports, harbors, roads and telecommunications. We are now putting in place and that is the necessary incentive legislation to encourage the economic development of those islands, especially Abaco, Andros, Eleuthera, Exuma and San Salvador, the landfall of Columbus on October 12, 1492.

Q. The Bahamas has been known for a long time as an ideal place for a vacation home, but you don't see a lot of promotion of this idea. Is this something your government is encouraging?

A. Hitherto, there has not been much promotion of that concept, but there is growing popular support for the idea. It will be specifically encouraged in a new Bahamas Development Encouragement Act which will be introduced shortly in Parliament.

Q. The Bahamas imports most of its food and virtually all of its manufactured products. How do manufacturing and agriculture fit into the country's development plan?

A. We have launched a new program to feed ourselves. The first large-scale agricultural venture, which will supply fruits and vegetables for domestic and foreign markets, will start shortly. Construction will soon begin on a flour mill and animal feed mill. Other agricultural and maricultural ventures are following. Because we appreciate that we must grow more of our food needs, every encouragement will be given to food production, including cattle and sheep rearing. In the proposed Development Encouragement Act, the country will be divided into economic enterprise zones which will have special business incentives and tax benefits, and food production will be one of the industries promoted for such zones.

Q. Two of the greatest fears of foreign investors are political instability and government red tape. What steps are you taking to ensure that neither of these hinders growth and development?

A. I do not believe you will find many countries in this hemisphere with greater political stability and less government red tape than the Bahamas. But we are not satisfied with that. I still believe, however, that our administrative machinery can be made to move more quickly and to operate more smoothly, particularly in the areas of work permits. On the other hand, we cannot afford to relax the checks and balances in our system which have entrenched our stability and which are necessary to protect, for example, our banking industry and our fragile environment.

Q. You have been consistently reelected for 23 years, you have a strong opposition, a free press and a good economy. Many of your neighbors and much of the Third World are not even close to achieving what the Bahamas has. What are you doing to make the sun shine on you?

A. I am not sure that I know the whole answer to that. I suspect, however, that some governments are too certain of their own infallibility, too afraid of and too sensitive to criticism. Because of this, they react too harshly, overlooking completely the necessity for patience and tolerance in public life.

Q. The world is going through fundamental changes politically and economically. How does a small island nation like the Bahamas fit into the new landscape?

A. I think herein lies the greatest challenge facing small countries. With small populations, limited resources and insignificant market shares, the development of global trade in a global market could sweep us away. I have no doubt that small countries will have to ally themselves with larger economic blocs in trading entities and find their niches in them. To merely survive, they will have to provide goods and/or services for those larger economic blocs, and to succeed they will have to do so on a world-class basis. In other words, such goods and/or services that we do produce or provide will have to be competitive in quality and in price in the international market. This will require massive new efforts in human development and training in our countries.

Q. You are only 50 miles from Florida; U.S. investment and interest in the Bahamas are considerable. Are you looking beyond the U.S. for new investment now, and what are your priorities?

A. I do not feel that the level of United States investment will be as great as it was before. Both the Far East and Europe will pose massive economic challenges to America and absorb most of her foreign investment potential. By the same token, the stronger Asian and European currencies will encourage more Asian and European investment in the Bahamas, and that is where I think we shall have to look. We have already begun our investment promotion in Asia, and we are about to renew our efforts in Europe, realizing, of course, that Europeans are likely to be preoccupied with Eastern Europe.

Q. The Bahamas and the U.S. are working together to end the flow of drugs through the Caribbean. Both nations are spending a lot of money on interdiction, but are we getting results?

A. Oh, yes, we are. The law enforcement agencies of both countries confirm this. Indeed, President Bush acknowledges this in his 1990 National Drug Control Strategy. On page 69 you will find: "As a result of successful air and maritime interdiction efforts in the Southeastern United States and the Bahamas, drug smugglers have shifted their focus toward Mexico as a primary transfer point for smuggling drugs into the United States. This shift has created an especially intense drug trafficking area along the Southwest border (Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California), which will be the focus of new interdiction activities."

For us in the Bahamas, this has manifested itself in less drug seizures, both in numbers and in quantity, less drug availability on our streets for local consumption, and less drug money in circulation.

Q. As the longest serving democratic leader in the hemisphere, you have governed through seven U.S. administrations while serving as the leader of the 49-nation Commonwealth. You must have had some rich experiences. What lessons have you learned from these experiences?

A. Simple and old ones, really. Firstly, do the best you can as often as you can. Secondly, never let the bastards get you down. Thirdly, always maintain your sense of humor.●

PROPOSED AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION RESOLUTION

HON. BOB CLEMENT

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, the American Bar Association will meet in August in annual convention to consider many issues and resolutions. One of those resolutions will be offered by three distinguished members of the Nashville legal community: Owen Meredith Smaw, Richard H. Dinkins, and David L. Maddox.

As a courtesy to these three individuals, I would like to share the text of the proposed resolution and some additional background information with members of the legal community at large. While I do not necessarily endorse the resolution, I do believe that discourse and debate of all views is essential to making an informed decision. Consequently, I am pleased to share this information with those intersted in the debate on the death penalty and the International Convention Against Torture.

TO BE CONDEMNED IPSO FACTO IS TORTURE PER SE

Whereas, the International Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment defines torture as "any act by which severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, is intentionlly inflicted on a person* * *";

Whereas, the Convention declares that there are "no exceptional circumstances whatsoever" to justify torture;

Whereas, the Convention is designed to prevent and punish torture committed by government officials or others acting in an official capacity;

Whereas, condemned prisoners are made to suffer extreme mental torture when any sentence of death is imposed;

Whereas, the signing of a death warrant by any government official always causes immediate mental, emotional, psychological and psychiatric torture;

Whereas, prevention of the international crime of torture is to be preferred over punishment of judges, justices, governors, and other government officials who torture condemned prisoners;

Now, therefore, be it resolved, That the American Bar Association opposes the sentence of death and the signing of any death warrants in America as a clear violation of the International Convention Against Torture.

THE CONVENTION AGAINST TORTURE

BACKGROUND

On 10 December 1984 the United Nations adopted the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (Convention Against Torture). This represented an important step in the development of international standards against torture which had begun years earlier.

In November 1973 the United Nations passed Resolution 3059 which rejected any form of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Resolution 3218, passed on 6 November 1974, launched the initial stage of a program towards setting standards for the prevention of torture. The resolution included a clause requesting action by future U.N. congresses. In August 1975 the Fifth Congress on the Prevention of Crime drafted minimum rules for the treatment of prisoners worldwide. It categorized torture as a crime of transnational concern.

The United Nations issued its first official declaration against torture on 9 December 1975. The declaration, Resolution 3452, served as a basis for development of the Convention Against Torture. Two years later the United Nations authorized its Commission on Human Rights to draft a convention against torture. The commission authored and negotiated the draft of the convention from 1978 to 1984, when the text was adopted by the U.N. General Assembly.

Additionally, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights provides a historical basis for the prohibition of torture. The convenant prohibits torture under all circumstances, including war, invasion, or other states of emergency.

CURRENT WORLDWIDE STATUS

The Convention against Torture came into force on 26 June 1987, the thirtieth day after twenty nations had ratified the treaty. The first meeting of States Parties (countries which had ratified the treaty) was held on 26 November 1987.

The Committee against Torture established under the Convention is comprised of 10 experts. Currently, nationals from Argentina, Bulgaria, Cameroon, Canada, Denmark, France, Mexico, Philippines, Switzerland, and the U.S.S.R. are serving on the Committee. Each member of the Committee serves as an independent expert and is not a representative of the nation of their origin. The committee has begun receiving communications and reports. It is authorized to investigate allegations of torture.

As of 20 February 1989, 41 states had ratified (become a State Party to) the convention; 38 additional countries had signed the treaty. Signing indicates an official intent to ratify the treaty at a later date.

TREATY SYNTHESIS

Substantive Articles

Article 1 defines torture as any act which intentionally inflicts severe pain, physical or mental, on a person to obtain information or a confession, to punish, or to intimidate or coerce him or a third person by a public official or other person acting in an official capacity.

Article 2 allows for no exceptions to the prohibition against torture.

Article 3 forbids States Parties from forcibly returning a person to a country where there are substantial grounds to expect that that person may be tortured.

Article 4 requires each State Party to make torture and attempted torture criminal offenses punishable by law.

Article 5 discusses States Parties' jurisdiction over certain torture cases.

Article 6 mandates that any person accused of torture shall be taken into custody by the country in which that person is found at the time. That country shall initiate an investigation while assisting the accused person in communicating with a representative of his/her country.

Article 7 requires the detaining country to either extradite the accused person or to prosecute the case as a serious offense under the law of that country. The detained person must receive fair treatment at all times.

Article 8 makes torture and attempted torture extraditable offenses in any extradition treaty existing between State Parties. Where no extradition treaty exists between countries, States Parties may consider the Convention a legal basis for extradition.

Article 9 requires mutual assistance between States Parties in criminal proceedings concerning torture.

Article 10 requires each country to ensure that law enforcement personnel and other officials be educated and informed as to the prohibitions against torture.

Article 11 mandates that each State Party keep under review all rules and policies pursuant to torture.

Article 12 requires each State Party to ensure a prompt and fair investigation into allegations of torture in territories under that country's jurisdiction.

Article 13 allows a person alleging that s/he has been tortured to file a complaint and to receive a fair and prompt investigation. Further, steps shall be taken to protect that person and other witnesses.

Article 14 requires each State Party to ensure that victims of torture of their surviving relative/s have the right to redress and adequate compensation.

Article 15 prohibits statements obtained through torture from being allowed as evidence in court.

Article 16 obligates each State Party to prevent acts of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment which do not amount to torture, when such acts are committed by or with the consent of an official or a person acting in an official capacity.

Procedural Articles

Article 17 mandates the establishment of a Committee against Torture consisting of ten experts of high moral standing and recognized competence in the field to human rights.

Article 18 sets up the rules and structure of the Committee.

Article 19 requires that within one year after ratification, States Parties must report on how they have fulfilled their responsibilities to the treaty. Supplementary reports must be filed every four years.

Article 20 obligates the Committee to invite a State Party accused of torture to cooperate in an examination of the information and to submit observations. If an official inquiry is made, the Committee shall seek the cooperation of the State Party concerned. In agreement with that country, such an inquiry may include a visit to its territory.

Article 21 allows a State Party at any time to recognize the competence of the Committee to receive and consider communications from a State Party claiming that another State Party is not fulfilling its obligations under this Convention. Such communications may be received and considered only if submitted by a State Party which has made a declaration recognizing the competence of the Committee. No communication will be considered by the Committee if it concerns a State Party which has not made such a declaration.

Article 22 allows a State Party to recognize the competence of the Committee to consider communications from individuals claiming to be victims of torture. The same rules apply as in Article 21.

Article 23 discusses the diplomatic rights of the Committee.

Article 24 requires the Committee to submit an annual report to States Parties and to the U.N. General Assembly.

Article 25, 26, and 27 open the Convention for signature and ratification and govern its entry into force.

Article 28 allows States Parties not to recognize the competence of the Committee in regard to article 20. It also allows States Parties to withdraw previously made reservations.

Article 29 discusses amendment procedures.

Article 30 allows for arbitration of disputes between State Parties when negotiation is not viable.

Article 31 allows States Parties to withdraw from the Convention. Such a withdrawal would not release the State Party from responsibilities for acts committed prior to the date of withdrawal.

Article 32 requires the U.N. Secretary General to inform members about the treaty's progress.

Article 33, the final article, states the languages in which the treaty is authentic.

IMPORTANCE OF THE TREATY

Like the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, neither of which immediately lived up to their lofty aspirations, the treaty creates a momentum toward the realization of the hopes which it offers.

The Convention makes it legitimate for a nation to be concerned and to intercede regarding the behavior of another country toward its citizens. The findings of the Committee against Torture lend significant weight to international efforts to end torture. As the Committee continues to function, its decisions and investigations aid human rights work throughout the world.

The treaty reinforces the definition of torture so that torturers can no longer claim that they were unaware of the meaning of torture. It further institutes measures to prevent torture and to punish violators when torture takes place. Each State Party is required to make torture a punishable offense and must take measures, such as training and educating law enforcement officials, to prevent torture.

Any torturer found in the territory of a State Party must be prosecuted or extradited. A state party can prosecute regardless of where the torture took place. Further, the Committee investigates charges of torture and works to enforce the treaty.

Significantly, the convention has a direct impact on torture victims. States Parties are required to investigate allegations of torture which are made by victims. Victims and witnesses must be protected during investigations and prosecution. The treaty also gives victims the right to compensation for torture. It further forbids statements made under torture from being used in court.

U.S. ACTION TO DATE

The United States signed the Convention against Torture on 8 April 1988. On May 1988 the Reagan Administration submitted the convention to the Senate. It was referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the body responsible for reporting all international treaties to the full Senate.

The Administration enclosed with the treaty 4 declarations, 4 reservations and 9 understandings which propose to the Senate various qualifications which the United States might make upon ratifying the treaty. Many of these statements specifically and detrimentally alter the purpose and effect of the convention. They include: 1) a redefinition of torture which raises the threshold of pain which one must suffer and which allows certain circumstances and justifications for torture, 2) a proviso which excludes U.S. participation in almost all of the international monitoring aspects of the treaty and 3) a limitation which makes the treaty unenforceable domestically unless new legislation is passed.

As of April 1989 the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had neither held nor scheduled hearings to consider the treaty. Once the Committee completes hearings on the treaty, it will submit its report and recommendation to the full Senate. Two thirds of the Senators voting must vote in favor of the treaty.

IMPORTANCE OF U.S. RATIFICATION

In 1984, the U.S. Congress passed and the President signed the Joint Resolution against Torture (P.L. 98-447) committing the U.S. to combat the practice of torture. The resolution refers to the Convention against Torture still in draft form. Now that work on the Convention is complete and it is in force, the United States can add this latest tool to its arsenal to combat torture worldwide.

The United States played a major role in drafting the treaty. It should complete the process by ratifying the convention. It is the only permanent member of the U.N. Security Council which has not ratified the convention.

The United States publicly proclaims support for human rights. The longer it waits to ratify the treaty, the more its credibility as a human rights leader is eroded.

Ratification is vital in proving the U.S. commitment to human rights as a concern that crosses national boundaries. It affirms to the international community U.S. determination to combat torture with every available tool. It allows the United States to join with other countries in pursuing and prosecuting torturers wherever they are found.

The Convention against Torture recently came into force and the Committee against Torture into operation. The United States stands to gain from participating in the early stages of this new and developing institution. The Convention offers a realistic forum and context for constructive dialogue as compared to rhetorical declamations and denunciations.

Since its record on torture is relatively good, the U.S. has little to fear from ratifying the Convention.

Ratification assures continuity in the U.S. commitment to control torture and protect U.S. citizens against torture through future administrations.

U.S. action or inaction influences many other countries. U.S. ratification may persuade others to follow its example.

U.S. ratification will aid U.S. human rights activists. U.S. human rights workers would finally have the advantage of working for progress in human rights as citizens of a nation which accepted this fundamental human rights treaty. The effect of their work will be enhanced.

ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORTING U.S. RATIFICATION OF THE CONVENTION AGAINST TORTURE

(Partial list)

Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.
American Bar Association.
Amnesty International.
Armenian Assembly of America.
B'nai B'rith International.
B'nai B'rith Women.
Federal Bar Association.
Human Rights Watch.
International Human Rights Law Group.
Lawyers Committee for Human Rights.
Minnesota Lawyers International Human Rights Committee.
National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the USA.
National Council of Churches of the USA.
Procedural Aspects of International Law Institute.
United Nations Association of the USA.
U.S. Catholic Conference.

AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLER INCENTIVE AND RETENTION ACT

HON. DOUGLAS H. BOSCO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BOSCO. Mr. Speaker, today I have introduced legislation which I believe is crucial to remedying a chronic problem affecting the health and vitality of our Nation's air traffic control system. The Air Traffic Controller Incentive and Retention Act will attract and retain qualified personnel to handle safely and expeditiously the ever-increasing amount of air traffic in our congested skies. My bill is aimed at boosting system capacity through increased productivity of the key component of the air traffic control system: the controllers themselves.

It is time that we faced up to facts. The air traffic control work force has not been rebuilt to prestrike levels, especially in the number of full performance level controllers [FPL's]. For yet another year, the Federal Aviation Administration will fall approximately 2,000 FPL's short of the congressionally mandated level.

Under the FAA's pay demonstration project, we have been trying to attract and retain qualified controllers at some of our most besieged air traffic control facilities. However, in order for this project to succeed, controllers must often be siphoned off from other busy and strained facilities which have no controllers to spare. We only have so many fingers or controllers to plug the holes in this leaking dike, and we are running out of them.

In spite of promises to provide better screening and education, the deplorable washout percentage at the FAA's Oklahoma City Academy shows no sign of declining. More frightening still is the employment crisis that looms ahead. Beginning in 1995, almost half of the controller work force will be eligible to retire; there are few compelling reasons for these controllers to stay on. Sixty-thousand-dollar annual salaries are the exception, not the rule. Younger controllers are resigning at an alarming rate. Last year, at the Oakland Terminal Radar Approach Control, 17 FPL's quit—more than a third of their actual FPL work force.

Implementation of the new National Airspace Plan will require so-called bubble staffing to handle training on new equipment and concurrent operation of the air traff control [ATC] system. The ATC system cannot shut down while controllers learn to operate this new technology. And the so-called labor saving equipment of the NAS plan is contingent upon greater reliance on existing FAA personnel.

The lessons of the past 9 years are clear. While we have been fighting a series of protracted skirmishes at individual air traffic control facilities, we have been losing the overall battle to provide safe and effective and traffic control. We must be able to attract and retain the best possible people throughout the Nation, not just at a few locations. I believe my legislation will accomplish this goal by raising the controller pay differential from 5 to 15 percent, offering premium pay for Saturday work, and eliminating the age limitation on voluntary retirement for controllers with 20 years of service.

I believe that this money would be well spent. We are currently wasting millions of dollars on ill-suited controller candidates who fail at the academy or who cannot certify at their air traffic control facilities. We are losing to retirement and resignation, controllers in whom the Government has invested between $100,000 and $200,000 and whose value to our safety and the economy is inestimable. This is unacceptable.

Half measures and public relations campaigns will no longer do. We must attract candidates who have the qualifications and aptitude to make it through the academy and pass muster in the air traffic control system. We must ensure that controllers stay in that system as productive and active members doing what they do best: separating aircraft. We must build and sustain a vibrant work force committed to excellence in order to increase the margin of safety and system capacity. That is exactly what my legislation will do and I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

I would like to thank the National Air Traffic Controllers Association for their assistance over the past months. Their observations and expertise were most helpful and I look forward to working with them as well as the entire aviation community, and the U.S. flying public to make this legislation a reality.

CONGRESSIONAL SUPPORT FOR HEAD START JUSTIFIED

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, Head Start is a favorite program among Members of Congress, and for very good reason. It is a program that works! Studies of Head Start reveal that children who participate in the program do better in school, are less likely to drop out, and make better social and emotional adjustments to the learning environment.

Often times Members of Congress have to sell big ticker items to their constituents, who are concerned about the size of the Federal deficit and the damage that deficit may do to the financial security of future generations. The budget submitted by President Bush requested an increase of $500 million for Head Start, to a record high total of $1.9 billion. There is no question that whatever levels of funding for Head Start Congress approves will be Federal dollars well spent.

This Members' constituents in Beatrice, NE know about this effective program as well. Thanks to the following excellent editorial from the Beatrice Daily Sun, this Member's support of the Head Start Program at home is made all the easier.

[From the Beatrice Daily Sun, May 4, 1990]

LARGER HEAD START PROGRAM IMPORTANT

(By Kent Thomas)

Without any specific numbers to back me up, I still believe that the large majority of toddlers who attend and enjoy pre-school will go on to become above-average students and make a success of their lives.

Sure, there will be exceptions, for any number of reasons, but I think the generalization is valid.

The pre-school experience is probably more important for children of disadvantaged families than others because it provides a learning opportunity that might not otherwise be possible. Often, young people in poverty-stricken or broken homes don't get the chance to learn as much at home as they should.

Which brings us to the Head Start program, called by Helen Blank of the Children's Defense Fund "the most popular low-income program because of its unique nature in addressing so many problems at once." She goes on to cite studies that show participants in Head Start or similar programs are more likely to graduate from high school and become self-supporting and less likely to be arrested or become teen parents than are non-participants.

Since 1965 Head Start has been providing education, hot meals, medical and social services to low-income pre-schoolers and involving their parents in their education as volunteer helpers. Among its supporters is President Bush who in his fiscal 1991 budget has asked for an additional $500 million for Head Start, which he says will extend it to another 180,000 pre-schoolers. Head Start's present budget allows it to reach only about 453,000 children, less than 20 percent of those eligible, according to Ms. Blank.

Oregon Gov. Neil Goldschmidt is going a step further, proposing the Head Start be extended to every low-income child in his state, to be funded by 30 percent of state lottery revenues. Adopting the measure, Goldschmidt said in his recent state of the state address, would be "the biggest economic development decision Oregon is ever going to make."

FRED ACUNTO, CHARLTON HEIGHTS FIFTH GRADERS, SHOW CIVIC PRIDE

HON. GERALD B.H. SOLOMON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, there's a new spirit in the land, a spirit of civic involvement and awareness. I'd like to report on an example of this new spirit in the 24th District of New York.

Mr. Fred Acunto's fifth graders at Charlton Heights Elementary School in Ballston Lake, NY, are participating in a program Congress established and named "The Civic Achievement Award Program," which combines education and participation.

These fifth graders gave up many of their lunchtime recess hours and Saturdays to distribute to area residents 4,500 ribbons, suitable for attaching to car antennas as reminders to high school students to drive safely in this exciting but occasionally dangerous season of proms and graduation festivities.

Mr. Speaker, as I have said on this floor many times, my definition of a good citizen is someone who gives of himself to his community, who participates in the effort to make his community a better place.

Mr. Acunto is a friend of mine, and a member of my nonpartisan academy selection board, so I'm already quite aware of his dedication to the best interests of his young students. On June 21, the school will hold its awards assembly. Please join me in saluting Mr. Acunto and the outstanding fifth graders of his class. Such examples reassure us that with such young people as these, the future of this country is in good hands.

ALLEN ZIEGLER RECEIVES UNIVERSITY OF JUDAISM HONORARY DOCTORATE DEGREE

HON. MEL LEVINE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Allen Ziegler for his exceptional commitment to philanthropic causes. On May 27, Allen will be awarded an honorary Doctorate degree by the University of Judaism in recognition of his lifelong dedication to improving the quality of life in his community and his ongoing commitment to the university. The degree will be awarded to him a special convocation and dinner at Sinai Temple.

Over the years Allen Ziegler has proven himself to be a dedicated supporter of the Southern California Jewish community, and especially the University of Judaism. He is a member of the university's board of directors, he was the first recipient of the Eternal Light Award, and in 1985 was inducted in the prestigious Society of Fellows. His many gifts to the university also reflect his strong commitment to education and to the Jewish community: the Ruth and Allen Ziegler administration building on the Familian campus stands as a reminder of his generosity.

Other Jewish institutions including Camp Ramah, Cedars-Sinai and the City of Hope have also been the beneficiaries of his continuous commitment to the American Jewish community. Among other gifts of note, a University of Judaism scholarship and a cabin at Camp Ramah bear his name.

In addition to his philanthropic activities, Allen has been an extremely successful businessman. He is executive vice president of Westco Products, one of the Nation's largest bakery supply manufacturers. The firm has been run by the Ziegler family for over 45 years.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing Allen Ziegler's dedication to the university and to strengthening the Jewish community. Please join me in congratulating him on his receipt of an honorary Doctorate degree from the University of Judaism.

THE 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE CALIFORNIA CULTURAL ASSEMBLY

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to stand before my colleagues today and call their attention to the California Cultural Assembly on the occasion of their 10th anniversary.

For the past decade, the California Cultural Assembly has dedicated itself to the development and growth of multicultural artistic programs in Sacramento. The definite focus of the CCA is to convey a greater knowledge and appreciation of African-American artistic cultural contributions to the American landscape.

Among the many accomplishments of the California Cultural Assembly, they were the first to sponsor and present the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island Buildings "Move to Freedom"; founded and presented the first multicultural music concert in Oak Park in 1984; first nonprofit organization to present jazz clinics and concerts to area high school and community college students; founded the Black American Renaissance Day which is held annually at Cal-Expo during the State fair, and published a comprehensive yearly multicultural arts calendar containing monthly listings of programs produced by large and small nonprofit arts and cultural organizations.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in congratulating a decade of accomplishments which the citizens of Sacramento have benefited greatly from best wishes for continued successes in all future endeavors.

IN MEMORY OF L. NICHOLAS RUWE

HON. BILL SCHUETTE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SCHUETTE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this time to remember L. Nicholas Ruwe, a genuine role model and a man dedicated to serving his country.

I would like to share the remarks I gave at his recent funeral in Detroit. I hope these remarks help you feel the energy, patriotism, integrity, and character that motivated Nick Ruwe during his over 30 years of public service.

REMARKS

When Nancy asked me to join her, Les, and their many friends to talk with you about Nick today, I felt privileged to be able to share with you some memories of an extraordinary man who was one of the best—a man whose spirit, dedication to country, and zest for life we celebrate today.

Many here had the good fortune and were blessed to know Nick Ruwe. You had the benefit of growing up with him. You were able to fully appreciate his love for his family, his love for people, his love for the outdoors, and his love for the political arena and public service.

Together, Nick and Nancy Ruwe demonstrated to us every day the importance of living a life of friendship, loyalty, and service to others. They have been true partners, supporting and helping each other and sharing the fruits of their triumphs and successes together.

I had the privilege of coming to know Nick during his legacy of public service to America. I am grateful for having been in his company and for the opportunity to learn from a man who has walked with presidents, walked with kings, and is now walking with God.

As you know, Nick's career in public service spanned over thirty years. His talent and energy took him to great heights. He served in varied capacities with Presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan, and George Bush. You've heard their words today.

Nick served our nation proudly as an Ambassador to Iceland. Upon his departure, their president awarded him that nation's highest honor, the Order of the Falcon, the first U.S. Ambassador ever to receive such a tribute.

Secretary of State Jim Baker, a friend of Nick's and mine, told me: "Nick Ruwe was the epitome of loyalty, character, and integrity, the highest qualities in public service."

What will always be remembered by those of us here and others across the country, and indeed the world, was Nick's extraordinary loyalty to his friends. We reveled at this sense of humor, loved to hear his laughter and cannot help but smile at the memories of the times he laughed hardest at himself.

Nick Ruwe was a compassionate man, and shall we say, a competitor who enjoyed the battle for causes in which he believed. Nick was also known for getting the job done. He had his own style, his own way of doing things. Not brash, not glitzy. He got the job done.

This became clear at the very start of his political career. It was as a twenty-six year old raw rookie in politics that Nick Ruwe burst on the scene.

Nick hired on to the Nixon Presidential campaign in 1960 and was sent to Dallas to help coordinate an event. His new co-workers watched nervously as Nick strolled in carrying tennis rackets, skis, and summer and winter tuxedos, with valets and Louis Vuitton luggage.

"Hi, I'm Nick, the rally guy," He said by way of introduction. A call was quickly made to a trusted Nixon aide.

"Who did you send me?" A jittery campaign staffer asked as he attempted to explain who and what had just walked through the door.

"Well," Nixon's aide said, "This may be the worst we ever had, or the best we ever had. There's no way of telling."

Well, what was telling was the way Nick solved problems. The Nixon campaign had a problem. They needed to use a hall for their rally, but the building had been booked for a year in advance by the Ford Motor Company. Seemingly no amount of pleading could get the folks from Ford to free up the room.

Nick, learning of the situation, repeatedly asked if he could help. The campaign staffer finally said, "O.K., kid, give it a shot."

Nick quietly slipped out of the room. The Nixon campaign received a phone call a few minutes later from someone at Ford telling them that the company was giving up the hall for Nixon.

All heads turned toward Nick and finally someone asked: "What did you do?"

Nick shrugged and said "Oh nothing. I just called Henry."

"Henry who?" asked the jittery campaign staffer.

"Henry Ford. He's my neighbor."

From that moment on, everyone knew they had one of the best. Nick Ruwe was one of the best. Nick Ruwe will always be one of the best.

USIA SPONSORED RUSSIAN DELEGATION

HON. TED WEISS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to share with my colleagues Kenneth Jacobson's and Myrna Shinbaum's article entitled "Russian Writers Sow Seeds of Anti-Jewish Hatred." This article touches on an issue of utmost importance and urgency: anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union and the need to publicly condemn this dangerous attitude.

The article specifically discusses the United States Information Agency's recent sponsorship of a United States trip for a delegation of Soviet writers, some of whom have published works expressing anti-Semitic views. The USIA's sponsorship of such a group can be perceived as U.S. Government acceptance and/or endorsement of these writers' prejudices.

I urge my colleagues to read Mr. Jacobson's and Ms. Shinbaum's article:

RUSSIAN WRITERS SOW SEEDS OF ANTI-JEWISH HATRED

(By Kenneth Jacobson and Myrna Shinbaum)

(Mr. Jacobson is director of ADL's International Affairs Division; Ms. Shinbaum is director of the agency's Soviet Jewry Project)

The arrival in the United States in recent days of seven leading Russian nationalist writers has touched off a storm of protests. The Russian writers are here for a month-long stay as guests of the United States Information Agency.

Several of the writers, whose literary ability is unquestioned, are either themselves anti-Semites or have condoned anti-Semitism.

In the U.S.S.R. today, the media—like much of Soviet society—is polarized. Mostly it is supportive, albeit to varying degrees, of Gorbachev's reforms. However, a number of periodicals, in particular literary ones, a genre that has traditionally played an important role in Russian public life, have adopted hardline Russian nationalist—and anti-Semitic—positions. The most influential of these are the monthlies Nash Sovremennik and Molodaya Gvardiya and the weekly Literaturnaya Rossiya.

Literaturnaya Rossiya is an organ of the Russian Writers Union, which is a body torn apart in recent months by infighting between nationalist and liberal writers and now dominated by the former. The proceedings of the last plenums of the Union (the sixth in November 1989 and the seventh in March 1990), reproduced almost in full by Literaturnaya Rossiya, demonstrate the depth of anti-Jewish (nominally "anti-Zionist") feeling among many Russian writers. A lengthy "Letter from Russia's Writers," signed by no less than 74 authors—many of them of considerable standing in the literary world and in public affairs generally—is an outcry against the alleged defamation of Russia and the Russian people. Once again, the Jews are singled out as the principal target. The 74 signatories lambaste what they see as a pro-Jewish bias in the leading Soviet mass media, where, they claim, there has taken root "an uncritical, sugary-sweet and virtually servile attitude to Jewry, past and present, local and foreign, and including imperialists and Zionists."

The authors are vehemently opposed to any new law against anti-Semitism in the U.S.S.R. Such a law, they claim, would place the Jews in a privileged position: when legislation of this kind existed in the 1920s and 1930s, it was "essentially A Law About the Genocide of the Russian People." For good measure, the writers allege that "Zionists" bear direct responsibility for many pogroms, including pogroms against Jews, and for "trimming the dry branches" of their own nation's trunk in Auschwitz and Dachau and in Vilnius. In other words, the Jews were accomplices in their own Holocaust.

As it turns out, the three literary anti-Semitic publications are well represented by the Russian nationalist writers who are currently on the U.S.I.A.-sponsored visit. Stanislav Kunyaev is chief editor of Nash Sovremennik. Ernst Safonov is chief editor of Literaturnaya Rossiya, and Pavel Gorelov is one of the editors of Molodaya Gvardiya. Furthermore, among the 74 signatories of the "Letter From Russian Writers" are three of those writers now in the United States—Stanislav Kunyaev, Oleg Mikhaylov and Viktor Likhonosov.

Stanislav Kunyaev made a personal contribution to the nationalist debate at the seventh plenum of the Russian Writers' Union this March. According to Literaturnaya Rossiya (March 30, 1990,) Kunyaev remarked sarcastically that Yunost, a liberal literary journal, "strengthened Soviet nationality relations by, for instance, publishing Galich in one issue, Korzhavin in another, Brodsky in a third, and Alsyonov in a fourth—producing in this way a peculiar multi-national picture." It so happens that all of these authors—Aleksandr Galich, Naum Korzhavin, Iosif Brodsky and Vasily Aksyonov—are (or were, in the case of Galich, who is dead) of Jewish origin.

Not satisfied with this observation, Kunyaev went on to offer adviced to Rukh, the Ukrainian national movement, an organization which has, in fact, issued a declaration condemning anti-Semitism: "Do not be puppets in the hands of a third force, Kunyaev warned, do not destroy our ancient Russian-Ukrainian lines, and do not dance to the tune of those who are as indifferent to Russian culture as they are to Ukrainian culture."

For U.S. officials, who offered support for these visiting writers, there is clearly a need for greater scrutiny of such guests of a U.S. agency.

For the Soviet Union, the question is one of education. Here in the United States, the very fact that individuals or organizations are exposed as anti-Semitic goes a long way to countering any influence they may have. The American public long ago rejected anti-Semitism. In the Soviet Union, the story is less clear; with a long tradition of anti-Semitism, and with the absence of a process of education to combat the problem, views enunciated by these writers are not rejected as illegitimate.

In the long run, if the Soviets are truly to enter the Western world, as Gorbachev envisions, they must undergo a process of self-education and of educating the public about democratic values and the evil that is anti-Semitism. Only then can we talk about winning the battle against this ancient disease.

REFORMING THE FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE PROGRAM

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, the current Federal Crop Insurance Program is not serving the taxpayer or the farmer as well as it should. Low participation rates, which have been artifically inflated by disaster assistance requirements recently, are a prime indicator of this fact.

A viable crop insurance program has disproportionately large value to Great Plains States such as Nebraska due to the greater extremes in climate and the greater likelihood of localized droughts as compared to the eastern Corn Belt and Southeastern States. Sparsely settled States of the Great Plains, with few representatives in Congress, would be hard pressed to routinely get disaster legislation passed for the relatively frequent drought and severe weather problems prevalent in the Great Plains.

Additionally, disaster legislation is a poor substitute for a good insurance program. For example, such special disaster legislation, if enacted with some frequency, actually serves to reduce participation rates and hence the viability of both public and private crop insurance.

The administration's proposal to eliminate Federal crop insurance funding from the 1991 budget proposal should be viewed as a challenge from the administration to the House Agriculture Committee to develop a new and innovative Crop Insurance Program. The Congressional Commission for the Improvement of the Federal Crop Insurance Program, authorized by Congress in 1988, has developed a number of recommendations, which it presented to the executive branch and Congress in the spring of 1989. In April 1989, the Commission provided 26 short-term recommendations to the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation [FCIC]. Twenty-two of these recommendations were implemented by the FCIC in the 1990 Crop Insurance Program. This record of action has been totally ignored by many FCIC critics.

In late July 1989, the Commission made 24 additional longer term recommendations to be implemented by the FCIC. Of these, there has been some definitional disagreement over the number implemented, with critics claiming that three were implemented, while FCIC claims that five have been implemented. Some action has been taken on seven of the recommendations, and no action has been taken on five. Twelve of the recommendations require legislation to be fully implemented.

Due to concern and confusion over the status of the 1991 Crop Insurance Program, the FCIC has issued statements recently which clarify prospects for its future existence. The FCIC has acknowledged that decisions concerning the continuation of the FCIC will be made by the Congress. The administration can propose that the program be eliminated, but only the Congress can act to actually eliminate it.

Proposed legislation is currently before the House Agriculture Committee to reform the Federal Crop Insurance Program. This Member encourages his colleagues on the Agriculture Committee to give these proposals their full consideration and reform the Federal Crop Insurance Program to serve the needs of the farmer as well as the taxpayer. I submit the following editorial from the May 4, 1990, Omaha World Herald for the RECORD.

A SENSIBLE MOVE IS MADE ON CROP INSURANCE ISSUE

The federal government made a wise decision on continuing to underwrite crop insurance while the future of the program is being debated in Washington.

Winter wheat growers will be able to buy the subsidized insurance for the crop they will plant this fall. With 1991 crop insurance being sold now, the extension of the federal subsidy was timely.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter had proposed that either crop insurance or a crop-disaster program be funded, but not both. President Bush had suggested eliminating crop insurance. Congress has been studying the program with an eye toward making changes.

In the contest between disaster relief and crop insurance, the latter seems clearly superior in many respects. It allows prudent farmers to decide the level of risk they want to assume for the outcome of their planting year. A farmer worried about drought or hail would invest in the subsidized crop insurance; one willing to risk the weather would not.

Disaster relief is a different situation entirely. It is a political Christmas tree in many ways, given or withheld at the whim of Congress. Which areas it covers, whom it protects and the amount of protection are all subject to debate and bargaining.

Last year, disaster relief was supposedly geared to the drought in the Midwest, but about $1 billion in relief went to farmers in other areas for "disasters" as diverse as insect damage and a growth-delaying cold snap—things that farmers have for years been considering the normal perils of agriculture.

In addition, disaster relief depends on wide-scale problems—storm fronts that unleash multiple tornadoes or wide-spread hail, for example. If a small hailstorm flattens the corn in two or three fields, there's a good chance the area wouldn't be declared a disaster and no aid would be forthcoming.

Crop insurance, however, would likely cover the damage.

About half the crop acres in the country were insured last year. The federal government spends $450 million to $500 million a year on the program. Contrast that with the cost of the disaster aid program in 1989: $3.9 billion. Or the total amount spent in the 1980s for disaster relief: $8 billion.

Farming has always been an uncertain way of earning a living. It is a dependent on many things that a farmer can't control: rain, sunshine, north winds, early frosts, tornadoes, hail. Congress and the Bush administration are doing the proper thing by looking at what the federal government's role should be in protecting agriculture against the uncertainties that are a normal part of doing business.

In the meantime, however, giving a short-term extension to the insurance in subsidy for the coming crop year will allow farmers to make informed choices as they plan their planting programs.

WHY I AM PROUD OF AMERICA

HON. CHUCK DOUGLAS

OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to enter into the RECORD the text of a speech written by Ryan Neil Hansen, of Amherst, NH, for the Veterans of Foreign Wars' "Voice of Democracy" program. The topic of the speech was "Why I Am Proud of America," and it embodies the spirit and meaning of the freedoms we have in this country that we too often take for granted. I hope that more of today's young people feel about America the way that Ryan Hansen does.

WHY I AM PROUD OF AMERICA

(By Ryan Neil Hansen, New Hampshire Winner, 1989/90 VFW Voice of Democracy Scholarship Program)

The air was crisp and fresh, and I rolled down the car window to let more of it in. My best friend had just picked me up to go to the high school to watch our girls varsity soccer teams defend their undefeated record. When we pulled into the parking lot, we were just in time to catch up with a few more of our friends as they were walking over to the field. We talked about the events of the night before and of what we might want to do that evening. A breeze blew against us and made my flannel shirt wave like the flags in the center of town on the Fourth of July. The sun shone across the field and on those who occupied it and we stood at the sidelines cheering on our team. Later we would saunter to the other side of the field where the players parents sat. We knew most of the girls on the field and their families and could openly chat and joke with them as we watched the game. It was a great day.

Later that day we would find ourselves back at the school standing with the same friends and a couple newcomers, but this time to watch our football team attempt to break their losing streak. The sun was hotter now and I removed my loose fitting shirt to reveal a t-shirt and a pair of arms losing their summer tan. I glanced at the scoreboard which reminded me that we were losing by 14 points. But just to the side of it I noticed how the trees had begun their change in color. The reds and oranges blended in with what green still held on. The football team lost, but fall was here and it was still a great day. Why am I proud of America? Not for its foreign policy or its position as a superpower. I am proud of America because of its individual communities. The same thing that was going on in my town was happening in towns and cities all over the nation. People everywhere gathered to watch their teams play or get a head start on their fall raking or went to the bank or put in a couple of extra hours at the office. And in every one of these towns, whether these people were aware of it or not, they cared about their community. It is in these communities that these people will grow up, wed, raise their children, and retire. And between these events, these same people will add to the community by holding an office in their local government, volunteering at a youth center, or simply speaking out and letting their opinion be known on an issue facing their town. It is the combination of these seemingly small acts that built and maintain the strong base of our United States, and only when people stop to truly care will that base deteriorate. Why am I proud of America? Not because of its position as a key member of the United Nations or its importance in the NATO alliance. I am proud of America because of the model we've become to nations and peoples struggling towards democracy. While Americans sat down to the first pre-season baseball games, the students and workers of China gathered and even gave their lives in Tienanmen Square. And in the middle of this great deluge of protestors was a model of the Statue of Liberty, a symbol of all of their hopes and aspirations for the future. A symbol that Americans have accepted as a symbol of Liberty for the past 100 years, was now being adopted by a country half way around the world in their struggle for freedom. Why am I proud of America? Because of its peoples ability to overcome personal reservations and help out when the call comes. When the earthquake left the Armenian people of the Soviet Union devastated and without homes or food two weeks before Christmas, the call for help went out. And while Congress struggled to appropriate relief aid for the area, Americans everywhere set aside their political biases and became partisans of humanity. Soon the problem wasn't a lack of food or money to help these people, but instead an incredible over abundance. Another example of the American peoples willingness to help others can be seen in the number of people who volunteer their time for the fire department or rescue squads. The scenario that these people play out every day is portrayed by the commercial for the Red Cross on Television. The farmer being awakened by a telephone call in the early morning hours telling him of some emergency in town that requires his assistance as a volunteer. He jumps out of bed, splashes some water on his face, jumps in his pickup truck and rushes off to the scene. After returning, he is greeted at the door by his wife and children, and after rustling the hair of his son, he turns to his wife as she says, "You know Frank, you really are a good guy". The fact is that all over our nation there are millions of good guys, all lending a hand in their towns when needed and this help is vital in the wake of such disasters as Hurricane Hugo or the San Francisco Earthquake. It is these men and women who together make successful and thriving towns. And it is these towns that together make great states. And it is these 50 great states that together make up this country that I am indeed very proud of. It is the good people that make up the United States that make the United States great and it is the children and grandchildren of these people that will allow this tradition to continue gracefully for many years to come. So why am I proud of America? Because of its people standing for what they believe in, trying to make a better life for themselves and their families and consequently making their community a better place. Whether they are aware of it or not these people are constantly reinforcing the already mighty base that supports the ideals and values that are the United States of America.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON SMALL BUSINESS

HON. JOHN J. LaFALCE

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. LAFALCE. Mr. Speaker, today I am pleased to introduce on behalf of the Nation's small businesses the White House Conference on Small Business Authorization Act. I am very pleased that Representative SILVIO CONTE has joined me in cosponsoring this measure.

I believe that it is especially appropriate to introduce the bill this week which we are celebrating as "National Small Business Week."

Mr. Speaker, this will be the third White House Conference on Small Business. The first one was held in 1980, and another was convened in 1986. Both of these conferences were highly successful and brought together knowledgeable small businesses to deliberate and propose solutions to the problems confronting the small business community today. I believe that the key to success of these prior conferences was that each was a one time event.

A White House Conference, a meeting convened by the President of the United States, is an extra ordinary occasion and it should continue to be so regarded. It is for this reason, that I believe they should continue to be convened only as specifically legislated. They should not simply become another periodic meeting and thus lose their character and stature.

Under the bill I have introduced, we would have a national conference in Washington in early 1994. The national conference would be preceded by State conferences in 1993. The overall conference activities would be directed by a commission of 11 members appointed by the President.

I would also point out, Mr. Speaker, that the bill provides for paying an estimated $5 million in administrative expenses of the conference, but it expressly prohibits paying any expenses for conference delegates. Small businesses which wish to participate must pay their own way. This has been the system for the two prior conferences, and I believe that it too is an important element in the success of the conferences as it helps to ensure that we bring together a group of individuals who are willing to spend their own time and money in order to provide us with input on their needs and problems.

Although the time remaining this year is short, it is my intent to hold hearings on this legislation next month and I am hopeful that the committee will present this bill to the House for its consideration in the very near future.

For the information of my colleagues, I am attaching a summary of the bill.

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS OF WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON SMALL BUSINESS AUTHORIZATION ACT

AUTHORIZATION OF CONFERENCE

Section 2 directs the President to conduct a National White House Conference on Small Business between January 1 and April 1, 1994. The National Conference will be preceded by at least one conference in each state, with the state conferences to commence December 1, 1992.

Subsection (b) authorizes pre-conference activities in order to prepare for the national conference.

Subsection (c) requires that the national conference shall be conducted under the general supervision and direction of a commission established by section 5.

PURPOSE OF CONFERENCE

Section 3 states that the purpose of the national conference is to increase public awareness of the essential contribution of small business; to identify small business problems; to examine the status of minorities and women as small business owners; to assist small business in carrying out its role as the nation's job creator; to assemble small businesses to develop specific and comprehensive recommendations for executive and legislative action; and to review the status of recommendations adopted at the 1986 conference.

CONFERENCE PARTICIPANTS

Section 4 provides that any interested small business shall be admitted to state conferences without the imposition of any fees except minimal registration fees and the cost of any meals.

Subsection (b) provides for the election of delegates to the national conference at the state conferences. In addition, it authorizes each Governor, Member of Congress and Senator to appoint one delegate and the President to appoint 100 delegates.

COMMISSION

Section 5 establishes a White House Conference on Small Business Commission of 11 members appointed by the President. The Commissioners are assigned the responsibility for the overall preparation and conduct of the conference.

Subsection (b) requires that at least 7 of the 11 commissioners be small business owners, employees or officers.

Subsection (c) provides that not more than 6 commissioners shall be of the same political party and that none of them shall be Federal employees.

Subsection (d) provides that the terms of appointment for the commissioners shall expire on the date they file their report.

Subsection (e) authorizes the President to fill any vacancy on the Commission in the same manner in which the original appointment was made.

Subsection (f) provides that commissioners shall serve without pay except that they shall receive reimbursement for their expenses.

Subsection (g) provides that 6 commissioners shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Subsection (h) authorizes the Commission to appoint an Executive Director and such other staff as it deems appropriate.

Subsection (i) authorizes the Commission to hire temporary employees.

Subsection (j) authorizes Federal departments and agencies to detail employees to the Commission.

Subsection (k) authorizes the General Services Administration to provide administrative support services to the Commission.

PLANNING AND ADMINISTRATION OF CONFERENCE

Section 6 authorizes the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to provide assistance for the conference and authorizes the Administrator to contract, as needed, to assist in the conference.

Subsection (b) authorizes the SBA Chief Counsel for Advocacy to provide background materials for the conference.

Subsection (c) requires delegates to the national conference to pay their own expenses.

REPORTS

Section 7 requires a final report from the Conference to be submitted to the President and the Congress within four months after the national conference.

FOLLOW-UP ACTION

Section 8 requires the Small Business Administration to report annually to Congress for three years after the Conference Report on the status and implementation of the findings and recommendations in the report.

AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS

Section 9 authorizes the appropriation of $5 million to carry out the conference.

Subsection (b) prohibits the use of other appropriated funds to carry out the conference.

LEOMINSTER, MA—250TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. RICHARD E. NEAL

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I take this opportunity to salute the people of Leominster, MA, on the occasion of the 250th anniversary of the founding of the city. Surrounded by the rolling hills of north-central Massachusetts, Leominster is nestled into a valley some 40 miles west of Boston and 20 miles north of Worcester. The Leominster 250th Anniversary Committee has worked hard to prepare for an anniversary celebration that will start with a major parade in September. This historic occasion promises to make for quite a memorable year in the Leominster area as the city celebrates this historic occasion.

Leominster's development dates back nearly three centuries to 1701 when the sagamore of the Nashua Indians, George Tahanto, sold the land that would soon make up the city we honor today to 102 settlers. As the area grew in population it became apparent that the community needed self-government and a name. On June 23, 1740 the Royal Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, Jonathan Belchor, incorporated the town, and its name was chosen in honor of Leominster, in Herefordshire, England. The town grew quickly as many sought the land to farm. Farming was the primary industry for the first 50 years of its existence. The community's economy soon diversified, with manufacturing taking an active role in the shaping of America. Obadiah Hills started the manufacturing of combs from his kitchen in 1775 in congruence with the Revolution. Soon to follow were factories that produced paper, tin ware, and hair sieves. Leominster has since developed into the "Pioneer Plastic City," with more than 100 firms devoted to plastics and supporting industries. Not only did Leominster take a lead in manufacturing, but it also contributed to the revolutionary spirit. In town meetings during the years just prior to the American Revolution the community passed a resolution that declared, "We must, we can, and we will be free. This is our God-given right. We shall forever assert it and subject ourselves only to the Supreme Being who formed us free."

As is the case of many great cities, the history of Leominster has been a history of diverse peoples. Its inhabitants take pride in their different backgrounds, and have worked together to build Leominster into the vibrant community that it is today. Many great Americans have been born or have lived in Leominster; the legendary Johnny Appleseed; John Chapman, the father of the Massachusetts Public School System, and arguably, all American public schools; James Gordon Carter, builder and vice president of duPont Co.; Bernard W. Doyle, and father of our worldwide navy; Senator David Walsh.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to mention the people who make up the Leominster 250th Anniversary Committee: honorary chairman Mayor Stephen A. Perla, chairman James Lanciani Jr., co-chairman Evelyn B. Hachey, and co-chairman Victor Leger. This group, and many others have put together an impressive celebration for the people of Leominster. I intend to join the many people of central Massachusetts who will enjoy this joyous occasion on a fine 250 years of achievement.

At this point, I insert the document entitled: "Leominster, MA—250th anniversary":

LEOMINSTER, MA.—250TH ANNIVERSARY, 1740-1990

(By Evelyn B. Hackey, historian)

Leominster is situated in the northern part of Worcester County, Massachusetts. Five miles southeast from Fitchburg, twenty miles north from Worcester and forty-five miles from Boston. The city is irregular in form, with an area about twenty-nine square miles.

The official seal of the City of Leominster was adopted at the City Council meeting on December 26, 1916. It shows a Lion, an Indian, a Quaker and City Hall with the setting sun in the background. Agriculture and other symbols of the City are also included. The design was from the studios of Henry C. Grover of Boston, Massachusetts.

THE CITY MOTTO

The basis of Leominster's progress and faith in the future may be found in resolutions passed in Town Meetings during the years just prior to the American Revolution: "We must, We can, and We will be free. This is our God-Given Right. We shall forever assert it and subject ourselves only to the Supreme Being who formed us free."

In April, 1975, the Leominster City Council passed a petition making the first eight words of this resolution our City Motto: "We must, we can, and we will be free."

Leominster was originally a part of "The Additional Grant to Lancaster." George Tahanto, the sagamore of the Nashaway, sold the land to the proprietors, one hundred and two men and one woman, in 1701. The act of confirmation was passed by the "Great and General Court" or Assembly for Her Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England in 1713.

Gershom Houghton built the first house in Leominster in 1725. A frame structure of hewn oak timbers. It was low-studded, with the roof on the back side reaching nearly to the ground, a common style of architecture in those times.

The chimney was built mostly of stones and according to tradition, Mrs. Houghton assisted her husband in its construction by carrying stones in her homespun apron. Here in the home of Gershom and Elizabeth Houghton was first heard the hum of the spinning wheel and the pound of the loom. Here was born the first family, a son, Abiarthur, and a daughter named Tamar. Gershom died on April 3, 1757.

The first house was soon followed by other settlers building their homes until the needs of the community demanded self-government and a name. On June 23, 1740, the town was incorporated and the name of Leominster was chosen by Jonathan Belchor, the Royal Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in honor of Leominster, in Herefordshire, England.

The first Town Meeting, on July 9, 1740, was held at the house of Jonathan White, Innholder. Town officers were elected. The second Town Meeting was held September 1 of the same year, at which time the town was to "build a bridge across the river where the road is laid out to said river." Forty pounds was raised to build this bridge, and the sum could be "worked out" (by labor in lieu of taxes). The "Great Bridge" was the bridge over the Nashua River in North Leominster.

The meeting of December 5th referred to the building of a meetinghouse, built in 1742 and located in the northeast corner of what now is the Pine Grove Cemetery. The first school was close by. The training field, now Carter Park, was on the other side of the stone wall and was a gift to the Town of Leominster from Oliver Carter in 1754.

The first burial ground for the early settlers was a tract of land donated by Jonathon Wilson prior to the purchase of land by the town for a burial ground. The second cemetery is now Pine Grove and was situated in the yard of the first meeting house, on land bought from Ebenezer Houghton.

Before the Revolution, the inhabitants of Leominster were devoted to farming, raising vegetables, wheat, and flax. Little manufacturing was carried on although there were several instances on a small scale. Two of the early settlers, Jonas Kendall and Thomas Wilder, manufactured potash; Ebenezer Wilder had a grist mill and Josiah White, a saw mill.

In 1713, Mark Lincoln built a fullum mill where home-loomed cloth was dressed. The year 1775 saw the first combs made in Leominster. The first to make combs from horn was Obadiah Hille, who used the kitchen of an old house on Pleasent Street, the work being done by hand. According to the John Buss Diary, "Elisha Wilder raised a cooper shop on November 13, 1790." The first paper mill was constructed in 1796, followed by tin ware, brooms, and hair sieves. All gained a degree of success but "Comb Smithing," as it was called at the time, has always held the place of honor.

The root of the Leominster Public Library began in the year 1763, with a small group of people in a town of 800 buying one hundred books. It was known as the "Leominster Social Library." In 1856, the first public library was established. Mr. Francis Tinker was appointed the first librarian and he kept the books in his store. He received $50.00 a year for his services. In 1863, the new librarian, C.W. Carter, a lawyer, kept the collection in his office. In 1864, a J. Henry Kendall gave the town $5000.00 for the formation of a public library with the understanding that a proper place be found for the books. An addition was added to the 1853 Town Hall and a permanent home was established for the Leominster Public Library. With a gift of $27,500 from the Andrew Carnegie Foundation and contributions by the town and individuals, the present library building opened in 1910. A modern addition was constructed in 1966.

Stage coaches began driving through Leominster as early as 1790, and a Post route was established in 1795 from Boston to Charlestown, New Hampshire via Leominster. The Fifth Massachusetts Turnpike (1779) extended from the Kendall Tavern in Leominster to Northfield. it was still paying dividends in 1827. The first train owned by the Fitchburg Railroad Company, funded by Leominster native Alvah Crocker and others, came through North Leominster in 1845. In 1850, the Fitchburg-Worcester Railroad, later known as the Old Colony Line, passed through the center of Leominster. Horse trolleys were first used in 1888, and the following year the first electric trolley came into use. The new century brought automobiles into fashion and roads were surfaced with macadam.

Airplanes came into use after World War 1 and Leominster had its own airport. In 1943, the Airport was transferred to the City of Fitchburg in exchange for a sum of money and a parcel of land known as No-Town.

In the early part of the eighteenth century it was the law in Massachusetts that when a town had a population of fifty families, a school must be established. Consequently, when Leominster reached that size in 1748, it was voted "to build a schoolhouse, and set it a ye meeting-house in said town, 24 feet long, 18 feet wide, and 7 feet stud", so it was that in 1749 a school house was erected near the first meeting-house which was located on the northeast corner of what now is Pine Grove Cemetery, adjoining Carter Park.

In 1776, Leominster reached a population of one hundred families and, to meet State requirements, established its first grammar school in the schoolhouse at the center, which necessitated conducting the common school in private homes. To remedy these conditions, it was voted, in 1767, to erect three more schoolhouses. Seven additional schoolhouses were built in 1791, and one more added in 1803.

The High School, with forty pupils and one teacher, opened on May 22, 1850, in Gardner Hall, which stood on the site of the present City Hall. The first Principal, in fact the entire faculty, was Josiah S. Phillips, whose salary was $500.00 a year. The Field High School was erected in 1865. This building continued to house the high school pupils of Leominster until 1905 when the High School (later called the Carter Junior High School) was built.

Leominster has six (6) public elementary schools and there are three (3) parochial elementary schools. In addition, there is one Junior High School and a multi-million dollar high school and a Trade High School. Large additions to three elementary schools and the Trade High School is under construction with a completion date of early summer.

Approximately 70 percent of the graduates go on to some form of higher education after leaving Leominster High School and graduates are accepted at the finest colleges and universities in the country.

MONUMENT SQUARE HISTORIC DISTRICT, 1982

The Monument Square Historic District is located in the geographic heart of downtown Leominster. It sits sheltered within the arm of the Monoosnock Brook, a tributary of the Nashua River and midway along the rising slope of the Nashua Valley. The cultural centrality of the district results from the intersection of several principal thoroughfares. Main, West, Mechanic, and Central streets, and the adjacent Old Colony Railroad Line.

Most of the structures in the Monument Square District date from the late 19th and early 20th centuries, illustrating Leominster's period of greatest industrial development. The district involves approximately 30 acres and 36 properties.

Concentrating in Monument Square District are Leominster's first examples of commercial, ecclesiastical and civic architecture. At the southern edge of the district is a small triangular common. Civic and religious buildings are concentrated around the common, on Park, West and Church Streets. Main Street, in contrast, is characterized as a commercial streetscape. The rising grade immediately west of the district encompasses some of the best residential streets, where many of Leominster's leading manufacturers located their mansions. The area north is set off by Carter park and the original town center, site of the first meeting-house.

Nearly all of the buildings are constructed of red brick with granite trim. Building height generally ranges from two to four stories. Principal alterations to buildings in the Monument Square District consist of applied storefronts on the commercial buildings. Civic and religious structures remain unaltered and in excellant condition. Most retain their original use as well.

JOHN CHAPMAN (JOHNNY APPLESEED)

John Chapman, better known as Johnny Appleseed, was born in Leominster, Massachusetts on September 26, 1774, the son of Nathaniel and Elizabeth Symond Chapman.

Town records show the birth of Elizabeth (1770), John (1774), and Nathaniel Jr. (1776). They lived on what is now Johnny Appleseed Lane.

It is believed that he started his westward pilgrimage at about the age of twenty-three.

Johnny was not a scatterer of appleseeds as many have supposed. He was a practical nurseryman. He planted seeds, set out orchards, and sold or gave trees to the pioneers. When he died, one of his numerous nurseries contained 15,000 seedlings.

Deeply religious, he became a self-appointed missionary, sharing his tract and his Bible with the settlers who listened to him; he followed the Sweden-borgian Christian faith. His love for his neighbor made him an accepted peace maker between the Indian and the settler. His wondering route through this Midwest is, today, dotted with many monuments erected to the memory of this man who fulfilled the Biblical requirements: to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with his God.

He died in Fort Wayne, Indiana on March 18th, 1845.

SECURITY CONCERNS IN THE PACIFIC

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, the United States provides an enormous amount of assistance to the Philippine Government. In part this is provided as part of leasing agreements for Clark Air Force Base and the Subic Bay naval facility. But in part the United States assistance to the Philippines is due to the enthusiastic support President Aquino has enjoyed from many in Congress and the Reagan and Bush administrations. There certainly has been a widely based American desire to assist Mrs. Aquino as she leads her Nation along the path of democracy. Thus, in recent years the United States has been exceedingly generous toward the Philippines. American assistance has gone to support the economy, to improve food production and distribution, to enhance the health and education systems, to assist their military combat guerrilla forces, and for numerous other purposes.

The bases in the Philippines clearly do remain important for United States national security. But despite the importance of Clark AFB and Subic Bay, I believe the United States should not remain there if the presence of our bases is unwanted. President Aquino's calculated snub of Secretary of Defense Richard Cheney during his visit was particularly disturbing. President Aquino's behavior hardly seemed to be that of a good friend and ally. Rather, it seemed to reflect a willingness to punish the United States if the ever-greater Philippine demands for United States foreign assistance are not met. Under these circumstances, the United States should begin to actively consider alternatives to our current basing agreements.

A recent editorial published in the April 18 edition of the Omaha World-Herald entitled "A Friend Emerges in the Pacific," provides important insights into the United States relationship with the Philippines. The article recognizes the increasingly unfriendly attitude of President Aquino, and it suggests that Singapore might provide replacement bases as an alternative. According to the World-Herald, Singapore's Prime Minister has offered aviation and port facilities in his nation if the United States is forced to leave the Philippines. As the World-Herald notes—

If the political or financial price of staying in the domain of Cory Aquino should become too high, it is reassuring to know that the United States may have a workable alternative.

This article offers a useful alternative and viewpoint in regards to our concerns in the Philippines, and I would request that it be inserted into the RECORD.

[From the Omaha World-Herald, Apr. 18, 1990]

A FRIEND EMERGES IN THE PACIFIC

As the Philippine government of Corazon Aquino becomes outwardly less friendly to the United States, a new friend is stepping forward to take its place. The government of Singapore said it would provide replacement bases for U.S. forces if the Aquino government cancels the U.S. lease on two major bases in the Philippines.

The negative attitude displayed in recent months by the Aquino government and a number of Philippine citizens makes the offer by Singapore attractive.

Singapore's prime minister, Lee Kuan Yew, said the United States could preserve a Pacific presence by using aviation and port facilities in his country if forced to leave Clark Air Base and the Subic Bay Naval Complex in the Philippines. The offer was made to a congressional group led by Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., who is head of the subcommittee on military installations of the House Armed Services Committee.

The representatives said they were impressed by Singapore's Paya Lebar Air Base and port facilities. Rep. Schroeder said: "We have surplus capacity in Guam and in Japan. Singapore has excellent shipping facilities. While we could not duplicate Subic Bay at one site, it could be duplicated by using several locations."

The Philippines offers the best location from which to maintain a U.S. presence in the Asia-Pacific area. But relations with the Philippines have deteriorated since Mrs. Aquino snubbed Defense Secretary Richard Cheney during his visit to Manila in February. Among other things, Mrs. Aquino's government has demanded more U.S. aid in exchange for the use of the bases.

The United States rented Subic Bay, a repair facility for the 7th Fleet, and Clark, home of the 13th Air Force, for $900 million until 1991. The installations are home to about 17,000 servicemen and 23,000 dependents. They employ about 68,000 Filipinos.

With the investment the United States has in the Philippines, and the long record of friendship between the two countries, renewal of the lease under mutually acceptable arrangements would be preferable. However, if the political or financial price of staying in the domain of Cory Aquino should become too high, it is reassuring to know that the United States may have a workable alternative.

THE ALZHEIMER'S ASSISTANCE, RESEARCH, AND EDUCATION ACT

HON. OLYMPIA J. SNOWE

OF MAINE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, today I am pleased to join my colleagues, Representatives ROYBAL, WAXMAN, STARK, DOWNEY, RINALDO, REGULA, and BRUCE, in introducing the comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Education Act. This bill is a major bipartisan, House-Senate proposal based on two legislative initiatives which we introduced earlier in this Congress. The bill also reauthorizes Public Law 99-660, enacted through legislation which Senator GRASSLEY and I introduced in 1986.

The mental, physical, and financial devastation which Alzheimer's disease inflicts upon its victims, including the hidden victim, the family caregiver, has concerned me for many years. Since 1983, I have been actively involved in holding hearings, sponsoring forums and introducing legislation regarding biomedical research on Alzheimer's disease and family care-givers.

In recent months, newspaper headlines have highlighted research findings which indicate an almost staggering potential magnitude of human and fiscal costs associated with Alzheimer's disease. It is now estimated that the disease strikes about 4 million victims, almost double the number previously thought. That means that more than 10 percent of people over age 65, and almost half of the elderly over age 85—the fastest growing age group—have probable Alzheimer's disease. If biomedical researchers don't find a way to treat and prevent the disease, the number of Alzheimer's victims could increase to 12 million to 14 million by the year 2040.

The impact of the "aging of the aged" could also cause Medicare and long-term care costs to escalate enormously by the year 2040, according to the lead article in the May 2, 1990 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. The authors state that the costs of care for moderate to severe dementia could "approach the magnitude of current federal deficits" by 2040, when large numbers of baby boomers will be in their 80s. The researchers concluded that, in today's difficult financial climate, we must look for long-term solutions for projected increases in health care costs—such as research for preventing and/or curing the most common cause of dementia, Alzheimer's disease.

As the fourth leading cause of death of adults in the United States, Alzheimer's disease becomes even more tragic when we consider its toll on caregivers. Caring for Alzheimer's patients has often been called the 36-hour day because of its tremendously demanding emotional and physical burdens and stress caused by the disease. Particularly ominous are recent research findings which indicate that older caregivers may suffer permanent immune damage from this stress. As a progressive, degenerative disease lasting anywhere from 2 to 20 years, it irreversibly attacks the victim's brain, thinking, memory and behavior. Destroyed and disoriented, Alzheimer's victims in the final stages are totally unable to care for themselves. As such, families bear the major cost of care for Alzheimer patients, currently estimated at almost $90 billion a year.

The comprehensive bill which we are introducing today establishes a national commitment for expanded biomedical research on Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, improves care for its victims and provides assistance for family caregivers. As the only real hope for preventing, treating and curing Alzheimer's disease and related dementias is through biomedical research, the bill doubles the Federal funding effort to $300 million for 1991, increasing to $500 million by 1993.

Researchers on Alzheimer's disease are now making rapid advances and are on the edge of potential major breakthroughs. However, the Federal investment for Alzheimer's research is seriously underfunded as compared to that for other major diseases. Currently, only about 1 of 5 of investigator-initiated proposals approved by the National Institutes of Health are able to be funded. Our legislation would substantially increase the number of promising research proposals to be funded by the National Institutes of Health, thus increasing the probability of significant breakthroughs for discovering the cause and ways to diagnose, treat, and prevent Alzheimer's disease.

The bill would also authorize funding no less than 15 Alzheimer's disease research centers, establish statellite diagnostic/treatment locations and enhance research efforts through research Center Core Grants at universities. Grants would also be established to attract and train new researchers, particularly women and other underrepresented groups. Related to this effort, the bill also reauthorizes the advisory panel on Alzheimer's disease, the council on Alzheimer's disease within the Department of Health and Human Services, and the program for awards to senior researchers for leadership and excellence.

In addition, the bill addresses the need for supportive services for family caregivers and specialized care for Alzheimer's patients. Support services, such as respite and day care, to help family caregivers continue to cope with their burden are vital but often limited and fragmented. Very little is yet known about which services most effectively support and strengthen families who are providing informal care.

Little is also known about what practices work best for specialized care for Alzheimer's patients, including special care units in long-term care facilities. To address these issues, this bill establishes research and demonstration programs for family support, specialized care and long-term care at the Administration on Aging, the National Institute on Aging, the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, and the National Center for Nursing Research. It also reauthorizes and expands research regarding services, caregivers, and specialized care at the National Institute of Mental Health.

Further, the bill would provide grants for State Alzheimer's Disease Programs to enable states to plan, establish and operate special programs for Alzheimer's patients and their families. Services could include diagnostic measures, treatment, respite and day care, as well as information about obtaining services and training and education programs for health care providers. A 50-percent State match would be required.

Specialized training regarding the loss of cognitive abilities and the unique behavioral patterns of dementia patients is essential for health care professionals, paraprofessionals, and families working with and caring for Alzheimer's and related disease patients. As such, this bill provides for this specific training and curriculum development, which is to be coordinated with ongoing established educational institutions and the Alzheimer's disease research centers.

A national Alzheimer's Education Program would also be established, in coordination with the clearinghouse on Alzheimer's disease, which would be reauthorized by this bill. The new education program would provide coordination and leadership to promote public awareness and information about Alzheimer's disease and related disorders. It would also assist and educate individuals with such diseases, their families, health and long-term care providers, public agencies, and the general public.

Clearly, the time has come for a concerted, collaborative Federal commitment to conquer this tragic disease. Unless the cause, cure, and treatment is found, the human and fiscal costs of Alzheimer's and related diseases will accelerate precipitously as our older population rapidly expands in the coming decades. Until that time, we must do all we can to support and strengthen family caregivers. The legislation which we are introducing today would make major strides toward these goals.

ALZHEIMER'S "CARE" COALITION BILL—H.R. 4770

HON. EDWARD R. ROYBAL

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, today I am announcing the introduction of the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research and Education Act, the Alzheimer's [CARE] bill, by a bipartisan, House-Senate CARE coalition. Joining with me as original House sponsors are Representatives SNOWE, WAXMAN, STARK, DOWNEY, RINALDO, REGULA, and BRUCE. In the Senate, the original sponsors are Senators METZENBAUM, PRESSLER, HATFIELD, GRASSLEY, and GRAHAM. The Alzheimer's CARE coalition represents a consolidation of forces of all the major congressional supporters of Alzheimer's related legislation and the Alzheimer's Association, the national association representing Alzheimer's victims and their families.

Four million victims of Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, the current estimate from a National Institute on Aging sponsored study, is a frightening figure for policymakers and the American public to contemplate. Their numbers and their plight must prompt Congress to reassess and greatly expand its commitment to funding Alzheimer's assistance and research.

Enacting the Alzheimer's "CARE" legislative package—Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance Research and Education Act—introduced by me, along with a bipartisan, House-Senate "CARE" coalition, would quadruple the Federal research commitment for Alzheimer's and related disorders to over $560 million by 1993—nearing parity with the other major diseases and making a long, long overdue correction in Federal priorities.

Alzheimer's research has been grossly underfunded by the Federal Government even considering the previous estimates. This year we will spend less than $1 on research for every $600 in Alzheimer's related societal costs.

As compared to the other major diseases—cancer, heart disease, AIDS—Alzheimer's has failed to receive its fair share of Federal research dollars. In 1990, Alzheimer's research receives only about $148 million while annual societal costs may exceed $88 billion. At the same time, we will spend 4 to 11 times that amount on research—$704 million to $1.69 billion—on each of the other major diseases—cancer, heart disease, AIDS—whose annual societal costs range from $66 billion to $94 billion.

However, expanded research funding is not enough. The bipartisan, congressional "CARE" coalition is pressing for a new Federal, State, and private sector initiative—a federally sponsored State Alzheimer's Program providing badly needed assistance to Alzheimer's victims and their families in every State in the Nation. With our proposed Federal infusion of $125 million and a dollar-for-dollar State match, $250 million in assistance could reach the millions of Alzheimer's victims and their families.

Alzheimer's disease is an issue whose time is long overdue but has finally come. Congress and the administration need to face up to their responsibility to help reduce the terrible financial and emotional devastation caused by Alzheimer's disease and related disorders. If we care enough, we can do no less.

Mr. Speaker, I request that the bill summary for the Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research and Education Act [CARE] be included in the RECORD at this point:

The bill summary follows:

SUMMARY OF COMPREHENSIVE ALZHEIMER'S ASSISTANCE, RESEARCH, AND EDUCATION ACT (THE ALZHEIMER'S "CARE" BILL)

PURPOSE

To provide expanded research on Alzheimer's Disease and related disorders and to improve care and assistance for its four million victims and their family caregivers.

OVERVIEW

The Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Education Act (the Alzheimer's "CARE" bill) is the merger of the two major legislative efforts with respect to Alzheimer's disease and related disorders. One legislative effort was initiated by Senators Metzenbaum and Grassley and Representative Snowe under the title, "Alzheimer's Disease Research and Training Act" (S. 1255 and H.R. 2781), based on the recommendations of the 1988-89 Report of the Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Disease. The other legislative effort was initiated by Representatives Roybal, Waxman, Stark and Downey and Senators Pressler and Hatfield under the title, "Comprehensive Alzheimer's Assistance, Research, and Education Act (CARE)" (H.R. 1490 and S. 1321).

Federally funded research has been severely underfunded as compared to federal funding for other major diseases. While Alzheimer's related funding totals about $150 million annually, funding for heart disease, AIDS and cancer research each total between $700 million and $1.69 billion annually. This discrepancy occurs even though the societal costs (over $88 billion/year) of Alzheimer's are the same order of magnitude as these major diseases. For 1993, the Alzheimer's "CARE" bill proposes to triple federal biomedical and services research funding for Alzheimer's and related disorders to $573 million. In support of this effort, the bill authorizes (as originally authorized in P.L. 99-660 through the efforts of Senators Grassley and Metzenbaum and Representative Snowe) the Council on Alzheimer's Disease, the Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Disease, and research leadership and excellence awards. The bill authorizes the Alzheimer's Disease Research Centers, Center Core Grants, and satellite diagnostic/treatment locations.

Although Congress has directed research toward Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, inadequate dissemination of information to health and long-term care providers and the public has resulted in a general lack of public awareness, misdiagnosis, and a lack of access to care management options. The bill extends the authorization (as originally authorized in P.L. 99-660, introduced by Representative Snowe and Senator Grassley) for the Clearinghouse on Alzheimer's Disease and an information dissemination project. It also formally establishes the National Alzheimer's Education Program, as a companion to the Clearinghouse, to promote public awareness.

The nature of these disorders leaves families with serious psychological, physical and economic burdens that warrant a systematic examination of models of care. Research and demonstrations on models of care and family support is funded in this bill through the National Institute on Mental Health, the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, the Administration on Aging, and the National Institute on Aging.

The burden of care and recent critical research breakthroughs relative to causes of and treatment for Alzheimer's disease and related disorders make it clear that we have reached a point where a coordinated effort among the states, the federal government and private groups is warranted. Beginning in 1991, the Alzheimer's "CARE" bill proposes the funding ($125 million by 1993) of State Alzheimer's Programs, a joint federal-state partnership, to provide the core of that support system.

ALZHEIMER'S "CARE" BILL SUMMARY

Responding to the overwhelming need to help victims of Alzheimer's disease and related disorders, this bipartisan, joint House/Senate legislative package, developed in partnership with the national Alzheimer's Association and on behalf of its over 200 chapters, proposes the following initiatives:

TITLE I. AMENDMENTS TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT

Section 101. Biomedical Research: Through the provisions in sections 101 and 105, biomedical and basic and clinical research funded through the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) would be increased from the Current $150 million level to $300 million for FY91, $400 million for FY92, and $500 million for FY93.

Alzheimer's Disease Research Centers (NIA): FY91, 30.00; FY92, 40.00; FY93, 50.00.

The current 15 Alzheimer's Disease Research Center (ADRC), funded through the National Institute on Aging (NIA), is formally authorized funding increases to $50 million annually by 1993.

Research Center Core Grants (NIA): FY91, 20.00; FY92, 30.00; FY93, 40.00.

Research capability beyond the 15 ADRCs is increased by establishing a program of Research Center Core Grants (RCCG), through NIA, which help universities establish core center support for a program of Alzheimer's related research. Annual authorized funding reaches $40 million by FY93.

Satellite Diagnostic/Treatment Locations (NIA): FY91, 15.00; FY92, 20.00; FY93, 25.00.

A program of Satellite Diagnostic and Treatment Locations is established through the NIA which would provide appropriate diagnostic and treatment services and research in sites other than the ADRCs. Annual authorized funding reaches $25 million by FY93.

Investigators and Training (NIA): FY91, 2.00; FY92, 4.00; FY93, 6.00.

Grants are to be available, through NIA, to public and private nonprofit entities to attract research investigators into Alzheimer's related research and to create training programs to train these researchers. Annual authorized funding reaches $6 million by FY93.

Section 102. Awards for Leadership and Excellence: FY91, 5.00; FY92, 5.00; FY93, 5.00.

The Awards for Leadership and Excellence in Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias, originally authorized in P.L. 99-660, are authorized. Annual authorized funding is for $5 million/year.

Section 103. NIA Research Program and Plan: FY91, 5.00; FY92, 5.00; FY93, 5.00.

Funding for NIA to develop its Alzheimer's related research, authorized in P.L. 99-660, is authorized. Annual authorized funding is $5 million/year.

Section 104. Clearinghouse on Alzheimer's Disease and Dissemination Project: FY91, 1.00; FY92, 1.00; FY93, 1.00.

The Clearinghouse in Alzheimer's Disease and the Alzheimer's Dissemination Project, originally authorized in P.L. 99-660, are authorized. Annual authorized funding is for $1 million/year.

Section 105. Family Support, State Services, and Basic and Clinical Research—Administration in Aging: FY91, 12.00; FY92, 12.50; FY93, 13.00.

The Commissioner on Aging is authorized to carry out a program of demonstration projects which help educate and assist the family of persons with Alzheimer's. Annual authorized funding reaches $13 million by FY93.

National Institute on Aging: FY91, 12.00; FY92, 12.50; FY93, 13.00.

NIA is authorized to carry out a program of research on long-term care services and coordination of those services. Annual authorized funding reaches $13 million by FY93.

Supportive Services Research (Sceretary): FY91, 5.00; FY92, 6.00; FY93, 7.00.

The Secretary, through NIMH, the Administration on Aging, and the National Center for Nursing Research (NCNR), is authorized to carry out a research program on improving the delivery of supportive services, especially as they apply to ethnic and cultural groups and rural and inner city populations. Annual authorized funding reaches $7 million by FY93.

State Alzheimer's Disease Education Program (Secretary): FY91, 50.00; FY92, 100.00; FY93, 125.00.

The Secretary shall make grants to States to (a) coordinate the development and operation, with public and private organizations, of services, including diagnostic, treatment, care management, respite care, legal counseling, and education to the victims, their families and care providers, (b) provide home and community-based care, including respite, (c) provide information and conduct education program, (d) coordinate development and operation of provider training and continuing education, (e) review State policies, (f) review State regulations of care providers, and (g) coordinate with appropriate federal programs. States are to spend from 25 to 50 percent of the grants on respite care. Grants require a 50-50 match of State and federal funds. Grants are awarded on a competitive basis though each State is entitled to a minimum of $250,000/year. Annual authorized funding reaches $125 million by FY93.

Basic and Clinical Research: Beyond the specific provisions outlined above, funds are made available to the Secretary for an intensive program of research through the National Institutes of Health and the National Institute on Mental Health.

National Institutes of Health: FY91, 187.00; FY92, 244.00; FY93, 303.00.

NIH is provided with a basic and clinical research authorization beginning at $187 million in FY91 and rising to $303 million by FY93.

National Institute on Mental Health: FY91, 23.00; FY92, 31.00; FY93, 38.00.

NIH is provided with a basic and clinical research authorization beginning at $23 million in FY91 and rising to $38 million by FY93.

Secretary's Discretionary Research Funds: FY91, 23.00; FY92, 31.00; FY93, 38.00.

The Secretary is provided with additional basic and clinical research authorization beginning at $23 million in FY91 and rising to $38 million by FY93. The Secretary has discretion over which Departmental agencies may use these funds.

TITLE II. AMENDMENTS TO ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DEMENTIAS SERVICES RESEARCH ACT OF 1986

Section 201. Council on Alzheimer's Disease: FY91,—; FY92,—; FY93,—.

The Council on Alzheimer's Disease, originally authorized in P.L. 99-660, is authorized and is to coordinate federally sponsored research efforts and provide certain reports to the Congress and the public on research.

Section 202. Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Disease: FY91, 0.15; FY92, 0.15; FY93, 0.15.

The Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Disease, originally authorized in P.L. 99-660, is authorized and is to assist the Secretary and the Council with emerging research and policy issues. Annual authorized funding is for $150 thousand/year.

Section 203. National Institute on Mental Health: FY91, 25.00; FY92, 26.00; FY93, 28.00.

As originally authorized in P.L. 99-660, this provision continues the family support and stress research program through NIMH. This research is to examine methods to provide appropriate services and specialized care and to evaluate best practices potentially leading to development of standards. Annual authorized funding is increased substantially and reaches $28 million by FY93.

Section 204. Agency for Health Care Policy and Research (AHCPR): FY91, 5.00; FY92, 6.00; FY93, 7.00.

Alzheimer's related services research in AHCPR, originally authorized in P.L. 99-660 for the National Center for Health Services Research and Health Care Technology Assessment, are authorized and expanded. Research is to include improving services (including special care units), costs of services, and effectiveness of services. Annual authorized funding reaches $7 million by FY93.

Section 205. Training and Education—Training of Health Care Professionals: FY91, 10.00; FY92, 10.50; FY93, 11.00.

NIA is authorized to award grants to educational institutions and ADRCs for training and continuing education for health care professionals and paraprofessionals and family caregivers. Annual authorized funding reaches $11 million by FY93.

Curriculum Development (NIA): FY91, 2.00; FY92, 2.00; FY93, 2.00.

NIA is authorized to award grants to educational institutions to develop curricula for training and continuing education programs. Annual authorized funding is $2 million/year.

National Alzheimer's Education Program (NIA): FY91, 2.00; FY92, 2.50; FY93, 3.00.

The Secretary is to formally establish the National Alzheimer's Education Program, working with the Council and the Alzheimer's Disease and Referral (ADEAR) Center, to provide coordination and leadership, working with public and private organizations, of the federal education and promotion effort for the general public, individuals with such diseases and disorders and their families, health and long term care providers, and other public agencies, including State and local public agencies and other federal agencies. Responsibilities include developing/distributing educational materials, working with the media, working with public and private efforts to develop models, and providing technical assistance to public and private organizations. Annual authorized funding is $3 million by FY93.

Education of Providers and Families (NIA): FY91, 10.00; FY92, 10.50; FY93, 11.00.

As originally authorized in P.L. 99-660, NIA is authorized to make grants to public and nonprofit private entities to educate health care providers and families on caregiving and on the availability of sources of assistance. Annual authorized funding reaches $11 million by FY93.

COMPREHENSIVE ALZHEIMER'S ASSISTANCE, RESEARCH, AND EDUCATION ACT (THE ALZHEIMER'S "CARE" BILL)—SUMMARY OF AUTHORIZED SPENDING

[Authorizations in millions of dollars]

	Fiscal year—
	1991	1992	1993
Title I. Amendments to the Public Health Service Act
Sec. 101. Biomedical research:
Alzheimer's disease centers (NIA)	30.00	40.00	50.00
Center core grants (NIA)	20.00	30.00	40.00
Satellite diagnostic/treatment locations (NIA)	15.00	20.00	25.00
Investigators and training (NIA)	2.00	4.00	6.00
Sec. 102. Awards for leadership/excellence [1]	5.00	5.00	5.00
Sec. 103. NIA research program and plan [1]	5.00	5.00	5.00
Sec. 104. Clearinghouse on Alzheimer's disease and dissemination project [1]	1.00	1.00	1.00
Sec. 105. Family support, State services, and basic and clinical research:
Family support research and demonstration projects:
Administration on Aging	12.00	12.50	13.00
National Institute on Aging	12.00	12.50	13.00
Supportive services research (Secretary)	5.00	6.00	7.00
State Alzheimer's disease education program (Secretary)	50.00	100.00	125.00
Basic and clinical research:
National Institutes of Health	187.00	244.00	303.00
National Institute of Mental Health	23.00	31.00	38.00
Secretary's discretionary research funds	23.00	31.00	38.00
Title II. Amendments to Alzheimer's Disease and Related Dementias Services Research Act
Sec. 201. Council on Alzheimer's Disease [1]
Sec. 202. Advisory Panel on Alzheimer's Disease [1]	0.15	0.15	0.15
Sec. 203. National Institute on Mental Health [1]	25.00	26.00	28.00
Sec. 204. Agency for Health Care Policy/Research [1]	5.00	6.00	7.00
Sec. 205. Training and education:
Training of health care professionals (NIA)	10.00	10.50	11.00
Curriculum development (NIA)	2.00	2.00	2.00
National Alzheimer's Education Program (NIA)	2.00	2.50	3.00
Education of providers and families (NIA) [1]	10.00	10.50	11.00
Total Alzheimer's "CARE" authorization [2]	444.15	599.65	731.15

[1] These items were originally authorized in Public Law 99-660 and are being authorized in this bill.

[2] For fiscal year 1990, Alzheimer's realted research is projected at $150 million by the administration.

THE HIGH DEFINITION TELEVISION ACT OF 1990

HON. SAM GEJDENSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, there has been considerable debate as to whether the United States is in economic decline, and how the United States should respond to the changes in America's economic and political position in the 1990's. Common themes throughout this debate include the economic interdependence of the United States and its allies, the loss of technological leadership essential to both our economic and national security, insufficient long-term investment by business due to the need to demonstrate a quarterly profit, and poor macroeconomic planning by the U.S. Government.

As a result, there is mounting concern that the United States may continue to lose ground in manufacturing in general, and our edge in the production of high-technology commodities in particular. Many of us in Congress, the private sector, and at one time, even the administration, have called for a national technology development strategy in order to recapture our once indisputable lead in high technology production.

With that in mind, I have developed legislation which would bring the United States back into the electronics race. The bill would utilize our most valuable asset: access to our consumer market. The legislation would encourage domestic manufacturing of high definition televisions or HDTV's—the next link in the high technology food chain.

Developing high definition televisions wouldn't simply enhance our television veiwing pleasure. The offshoots of this technology can be used for defense radar screens, medical scanning devices and computer imaging. Last year the Economic Policy Institute estimated that if the United States fails to develop strong HDTV and flat-display screen industries, we face an annual trade deficit of more than $225 billion in the electronics field and lose more than 2 million jobs a year by 2010.

Both the Europeans and the Japanese have coordinated their resources to compete in the production of advanced electronics. In comparison, the United States had made minimal progress due primarily to conflicting signals sent from the administration to industry.

Ideally, we should be pooling the talents and resources of the Federal Government and the private sector to develop high technology. However, the present administration has resisted such cooperative at every opportunity.

My bill would directly link the manufacturing of HDTVs to access to the United States' domestic market. It would work as follows:

To enter our HDTV market, a domestic or foreign manufacturer must produce 10 percent of the product in the United States during the first year of market penetration. Thirty percent of the final product must be United States parts and components in the third year, and in the fifth year, 51 percent must be made in America—then we hold steady at 51 percent.

Because the first years of production are often the most costly, this gradual scale of domestic content production would slowly recreate the manufacturing base in America that we have lost over the last decade. Since only 10 percent of the value of the product would be mandatory U.S. production in the first year, United States and foreign firms could produce off shore. Then, as firms make a profit, they can gradually increase their value added in the United States until they reach 51 percent. This would insure the United States with a steadily improving manufacturing base that could assist us with the offshoots of HDTV technology in the future.

In addition to creating a high definition television manufacturing base in the United States, this bill: would create U.S. jobs when we are losing jobs due to the cut backs in defense oriented production; could not be considered protectionist as it does not discriminate against foreign manufacturers; encourages the two leading producers (Thomson CGR and Phillips) to continue producing in the United States; would not require a Government subsidy or bail out; and would not require additional taxes to be raised to support high technology funding.

While this legislation will not solve all of our economic problems, it will generate the debate that perhaps our most competitive weapon is access to our huge consumer market. I believe its time to use this trump card to replenish our competitive position in the world economy.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

CONGRESSMAN STEVE BARTLETT INTRODUCES THE SSI INDEPENDENCE ACT FOR DISABLED AMERICANS

HON. STEVE BARTLETT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, today Congressmen MATSUI, SHAW, HANK BROWN, and I are introducing new legislation which permits disabled and elderly people to maximize their independence.

The SSI Independence Act for Disabled Americans builds upon the policy set forth in H.R. 8, the Social Security Work Incentives Act. Only one provision in H.R. 8 was included in the final 1989 Budget Reconciliation bill: the opportunity to buy into the Medicare system. While this provision was the most important in H.R. 8, the other provisions are also significant.

In addition, the SSI Independence Act for Disabled Americans codifies current Social Security rules so that families and friends can make contributions either directly or through trusts to SSI individuals without jeopardizing their eligibility for SSI and Medicaid. Because these rules do not appear in statute, families and friends have no assurance that the rules will exist in the future.

The SSI Independence Act for Disabled Americans accomplishes three goals:

First, allows SSDI recipients to opt into the SSI Section 1619 Work Incentive Program if they are otherwise eligible for SSI.

Second, makes six technical amendments to the 1619 Work Incentive Program under SSI to remove barriers that have developed since this program was enacted.

Third, codifies current Social Security policy to allow direct or trust contributions, other than food, cash and shelter, to be made to SSI recipients without jeopardizing their eligibility for SSI and Medicaid. This provision is new and was not part of H.R. 8. It is particularly important because it will allow parents to establish a trust fund for inheritance by their disabled child.

The 1990's must be the decade of independence for people with disabilities. These changes will allow people with disabilities the opportunity to lead successful, independent, and productive lives. I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation and have attached a factsheet which specifically outlines the above provisions in more detail.

OPTION FOR SSDI RECIPIENTS TO PARTICIPATE IN SSI AND THE 1619 WORK INCENTIVE PROGRAM

Allows SSDI recipients the option to come into the SSI program after completion of their trial work period when the recipient is no longer receiving SSDI cash benefits.

Allows the SSDI recipient to move into SSI and the 1619 Work Incentive Program without first having a month of regular SSI benefits.

This option would only apply to those individuals who meet the SSI income and resource test under current law.

Gives the SSDI recipient 12 months to spend down his resources in order to qualify for SSI.

CBO estimates this section to cost $53 million over 5 years.

This section was offered by Congressman Shaw last year and accepted in the House version of budget reconciliation.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 1619 THE SSI WORK INCENTIVE PROGRAM

Includes six technical amendments to remove barriers to work that have developed since this program was made permanent. The amendments are:

1. Clarify that a Continuing Disability Review will occur no more than once every 12 months for 1619 participants.

2. Eliminate spousal deeming so that an SSI recipient can qualify for 1619 based on his income alone and not have the spouse's income count in any way.

3. Provide that the impairment-related work expenses will be deducted in cases where the disabled person is dual eligible (receiving both SSI and SSDI) but receives only state supplementation, and receives no federal dollars.

4. Provide that a disabled person who turns 65 and had been participating in the 1619 program may continue to participate.

5. Requires that in calculating the breakeven point for 1619(a), states' supplementation must be included. Currently, it is optional and 8 states do not count the supplementation.

6. Provide that scholarships, fellowships, honararia, and the royalties or other payments an SSI recipient receives from a first book will be treated as earned income and not be counted against the SSI benefit.

CBO has estimated that each of these technical amendments will cost less than $500,000.

SEC. 4. INDEPENDENT LIVING TRUST AND CONTRIBUTIONS PROVISIONS

The intent of this provision is to codify current Social Security rules which dictate when direct or trust contributions will not be counted as income or resources for SSI eligibility. Under current law, there is no assurance that these rules will exist in the future, therefore they must be codified in statute.

This provision will:

1. Codify those rules and explicitly permit contributions other than food, shelter and cash to be excluded as income or resources from SSI eligibility. This includes such items as social services, vocational rehabilitation services, medical care, transportation, educational services, personal assistance or attendant care services, and services or equipment related to the quality and libability of the individual's shelter which are not for the purposes of rent, mortgage, real property taxes, garbage collection, sewerage services, water, heating fuel, electricity or gas.

2. Adds one new minor improvement to the current rules:

(a) Allows an SSI recipient to receive clothing without it having an effect on the person's benefits.

3. Permits a beneficial trust to be established to continue to provide assistance to the SSI recipient once his parents have passed away. This beneficial trust will not be counted as a resource or as income as long as the SSI recipient does not have access to the trust.

4. Requires SSA to develop materials which explain the rules to SSI recipients and their families so that they will know what types of contributions will be allowed by SSA without jeopardizing the SSI reecipient's eligibility for SSI and Medicaid.

The CBO estimate is zero except for the notification provisions which will cost $5 million over 5 years.

BACK INTO THE BIG MUDDY

HON. GEORGE MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, a quarter century ago, this Nation began a misguided policy of intervention in a small, underdeveloped country with promises of quick victory over evil forces endangering that land. With great bravado, but without clear objectives or strategies, we stepped toe deep into the big muddy of Vietnam.

In the intervening decades, we have learned the terrible lesson of ill-conceived interventionism through the Vietnam war, as the Soviets learned it in Afghanistan.

But once again, perhaps blinded by the so-called easy victories in Grenada and Panama, we are stepping into the big muddy—this time in Peru. And this time, instead of international communism, the enemy is international drug dealing in the form of the Shining Path guerrillas.

Does it all sound painfully familiar? Dispatching of U.S. military personnel; instructions only to train local soldiers, not to engage in combat; building bases that are susceptible to enemy attack; an emphasis on counter-insurgency warfare; the promise of a light at the end of the tunnel.

If we learned anything from the Vietnam experience, it should have been that we cannot allow this Nation to drift into military activity and commitments without a full public debate, without specifying our interests, and objectives, and without agreement upon a clear strategy that has some reasonable chance of success. Simply flexing our muscles and waving the flag does not produce democracy, liberty, or victory: it leads to dead boys coming home in boxes for ill-defined purposes.

Before we reach that terrible stage again, let us carefully examine the policy we are drifting into in Peru.

[From the New York Times, May 7, 1990]

U.S. JOINS PERU'S DIRTY WAR

(By Juan E. Mendez)

Washington.—Under the guise of drug interdiction in Peru, the U.S. is rushing headlong into one of the dirtiest wars being fought anywhere in the world today. If past experience in Vietnam and El Salvador is any guide, the U.S. presence will exercise virtually no restraint on the murder, torture and other human rights abuses that are now routine in Peru. Instead, the U.S. will become a party to the crimes.

Administration officials candidly acknowledge that the left-wing Sendero Luminoso guerrillas are well entrenched in the Upper Huallaga region—where most of the coca consumed in the U.S. is produced. Moreover, the most recent disclosures by the Administration make it clear that the Peruvian armed forces are to be assisted with matériel, weaponry and training specifically to fight Sendero.

The plan includes a permanent base for U.S. Green Berets in the contested jungle area, fighter planes, helicopters and boats and the training of virtually every Peruvian soldier to combat Sendero. This would turn the struggle against Sendero into a U.S., as well as Peruvian, war.

The war against Sendero is already 10 years old, yet this strange Maoist-Andean revolutionary organization continues to grow. Sendero is now attacking the Peruvian state in virtually every region of the country. It recruits easily among the young and the poor, its appeals undoubtedly enhanced by the collapse of the Peruvian economy and the steep deterioration of living standards.

Peruvians across the political spectrum know that Sendero threatens democracy and society. Yet hardly anyone in Peru—and certainly not the presidential candidates in the runoff election scheduled for early June—has proposed a way to deal with the insurgency. That, it seems, is left to the Peruvian Army.

Regrettably, the army is just as brutal as Sendero. For the third year, Peru heads the list of "disappearances" reported to the United Nations. In 1989 there were nearly 400 new cases, double the 1988 figure. In addition, the Peruvian Army occasionally reacts to ambushes and attacks by invading a community and killing dozens of young and old males, sometimes in full view of relatives.

The armed forces further complicate matters by encouraging villagers to form self-defense militias known as "rondas compesinas." If a village forms a ronda, Sendero punishes it for collaborating with the army; if it refuses, the army considers the community "red hot," meaning that it supports Sendero. In several massacres in recent weeks, Sendero units have murdered "ronderos" and ronderos have killed suspected "senderistas."

In the cities, the police arrest students and shantytown dwellers and charge them with terrorist crimes. The detainees are routinely and brutally tortured, while the court cases against them either languish or have to be dismissed for lack of evidence.

Human rights abuses by Peruvian authorities are almost too numerous to catalogue. In the process of putting down a June 1986 mutiny by Sendero inmates in three large jails in the Lima-Callao area, the armed forces killed almost 300 prisoners—most after they had surrendered. A lengthy investigation in the military courts has just ended in a whitewash.

In addition, right-wing death squads that have been linked to the governing party or to the army have targeted journalists, lawyers and human rights monitors; the headquarters of three prestigious human rights organizations were bombed in Lima in the last few weeks.

U.S. laws governing foreign aid are explicit in prohibiting assistance to force that engage in a consistent pattern of gross violations of human rights. If the Bush Administration has considered this ban at all, it has not explained Peru's exemption. Congress should insist on an explanation.

If Peruvians need help in fighting Sendero, the authorities in charge of the fight should show that they have changed their ways. Promises won't do. A commitment to fighting a "clean war" must first be demonstrated in practice.

Once such a strategy is in place, the Peruvian authorities may succeed in reducing the appeal of Sendero, and American involvement may not be necessary.

SOUTH FLORIDA MOURNS ELIZABETH VIRRICK

HON. DANTE B. FASCELL

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, Miami has recently lost one of its foremost champions of disadvantaged youth. Elizabeth Virrick passed away last week at the age of 93.

Mrs. Virrick made it a personal crusade to improve living conditions and opportunities for black youngsters in the Coconut Grove area of Miami. Starting in 1948, when she first observed this community, she formed and headed a variety of civic groups to make life a little better for the children there.

When Mrs. Virrick saw an injustice or a need, she did whatever she had to do to get it corrected or fulfilled.

A tiny woman with a huge heart and tireless courage, Elizabeth Virrick will be missed by the thousands she helped and by those whose assistance she enlisted in the fight against poverty and inequality.

Because of her leadership; her belief that one person can make a difference; her selfless volunteer efforts and because of her accomplishments, I believe our colleagues would like to know more about her work and, therefore, I submit the attached article from the Miami Herald.

SLUM-FIGHTER ELIZABETH VIRRICK DIES

Elizabeth Landsberg Virrick, the tiny, genteel woman who became Miami's champion slum fighter, died of pneumonia and Alzheimer's disease Wednesday at her home. She was 93.

Her fight began in 1948, in the sleepy Southern town that was then Miami. In one corner was 4-foot-11-inch, 100-pound Elizabeth Virrick, daughter of a lawyer and concert pianist, wife of an architect. In the opposite corner was filth, poverty and the primitive living conditions of the black neighborhoods of this city.

In the end, Virrick scored a knockout. None of the hundreds of young men and boys who boxed through the years in the Elizabeth Virrick Gym could have fought with more intensity than the crusader.

"You think you see an old lady sitting here," Virrick said when she was 88. "What you see is a fire burning all the time."

It sometimes cost her. Her white society friends often turned up their noses at her, just as they did at the proliferation of outhouses black residents were forced to live with. But she brought indoor plumbing, a day-care center, a gym, a boxing program and a minimum housing code to those residents.

Virrick once said she was compelled to do something for black residents after witnessing the deplorable conditions in the "Coconut Grove Negro District," where her maid lived.

There, she found families stuffed into unsanitary, grimy shacks and apartments. Children were sick, dirty and left alone.

"I've had every advantage anybody ever had," she said. "How could I ignore all that? How could I do nothing?"

Also, "During this time I heard the Rev. Theodore Gibson make his famous speech to the Coconut Grove Civic Club, saying 'My people are living seven deep.'

"And that was it. I've been at it ever since."

Virrick met with civic leaders and helped form the Coconut Grove Citizens' Committee for Slum Clearance. She became the first chairman.

In a falling down old wooden house that was almost condemned, she started a nursery, conning friends to help paint and fix it. Today, St. Alban's Day Nursery still cares for Coconut Grove children of low-income families.

Her critics called her "a contributor to creeping socialism," but that never deterred her. Instead, she started collecting shoes and clothing for kids who were too poor to have clothes for school.

Her daughter, Tatiana Duttenhofer, recalled Thursday how those her mother battled retaliated but succeeded only steeling Mrs. Virrick's determination.

"There was a rattlesnake in her mailbox one day," she said. "My father said, 'Elizabeth, if you don't calm down, they're going to burn a cross in our yard one day." And she said, "Well, Vova, go get two sticks and we'll roast some marshmallows when they do.' "

Mrs. Virrick took to task Dade politicians, always demanding more—more money, more jobs, more ordinances. She won those fights so many times that powerful landlords were forced to abandon their plans for innumerable apartment buildings.

"If you keep on doing something for someone less fortunate than you, that's the key to happiness. You're too busy for your troubles to catch up with you," she said.

Born in Winchester, KY, Virrick was educated at the University of Wisconsin and Columbia University, studying interior design and architecture. She treasured Blue Vanda orchids and designed her own house as a showplace for her collection of antiques. Such was the unexpected background and interests of the woman who masterminded the Bathroom Loans.

At that time, there were 482 outhouses in the Black Grove. At night, the Honey Wagon came to collect the waste. Those outhouses were the first thing to go in her all-out war for slum clearance.

By pointing out to the Grove's wealthy white families that the same people who were living in filth were coming each day to work in their homes. Virrick raised more than $7,600 in no-interest loans for new toilets and plumbing. Every cent was repaid.

She founded Coconut Grove Cares, an organization to help the poor. From her cramped second-floor office, complete with old roll-top desk and Georgia O'Keeffe print, Virick fought the deplorable slums in the city.

Her honors were many. There is a park and a pool named for her. A public housing project at Northwest 25th Avenue and 16th Street bears the title Elizabeth Virrick Village.

And there is an old seaplane hangar, the site of hundreds of boxing matches through the years—the Elizabeth Virrick Gym.

The first and third Wednesdays of every month, Virrick, barely more than the top of her head showing over the counter, sold tickets at the window of the gym. She chatted with the fans and coaches and generally checked things out. It was a place she fought hard for, a place to keep young boys and men off the streets. Yet, she never watched the action in the ring. Never once.

"I don't like to see people hitting each other," she explained. "Can't stand violence, never could. I'm a sissy."

She is survived by her daughter; nephew George Bennett of Naperville, Ill.; granddaughter Tatiana Walton of Windmere; granddaughter Pandora Greenstein of Miami; and two great grandchildren.

In keeping with Mrs. Virrick's wishes, there will be no funeral services, her daughter said. A celebration of her life will be held at 4 p.m. May 20 at the Barnyard, 3870 Washington Ave., in Coconut Grove.

U.S. ARMED FORCES OFFICERS' SEPARATION PAY

HON. STAN PARRIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. PARRIS. Mr. Speaker, on this occasion I rise to call attention to a matter of grave inequity, and to offer before my colleagues, legislation to provide relief for such inequity. The issue I refer to is restitution for the involuntary separation of career service personnel—men and women who would serve as the vanguard for our great Nation, men and women who would sacrifice their individual liberties for a greater cause, the protection and defense of the American dream.

This is an issue that we must all be concerned with, for when a contract is broken, exceptional treatment is an obligation of the individual or institution that has reneged on its promises. I believe America has a responsibility and a moral charge to its servicemen to uphold its binding agreements and promises made in good faith upon initial commissioning.

For this reason, to assist members of our Armed Forces who would involuntarily be discharged and left with insufficient compensation in return for years of dedicated service, I am introducing a bill that would help ease the burden of career termination and provide for a smoother transition into civilian life.

Under current law, as incorporated within title 10 of the United States Code, military personnel are not entitled to retire with an annuity until after they have served for at least 20 years. However, in light of the phenomenal changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, many of these dedicated men and women will never see 20 years of service.

For the first time in decades, changes in international conditions appear promising, and opportunities exist for lessening tension. Subsequently, Congress and the administration are already working to pare our Nation's armed services by considerable numbers within the next several years.

As submitted, the fiscal year 1991 Defense budget request is $295 billion in budget authority, a figure 2.6 percent below the fiscal year 1990 level, and $292 billion in outlays. This request is $22 billion below the President's April 1989 plan. The administration also projects a real decline of 2 percent for fiscal years 1992–95, and by fiscal year 1995's end, a total cumulative 10-year decline of 22 percent.

What does this mean for America's military? By the end of fiscal year 1991 alone, active duty end strength will decline to 2,038,800, roughly 91,400 less than the fiscal year 1989 level and nearly equal to the fiscal year 1980 end strength! In fact, Army and Air Force levels will be the lowest since 1950.

Of all branches, the Army seems to be the candidate to take the lion's share of force reductions. This will largely be determined by our Nation's strategic plans and assumptions; however, there is an ominous cloud of uncertainty about the Army's future and that of its servicemen.

The Army is looking at cuts of at least one-third its force structure over the next 3 years; and, from its current strength of about 750,000 officers and personnel, the service plans to drop to slightly over 500,000 by fiscal year 1997.

For fiscal year 1990, Army active strength was reduced by 7,900, and again by 8,300 in fiscal year 1991 from previously planned levels. In addition, Navy active strength is looking at cuts of about 6,000 from the January budget levels in both fiscal year 1990 and fiscal year 1991; and the Air Force, approximately 3,200 for fiscal year 1991.

In a statement given before the House Armed Services Committee, Secretary of Defense Richard Cheney stated:

The readiness and well-being of our uniformed personnel continues to be my highest priority. Our success in attracting and retaining high quality military personnel in recent years results largely from providing adequate and fair compensation and other incentives to encourage service in the armed forces.

The question then becomes, how do we compensate these dedicated individuals who will fall subject to the congressional budget ax?

Under title 10, separation pay is calculated by multiplying the number of years served by a percentage—10 percent—of the basic pay allowance. The law, however, contains a clarifier that the one-time-only lump sum calculation will exceed no more than $30,000.

Now I can't speak for my colleagues, but looking at how, over time, inflation and interest rates have hit my congressional district in northern Virignia, I believe the cap on severance pay seriously impedes the ability of the servicemen and their families to adapt financially and resume the quality of life to which they were accustomed before separation.

Furthermore, if we examine this issue in greater detail, the inequity of current compensation becomes readily apparent, if not glaring, when comparing severance pay with uncapped annual retirement pay. Side by side, let's contrast for example, payment for a Navy lieutenant commander with 17 years of service and that of a full commander having 20 years of service.

Under the law, if the lieutenant commander earns approximately $30,000, he is entitled to 10 percent of that, or $3,000 multiplied by the number of years he's served, in this case 17. This formula adds up to a grand total of $51,000. At first blush, the amount looks fairly sound, but let's not forget that the law caps the amount of compensation at a one-time-only sum of no more than $30,000.

The commander with 20 years, on the other hand, is entitled to annual compensation for life of a sum that is calculated under a formula without the $30,000 ceiling. In other words, the individual with 20 years might average $60,000 yearly while the officer with 17 receives a $30,000 hail and farewell. In my judgment, the long-term commitment of the officer with 17 years, or 15 years, is no less deserving than that of the individual who has served for 20.

The legislation I am introducing today would not only lift the $30,000 cap, it would provide half of the compensation in a lump sum and the other half in monthly payments over a 5-year increment. If the recipient of that payment were to pass away before the end of that time period, the amount of pay remaining would be paid in lump sum to beneficiaries.

If enacted this legislation would apply to all officers—and, let me clarify one point of contention, the scope of this legislation was narrowed to "officers only" as other legislation, H.R. 4003, has been recently initiated by my colleague from Kansas, Mr. SLATTERY, to cover enlisted personnel—discharged, separated, or released from duty after December 31, 1989.

There is no doubt that a powerful incentive for career military personnel has, in part, been the expectation of receiving a sizable annuity at a reasonable age giving servicemen the flexibility to later embark upon other career paths. If Congress denies adequate compensation to those who have spent their lives in service to both citizen and country, what will we say to the future generations of young patriots who would offer to sacrifice, the rightfully, in turn, expect fair and equitable reimbursement for their service.

Mr. Speaker, I am hopeful that this legislation will be considered favorably and enacted swiftly before the forthcoming reductions in force [RIF's] have displaced and disrupted our most deserving in uniform. I urge my colleagues to join me in passage of the bill.

THE SPANISH CATHOLIC CENTER OF WASHINGTON, DC

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to rise today in order to share with my colleagues the accomplishments of a wonderful organization in the Washington, DC metropolitan area. I recently became acquainted with their efforts and would like to take this opportunity to congratulate them for the difference they are making in this community and the example they have set for communities all over the Nation to follow.

The Spanish Catholic Center was born in 1967, as a private nonprofit agency. It was created in response to the variety of needs of the poor immigrant, primarily of Hispanic origin, community of the Washington, DC metropolitan area. The center is chartered under the District of Columbia's laws to implement educational and social services, as well as to teach and promote civil, social, economic, and health betterment.

The services of the Spanish Catholic Center are rendered regardless of race, creed, national origin, or residence. The center's main thrust is to respond to the needs of new arrivals, as well as to those whose precarious circumstances do not allow to step out of their despair.

The center is strategically located in several locations throughout the metropolitan area. There are branch offices in: Silver Spring, MD, which includes a health clinic; a health center with medical and dental care located at Mt. Pleasant Street in Washington. The administration and main offices are also located in Washington. The center is presently staffed by 30 full-time employees and 10 part-time employees. It is also staffed by 379 volunteers, who during the year 1989, contributed a total of 27,715 hours of service. During the year 1989, 41,636 persons were served by the center.

The center is funded by United Way, the Archdiocese of Washington, private foundations, and public contributions. It renders quality services through their departments of social services, Mrs. Mary L. Mercado, coordinator; education, Sister Maria del Carmen Robles, coordinator; health care, Ms. Lyn Morland; and community activities. The programs are continually shaped and changed to fit the growing and changing needs of the community which the center serves.

Among the center's services are: Emergency food and shelter; counseling; income tax preparation; and employment training agency; residences for women. The center is working closely with the community in order to educate it about drug and crime prevention. Family and individual counseling is also available through the health services department. During 1989, 12,774 patients were served at the center's clinics.

The center views the educational component of their services as the firm foundation upon which a new life can be started. As a Florida certified teacher, I wholeheartedly agree with this. The programs consist of English as a second language; literacy—basic education; high school equivalency—GED; a bilingual secretarial program; and most recently, a computer program and training course for technicians for copying machines. All programs are under the direction of an education coordinator, and each one is administered by a program director. Classes take place in various area schools, every evening of the week and weekends. Classes are conducted by 131 volunteer instructors.

Traditionally, the center has been the gathering place for the new arrivals and the needy. It is an organization which enables them to participate in programs which prevent their involvement in activities detrimental to themselves as individuals as well as to the society. The center is also a positive contributing factor to the city as it makes visible the colorful beauty of the traditions of those it serves and to help them join the ranks of a society that gives immigrants the equal and unique opportunity of a new beginning in life.

Father Julio Alvarez-García is the center's executive director. The Spanish Catholic Center is governed by an active board of directors, which meets a minimum of 10 times during the fiscal year. The officers of the board of directors are: Mr. Ramon Gomez, president; Mr. Francisco Delgado, vice president; Ms. Rosario Corredera, treasurer; and, Aurora Porres, vice treasurer.

The Spanish Catholic Center is an example of how a community can be served by the work of dedicated individuals who care about making a difference in the lives of their fellow men. I congratulate them and wish them much success in this honorable and worthwhile endeavor. During the past 23 years they have helped make our Washington, DC, community a better and richer one.

LITHUANIAN INDEPENDENCE HIGHLIGHTS PLIGHT OF JEWS

HON. WM. S. BROOMFIELD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, the Oakland Press, a newspaper in my congressional district, recently published a moving article by Rachel Canaan-Kapen describing her family's experiences as Jews living in Lithuania.

Mrs. Kapen, a resident of West Bloomfield Township, MI, is the mother of Gilead Kapen, the minority staff consultant to the Africa Subcomittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Mrs. Kapen expresses sadness at the decline in the Jewish population of Lithuania and concern for the future of those Jews still living there. I commend her observations to my colleagues in the article which follows:

[From the Oakland Press]

LITHUANIA HAS RIGHT TO INDEPENDENCE, BUT FATE OF REPUBLIC'S JEWS IS IN DOUBT

(By Rachel Canaan-Kapen)

The recent dramatic happenings unfolding in the Republic of Lithuania evoke in me, a Jew with close family ties to the land, very conflicting emotions.

My father, Yosef Garber, was born and raised in Lithuania, which we call Lita, and so were his parents and their parents for numerous generations. Yet they lived in a world of their own, which can account for their still existing after so many years of exile and dispersion.

Lita-Lithuania was by all accounts the shining jewel in the crown of European Jewry. The Gaon of Vilna, as he was nicknamed, was a legendary figure of Jewish scholarship and morality who lived in the second half of the 18th century and he, and subsequently his many disciples, influenced Jewish life for many years. Vilna, the capital of independent Lita-Lithuania, was so Jewishly endowed that it was nicknamed "Jerusalem of Lita." The numerous yeshivot, academies of Jewish learning, within its boundaries attracted thousands of young men coming to be trained and ordained as rabbis and other religious functionaries in the Jewish community, as well as for the sake of learning.

My father, Yosef, studied in one of these yeshivot. Although he was trained and ordained as a ritual slaughterer, I doubt that he ever practiced his acquired profession, for no sooner than he received his ordination he was conscripted into the Lithuanian army, a fact that proved to be a decisive factor in his life.

For the very first time in his life, he was exposed to a world beyond the synagogue and the yeshiva. He no longer could be the pious, very observant Jew he once was because the new reality of the Lithuanian army didn't especially cater to his Jewish needs. If he didn't wish to remain hungry, even starve, he had no choice but to eat the non-kosher foods served him. He also came face-to-face with a secular world of enlightenment that fascinated him, as well as with a great number of non-Jewish Lithuanians and anti-Semitism like never before. Last but not least, in the army he met another Lithuanian Jew named Meyer Blass, with whom a lifelong friendship ensued.

When the two army buddies-turned-best friends were subsequently discharged from the army, they knew exactly what they were going to do with the rest of their lives. Both reached the conclusion that there was no future for Jews in Lita and therefore applied to the British government for a "certificat," a permit to emigrate to Palestine or Eretz-Israel, as it was called by the Jews. The "certificat" came in 1925 and the two friends said farewell to family and friends, many of whom they never saw again.

My father talked very little of life before coming to Eretz-Israel, where he and Meyer settled in Tel Aviv and helped to pave its streets and build its houses. After a few years of hard work and frugal living, they managed to save some money and establish the first icebox factory in the town, my father still working hard beside his men, something he continued doing his entire life. He never uttered a word in Lithuanian, which he seemed to have totally forgotten, and except for photographs depicting him in the Lithuanian army's uniform, he didn't bring with him any other photographs from Lita.

All we knew about the family he left behind was that he had an older sister and brother, who emigrated to the United States and settled in Rochester, N.Y., while another brother, Yaacov, and a sister, Blooma, perished in the Shoah, the Holocaust, together with the rest of Lita's Jewelry. When I gave birth to my son, Alon, in Jerusalem in 1961, exactly 20 years after the destruction of Lita's Jewry, my father asked me to give him the name Yaacov as a middle name in memory of his brother, the only memorial to him.

A total Jewish population of 153,743 was reported in 1923, comprising 7.5 percent of the population and considered the largest national minority in the land, where Jews also made up a little less than a third of the total population in the largest cities. However, a 1959 Soviet census shows a total Jewish population of 24,672, less than 1 percent of the population, with 16,354 in Vilna, now Vilnius and 4,792 in Kovno, now Kaunas, two cities where Jewish life flourished before the war.

As a person who witnessed the regaining of the much-longed-for independence of her own people, I am especially sensitive to other people's similar aspirations. Yet the Jew in me can't quite forget the destruction of Lithuania's once-flourishing Jewry, which by no means can be blamed solely on the Nazis. Furthermore, the surge in nationalistic aspirations also brought with it a surge in latent anti-Semitism, and I can't help but fear for the fate of the remnant of Lithuania's Jews.

THE CHANGING ENVIRONMENT FOR U.S. AGRICULTURE

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, May 9, 1990, into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

THE CHANGING ENVIRONMENT FOR U.S. AGRICULTURE

As Congress considers the 1990 Farm Bill, it is important to reflect on how U.S. agriculture has changed in the past few years and to consider what changes may be in store.

Declining share of U.S. economy: One of the major trends of recent years has been the declining role that agriculture plays in the U.S. economy. This is seen in various ways. First, the number of farmers continues to decline each year. Farm families now comprise less than 2% of the population. And if only commercial farms are considered, less than half a percent of the population supplies virtually all our agricultural products. This trend toward increased concentration of production will likely continue. Second, agriculture's share of the nation's Gross National Product is declining, from 7% in 1950 to 1.6% today. This reflects the growth of new occupations and new industries, rather than a decline in farm production. With most of America's future economic growth expected to take place in areas such as computers and finance, agriculture's share of GNP is likely to continue to decline. Third, farming is becoming less important even in rural areas. More rural counties depend on manufacturing today than on agriculture, and farm-dependent counties only slightly outnumber rural countries that rely on meeting the needs of retired people.

Positive trade role: On the other hand, the American farmer continues to make a major contribution to reducing our trade imbalance. Agriculture's share of trade far exceeds its share of GNP. In 1988, 12% of U.S. merchandise exports were farm products, and agriculture had a positive trade balance of $18.5 billion compared to the overall U.S. trade deficit of $127 billion. The U.S. is still the dominant force in world trade of agricultural products. Changes in U.S. production and inventories of major crops are the key factors influencing world prices. The United States is the primary exporter in all the major non-tropical agricultural commodities.

Certainly many domestic and international factors will affect U.S. agriculture in the future—ranging from changing consumer eating patterns to international trade negotiations. Two trends seem especially important: reform efforts in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, and the growing environmental movement.

Soviet and Eastern Europe reform: Progress on reform in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union is likely to depend on improving the quality and quantity of food available to the average citizen. We have all seen television pictures of empty supermarkets and long lines for basic necessities. Recent comments by Soviet economists suggest that their agricultural sector is in even worse shape than western estimates have indicated.

This means that in the near future big increases in food imports may be necessary. American farmers should play a large part in meeting the demand, but even if they don't, the increased sales will reduce world supplies and help boost prices. However, the longer-run outlook is less rosy. Eastern Europe and the western part of the Soviet Union were once the breadbasket of Europe. Even with its incredible inefficiency, the USSR is the world's large producer of wheat. If reforms in agriculture are successful, productivity in these regions should increase rapidly. Not only might they cease to be our customers, they may become major competitors.

Environmental movement: There has been a virtual explosion of concern for the environment worldwide. Many environmentalists view agriculture with suspicion, believing that current farming practices are harmful and non-sustainable. Members of the major environmental organizations in the United States now outnumber farmers. Environmental stewardship will be an increasingly important factor in assessing agriculture.

The growing environmental movement could mean problems for the competitiveness of U.S. farm products, in two ways. One the one hand, other countries will likely continue to place tough restrictions on the food they import, such as the European Community ban of beef from cattle fed growth hormones. On the other hand, tightening U.S. restrictions on chemical use could place American farmers at a cost disadvantage, if other countries allow their farmers to use chemicals banned here.

U.S. economic policy: While many of the factors affecting the outlook for U.S. agriculture are beyond the control of policymakers, one important thing we can do is to get our economic house in order. The kinds of changes we need to strengthen our economy for the long term are the kinds of steps that will help boost the competitiveness of our farm sector. We need to save more as a nation, which would improve farmers' access to capital. We also need to take a longer-term view of government spending, cutting current consumption and expanding funds for productivity-enhancing investment in infrastructure, education, and research. But most important, we need to reduce the federal budget deficit, which continues to exceed $150 billion per year. A smaller deficit would make it possible for interest rates to come down, lowering farmers' costs and making it easier for them to modernize machinery. Reducing the deficit could also lead to a lowered-value dollar on exhange markets, thereby making our exports more competitive overseas. Much of the improvement in our farm exports since 1986 has been due to more favorable exchange rates.

The last few years have generally been good ones for American farmers. Yet farmers face different challenges now than they did in the past, and some analysts believe the long-term outlook is for stagnant or slightly declining farm income, unless major increases in demand or drops in supply occur. U.S. farmers can no longer take their predominance in world markets for granted. They must adapt to new demands on how they produce and how farm products are marketed. They will likely face lower levels of government support. The 1990 Farm Bill must strike a balance between stabilizing farm income and keeping agriculture competitive in the changing global environment.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN D. MOCKENSTURM

HON. MARCY KAPTUR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to introduce to my colleagues in the House of Representatives a man from my district who performed a selfless and heroic act, attempting to rescue two very small children. This week, the National Association of Letter Carriers is presenting John D. Mockensturm of Toledo, with an award to recognize his courageous and charitable efforts in which he risked his own life to save two children from a smoldering car. The Regional Hero of the Year Award is awarded to only three people per year to commemorate the deeds of goodwill and heroism that letter carriers perform each year. It is an opportunity for the National Association of Letter Carriers to show their appreciation to those heroic individuals and demonstrate the other good works of letter carriers across the United States. Ralph Waldo Emerson, the great poet once said, "Heroism feels and never reasons and therefore is always right." This is exactly how Mr. Mockensturm behaved the day he rescued two small children. Emerson must have known someone like Mr. Mockensturm to make such a statement.

On March 20, 1989, two small children were inadvertently left alone in a locked car which subsequently caught on fire. John Mockensturm was rounding a corner on his Toledo mail route and saw dark smoke billowing from the front end of a parked car as a women, apparently the driver, walked away in the opposite direction. Failing to get the woman's attention, the letter carrier ran to the vehicle and saw two children locked inside. Mockensturm coaxed a wary 3-year-old child to unlock his door and swiftly pulled the boy out of the back seat. Then, groping through thick smoke, the carrier quickly released the child's 1-year-old brother from the restrains of his car seat. The boys' mother returned shortly after with help for what she had thought was a stalled engine. Shocked by the smokey scene, she was extremely thankful to find her boys safe with John Mockensturm.

Mr. Speaker, I am very honored to be able to recognize John Mockensturm today. There are very few people in the world that are faced with such a circumstance which forces them to make a split-second decision which includes risking their own life. It is comforting to know that there are people like John Mockensturm who do not hesitate to make the right decision to try to save other people. Many people may believe that they too, would make the same decision, but one never knows until they are faced with the danger. Two small children are alive and well today because of his quick thinking and unselfish actions. Mr. Mockensturm truly deserves the Central Region Hero of the Year Award.

NATIONAL TRANSPORTATION DEFENSE WEEK

HON. GUS YATRON

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, the President will proclaim the week of May 13 through May 18, 1990, as National Transportation Defense Week. We set aside this week to officially recognize the significant and vital contributions that our transportation systems add to the Nation's economy, and the important aspect these systems play in the Nation's defense structure.

As a nation, we are blessed with the most efficient and extensive transportation system in the world. Americans from Maine to California can travel with ease to any other part of our great Nation. We can rely on our transportation system to provide for the free and easy flow of goods in commerce by surface, water, and air. And should a national emergency ever arise, our transportation system will be integral to the defense of our Nation. National Transportation Defense Week provides us with an opportunity to reflect upon our transportation network and its importance to the United States' continued world leadership.

Mr. Speaker, we would not be able to enjoy these benefits were it not for the hard work and dedication of the men and women in the transportation industry. On May 16, 1990, the Reading Traffic Club will hold a special luncheon in recognition of National Transportation Defense Week. The men and women of the Reading Traffic Club have been, and will continue to be, key players in the Nation's transportation efforts.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to rise today to recognize the Reading Traffic Club. Their dedication gives me every hope that our past transportation triumphs will be repeated as we rebuild and revitalize America's transportation network. I know that my colleagues here in Congress join me and the Reading Traffic Club in celebrating National Transportation Defense Week.

POLISH INDEPENDENCE DAY

HON. CHESTER G. ATKINS

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Speaker, today is the anniversary of the Polish Constitution Day of 1791. This day represents the unswerving dedication of the people of Poland to freedom, justice, equality, and social progress. It is evident that this day has a more heightened meaning this year when seen in conjunction with the sweeping changes occurring throughout Eastern Europe.

On this day it is important to note the magnitude of the accomplishments of the Constitution of 1791. This single document was able to nonviolently transform an oppressive government of a select few into a working government of the people. All of the progress recently made in Eastern Europe began with this first movement toward democracy in Central and Eastern Europe almost 200 years ago. Unfortunately, as a result of the continual partitioning of Poland by its aggressive neighbors, the people of Poland have waited an extraordinarily long time to enjoy the freedom which this document granted them.

It is only recently that Poland's neighbors have begun to allow her to breathe. The announcement of the Soviet Union recognizing the atrocities committed against the Poles in the Katyn Forest is a tremendous step toward a brighter future for Poland. It represents the changing attitude of the Soviet Union which is facilitating the remarkable changes currently occurring in Eastern Europe. Today we must also recognize and remember the brave people who lost their lives in the Katyn Forest at the hands of a merciless few.

The celebrations this year are more poignant than ever before. Cities throughout the country are holding parades, banquets, and other related ceremonies in honor of the progress that the people of Poland have made toward their dream of democracy.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to join people of polish ancestry in my own district as well as throughout the country to pay tribute to those who have paid such a dear price for liberty. It is clear now that their long struggle for freedom may finally reach a desirable end.

TRIBUTE TO NINO MORREALE ON HIS RETIREMENT FROM TEACHING

HON. SUSAN MOLINARI

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to stand before my colleagues and honor Nino Morreale of Staten Island, NY. Mr. Morreale has just retired after dedicating more than 25 years of his life as a music education teacher at New Dorp High School.

Mr. Morreale is a graduate of the Julliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. He has also had a very distinguished career as a professional musician playing for such greats as Sammy Davis, Jr. and Lena Horne and was a member of radio and television orchestras for both ABC and NBC.

In addition to all his work as a professional musician, Nino Morreale was also a music teacher who was very dedicated to this students. He wanted to give young people a better understanding of the world they lived in through the music he loved.

On this occasion, I extend my congratulations to Mr. Nino Morreale. A man who has earned the respect of his colleagues and students; a man who New Dorp High School will sorely miss.

LEGISLATION TO AMEND THE NEW MEXICO STATEHOOD COMPACT

HON. JOE SKEEN

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SKEEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce legislation to amend the New Mexico statehood compact with the Federal Government that will resolve problems regarding the authority of the commissioner of public lands to exchange State trust lands. Senator DOMENICI is introducing similar legislation in the Senate.

Amending the statehood compact, or the enabling act, requires the consent of Congress and the passage of a State constitutional amendment. This legislation will set this process in motion.

In an opinion handed down in 1988, the State attorney general stated that changes in the commissioner of public lands exchange authority were necessary to ensure the interests of the trust beneficiaries are protected.

I should add that the beneficiaries are all the people of New Mexico. Revenues generated from trust lands are used primarily for the education of New Mexico's youth.

This legislation will not only validate all previous exchanges that have been completed since 1912, but will standardize the procedures and authorities under which the commission of public lands can complete land exchanges.

It should be noted that the authority granted in this legislation will not invalidate or result in any adverse effects of any previous exchanges completed by the commissioner of public lands.

Specifically, the language in my legislation describes who the State commissioner can enter into exchange agreements with; allows the commissioner to exchange lands that are equal to or greater in value than the land to be conveyed by the State; and provides that the proposed exchange is beneficial to the interests of the affected beneficiary.

The statehood compact provided the State of New Mexico with our sections of land per township. These sections, that were scattered throughout each township, have added the checkerboard land ownership patterns found throughout the State. Within these ownership patters you commonly find an intermingling of Federal, State, and private lands. This causes numerous management problems for all property owners. Therefore it makes good sense to block up these lands through exchange to maximize the productivity and enhance the efficiency of the property.

Amending the enabling act will help mitigate the adverse effects of Federal land actions on trust lands because of the checkerboard land patterns I mentioned above.

The legislation I am introducing will assist in the consolidation of unmanageable isolated tracts of State trust lands, thereby promoting better resource management. Protecting and enhancing the income potential and integrity of State trust lands will also be a result of this legislation.

Because of the anticipated increase in land exchange requests and activities, as indicated by the passage of the Federal Land Exchange Facilitation Act of 1988, New Mexicans who lease State and Federal lands have an interest in this legislation. With this in mind the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau, the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association and the New Mexico Wool Growers' Association have all passed resolutions supporting the change in the statehood compact that would facilitate land exchanges.

Amending the statehood compact will provide numerous benefits to the people of New Mexico. I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this important measure.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WEST BANK AND GAZA

HON. WAYNE OWENS

OF UTAH

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, this afternoon I delivered an opening statement at a hearing of my two subcomittees of the Foreign Affairs Committee dealing with recent developments in the West Bank and Gaza.

I include my statement to be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

STATEMENT BY REP. WAYNE OWENS, HEARING ON RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WEST BANK AND GAZA

Mr. Chairman, these two subcommittees meet jointly today to hear testimony on recent developments in Gaza and the West Bank. Many of the issues that we will discuss have been addressed in other hearings, but the specific dynamics of the Palestinian uprising and the Israeli response have never been isolated and dealt with in depth. These are issues about which I personally care very deeply, and I commend chairmen Hamilton and Yatron for giving us this important opportunity today.

Before delving into human rights concerns in the territories, I think it is important to keep two things in mind: First, the problems in the West Bank and Gaza are the product of an immensely complex political conflict, involving not only Palestinians and Israelis, but the surrounding Arab states as well. To blame Israel for occupying the West Bank and Gaza strip is to ignore a history of armed Arab aggression and the events of the 1967 war. If one thing has become clear since the intifada began in December 1987, it is that these problems can only be solved as part of a comprehensive political settlement. It is incumbent on all sides, not only Israel, to move forward toward this end. The United States must play the major facilitating role in the process and in that matter I give Secretary of State Baker high marks for trying.

Second, it is important to keep in mind that Israel's human rights record in the territories in no way compares with that of some other countries in the region, which are party to the broader conflict. I need not remind my colleageus that the Iraqi Government killed over 8,000 of its own Kurdish citizens 2 years ago with chemical weapons. Nor do I need to recount Syria's systematic slaughter of 15,000 of its own people in the 1982 Hama revolt. Perspective is important here. So, as we raise human rights issues in the territories—which we must do candidly and openly—we do so recognizing Israel as the only democracy in the Middle East, a country which holds itself to a higher standard.

This having been said, I think it is our responsibility to explore these issues as honestly and as thoroughly as possible. Since December 1987, I have made more than a half dozen visits to the West Bank and Gaza as a member of these two subcommittees. During that time, I have witnessed an escalating cycle of violence which is dangerously polarizing the Israeli and Palestinian communities, and diminishing the prospects for a political settlement that will permit both peoples to live together peacefully in that crowded land.

On my most recent visit in February, I noted a sharp increase in the number of Palestinians killed by Palestinians, and a marked decline in the number of those killed by Israeli defense forces. In a May 4 article in the New York Times, Joel Brinkley wrote that the number of Palestinians shot and killed by Israelis has fallen by more than half over the last 4 months. I ask unanimous consent that this article be inserted into the hearing record following my remarks. Since January in fact, more Palestinians have been killed by other Palestinians than by Israeli forces. Overall, the total number of deaths related to the uprising have dropped 61 percent from the first 4 months of 1988 and 48 percent from the first 4 months of 1989. This is a trend which suggests that the intifada is entering a new, perhaps less violent phase. But it would be a mistake to believe that the uprising is controlled or that Palestinian resistance will cease before a political settlement is reached.

Nevertheless, human rights violations in the administration of Israel's occupied territories remain a source of special concern to this committee, to Congress, and to Israel's friends everywhere. Those policies to which the United States most strenuously objects—administrative detention, deportations, and the demolition and sealing of houses—continue to this day. Not only are these, grievous abuses of internationally recognized human rights, they serve to promote violence and strengthen the resolve and assist in the political organization of the uprising.

Though theoretically governed by strict rules of engagement, the IDF in many cases disregarded its guidelines by indiscriminately firing plastic, rubber, and high velocity metal bullets. I have personally seen 5 young men in Jerusalem's Mikagged hospital brain dead from rubber still lodged in their heads. Human rights groups such as Amnesty International have documented numerous instances of beatings and ill-treatment of prisoners, and the potentially lethal misuse of tear gas within confined spaces.

Recognizing the difficulties faced by Israeli authorities administering the territories, the U.S. Government views these as violations of internationally recognized human rights. We on this Committee, in good conscience, can recognize them as nothing less. And while human rights issues are inextricably linked to the broader political conflict, we must emphasize these human rights abuses on a separate level, as problems which can and should be corrected by Israel alone.

I welcome our distinguished witnesses today and look forward to exploring these issues for the public record in candor and fairness.

THE PRIVATIZATION OF ART ACT

HON. PHILIP M. CRANE

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, today I introduced the Privatization of Art Act, a bill to abolish the National Endowment for the Arts. In this age of deficit spending and big government, we in Congress have a responsibility to do some belt-tightening and put a stop to intolerable agency funding practices. A good place to start is with the NEA.

The NEA states the following as its mission:

[To] foster artistic excellence by helping to develop the nation's finest creative talent, to preserve our cultural heritage in all its diversity, to make the arts available to wider, more informed audiences, and to promote the overall financial stability of American arts organizations.

Mr. Speaker, I am afraid the agency's good intentions have been abused. Certainly you will agree that homoerotic photographs are hardly "a demonstration of our nation's finest creative talent." Indeed, I am outraged that a performance by porn star Annie Sprinkle is considered part of our "cultural heritage" worthy of preservation while reading poetry to the homeless qualifies as "making the arts available to wider, more informed audiences." These abuses cannot be tolerated.

Some of my fellow lawmakers propose establishing standards for the use of NEA funds. Their critics cite the first amendment and cry, "censorship." I respond to these cries by echoing the words of my colleague, DANA ROHRABACHER: "Those who truly oppose Government control of the arts should oppose Government funding of the arts." I propose we abolish the agency altogether.

A common argument in the NEA appropriation debate is that art is a subjective term. What may be art to some can be considered trash to others.The definition of art should not be a government concern; that decision belongs inherently in the private sector. In fact, it has flourished there. Those who recognize art in America and support it have supported it generously. The United States has one of the largest proportions of private giving to the arts. In 1988 alone $6.8 billion was spent on arts advancement by American individuals, bequests, foundations, and corporations. Abolishing the NEA would not threaten the existence of art in America. Rather, it would take away a small percent of the funding it currently receives through involuntarily raised means.

Mr. Speaker, as politicians, we pledge to eliminate deficit spending, and as Members of Congress, we have a duty to do so. I cannot think of a better way to start than by returning art promotion to the private sector.

NIMITZ HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS REPRESENT TEXAS IN NATIONAL COMPETITION

HON. JACK FIELDS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate 30 Houston high school students for their achievements in the National Bicentennial Competition on the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. These students have demonstrated exceptional knowledge of democratic government and the documents that guarantee our freedoms.

The students representing Texas in this national competition are from Nimitz High School in Houston. They won their district competition, the Texas State competition, and now have made a fine showing in the national competition. This team of students received an award for scoring highest among teams from across the Nation on a unit of the competition titled "Fundamental Rights."

Mr. Speaker, it is easy to take for granted the freedoms that we, as Americans, enjoy. We must never forget that our basic freedoms—freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of religion and others—are not enjoyed by all peoples of the world. Our rights, as guaranteed by the Constitution and Bill of Rights, must be guarded carefully. We must teach our young, the inheritors and future guardians of this great country, the value of the gift they will receive.

These juniors and seniors from Nimitz High School have demonstrated an admirable knowledge of this gift. I am proud of these young people. They are fine representatives of Nimitz High School, their district coordinator Elizabeth Battle, their teacher Connie Sheldon, their district and the State of Texas. These students are: Mark Bennett, Shahid Bhaidani, Jason Brenek, Jennifer Caldcleugh, Karie Camp, Deanna Drew, LeRay Hall, Tiffany Hammer, Mia Harris, Dionne Schwab, Lisa Salmi, Chris Havard, Kathy Hua, Brad Hunt, Leslie Jeanes, Gentry Johns, Deana Larkin, Kelly Lyons, Margaret Mayes, Luke McCallum, Tony Peng, Laurie Renegar, Diana Rivera, Sara Rizvi, Erika Smejkal, Kelli Smith and Jon Venverloh.

NATIONAL INVENT AMERICA! WEEK

HON. MICHAEL BILIRAKIS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation designating the week of July 22 through July 28, 1990, as "National Invent America! Week."

I am taking this action with two specific purposes in mind. One, to pay tribute to what I have always felt to be at the heart of America: A creative and entreprenuerial spirit. And two, to encourage the boundless development of this spirit in the innovators and inventors of the future: our children.

The United States Patent Model Foundation, a private, nonprofit organization, is seeking to focus the Nation's attention on the critical pursuit of ideas in a global marketplace where America no longer is considered the undisputed leader. Therefore, in 1986, this organization launched its "Invent America!" program in elementary schools throughout the country.

Now in its fourth year, the program sponsors student invention programs and competitions designed to foster creativity and analytical problem-solving skills. Since its inception, more than 30,000 elementary schools have participated in this program and its school, State, regional and national competitions.

President George Bush serves as its honorary chairman and the program has the support of the U.S. Departments of Education and Commerce, as well as the National Science Foundation. In fact, Invent America! was singled out for recognition from among 140,000 such programs in the Secretary of Education's Special Report to the President, "America's Schools: Everybody's Business."

Invent America! enjoys wide private sector support as well. In fact, this successful public-private partnership is proof that government and industry can work together, hand-in-hand, keeping alive and nurturing the spirit of entrepreneurship and ingenuity in our Nation's young people.

I urge all of my colleagues who envision a bright and challenging future, Who can see the potential in young minds and who want to ensure that our young people are prepared to meet the future's challenges to cosponsor this legislation.

ZEB McKINNEY'S SERVICE TO SHILOH

HON. DON SUNDQUIST

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SUNDQUIST. Mr. Speaker, at the end of this month the Shiloh National Military Park will lose its exceptional superintendent, Zeb McKinney. After 14 years at Shiloh and 37 years with the National Park Service, Zeb is taking a well earned retirement to tend to family matters back home in North Carolina.

I have been pleased to call Zeb McKinney a friend and proud to support him in his efforts to preserve and protect one of our Nation's finest military parks. Those with an interest in the Civil War know well the story of the fierce fighting that took place in the woods and fields between Shiloh Church and Pittsburg Landing. The history of the brave men, Yankee and Rebel, who fought there on April 6 and 7, 1862, is painstakingly preserved at Shiloh National Military Park.

Zeb McKinney has been a forceful advocate for the park. He has shown initiative and foresight in planning its future. In addition, I have found him to be a thoughtful and informed advocate for environmental protection and the wise use and enjoyment of our natural resources.

Zeb McKinney has served with distinction and served as an example of spirited and committed public service. I ask my colleagues to join me in saluting his career and in wishing him well in his retirement.

TRIBUTE TO MISS ELLEN REPP

HON. AL SWIFT

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a woman who has graced American society on the educational and artistic stages, and indirectly the political arena. Miss Ellen Repp has been named the 1990 Distinguished Alumnus from Western Washington University in Bellingham, WA.

Miss Repp merged a devotion to teaching with a personal commitment to the advancement of excellence in the arts. The name may not be familiar to you, but her contributions over the years are not easily dismissed.

Already an accomplished musician—her musical training began when she answered an ad for 25-cent violin lessons as a child—Miss Repp came to Bellingham State Normal School, as Western Washington University was then named, in 1921. Throughout her academic career she remained involved in both the vocal and instrumental aspects of music, although she graduated with a degree in teaching. Repp went on to the University of Washington and continued to distinguish herself when she began vocal studies with noted Norwegian baritone August Werner.

Combining her interest in American history and politics with her love of music Repp performed during the summers and taught during the school year. While teaching junior high school civics in Everett Washington one of her pupils was the late Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson. The U.S. Senator and Miss Repp maintained a lifelong friendship. Jackson credited Repp's influence as a debate coach with sparking and nurturing his interest in domestic and international issues and politics.

It is said that Repp not only taught history, she made it! During her summer sojourn to pursue her interest in singing, Miss Repp journeyed to remote Alaskan outposts performing the works of the masters for miners, fishermen and Indians. One trip to Alaska even included a performance on Mount McKinley, North America's highest peak.

Miss Repp continued to make a name for herself earning the Medal of Saint Olav, one of Norway's highest honors, for her performances in benefit concerts for Norway during World War II. Miss Repp has appeared on Broadway and performed lead roles with most of the opera companies in the United States and Europe. She starred in the Metropolitan opera in New York, at LaScala in Italy and houses in Munich, Paris, London, Norway, and even Morrocco.

Apparently not one to rest upon her laurels, Miss Repp launched a third career as a voice teacher and has taught at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, the Oberlin Conservatory, Smith College, and the Manhattan School of Music. In her 88th year, she continues to travel to Munich each summer to teach vocal technique.

I wanted to call to the attention of my colleagues the many accomplishments of Miss Repp and congratulate her for the most deserved Distinguished Alumnus Award from Western Washington University.

WELCOME TO SOME VERY SPECIAL NEW AMERICANS

HON. SILVIO O. CONTE

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, it is with a special sense of pride that I inform the House that our Nation will welcome a group of young Americans Friday, including my grandson, Nicholas Alberto Certo. The Immigration and Naturalization Service is holding a citizenship ceremony in Arlington, VA, for young adoptees, the first time I am told that recognition for such children and their parents has been bestowed.

My own mother and father were naturalized Americans, and I have never forgotten their pride and that of their family over that accomplishment. I have a special warm feeling, therefore, in looking forward to Nicholas' certificate of citizenship ceremony. I congratulate his parents, my daughter Sylvia and my son-in-law Nicholas, for their love and perseverance in achieving his adoption.

It takes a long time, a lot of paperwork, and an abundance of faith to adopt a child from another country. And you need a lot of help. I especially want to express our appreciation to David Hobbs and Gloria Munoz in the U.S. Embassy in Bogota, Colombia for their repeated assistance, as well as Merceditas Restrepo Isaza, Luz Stella Monsalve, and Flor Olano de Pachon of the Instituto Colombiano de Bienestar Familiar and Reinaldo Rincon Guzman of the Colombian Ministry of External Relations for their conscientious attention to Nicholas during the 18 months it took to complete the adoption process.

As proud grandparents, my wife Corinne and I are looking forward to the ceremony Friday. It should be quite an affair with 38 children from 16 nations getting their certificates. The choirs from Francis Scott Key and Glen Carlyn Elementary Schools will perform, and our grandson is scheduled to sing "This Land is Your Land" and "It's a Grand Old Flag." I can't wait.

MEDICARE LEGISLATION

HON. JOE KOLTER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. KOLTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce a necessary piece of legislation. I do so in order to restore a modicum of equity to the Medicare system, which has been increasingly distorted during each year's budget reconciliation deliberation. My bill would repeal a requirement which was included in the 1989 reconciliation bill and passed without any real debate over its efficacy or the need for the mandate it contains.

Last November, we decided to impose a requirement that all physicians file all Medicare claims or be subject to penalties. This provision was enacted without regard to the fact that the Participating Physician Program already exists to encourage claims filing (the Participating Physician Program enacted in 1984) by compensating those doctors who contract with Medicare as participating physicians at a higher rate than nonparticipating physicians.

That program has been remarkably successful; 40.2 percent of all physicians treating Medicare patients are participating physicians. In addition, substantial numbers on nonparticipating physicians accept assignment on a case-by-case basis and consequently file those claims for the patients. Overall, 80 percent of all Medicare claims are taken on assignment and filed by physicians.

Yet, despite overwhelming evidence that no problem existed, Congress decided to impose that obligation on all physicians without regard to participants status or to the administrative burden and expense, it will impose on solo practitioners particularly in rural areas, and certainly without providing equitable compensation to those physicians who have not signed contracts with the U.S. Government.

I urge my fellow colleagues to join with me in removing this needless hassle of dubious benefit from the backs of physicians and from the "books" of the Federal Government.

TRIBUTE TO JAMES J. HARRINGTON, RECIPIENT OF THE 1990 PWAMA DISTRICT GOOD DEED AWARD

HON. THOMAS J. DOWNEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 9, 1990

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Mr. James J. Harrington, superintendent of highways, town of Babylon. Jim Harrington has been selected as this year's recipient of the Pwama District of the Boy Scouts of America's Good Deed award. The Good Deed award is presented annually to outstanding community leaders in the town of Babylon and West Islip.

Jim Harrington has proved himself to be such an outstanding community leader through his extensive involvement in Suffolk County affairs. Professionally, Jim was a member of the Suffolk County Police Department of 20 years, retiring as a detective in 1983. While a member of the police force, he was most active in the PBA, serving for 9 years on the board of governors. Continuing his activities in the PBA, he served as first precinct trustee, editor for the PBA publication The Shield, recording secetary, and, ultimately, vice president of the association.

Elected Babylon highway superintendent in November 1983, Jim has been reelected to that post three times. And, as if this post was not enough to keep him busy, Jim spends enormous amounts of time serving his community through his volunteer efforts. Jim is a past vice president of the Babylon Chapter of the American Cancer Society. He is an active member of the Babylon Lions Club and the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and also served as an active volunteer firefighters for the North Babylon Fire Department for 20 years. He is a life member of this highly honored fire company.

Jim's most recent project would bring together area Boy Scout troops with handicapped residents who could use their good deed services. This would be a valuable program to the local community, and it further exemplifies the extent of Jim Harrington's commitment to community service. That is why I am grateful, Mr. Speaker, to have this opportunity to publicly recognize the Good Deed award and the many merits of this year's recipient, Mr. James Harrington.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, May 10, 1990, may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

MAY 11

9:15 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings on challenges facing the U.S., focusing on policies to foster competitiveness.
SR-253

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Projection Forces and Regional Defense Subcommittee
To resume hearings to examine possible approaches to naval arms control.
SD-430

Governmental Affairs
Federal Services, Post Office, and Civil Service Subcommittee
To hold hearings on the Airborne Self-Protection Jammer (ASPJ) weapons system.
SD-342

Veterans' Affairs
To hold hearings on S. 2483, to improve educational assistance programs for veterans, S. 2484, to improve the housing loan program for veterans, and veterans employment programs, including section 401 and 404(c) of S. 2100, Veterans Compensation Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act.
SR-418

Select on Indian Affairs
To hold oversight hearings on initiatives for Indian programs for the 1990s.
SH-216

10:00 a.m.
Finance
Social Security and Family Policy Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2453, to establish the Social Security Administration as an independent agency.
SD-215

MAY 14

2:00 p.m.
Appropriations
Interior Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for fossil energy and clean coal technology programs of the Department of Energy.
S-128, Capitol

Armed Services
Defense Industry and Technology Subcommittee
To resume hearings on S. 2171, authorizing funds for fiscal year 1991 for military functions of the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on implementation of the Defense Management Report.
SR-232A

Select on Indian Affairs
To hold oversight hearings on S. 1021, to provide for the protection of Indian graves and burial grounds, and S. 1980, to provide for the repatriation of Native American group or cultural patrimony.
SR-485

MAY 15

9:00 a.m.
Governmental Affairs
Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations
To hold hearings to examine fraud and abuse in employer-sponsored health benefit plans.
SD-342

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Manpower and Personnel Subcommittee
To resume hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for military functions of the Department of Defense, and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on medical programs of the Department of Defense.
SR-232A

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense, focusing on seapower.
SD-192

Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Departments of Veterans Affairs, Housing and Urban Development, and independent agencies.
SD-138

Armed Services
Projection Forces and Regional Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense and to prescribe personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the state and capabilities of the U.S. Marine Corps for special operations and low intensity conflict.
SR-222

Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Science, Technology, and Space Subcommittee
To hold hearings to review commercial space programs.
SR-253

Energy and Natural Resources
To hold hearings on S. 2415, to encourage solar and geothermal power production by removing the size limitations contained in the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978.
SD-366

Environment and Public Works
To hold hearings on proposed legislation to finance environmental protection facilities in small communities, including S. 1296, S. 1331, S. 2184, and S. 1514.
SD-406

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on population policy and resources.
SD-138

MAY 16

9:00 a.m.
Labor and Human Resources Business meeting, to consider pending calendar business.
SD-430

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Consumer Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine environmental labeling of consumer products.
SR-253

Energy and Natural Resources Business meeting, to consider pending calendar business.
SD-366

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To continue hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Departments of Veterans Affairs, Housing and Urban Development, and independent agencies.

SD-138

Environment and Public Works
Water Resources, Transportation, and Infrastructure Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine the maintenance of Hell Gate Bridge in Queens, New York.
SD-406

2:00 p.m.
Armed Services
Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence Subcommittee
To hold closed hearings on S. 2171, authorizing funds for military functions of the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the space launch and command, control, communications and intelligence programs.
S-407, Capitol

Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Merchant Marine Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2170, to prescribe the conditions under which contractors receiving operating-differential subsidy of their affiliates may engage in coastwise or intercoastal trade.
SR-253

Small Business
To resume hearings to examine the Small Business Administration's small business investment companies program.
SR-428A

MAY 17

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense, focusing on space programs.
S-407, Capitol

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Science, Technology, and Space Subcommittee
To hold hearings on semi-conductors and the future of the U.S. electronics industry.
SR-253

Environment and Public Works
To hold hearings on S. 1462, to create a Federal nuclear facility environmental response fund, and to create an Office of Environmental Management and Remedial Action within the Department of Energy.
SD-406

Veterans' Affairs
To hold hearings on titles I and III of S. 2100, Veterans Compensation Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act, S. 1887, to allow for Kentucky Vietnam veterans to receive a one-time bonus from the Commonwealth, S. 2454, to increase the estate limits for certain incompetent institutionalized veterans, S. 2482, to clarify the eligibility of certain minors for burial in national cemeteries and to authorize use of flat grave markers in a section of Florida National Cemetery, S. 2102, to modify certain congressional reporting requirements imposed upon the Secretary of Veterans Affairs for certain administrative reorganizations within the Department of Veterans Affairs, and proposed legislation to expand radiation presumptions for veterans.
SR-418

10:00 a.m.
Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To continue hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Departments of Veterans Affairs, Housing and Urban Development, and independent agencies.
SD-138

2:00 p.m.
Armed Services
Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for military functions of the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the Strategic Defense Initiative.
SD-628

Energy and Natural Resources
Public Lands, National Parks and Forests Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1852 and H.R. 3545, to revise the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Development Act to make certain changes relating to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal National Historical Park Commission, S. 1990, to establish the Cliff Walk National Historic Site, S. 2011 and H.R. 2843, to authorize the expansion of the Tumacacori National Monument, S. 2067 and H.R. 3834, to designate the route from Seima to Montgomery for study for potential addition to the National Trails System, S. 2072, to authorize a study of nationally significant places in American history, S. 2262, to designate segments of the Sudbury, Assabet, and Concord Rivers as a study area for inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, S. 2437, to authorize the acquisition of certain lands in Louisiana for inclusion in the Vicksbury National Military Park, and S. 2566, to redesignate the Sunset Crater National Monument as the Sunset Crater Volcano National Monument.
SD-366

MAY 18

9:30 a.m.
Environment and Public Works
Superfund, Ocean and Water Protection Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1697, to require local educational agencies to conduct testing for radon contamination in schools.
SD-406

Finance
Medicare and Long-Term Care Subcommittee
To hold hearings on recommendations for the Medicare Volume Performance Standards (MVPS) for fiscal year 1991, which is the rate of growth in spending for physician services reimbursed by the Medicare program.
SD-215

MAY 21

1:00 p.m.
Select on Indian Affairs
To hold hearings on the nomination of Carl J. Kunasek, of Arizona, to be Commissioner on the Navajo and Hopi Relocation.
SR-485

MAY 22

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold closed hearings on proposed budget estimates for the Department of Defense, focusing on classified programs.
S-407, Capitol

9:30 a.m.
Armed Services
Projection Forces and Regional Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2171, to authorize funds for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense and to prescribe military personnel levels for fiscal year 1991, focusing on the Navy shipbuilding and conversion program.
SR-222

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on the global environment.
SD-138

MAY 23

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings to review the Administration's technology policy and priorities.
SR-253

1:30 p.m.
Appropriations
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Resolution Trust Corporation, and the Office of Inspector General.
SD-138

2:00 p.m.
Energy and Natural Resources
Public Lands, National Parks and Forests Subcommittee
To hold oversight hearings on the "Report of the Interagency Scientific Committee to Address the Conservation of the Northern Spotted Owl."
SD-366

2:30 p.m.
Armed Services
Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence Subcommittee
To hold hearings on the Department of Energy national security budget request for fiscal year 1991.
SR-253

MAY 24

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To resume hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for defense programs.
SD-192

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Foreign Commerce and Tourism Subcommittee
To hold hearings to examine ways to expand U.S. exports abroad.
SR-253

JUNE 5

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Defense Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for the Department of Defense.
SD-192

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To resume hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on organization and accountability.
SD-138

JUNE 7

9:30 a.m.
Judiciary
To hold hearings to examine the effects on judicial nominees belonging to private clubs that discriminate.
SD-226

Veterans' Affairs
To hold oversight hearings on veterans' prosthetics and special-disabilities programs.
SR-418

2:00 p.m.
Select on Indian Affairs
To hold oversight hearings to examine the Indian health service nurse shortage.
SR-485

JUNE 12

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings in conjunction with the National Ocean Policy Study on proposed legislation authorizing funds for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's satellite programs.
SR-253

Select on Ethics
To hold hearings on matters relating to the investigation involving Senator Durenberger.
SH-216

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on Eastern Europe.
SD-138

JUNE 13

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Communications Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 2358, providing U.S. consumers the opportunity to enjoy the technological advancement in sound recording by use of digital audio tape recorders.
SR-253

JUNE 14

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
To hold hearings in conjunction with the National Ocean Policy Study on proposed legislation authorizing funds for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's ocean and coastal programs.
SR-253

Veterans' Affairs
To hold hearings on title II and section 402 of S. 2100, relating to veterans physician pay and health issues, S. 1860, to require the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to furnish outpatient medical services for any disability of a former prisoner of war, S. 2455, to provide for recovery by the United States of the cost of medical care and services furnished for a non-service-connected disability, S. 2456, to extend expiring laws authorizing the Department of Veterans Affairs to contract for needed care and to revise authority to furnish outpatient dental care, and other proposed legislation.
SR-418

JUNE 19

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance, focusing on U.S. military assistance.
SD-138

JUNE 20

9:30 a.m.
Commerce, Science, and Transportation
Communications Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1974, to require new televisions to have built in decoder circuitry designed to display closed-captioned television transmissions.
SR-253

JUNE 26

9:00 a.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To resume hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance programs.
Room to be announced

2:30 p.m.
Appropriations
Foreign Operations Subcommittee
To continue hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 1991 for foreign assistance programs.
Room to be announced

JUNE 28

9:30 a.m.
Veterans' Affairs
Business meeting, to consider pending legislation relating to veterans compensation and health-care benefits.
SR-418

JULY 12

9:30 a.m.
Select on Indian Affairs
To hold hearings to examine protective services for Indian children, focusing on alcohol and substance abuse programs.
SR-485

CANCELLATIONS

MAY 10

9:30 a.m.
Governmental Affairs
To hold hearings on S. 1951, to establish the Interagency Council on Science, Mathematics, and Technology Education.
SD-342

MAY 11

10:00 a.m.
Judiciary
Constitution Subcommittee
To hold hearings on S. 1810, to authorize the Attorney General to conduct a pilot program within the Department of Justice to determine compliance with the Fair Housing Act.
SD-226

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, May 10, 1990

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Reverend Douglas Tanner, Virginia Conference, United Methodist Church, offered the following prayer:

O God, creator and sustainer of us all, we gather before You as a group of very human beings in a profession that takes its toll on our humanity. We carry the same doubts and fears, the same broken places, the same weaknesses as our brothers and sisters in other walks of life. We are encouraged, though, to hide our flaws, and to continually project confidence and strength. You, O Lord, know us as we truly are, and You are here in our midst. Grant us an awareness of Your presence among us and Your acceptance of us, that we might respond, as loving human beings of integrity. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. KENNELLY) please come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance?

Mrs. KENNELLY led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 922. An act to designate the building located at 1515 Sam Houston Street in Liberty, Texas, as the "M.P. Daniel and Thomas F. Calhoon, Senior, Post Office Building";

H.R. 2890. An act to designate the Federal Building and United States Courthouse located at 750 Missouri Avenue in East St. Louis, IL, as the "Melvin Price Federal Building and United States Courthouse"; and

H.J. Res. 453. Joint resolution designating May 1990 as "National Digestive Disease Awareness Month."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S.J. Res. 286. Joint resolution to designate the week beginning May 6, 1990, as "National Correctional Officers Week."

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the previous announcement of the Chair, the 1-minute statements will be limited to five on each side.

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION PROTECTING THE STATUS OF LITHUANIAN NATIONALS

(Mr. DONNELLY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include therein extraneous material.)

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, I am introducing legislation today, along with Congressmen DURBIN, RUSSO, WOLPE, GEJDENSON, and HERTEL, to grant to citizens of Lithuania the same benefits afforded nonimmigrants from the People's Republic of China under President Bush's recent Executive order.

Mr. Speaker, as a supporter of the legislation dealing with Chinese students, I am well aware of the special consideration which must be shown to individuals temporarily visiting the United States from countries undergoing civil unrest. Certainly, Lithuania fits that description. Every morning, the news from that troubled region of the world is worse.

Unfortunately, the President vetoed the Pelosi legislation, but to his credit, President Bush has issued an Executive order protecting individuals from China from immigration law requirements that they return home. No such protections apply to Lithuania nationals, however, our legislation provides it.

Our consular office in Leningrad issued over 1,300 nonimmigrant visas to Lithuanian nationals in 1989. Although it is unclear how many are still in the United States, some or all of them will be helped by our legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge prompt and favorable consideration of this bill by the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, and I submit a technical description of my legislation.

LEGISLATION PROTECTING THE STATUS OF CERTAIN NATIONALS OF LITHUANIA

SECTION 1.—TITLE

The Act is cited as the "Emergency Lithuanian Immigration Relief Act of 1990."

SECTION 2.—STATUS OF CERTAIN NATIONALS OF LITHUANIA

(a) Waiver of two-year home residency requirement: Under present law, nonimmigrants in the United States on a "J" visa (i.e., visas for students, trainees, teachers, professors, research assistants, or specialists in any field) must generally satisfy a two-year home residency requirement before applying for immigrant status, or a change in nonimmigrant status.

The bill waives the two-year residency requirement in the case of a Lithuanian national who (1) is present in the United States on May 10, 1990 and (2) files a petition for adjustment in change of status within 4 years of enactment of the legislation. Thus, Lithuanian nationals could apply for U.S. citizenship, permanent resident status, or a different class of nonimmigrant visa within four years of enactment without satisfying the home residency requirement.

(b) Presumption of Continuous Residence in the U.S. If, under present law, an alien applies for adjustment to permanent resident status or a change in nonimmigrant status, the individual must generally have had a "continuous period of lawful residence" in the United States. The bill deems this requirement to be met in the case of a national of Lithuania who was present in the United States on May 10, 1990. The requirement is deemed met for as long as the Secretary of State certifies to Congress that the Soviet Union has economic or military sanctions in effect against Lithuania.

(c) Employment Authorization: Generally, most classes of nonimmigrants are not authorized to engage in employment while in the United States. The bill authorizes any nonimmigrant to engage in employment in the United States for such period of time as the Secretary of State certifies to Congress that the Soviet Union has economic or military sanctions in effect against Lithuania.

(d) Notification Required: In the case of any national of Lithuania, the bill requires the Attorney General to notify the individual when their authorized period of stay has expired (i.e., instead of initiating deportation proceedings). The notice is to be nonadversarial in nature and must contain a list of legal options for the individual.

FLEXIBLE SPENDING LIMITS AS AN ALTERNATIVE

(Mr. WALSH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, the Democrats have accused Republicans of being against spending limits. Well Republicans are interested in spending limits, too.

Recently, a bipartisan panel of experts assembled by the Senate to look at the issue of campaign finance reform proposed a concept which they coined flexible spending limits.

Simply, this plan would limit overall spending of funds contributed by PAC's and individuals who do not live in that Member's district. The right of political parties and constituents to contribute to their candidates would be unimpaired.

The benefits of the plan to candidates would be to free them from their dependence on special interest groups, and nonresidents.

The bottom line, is that if a candidate cannot garner enough support in their own district to be elected, then they do not deserve to be elected.

However, we must be mindful of the fact that spending limits will not by themselves reduce the amount of money in elections. This can only be done by greater limitations on PAC contributions, as well as stricter disclosure rules.

Republicans in this House are ready for meaningful reform, we are awaiting the Democrats.

IS JOHN DEMJANJUK REALLY IVAN THE TERRIBLE?

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, this Monday Israel will hear the appeal of John Demjanjuk. Demjanjuk is the Cleveland auto worker who has been convicted of being the infamous Ivan the Terrible of Treblinka.

The problem Mr. Speaker, is that more and more evidence continues to surface that casts a great shadow on this particular case. Now it has been found in documents not released that Cashmir Dudek said that Ivan had black hair; Joseph Wojak, Ivan had black hair; Maria Dudek, Ivan had black hair and his name was Marczenko; Eugenia Samuels, Ivan had black hair. Everybody on record said he had black hair, was in his late thirties, over 190 centimeters, 6-foot-4. John Demjanjuk was 22 years old at the time and had blond hair.

Mr. Speaker, I am saying the Polish War Crimes Commission had the facts, and before America's investigation lets the shadow from history hang over Israel, we should press the Polish War Crimes Commission for all the information on Ivan Marczenko and John Demjanjuk. History does not deserve to let Ivan the Terrible go scot-free and, if there is any doubt, the world should know the truth and the facts. We should push for it.

□ 1010

MUSIC LABELING

(Mr. NIELSON of Utah asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that the music and music videotape industries should develop and use a uniform warning and disclosure system regarding violence and perversity which has become a significant element of those industries.

All one has to do is read the lead articles in the May 7 issue of Time magazine and the March 19 Newsweek to realize we have a major problem. Bills have been introduced in at least 12 State legislatures because so many are concerned.

Music almost by definition is meant to influence the psyche of man—and women, too. Martial music often stirs feeling of patriotism, a desire to march. The affect of romantic music needs no explanation. The word "lyric," Websters tells us, means, "expressing direct usually intense personal emotion expecially in a manor suggestive of song * * *."

Fortunately, most music is uplifting to the human spirit. But unfortunately, more and more of the music targeting our children and grandchildren are suggestive of violence, satanism, vandalism, rape, murder, drug abuse, suicide, human sacrifice, degradation of race, women, children, and human life, not to mention bestiality, sadism, masochism, and other perversions.

Nevertheless, my resolution is not in any way aimed at curtailing speech protected under the first amendment. Rather, it is directed toward encouraging the music industry to develop its own system of warning and disclosure so that purchasers and particularly parents and guardians can have some idea of what is contained in the package.

For years we have required warning on cigarette packages and listing of ingredients on morning cereal boxes so that you can make some judgment as to affect on physical health. Can it be more onerous to have a warning and the contents of a music package available so you may judge the affect on emotional health?

I am gratified that the president of the Recording Industry Association of America [RIAA], Jay Berman, held a press conference only yesterday announcing the adoption of a standard logo to be stickered to recording products. The logo provides parental advisory of explicit lyrics. Mr. Berman believes that virtually the whole industry will fall in line, but it will be weeks or months before a list of those which will comply is available.

While this effort is a great stride forward, it is by no means the end of the journey. For example, the position of the logo could be better located as a flag of warning. The system does not cover music videos which, with the added visual dimension, can be more inflamatory than words and music alone. Finally, a means of knowing of what we are being warned is not considered. The guidelines of my resolution fill these voids.

ED MADIGAN, JIM HANSEN, HERB BATEMAN, JOE BARTON, CLAUDE HARRIS, BILL DANNEMEYER, RICHARD STALLINGS, and DAN BURTON have already joined in expressing concern. I will be in touch with many if not all of you so that you, too, can urge the recording industry to give us the tools to monitor a major and powerful influence in our children's lives.

WHERE IS THE PRESIDENT?

(Mr. ECKART asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, the President is missing. Only President Bush can settle the terrible raging debate within the Republican Party over whether or not he will raise taxes to tame the deficit. We have heard a lot about the President's position. We have heard about it from everyone but the President himself, and the American people are asking all over, where is the President?

White House spokesman and acting president Marlin Fitzwater said that we will consider anything to reduce the deficit. But where is the President?

House Republican leaders say everying is on the the table, but where is the President?

Even the major Republican campaign operative, Ed Rollins, says the President's position is a disaster, but where is the President?

Nineteen Senate Republicans say to the President, "Don't raise taxes." But where is the President?

Last week when the President's own party would not even offer the President's own budget on the floor of the House, where was the President?

And just 5 months ago the President stood here in the well giving us the State of the Union Address and said, "Read my lips."

Today, where is the President?

But that was then and this is now, and people all over America are asking that famous question, Where is George?

RETURN OUR ELECTIONS TO THE GRASSROOTS

(Mr. CLINGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I would join my colleague, the gentleman from New York, in urging that our elections should be decided by the people in our districts. To win an election, we have to campaign in our districts for a majority of votes. But today when Members campaign for funds, increasingly they turn to Washington, New York, and Los Angeles. Distant money is determining the results of what are supposed to be local elections. Mr. Speaker, that is not right. Let us return our elections to the grassroots.

Let us require that a majority of campaign funds come from within a candidate's district. Then our constituents would determine how much money each candidate is permitted to spend. Indeed, spending limits will be set at the local level by constituents, not in Washington by incumbents.

Candidates with strong, broadly based district support will have an advantage over candidates aligned with distant special interests. Candidates will be encouraged to have grassroots campaigns that emphasize hands-on voter contact instead of expensive media blitzes.

Mr. Speaker, let us return our elections to our constituents and require candidates to raise a majority of their campaign funds from their districts.

DEMOCRATS WILL NOT PUT TAXES ON THE TABLE

(Mr. SCHUMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, we read in today's morning newspaper that some high-up officials in the White House are saying, "We are allowing them"—the Democrats—"to bring their good arguments for taxes to the table," a senior official said of the Democrats; whether that was Chief of Staff John Sununu or someone else. We have a message to the whole White House, "Don't worry. Democrats will not put taxes on the table."

After all, it was the White House that called the summit. It was the President that called the summit. It is the President who sees a state of emergency. It is the President who is saying behind closed doors that something has got to change.

Well, it is up to the President to tell us, No. 1, what the crisis is; and No. 2, what he intends to do about it.

This House has passed a budget, a very good budget, a fine budget. It does deficit reduction. It does not raise taxes. It is a document we can be proud of.

If the President thinks something is wrong with this budget, let him tell us what it is. Let him put his counterproposal on the table.

But we say to the President, "Don't worry. We're not putting taxes on the table. We have our budget and we are moving forward."

IMPACT—THE ART OF NEBRASKA WOMEN

(Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I am very proud to be sponsoring the Washington debut of an outstanding art exhibition featuring 33 paintings and photographs and three sculptures created by 35 outstanding artists, in fact superbly talented women from across Nebraska.

This exhibition is on display today and will be on display through May 17 in the rotunda of the Cannon House Office Building.

This exhibition provides an opportunity to view a magnificent array of contemporary works created by Nebraska women, women recognized for their significant contributions to the visual arts. The exhibition is an ensemble of work shared through dedicated cooperative effort depicting the history of Nebraska, making a social statement showing Nebraska past and present, evoking nostalgia showing Nebraska, past and present, and some of it as "art for art's sake."

I hope you will take the opportunity to come by the rotunda of the Cannon Building and I hope you will have a minute to visit with four of those outstanding artists who are here for the week; Amy Sadle of Columbus, Judy Greff of Burwell, Patsy Smith of North Platte and Sue Olson-Mandler of Bellevue.

IT IS TIME TO HEAR FROM THE PRESIDENT ON THE BUDGET

(Mr. TORRICELLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, we are told that there is a budget crisis in America, that indeed this crisis threatens the very economic health of our Nation. Among our colleagues, I am sure each has an idea. Both parties have proposals. Both Houses of this Congress have legislation they might propose; but Mr. Speaker, there is one President. We have heard from his press spokesman. We have heard from his political aides. We have heard from his consultants, but the American people have not heard from the President of the United States.

Presumably George Bush became President of this country because he wanted to provide leadership, because he had ideas, because he cared for its economic and its budgetary health.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for the President to speak. It is time that we heard from this President on what is it he intends to do, what ideas is it that he would bring forward.

Mr. Speaker, the President waits, but the Nation deserves to hear.

□ 1020

DO NOT GIVE THEM EVEN A NICKEL

(Mr. SOLOMON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, after listening to the last speaker and several from that side of the aisle, I am compelled to read from an excerpt of a letter I am going to deliver to the White House in a few minutes.

It says, "Mr. President, don't be fooled by these big-spending liberals in the Congress that are trying to force you into agreeing to raise taxes. Mr. President, you know, I know, and those big-spending liberals know, without raising taxes, we will receive almost $100 billion, not a million, $100 billion this coming year in new revenues just because of Ronald Reagan, George Bush economic growth factors throughout the last 10 years.

"If that money, along with a little belt-tightening like your constituents have to do," you people on that side of the aisle, "was used to lower the deficit instead of increasing spending, we would not need any new taxes."

"Mr. President, what this Congress gets, Congress spends. Don't give them a nickel."

PERMISSION FOR MEMBER TO SIGN AND SUBMIT A LIST OF ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS ON H.R. 3677

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may sign and submit a list of additional cosponsors on the bill, H.R. 3677.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DONNELLY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1989

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 388 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 770.

□ 1021

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 770) to entitle employees to family leave in certain cases involving a birth, an adoption, or a serious health condition and to temporary medical leave in certain cases involving a serious health condition, with adequate protection of the employees' employment and benefit rights, and to establish a commission to study ways of providing salary replacement for employees who take any such leave, with Mrs. KENNELLY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Wednesday, May 9, 1990, 60 minutes remained in general debate.

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] has 30 minutes remaining in general debate and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has 30 minutes remaining in general debate.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY].

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], and I ask unanimous consent that she be allowed to control that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Madam Chairman, this has been an interesting issue for Members of Congress, and I would like to share my experience with my colleagues on the floor and those listening to this debate.

Over the last several years, there have been any number of business representatives who have come to my office to speak against the bill which we are now considering, the Family Medical Leave Act. I have asked in each instance of those who have come to lobby the following questions: "As the owner of a business, are you prepared, or is it your policy, to fire an employee who has worked for you for several years if that employee asks for time off without pay to go home with a dying child or to be home, of course, for the birth of their own child?" In every single instance, the business person who presented himself to lobby me against this bill said, "Of course not. That is inhumane. We would not do that to our employees."

I said, "While these employees are gone because of some medical tragedy in their family, have you said to them, 'We are going to cut you off in terms of your hospitalization insurance?' "

They said, "Of course not. What do you take us for? We care for our employees."

And I have said to each of them, "Then you need not worry about this bill, because the provisions of this bill do no more than what you are presently giving your own employees."

Why is it that the business organizations did not send around to lobby those businesses representing policies which are contrary to this law? Why do they not send us the employer who will say, "Of course, I will fire the woman who wants to go home and have a baby. Of course, I would fire a person who wants to go home with an ailing relative?" They do not send those people around because they do not make a very convincing case.

Ladies and gentlemen of the House, this legislation brings to a minimal standard basic standards of decency and dignity and compassion when it comes to dealing with the employees of America.

To say that we are going to turn our backs on those who are suffering because of a tragedy in their family and stand behind the handful of employers who do not have that compassion is not the policy nor should it be the policy of this country.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the ditinguished ranking member of the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. GOODLING. Madam Chairman, one could argue this issue and argue it legitimately strictly on the idea that mandates should not come from Congress when we are talking about employers and employees. That is something they negotiate.

But I want to go beyond that. I want to talk a little bit about the economy as we presently see it and what the legislation that is coming from my committee could do to that economy.

We have been pretty spoiled the last 6, 7, 8 years. The economy has been progressing quite rapidly, growing constantly, but some of the air may be going out of that balloon. If it does, then we certainly do not want to take this opportunity to mandate expenses to businesses at a time when all of the good work that we think we are doing may go for nought because they will end up not having a job anyway.

I want to talk about what we are doing as a committee collectively, because each one of these individual titles that is coming before us sounds awfully good. They are motherhood. They are apple pie and ice cream. All of us would like to see them.

But let me tell the Members what they mean collectively. I have said several times that our committee should have to do an employment impact study before we release any of our bills to the Congress of the United States to act on.

Let me talk about the total package that we have had or will be having before our committee: minimum wage, civil rights, Americans with Disabilities Act, high-risk notification, pension reversions, ERISA amendments, mandated leave, age discrimination waivers, mandated health benefits. Those are just a few from our committee. Then put on top of that clean air and a few others. What I am calling to the attention of the Members is that the economy is pretty shaky at the present time, and we want to be very, very careful that we in the Congress of the United States do not cause the limbs to shake even more, that we bring the growth that we are now having down to a standstill and we end up, as I said, providing benefits, but it will be unemployment benefits if we are not careful.

Again, please, do not look at each one of these individually. Look at the impact that all of them are going to have when we talk about increasing the cost of production, and then the increased costs at a time when we are trying to survive in a very competitive world.

Again, look at the overall package coming from the Committee on Education and Labor at this particular time, and think seriously about the damage we may do to a growing economy which is struggling at the present time.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, members of both political parties talk a good game and give lipservice to "family values" but too often turn their backs when a concrete proposal to give much needed support to working families comes forward.

After the long hours we have spent debating this issue there are some things that are well known, some which are honest differences of opinion and some which are dowright fiction.

Now some facts. As ranking Republican on the Labor-Management Subcommittee, I have a strong record of support for business, large and small, over my 10 years in this Congress.

I have labored long to develop a compromise bill—far different from the original parental leave bill. This legislation balances the problems and hard realities facing working families with the legitimate concerns of the business community.

By now, most of my colleagues know that I am a mother of three and that I personally cared for my own son when he was terminally ill with leukemia.

It has come as a surprise to me that it was a surprise to most of my colleagues that my family had endured this personal tragedy. Yes, I suppose that gives me unique perspective on the stresses and strains working people must endure everyday.

I continually asked myself during this process: "what would I have done if I not only had the tragedy and the trauma of caring for my child, but also had to worry about losing a job and a roof over my head?"

And this question, my friends on both sides of the aisle, is a question faced everyday in this country.

Each day, hard-working, tax-paying Americans lose their jobs because a family medical emergency requires that they take time off to give temporary care to a seriously ill member of the family. It may be a child dying of cancer who needs a mother's loving care. It may be a beloved parent who is terminally ill and requires home care.

In a day and age when the majority of American families need two paychecks to get by, it is inconceivable that we do not have a minimum guarantee of job security when a medical emergency strikes. The debate over the Family and Medical Leave Act is not about mandates or benefit packages. It is about values and a standard of decency to protect the jobs for workers trying to capture a piece of the American dream.

This case has clearly been made and the supportive data is compelling. Two-thirds of the women in the work force are there out of economic necessity. Job security for both wage-earners is now crucial.

Now to my efforts at compromise and the cost of this bill.

BUSINESS LOBBY

The organized business lobby in Washington is out of step with the real world and that includes conscientious, no-nonsense, bottom-line business people at the grassroots. The lobbyists have overreacted in a way that no one can explain to me.

I was the architect of the committee compromise bill which dealt with every legitimate small business concern. The compromise contains the flexibility needed to continue productive, uninterrupted operations:

First, key employee exemption;

Second, medical certification;

Third, specialized divisions; and Fourth, permanent employees.

And the argument has been raised that granting this job security guarantee will force employers to cancel or curtail other benefits. Not one State, not one business, has come forward to say that adopting a similar or more far-reaching leave policy has caused disruptions or declines in productivity.

The firestorm over this bill was created by the paid business lobby here in Washington.

Now let's separate fact from fiction. Is this a radical departure from the traditions of American labor law? Not at all. It is completely consistent with established labor standards which gave us such protections as child labor laws, antisweatshop codes and the 40-hour work week. As society has changed, we have always adjusted our labor protection standards to meet the new circumstances.

And this issue of playing off benefits packages against leave may have superficial plausibility. It simply just does not hold up under analysis.

The GAO calculates the benefit at just over $5 dollars per covered employee. What can you buy in an alternative benefits package? Nothing. It is a specious argument.

In conclusion, I would ask for the personal attention of President Bush. He is a compassionate, sensitive family man. Yes, he and all of us should be concerned about imposing costly new mandates, that is, mandated health benefits, asset reversion.

Let us not say "women and children last." But, job security for America's hard-working, tax-paying families is not one of them.

Let us pass this bill now.

□ 1030

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MOODY].

Mr. MOODY. Madam Chairman, as an economist, I just want to make two brief points about this bill. One, it is cost effective to pass this bill, and two, it is not anticompetitive.

On cost effective, let me make this point briefly: as long as there is a welfare system in our country, and there always will be, and thank goodness we have a safety net, as long as that exists, then someone on a very low income who is working who has to leave that job and be fired because they want to take care of the first few weeks of their child's new life, that person may not get back to work for quite a while.

We all know that the longer a person is off work, the harder it is to regain employment. So that person, yes, the employer may have the lack of a mandate, so-called, but society picks up an extra welfare bill. It is expensive to put people on welfare. That balances very close for some people at the low income level.

So we should do everything we can to make sure people for whom welfare is an alternative in fact have every incentive to stay on the job. So it is cost effective from a budgetary point of view.

No. 2, competitiveness. Over 100 countries, our trading competitors, have this provision. In fact, many of them have paid family leave, not unpaid, as this would be.

I think it is a slander on United States business to say that our businesses need an extra margin, an extra edge, in order to be competitive. I do not believe that. I think the United States business can compete on the same footing with Japan and Germany and Korea and France and England, all those countries that have this provision. Why is it uncompetitive for us to have it when our business in fact is productive.

This is not anticompetitive. It puts us on the same playing field and it is humane for our own people. So on economic grounds alone, not to mention compassion grounds, pro-family grounds, this measure should be passed.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Madam Chairman, as we begin round two on the parental family and medical leave debate this morning, let me call to mind the words of our departed retired colleague, Mr. Gene Taylor of Missouri, who had a pretty good way to assess the value of legislation. He had three criteria. One was who does it really help; two is how much does it really cost; and three, if it is really necessary, how have we gotten along without it for this long?

Let us begin with who this really helps. Well, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] has said dual family incomes, and that is probably true. But can it be argued that it helps single family income earners, either single parents or parents with one person earning income, or those families with $11,000 or less annual income?

Probably not, because they are at the lower end of the spectrum and cannot afford to take that benefit. These are not just my words. The New York Times today in an editorial has said as much.

Let me ask who it really helps in terms of families, in terms of bonding. Does this really help a young working couple with kids older than newborns who might be more concerned with the first 10 years of life than the first 10 weeks, who might need additional child care benefits over and above what we are trying to do in H.R. 3? No, because their ability to negotiate that benefit will probably be proscribed by this mandate.

Will it help that young child that might have a congenital birth defect, let us say kidney disease? Yes, sure, 12 weeks of unpaid leave is valuable, but is it as good as extra medical coverage that might pay for the dialysis machine or the transplant?

Who are we really trying to help here? Who is really going to take advantage of this legislation? How much does it really cost? Five dollars per employee. Of course, that is up from $4 last year, and that is based only on the cost of health care, which, by the way, grows at 30 percent every year.

But that does not figure in the quadruple damages which will be assessed under this bill if you are found in violation. It does not figure in litigation. It does not figure in the retraining costs, the costs of going out and recruiting and rehiring temporary employees. It does not figure in what kind of drain might be on a State unemployment insurance plan if you have to pay those temporary employees when the present employee comes back.

□ 1040

Madam Chairman, what about this statement in the rule? We have a provision in this bill to establish a commission to study ways of providing salary replacement for employees who take such leave, salary replacement. That is paid leave. Is that what we are doing in this bill? Are we providing a stalking horse and a reason to mandate paid leave down the line? Does anybody know what the cost of that is?

To tell people that this bill does not cost anything is an outrageous lie. It is bogus. It is untrue and it is deceitful.

First of all look at the bill in the Senate. In the other body they have 20 employees as a threshold. This bill has 50. Now what is the usual compromise between 50 and 20? Probably 35. That means more employers are covered, that means greater costs.

Finally, let me ask how long can we get along without this bill and how have we been able to get along without it this long? Maybe because not that many people are looking for it. Maybe the hue and cry is not that great.

There is a Washington Post survey that claims that mandated leave in terms of what the Nation really wanted came in at 3 percent. Sixty-three percent want stronger action to clean up the Nation's air and water, 19 percent wanted a minimum wage, 15 percent wanted affordable child care, 3 percent said they want to make it easier for parents to take time off from work without pay. That is what we are talking about.

Finally, one word about minimum standards. One can argue this is a minimum standard, but can we not argue that Federal pensions are a minimum standard? We do not mandate pensions in the workplace in this country. Social Security, yes; ERISA, yes; in those plans, yes; but we do not make the employer do it, and we do not make them require health benefits. Yet everybody gets sick. Not everybody has a baby. Everybody who comes into the workplace probably has teeth, maybe not their own, but they have got them somewhere. Are we going to mandate dental benefits too? What is a minimum standard? What is not a minimum standard?

Answer these questions and maybe this bill is worth supporting, but at this time the legislation is still not ready to leave this body.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 20 seconds for the purpose of clarifying a statement that the previous speaker made. He gave the erroneous impression that our former colleague, Gene Taylor, was departed. He has departed this Congress, but he is very much alive. And the gentleman quoted him inferring that he would oppose this bill, but on June 11, 1986, the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, by a rollcall vote of 18 to 0, ordered this bill favorably reported, and Mr. Taylor was the ranking member of that committee.

Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. LOWEY].

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Madam Chairman I rise in strong support of the Family and Medical Leave Act. This bill is win-win legislation.

It is a profamily bill that will help Americans fulfill their family responsibilities without losing their jobs.

Because it preserves employment, it will save all Americans money in reduced spending on unemployment compensation and other social programs.

It will help make America more competitive by promoting a well-trained, experienced, high-morale workplace.

It will help ensure that our young people—the next generation of leaders in this Nation—receive that care they deserve early in life.

And it will help ensure that the elderly and infirm receive the loving care they deserve.

All of us are concerned about the status of the family in American life. Now we have before us a bill that responds to the family's changing needs. This is the most important pro-family vote of this Congress.

I urge my colleagues to stand up for the American family by approving this essential bill.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE].

Mr. FLAKE. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1989.

I hear speakers who have come to this well today talking about the problem for the employer, talking about the problem of the economics of the bill, how much does it cost, they ask.

The reality is how much does it cost not to do the bill. If we are concerned about families in America with the deteriorating conditions of many of our families, I do not think there can be a price tag that speaks adequately for the concern for trying to develop a family and medical leave bill.

I rise in support of this bill because I think it is imperative that we make an expression to the American family that we believe enough in them that at the earliest stages of the life of our children we are willing to create the mechanism by which parents and children might be involved in a nurturing, caring, loving relationship. Therefore, I think this is one of the most important pieces of legislation to come before this body. It deserves our support.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Madam Chairman, I thank my colleague for yielding time to me and I rise in support of the compromise legislation.

Madam Chairman, generally, I subscribe to the view: "that Government is best which governs least." History justifies the founding fathers' distrust of government.

As a rule public policy should not interfere with labor-management issues. We should let the marketplace control.

But also, I strongly support the family. A Nation's progress and happiness depends on the strength of the family. The growth and development of our children—mine, yours, those of our friends and neighbors—is nurtured within the family.

One doesn't need to read yet another study to know that the traditional American family is undergoing new strains in a rapidly changing world.

The issue posed by family and medical leave is not whether the Federal Government should mandate that employers provide unpaid leave benefits.

Rather, the issue is whether it is in the public interest for the Federal Government to act to guarantee job security to a family members who takes short-term, unpaid leave to care for a newborn child or an ill parent.

It is my view that such a policy is very much in the public's interest.

This legislation would provide workers of organizations with 50 or more employees up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave a year to attend a newborn or adopted child or a seriously ill child, spouse or parent. The employee would be guaranteed the same or a comparable job after returning from this leave.

Normally, I would say that business owners should have flexibility in determining employee benefits. Ordinarily, I would resist in the idea of further government intrusion into the marketplace.

For some businesses, the new law would create a hardship. And no doubt it would increase the cost of doing business.

Still, I feel we should make an exception to the general rule that government not interfere in the workings of the free enterprise system.

It's not so much that there are millions of women who need to work and also want to have children, though it is probably true.

It's not so much that parental leave will save money over time because we will have healthier or more emotionally stable children, though such a result is likely.

It's simply a case of my wanting to put the interests of children first.

To me, the early weeks that a parent spends at home with a new baby are so vital, the need to nurture the parent-child relationship so important, that I am willing to set aside competing interests and give children priority.

To maintain traditional family values, these changing times require new policies. I can't think of a more worthy goal than strengthening the family in America.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. ROWLAND].

Madam Chairman, I rise today in strong support for the legislation before us.

In order to help families cope with the nature of today's workplace, it is critical for Congress to establish a minimum standard that ensures employees the availability of unpaid medical leave.

We have heard the arguments today and throughout the week that the Federal Government should not be mandating minimal standards. That is incorrect and shortsighted. In the past, Congress has responded to changing economic realities by establishing minimum standards such as the Fair Labor Standards Act and the Occupational Safety and Health Act. This legislation today draws on that tradition and proposes a labor standard to address significant new realities in today's workplace.

Only a fraction of American business will be impacted. As a matter of fact, many businesses I have talked to in the State of Connecticut have already some type of unpaid leave which already has more progressive standards than we enjoy in this particular legislation.

This initiative balances the interests of the business community with minimal cost and flexibility, with the pressing needs of the American workers for modest periods of unpaid leave and job security during a family medical crisis.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING].

Mr. BUNNING. Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 770.

Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 770, the Federal Government Knows Best Act of 1990.

I have nine kids. I know the importance of bonding between parents and children. But this is not a baby bonding bill, it is a one-size-fits-all business bondage bill.

It basically says that the U.S. Congress knows better than the marketplace; that Congress knows better than the Nation's employers and employees what kind of benefits our Nation's workers want and need.

This bill not only reduces flexibility in the kind of benefit programs employers can offer, it also imposes very real costs on small business.

If this bill was harmless and as inexpensive as its supporters pretend, they wouldn't have had to exempt 95 percent of all businesses from its coverage to get it to the floor.

But, what is even more frightening is that we all know what happens to small business exemptions. They tend to erode over the years. We know that this bill is just the beginning. We know that, if we enact this bill, it is just the first step to paid leave and other mandated benefits for all American businesses, large and small alike.

Madam Chairman, this is a bad bill. It's bad policy. And it should be rejected.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH].

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong oppostion to H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1989.

H.R. 770 and its substitutes would erode the very basis of democracy on which our Nation is based by forcing employers to provide certain benefits to their employees thereby denying other preferred benefits negotiated with employees. Moreover, its sends a signal to the American people that the Federal Government knows better how to run their business than they do, by mandating a blanket leave policy. At issue here is, not whether occupational leave for parental and other health reasons is a good idea, but whether or not it is the proper role of Government to mandate such policy. This is a wolf in sheep's clothing. Many have attempted to mislead the American people by calling this a profamily, pro-women bill. It is anything but that.

This bill and its substitutes would work against a trend in American business toward flexible benefits and force all employees to accept benefits that they may neither want nor need. Government mandates, however well-intentioned, threaten to negatively influence this trend and reduce the flexibility so many families need in today's workplace.

Madam Chairman, my greatest fear is that this bill or its substitutes, if enacted, will discriminate against two groups that least need to be discriminated against: women and the working poor.

Companies, when faced with two equally qualified candidates will surely hire the one who is less likely to elect mandatory leave; thus, potentially eliminating women between the ages of 20–35 from being hired in the first place or from being promoted to managerial and other key positions if they are already in the work force. This would greatly roll back the clock of time and the strides which have been made by women in the past three decades.

Moreover, H.R. 770 and its substitutes discriminate against those Americans who need our help the most: poor working parents and single mothers who cannot afford to take 10–12 weeks of unpaid leave but would rather have paid maternity benefits.

I strongly support strengthening the relationship between employer and employee by encouraging flexible benefit packages which strengthen families and promote economic progress. H.R. 770 and its substitutes would only work toward eliminating flexible benefit programs already offered by employers. I cannot support any measure which so drastically interferes with the efficient workings of our free enterprise system and that would potentially cause increased discrimination against women and the working poor that we have fought so hard to overcome.

□ 1050

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] for offering that perspective. Let me just quote from testimony to our committee:

We cannot afford to pass this bill on a purely emotional vote for the American family. The American family can best be served through responsible legislation which requires you, the decisionmaker, to see beyond the emotionalism of the long-term implications. All of us pay the price for this one, especially working women just like me.

Madam Chairman, these are the quotes of Cynthia Simpler, who testified against this bill. So it is wrong to assume that there are not people coming forward against this bill.

I might tell my colleague from Connecticut who spoke just before [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] one of the reasons we have not heard a lot from businesses in States where there is mandated leave is there is no State, Connecticut notwithstanding, that has a policy as strong as the Federal Government.

In Connecticut, State, municipal, local, and regional boards of education are exempt, private and parochial elementary schools are exempt. We do not exempt all those nonprofits in this bill.

So consequently there is a difference. We do not offer 2 weeks of notification as they do in Connecticut.

Madam Chairman, there is a difference, and it is because nobody is going to come forward from these States to say, "We have no problem with our State statute," that is not to say that they would not have problems with the Federal statute which goes far beyond what is being mandated collectively and individually around the country.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT].

Mr. GEPHARDT. Madam Chairman, members of the committee, first I want to commend the chairman of the subcommittee and the chairman of the committee for bringing this bill forward. I really think that this bill should pass. I hope it will pass.

The reason that I feel so strongly about it is I think all of us now understand that if America is to be strong, America's families have to be strong. I think all of us also understand that America's families have changed and changed by a lot over the last 10, and 20, and 30 years.

Families face stresses, difficulties, complications that families did not face even 20 and 30 years ago.

In order to face those complications, parents need to be available to take charge of situations where there are difficulties, so that the families can hold together and children can have the strength that they need at important, critical times and junctures in their lives.

Back in the early 1970's our son—and my family—was critically ill. In order to bring him through it and, through God's will, and a lot of good fortune, he was brought through it, my wife, Jean, and I had to be present over many, many days of therapy and many different medical settings, hospitals, doctors offices, and so on.

I had an employer at the time who was good enough to give me large chunks of time off. If I had not had been that fortunate, I would have quit my job and done it anyway.

I do not think any American should be faced with that choice. Therefore I believe we need to pass this bill to set that minimum standard for every workplace in the country.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman and the gentleman for yielding.

Whenever we consider a major legislative initiative such as family leave, I spend the majority of my time with the skeptics and potential opponents. It is nice to hear from those who agree with me on this family issue, but it is more important to listen to those who might oppose me, who have legitimate questions.

Their questions boil down to essentially four: It is too burdensome to small business.

I thought about that, and I worked with my colleagues in the Congress and we have an exemption for small business. All small businesses of 50 or fewer employees are exempt. That is the majority of the American business community.

Then I have heard it is too expensive, it is too costly. Then I reminded the skeptics this is unpaid leave we are talking about. And then I hear it is anticompetitive at a time when the United States has never before been as challenged as we are now, it is anticompetitive.

So I said, "What are our competitors around the world doing?" I looked at Japan. We all agree it is No. 1 in terms of competition. Japan has paid leave for 12 weeks at 60 percent pay. Then I looked at West Germany. They have paid leave for 14 to 19 weeks at 100 percent pay. Canada, the United Kingdom have similar policies of paid leave. We are talking here about unpaid leave.

Then I am told it is going to be disruptive, people are going to take advantage of it, after the baby is home and taken care of, then they are just going to hang around the house and take a vacation. Or, after the illness is over, they are going to take advantage of it and stay home. That is not so. Do you know why the majority of people work? They work because they like to eat, they want a roof over their heads, they want to educate their kids. They are going to go back to their jobs as soon as they can out of economic necessity because this is unpaid leave.

Now we talk about family values in this town a lot. Why don't we do something to translate those words into deeds? Why don't we focus on that most important unit in our society, the American family?

And while we are at it, why don't we ask ourselves, each and every Member of this House of Representatives, which is about to pass legislation impacting on all Americans, what are we doing individually in our offices? I stand before you very proud of the fact that I have had a voluntary family leave policy in my office for 2 years, and it is more progressive than this one. This one is a modest proposal, zeroing in on the needs of the American family.

It makes sense to me. It makes sense to me because we have considered the needs of small business. It makes sense to me because it is not overly costly or burdensome. It makes sense to me because it is not disruptive to the work force.

But most of all, it makes sense to me because the House of Representatives today in this Chamber here and now is saying the American family is important to us.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON].

Mr. GUNDERSON. Madam Chairman, I believe in parental leave, and I wish I could stand before you today supporting this legislation. Unfortunately, I cannot because I am not at all convinced as to who the deliverer of that parental leave ought to be, how long it ought to be.

I am convinced this legislation in front of us is simply too much too soon and it is not a compromise. It is pure camouflage.

Let us understand exactly what we are doing here today. As the gentleman from New York said on voluntary parental leave, he is one of the 75 percent of the businesses in this country providing parental leave today. Perhaps that begs the question of whether there even is a legitimate Federal need to get involved.

□ 1100

Second, let Members understand that someplace between 16 to 25 States, depending on who is asked, are already providing some kind of benefits. If half the States are doing it, should the Federal Government get involved and preempt the States from dealing with this kind of labor policy at the present time?

However, the big problem with this legislation is not that it is trying to enact a Federal parental leave policy. I believe in that. The problem is that the original bill that was brought out of the committee provided family leave of 10 weeks over 2 years. This bill provides 12 weeks per year, or for 24 weeks over 2 years. Where is the compromise? This bill provides enforcement, not only to the Department of Labor, but it says that we can go into the courts and have litigation. I ask the question, name one low- and middle-income family in this country that has the means to go into court and try to provide the enforcement of this legislation?

This legislation is not a compromise in the whole area of damages. Unlike any other civil rights or labor law in this country, the bill provides treble damages, plus back pay. We do not do that in civil rights discrimination. We do not do it in harassment. We do not do it in any other area.

As the gentleman from Pennsylvania said earlier, I would simply hope that we would understand that in this week in which we are talking about summit, we are talking about concerns in the American economy, take a look at everything we are going to do. Any of them by themselves has great merit. The cumulative effect of civil rights, of ADA, or risk notification, of age discrimination, of minimum wage, of mandated health, of EPA, of clean air, of tax increases, of child care—is there no limits to which we in the Congress will go to impose mandates on our economy and on small business? This is not a compromise. It is a camouflage. Parental leave is a good concept, but this goes too far, too fast. Unfortunately, we will have to come back next year and start over.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for his comments, and would point out that Wisconsin, the gentleman's State, has a leave policy of 6 weeks in a 12-month period for family leave, and 2 weeks for medical leave. There is advance notice required, which is appreciably different from that what we have before Members today.

Let me take a brief moment to talk about the other changes States have innovatively put into their packages. In Oregon, any employer which offers employees a nondiscriminatory cafeteria plan which includes as one of the options a parental leave benefit, is exempted from the statute. So are the rewards flexible? None in this bill. In Tennessee, the maternity leave statute recognizes when an employee's job is so unique that reasonable efforts by the employer cannot fill the position temporarily, then the employer is exempted from the requirement to reinstate the employee at the end of the leave. We do have a key employee exemption, but it merely denies restoration under a subsection, and such denial is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the employer's operations. I defy any Member to take that to court. In Rhode Island, prior to the commencement of parental leave, the employee shall pay to the employer a sum of the premium required to maintain the employee's health benefits during the period of leave. There is nothing in this legislation that does that. We do not know if the employee has to continue to pay into his or her own health plan.

I only bring these up to point out that we have a lack of flexibility among the States that have enacted these leave policies, and yet we want to proscribe and co-opt every one of these plans by putting a statute over the top of them. Not a floor, but a ceiling.

Madam Chairman, may I inquire how much time is remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] has 5 minutes remaining, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has 13 minutes remaining, and the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] has 6 minutes remaining.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

Mr. OWENS of New York. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 770.

Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act, and against the killer amendments which will be offered today.

We have done precious little for the average American worker so far in this Congress and this bill gives us an opportunity to do something—not much, but something—for the people who elected and sent us here in the first place.

It would be hard to weaken and water down this bill any more than it has been in the 5 years it has taken it to get to the floor. Incredibly, though, some of our colleagues are still going to try today.

Most businesses are not even covered by this bill anymore. Small businesses with fewer than 50 employees are now completely exempted. This bill will have no effect at all on 95 percent of the businesses and 44 percent of the employees in this country.

The amount of leave that would be available to employees has been cut back dramatically. When we started this process we were talking about providing 18 weeks of family leave and 26 weeks of disability leave. What we are down to now is a total of just 12 weeks of leave for any reason.

Keep in mind also that the leave we are talking about today is unpaid leave. Unpaid. That means that workers who are not independently wealthy are not going to be able to take the leave provided by this bill unless they absolutely have to. Unless there is a crisis or emergency or important family event like the birth or adoption of a child that requires them to be home for a while.

In other words, this bill is not—or should not be—a big deal.

Workers in 135 other countries—including nearly every industrialized nation and some Third World nations—already have the kind of job-protected family leave H.R. 770 would provide to Americans. In 127 nations—including some of our chief economic competitors like Japan and Germany—workers even get paid family leave. And workers in some of these countries have had these basic rights since before World War I.

Unpaid family leave is not going to be too expensive for business to bear. The General Accounting Office estimates that H.R. 770 will cost the 5 percent of businesses covered by the bill about $5 per year per employee. That amounts to a little more than a penny per day per worker. You do not get much cheaper than that. Last year George Bush and the big business PAC's said $4.35 an hour was too much to pay minimum wage workers at the bottom of our society. This week they are telling us that even a penny a day more is too much for working people. A penny a day.

So it is not a big deal. It is not a radical concept. Most American workers will not be covered by this bill. Many of those who are covered will not take the leave because they cannot afford it or do not need it. And for the few who are covered and do take the leave, H.R. 770 will not provide any great windfall or benefit—just one less problem to worry about at a time of family stress and turmoil. That is not much to ask.

Big businesses, however, says it is. The sponsors of this bill have worked for 5 years to come up with some kind of compromise that would be acceptable to the big business PAC's who are fighting this bill tooth and nail. But big business opposes any bill and any family and medical leave standard—no matter how short it is or how few workers it applies to. This is nothing new. Fifty years ago they opposed any restrictions on child labor. Twenty years ago they said we did not need any workplace health and safety protections. And now here they are fighting for the unfettered right to fire a worker for having a baby.

That is an outrageous position that only the most fanatical advocate of shark-tank capitalism could support. This is a modest bipartisan compromise which should receive the overwhelming support of this body. Vote for H.R. 770 and do something good for your constituents. Vote against it and you just might find your constituents giving you 52 weeks of unpaid leave come election day in November.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MCGRATH].

Mr. MCGRATH. Madam Chairman, I want to take this opportunity to express my support for the substitute amendment to H.R. 770, offered by one of the most bipartisan group of Members I have seen in my many years of service in this House.

Perhaps the most significant change in our society in the last half century has been the increasing participation of women in the work force. In 1970, less than 30 percent of the married women with children under 2 years old, were also working outside the home. Today, almost 50 percent of women in that category are working outside the home, and the percentage is growing.

Despite this revolution in the structure of the family, the United States, alone among industrial societies, has no national policy regarding parental leave. Too many workers are forced to make choices between the need to provide the necessary early physical and emotional care for new children and the need to maintain gainful employment.

It is also important to realize that the bill's provisions do not end when a child matures and becomes independent. This legislation allows for siblings to take time out to care for sick parents, who in the autumn of their years, may become dependent on the very people they themselves have raised. I encountered this situation recently with my mother, who was discharged from a hospital and sent home needing around-the-clock care. Had this legislation been in effect, one of my brothers or sisters could have taken time to pay my mother the proper attention; she deserved, instead my family was forced to hire a live-in nurse at a substantial uninsured cost of over $1,000 a week.

The substitute which will be offered will alleviate the burden of choice placed on employees, who must decide whether to care for a sick parent or child, or put their job and seniority in jeopardy. Many employers claim that they already have standards similar to the legislation in place, however, at the same time we have all heard the horror stories from women who were fired after telling their boss that they are pregnant. This substitute is aimed at keeping family values and responsibilities intact, while at the same time not placing an overbearing mandate on employers.

Many of the arguments that have evolved during the debate of family and medical leave focus on the pressures faced by small business. Productivity should not be affected by the substitute, since the measure permits employers to exempt key personnel. Additionally, by expanding the applicability from 35 employees in H.R. 770 to 50 employees in the substitute, I believe the substitute answers much of criticism levied by small businesses.

In short, the compromise is a uniform measure designed to bring the United States in line with other industrialized nations, and simply give employees peace of mind should they be encountered by a medical emergency, or blessed with the birth of a child. I urge my colleagues to support this bipartisan effort and vote for passage of the compromise.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTLETT].

Mr. BARTLETT. Madam Chairman, I rise to make three points on this piece of legislation. This legislation is going nowhere. It is legislation that would harm workers of America, parents, and all senior citizens. Young people, low income, and high income alike.

The three points are, first of all, there is no compromise here. There is not an ounce of compromise. It is the same bill we started with that has been discussed for 3 years. Second, it is mandated, and by being mandated, it will cost some employees both their jobs and other benefits. Third, it is that this is homogenized leave, nationalized. It is the Federal Government deciding what kind of leave policy every employee and every employer should decide between them.

I would note at the beginning, though, that there is one good portion of the bill, one portion that I do commend the sponsors of this bill for, and that is title V, in which they have agreed to included Congress, congressional coverage, so that Congress, as an employer, is covered by this legislation. I would commend the sponsors of the bill for including that section. It is long overdue, and I think it needs to stay in there.

First, it is not a compromise. There has been no compromise with those who had opposed the legislation. I had intended to offer several amendments, for example, on notice requirements and part-time workers. I am not going to offer these amendments at this time. I want to tell Members why. I would not want any Member to mistake a modestly improving amendment, making a modest improvement to this bill, for anything resembling a compromise. With or without any amendments, the bill is still egregious, it will cost people their jobs, and cost the people other benefits for which they would like to have. It is not a compromise. The original bill of H.R. 770 was a Federal mandate, covering employers and employees, regardless of their preferences. This is still a Federal mandate. The original bill provided for intermittent leave. Leave can be taken 1 day or 1 hour at a time.

□ 1110

The original bill had treble damages; this bill has treble damages. The original bill covered seasonal, part time, migrant, and temporary workers; this bill covers part time, migrant, and temporary workers. The original bill provides a continuation of paid health benefits for an additional 12 weeks whether or not the employee comes back to work; this bill does exactly the same thing.

The original bill provided a job guarantee, with the same job to be held open; this bill does also.

The fact is that there is no compromise here. The original bill was a mandate; this is a mandate.

Second, these are mandated benefits, and what is wrong with that is that the way employees want to operate in the workplace is, they want to negotiate for their own package of benefits. Some employees would like to have extra dental care, some employees would like to have additional health care, some employees would like to have additional time off at Christmas, some employees would like to have transportation plans, and some would like to have parental leave. This bill says one size fits all, and with every benefit that you add to someone, that you mandate, you have to take away a benefit from someone else.

One of the things that makes this bill so unfair is that it is a yuppie bill. It is a bill with yuppie benefits, in which only the young, upwardly mobile professional people can afford to take 12 weeks unpaid leave off. It is the $4 and $5 an hour cafeteria worker who will be harmed by losing other benefits.

Lastly, let me say that I am not against parental leave. I am for it. I use it in my own operation. Most employers do. This bill is homogenized. It tells every employee and employer what kind of parental leave to require. Some employers have 6 weeks paid leave, other have 16 weeks at half pay if the employee calls in every week to notify them that they are going to return. some have 4 weeks' paid and 10 weeks at half paid. Some have 10 weeks' paid and another 10 weeks' unpaid leave.

If we had adopted this kind of legislation in the 1950's for vacation pay and decided we wanted to mandate paid vacations, the country today would still be stuck with 1 week of paid vacations because the Federal Government mandated it. The fact is that employees and employers negotiate for a package of benefits that suit them and that meet their particular needs. We ought to encourage that. We ought to let that happen, not choke it off.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] for the purpose of engaging in colloquy with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

First of all, Madam Chairman, for those who say that this is not a compromise, let me say that I was the original author of the bill, and I wish they would come over and see me about this, because I would like to tell them how much of a compromise this is.

I would now like to address the offerer of the compromise and ask him a few questions. My understanding of the gentleman's substitute is that when a woman is physically unable to work because of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, she is entitled to leave for her serious health condition under section 102(a)(1)(D) of the gentleman's substitute. Thus, while she is on leave for these reasons, she is entitled to any temporary disability insurance or other compensation as the employer or other insurance may provide for these purposes. Is that correct?

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, if the gentle woman will yield, I would say that the answer is yes.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. My understanding of the gentleman's substitute is also that once a woman is physically able to work after recuperating from childbirth and related medical conditions, she is then eligible for leave to care for her newborn child under section 102(a)(1)(A) to the extent that she has not exhausted her 12-week leave period. Is that correct?

Mr. GORDON. Yes, that is correct also.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. My understanding of the gentleman's substitute is also that section 102(a)(2) prohibits both parents from simultaneously taking leave under section 102(a)(1)(A) following the birth of their biological child. However, while a mother is on leave to recover from childbirth and related medical conditions under section 102(a)(1)(D), the father may take leave at that time to care for his spouse or their new baby under section 102(a)(1) (C) or (A). Is that correct?

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, the answer is yes.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman very much for his responses.

Again I just want to reiterate one more time, Madam Chairman, how this truly is a big compromise from where we started. As a matter of fact, this is the third compromise in a row. So I do not know where there are getting this idea that this is not a compromise.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to state that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] has 3 minutes remaining, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has 9 minutes remaining, and the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY].

Mr. DELAY. Madam Chairman, I have watched this debate for the last 2 days, and I have heard it said over and over again that this bill will increase competitiveness and productivity. Well, I say that that is ludicrous and lacks an understanding of our free enterprise system.

The proponents of this legislation say that we ought to do it because the rest of the world does it and every other country does it. They lack the understanding, and I would ask, why do they think we are the No. 1 economy in the world, bringing about the best and highest standard of living for the American family compared to any other country in the world? It is because we have resisted this kind of legislation.

This bill is not going to be the doom of our economy, but it is just another nail in that coffin in which we will bury competitiveness and productivity. The reason is that this adds to the long list of the kinds of social engineering that our Government does, the huge spending by our Government, and the massive taxation of the American family which has forced both parents to work. The reason we are here today discussing a piece of legislation like this is because our Government has forced both parents to work in order to maintain the same standard of living that their parents have been able to enjoy.

This is not a profamily bill; it is an antifamily bill, because it is just another addition to that long list that forces parents to work.

I ask the Members to resist this kind of legislation that will reduce the standard of living of the American family, reduce productivity, raise the cost of living, lower the standard of living, and affect the benefit packages that are being enjoyed now and that have been worked out with individual companies, not by some Federal, nationalistic mandate by this House.

Madam Chairman, I ask the Members to reject this bill. I ask them to vote "no" on this bill.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

Mr. KOLBE. Madam Chairman, we have heard a lot of emotional statements by those on both sides of the Family and Medical Leave Act. But this bill, this issue, is too important to be decided by emotion. We need to cut through the rhetoric and examine the facts in this matter.

Everyone in this chamber supports leave for reasons of maternity or family illness. With the change toward two income families, business and government has to be flexible to meet the needs and demands of its employees. Public opinion polls show there is strong public support for family and medical leave benefits. But, Madam Chairman, that is not the real issue before us today.

The true issue is whether the Federal Government should be in the business of negotiating employee-employer benefit packages. Should the Federal Government determine which benefits are important and which are not? Of course not. But that is exactly what we will be doing today if we pass H.R. 770 or the substitute for it.

This whole debate rests on a simple premise that businesses are not meeting the needs of its employees and are thus hurting the family. Certainly there are groups of employers that have been slow to adopt maternity leave policies. It is important to recognize, however, a few of the many companies that offer progressive benefit packages.

Most of us are familiar with the cafeteria benefits plan offered by IBM, allowing employees to tailor benefits to meet their needs. Hermans Sporting Goods probably offers the most comprehensive maternity benefits package in the country. Not only does Hermans offer 4 months of leave after a child is born to one of its employees, but half of it is paid leave.

If we pass this bill, what will be the incentive for Hermans or IBM to maintain their generous benefit levels? We must keep in mind that every company can't be an IBM or Hermans and does not have the resources to offer such generous benefits. They can, however, work arrangements with their employees to meet their needs as adequately as possible. This legislation, despite its wonderful intent, would severely hamper that flexibility.

Family and medical leave is an important and positive benefit to help young families. There are ways to reward companies who have adopted progressive benefit plans and to encourage more companies to adopt similar plans. I urge my colleagues to reject the proposals before us today and send this back to committee to come up with incentives rather than obstacles to family and medical leave.

□ 1120

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 65 seconds for the purpose of engaging in a colloquy with the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

Mr. MINETA. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLAY. I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

Mr. MINETA. Madam Chairman, H.R. 770 applies only to workers who have worked for their employer for at least 12 months and for at least 1,000 hours during the immediately preceding 12 months. I understand that there is some concern whether flight attendants will be covered by this bill because of the unique way in which the airline industry counts its workers' hours.

Many flight attendants and pilots are often credited and paid only for those hours actually spent in the air, and not for any hours spent on the ground in preparation for their in-flight duties.

Flight attendants must spend considerable time checking emergency equipment and supplies, preparing the cabin, and receiving passengers. Consequently, even a flight attendant working full time may not have accrued 1,000 hours of actual time.

Should not these workers be entitled to family and medical leave?

Mr. CLAY. Yes, by all means. The minimum-hours-worked requirement is designed to ensure that employees demonstrate a significant level of commitment—at least half-time over the last year—to their employer before becoming eligible for their family and medical leave entitlement.

Almost all employers, of course, credit their employees each hour actually spent on the job. Under the conventional 40-hour work week, 1,000 hours constitutes at least half-time employment over a year's time.

We certainly do not intend that dedicated workers in unique circumstances should be excluded from the bill's protection simply because of their industry's unusual time-keeping methods. Flight attendants and pilots who work the number of hours constituting half-time employment during the previous 12 months as defined either by a collective-bargaining agreement or by industry standard are fully entitled to family and medical leave under this bill.

Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Madam Chairman, as we approach the turn of the century, we have witnessed extraordinary, evolutionary changes in the American work force, and the purpose of this legislation is to keep up with those changes. There are many myths about the American work force out there, and, if one asks a couple of questions, one can expose those myths.

For example, Madam Chairman, if we were to say to people, "Name America's largest employer," they are liable to say Lee Iacocca.

No, Madam Chairman, Beverly hires more people than Lee Iacocca. Beverly? Who is Beverly? Beverly Nursing Homes hires more people than Chrysler.

If one were to say to people, "What companies sell the most items in America?", people might say, "Well, the greatest number of sales are probably by General Mills, or probably Bethlehem Steel."

No, no, no. McDonald's, Hospital Corp. of America topped both of them.

The popular view in America holds that American families are headed by a single male breadwinner. Madam Chairman, that is the myth. The reality is that only 10 percent of American families are of that model.

Seventy-two percent of the women in America who are mothers and have children 18 years or under work outside the home. Fifty percent of the mothers in America with children under 1 year of age work outside the home.

Today, while we are debating this bill, 44 percent of the American work force is made up of women, and, before the turn of the century, more than half of the workers in this land will be women, unorganized, without collective bargaining.

Madam Chairman, there has been a change in the American workplace. Let us catch up with it. Let us pass this legislation.

Madam Chairman, in addition, I want to make the following explanation of the bill.

Section 106(c) of the bill generally requires an employer to maintain health plan coverage for an employee while he or she is on family or temporary medical leave.

In cases where the employer participates in a multiemployer health plan the Education and Labor Committee's report on the bill addresses this question. The committee recognized that special arrangements are needed when an employee's health coverage is provided under a multiemployer plan. The report describes the special arrangements intended by the bill. In particular, I want to emphasize the committee's judgment and intent that, when an employee on family or medical leave has had health coverage under a multiemployer plan, the employer is obligated to continue contributing to the plan on that person's behalf for the duration of the leave.

Timely employer contributions are essential for the sound funding, and very existence, of multiemployer plans. Under ERISA's contribution collection provisions, the plan can pursue all Federal and State law remedies to collect the amounts due to maintain coverage for the person on leave. The benefit rights of the person are determined under the plan.

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California [Mr. FAZIO].

Mr. FAZIO. Madam Chairman, I probably would not have spoken on this bill a couple of years ago, but in the last 2½ years I have had, like some other Members of this body, the opportunity to observe how helpful it would be to have parental leave.

Madam Chairman, I have a daughter who was diagnosed with leukemia. She has had a bone marrow transplant, and now enjoys good health. However, I have spent a lot of time in pediatric cancer wards, and I have seen what parental love and nurturing can mean to the health care of children who need help and who need it perhaps from above as much as from their physician.

Madam Chairman, I firmly believe this bill is in the great tradition of a country that cares about its children, its families, and its parents. Yet we turn away from this at great peril.

It is tough enough to make it in this country economically, but this Nation can provide at least one firm benefit to all its workers. It can take into consideration the fact that these workers are not getting any help here with their mortgage or their rent. They are not getting paid because we cannot afford to pay the wages of people who have to be with their children.

However, Madam Chairman, I hope we will have at least the compassion to take this one step forward.

Madam Chairman, I am pleased to support H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act. I also want to congratulate my colleagues who have worked long and hard over several years to bring this legislation to the floor.

The changing face of the American family—with more single-headed households or families where both spouses work—has increased the demands on these families. Juggling the demands of work and family are difficult enough, but with the arrival of a new child or the illness of a family member, they become nearly impossible.

H.R. 770 is an important recognition of these changes and represents a critical step in addressing the needs of American families. At the same time, this bill does not place undue strain on the Nation's businesses. The substitute version of the bill merely provides a single category of leave of up to 12 weeks, which could be used to care for a new child or for a sick spouse, child or parent, or for the employee's own treatment or recuperation from an illness. Further, it only would affect firms with 50 or more employees, which means that only 5 percent of American employers would be affected by the substitute's requirements.

Everyone should have the right to work and have a family, without jeopardizing either one. Unfortunately, the reality is that many employees risk losing their jobs when family responsibilities or a serious illness take precedence. I know from personal experience that dealing with a family illness is extremely stressful. Having the opportunity to take leave reduces the anxiety of having to worry about making that impossible choice between family and job. American workers should never be forced to have to make this choice.

Some critics, including our President, contend that we do not need this legislation, that we should leave the decision of providing unpaid family and medical leave to the individual employers. While there are a number of employers who have taken this important step, many others have not. Leaving it to the employer is just not good enough. Too many employers have failed to provide reasonable leave and job security for their employees. A new standard is necessary which will emphasize the importance of both job security and family responsibilities.

Further, the critics of this bill contend that it will be too costly for all of us. That is just not the case. When some Americans can't return to their jobs, the rest of us pay the bill in lost revenues and higher payments for social programs like unemployment compensation, Medicaid and Food Stamps. Further, each year, American workers lose $607 million in earnings when they can't take unpaid parental leave. And each year, these same working parents end up drawing over $108 million in social benefits—when they'd rather be back at their old jobs.

The cost to companies is also quite minimal. For example, it cost employers less to hold on to experienced employees than to hire and train new ones. With this bill, employers invest in an experienced, well-trained, high-morale work force. And GAO estimates that this bill would cost an average of only $5.30 per employee annually and that the cost to employers is less than $200 million per year. Clearly the benefits of this legislation outweigh its costs.

We should be embarrassed by our President's position on this legislation. The U.S. is the only industrialized country that lacks parental leave benefits for employees. In fact, while other countries offer paid leave, we offer nothing.

Eighty-one percent of the American people overwhelmingly support family and medical leave. This legislation is a reaffirmation of our support for working families. Now is the time to stop lip service to our commitment to America's working families and pass this bill.

In addition, I'd like to add a strong supportive article from the Sacramento Bee on this bill.

TIME TO BE A PARENT

Since the days of Ozzie and Harriet, the proportion of U.S. mothers in the work force has tripled, to 65 percent; more than half of all women with children under 1 now work. Yet despite this huge sociological shift, national social policy has not yet changed to help two-earner or single-parent households balance work with their family responsibilities. The Family and Medical Leave Act, before the House of Representatives this week, would begin to change that.

H.R. 770, a bipartisan bill authored by Reps. William Clay, Patricia Schroeder and Marge Roukema, would require large employers to allow workers to take one job-protected leave of up to 12 weeks a year to care for a new baby, a sick child or an ailing parent. An employee would also be eligible for the leave to recuperate from a serious illness. Family and medical leaves would be unpaid, but companies would be required to maintain health benefits for the absent worker.

Business groups strongly oppose the family leave legislation, arguing that it will be burdensome to companies, especially small ones. But the same thing can be said about any labor standard, including the 40-hour week and health and safety rules. What counts in such matters is how the benefits of the policy weigh against the costs. In the case of family leaves, the burden is small and the social benefit important. The legislation exempts companies with fewer than 50 employees, thereby eliminating any burden from 90 percent of employers. The General Accounting Office has estimated that only one employee in 275 will be on leave at any given time and that the total cost to business will be $236 million a year, most of it for health insurance for workers on leave.

The need for labor policies that acknowledge workers' dual role as providers and parents is recognized around the world: The United States is alone among the major industrialized nations in not providing leave for parents with new children; indeed most countries, in requiring paid leave, go much further than that. As a result, in U.S. households where both parents must work, or where a single parent is the sole source of economic support, a pregnancy or a seriously ill child or elderly parent can become an agonizing dilemma in which parents must weigh their family obligations against their economic need to retain their job.

That's cruel and counterproductive to society's desire for healthy families. In a civilized nation, normal events of family life should not be a source of anguish and economic peril. The House should pass the Family and Medical Leave Act.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] for yielding, and I think that it is important to recognize that, as we read this bill, that this is not a family bill.

Madam Chairman, I say, "If you're going to help the family by creating a bureaucratic nightmare, then maybe this is a family bill," but I do not think that is the case. Government does not know better than people do about what is good for them, and yet this bill assumes that it does.

Madam Chairman, this is not a family bill. This is another big government, welfare-oriented kind of bill, and why do I say that? Because I bothered to read the bill, and, if my colleagues will go into this bill, they will find out that this is a bureaucratic nightmare.

For example, when my colleagues come to defining "serious health condition" and they find out who is eligible, they will find out that in the so-called compromise they have changed the term "health care provider" to "doctor," and they have now then eliminated a lot of availability of health care providers in my district, for instance, where they use a lot of chiropractors. There are a lot of families in my district that use chiropractors. They come from fundamentalist religious sects. So, now they are not going to be eligible under this program despite the fact that many employers in my area already offer those benefits. That is a bureaucractic nightmare.

If my colleagues look at page 66 of the bill, they will find this kind of language:

> In any case in which the second opinion described in subsection (d) differs from the original certification provided under subsection (a), the employer may require, at its own expense, that the employee obtain the opinion of a third health care provider designated or approved jointly by the employer and the employee concerning the information certified under subsection (b).

Madam Chairman, this is bureaucracy that employers are going to have to make and meet. It is ridiculous.

If my colleagues go back on page 78, under section C they will find out that the Secretary of Labor can literally intervene in a civil action brought by any employee. The Department of Labor, the Secretary, is now, under this bill, going to be able to get in any civil action brought against an employer by an employee. That is just a bureaucratic nightmare. That is not what we ought to be doing here.

Madam Chairman, if we are going to do something that is helpful to the family, we should not create more bureaucrats telling families and businesses what to do. Let us reach out to help the family, but to call this a family oriented bill is wrong. This is a bureaucratically oriented bill.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Let me just say that I have heard a lot of stories, and I think every person in this body probably has a lot of stories about their personal experience with parental leave and medical leave, and I think that is one of the reasons that we cannot hope to create a Federal mandate for this multifaceted problem and solution.

□ 1130

Indeed, what we are doing today is creating a legislative problem. We are not creating a legislative solution. As a matter of fact, this is a solution in search of a problem.

Let me take some time, Madam Chairman, to talk about an experience in my workplace, and I am supposedly the grinch in this argument. I am the one opposed to this legislation, but I have a story to tell. I have an employee who works for me since the day I got elected who about a year-and-a-half ago contracted Lou Gehrig's disease, and if you do not know what that is, that is a disease that takes your life a little bit at a time. It does not have the decency to cripple you outright. It lures you into illness and then takes a piece of your body bit by bit.

Now, this friend of mine, this employee, still works for me on a limited basis. I provide him as much leave as he needs on a daily basis, on an hourly basis if he needs it, because I would not be here if it were not for him.

I defy this body to create, I defy this Congress to create a mandate that can accommodate this individual. I defy somebody to define a serious health condition that goes directly to this need; but I can guarantee you that if we attempt to try, if we begin to palpitate over what a serious health condition means in courts to win contested damages that will pay four times what the reward should be, we will deny employers and employees their basic rights to work out their differences and solutions in the workplace where they belong.

I will not be affected by this legislation. We are covering Members of Congress, but I will continue to offer this policy. I cannot speak, however, for the hospitals in my district which are closing their doors, which are fighting to keep their employees, their key employees, not defined by the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA]. The key employees of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] are those highest paid employees. I have key employees who are not the highest paid, that would not qualify under a private sector criteria for this.

So we have almost as many situations for leave as the workplace provides, and it is for that reason, not because of the cost in dollars, Madam Chairman, but because of the human cost, that we cannot afford to begin the mandated benefit process.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA].

Mrs. MORELLA. Madam Chairman, I have listened to the debate about this bill, and I must say, it is such a modest, well-crafted compromise of a compromise, and I would say to the gentleman from Iowa that he can continue to offer those benefits, as I do in my own office and currently have two people who are on paid leave for parenting.

But what if a company would not allow his employee, his prized employee, who has Lou Gehrig's disease, any kind of minimal opportunity to take time off with a guaranteed job?

I also heard somebody say that this is too much too soon. Well, I have to scratch my head, because I know it was introduced in the 99th Congress and we are now in the 2d session of the 101st Congress. My problem is, this is too little or so little and almost too late.

We are, as has been mentioned, the only industrialized country that does not offer something like this for our families so that they do not have to make a decision between the economic realities and their particular family.

I would say we should not be engaged in paralysis by analysis, but we certainly should pass this minimal bill, which is indeed a family bill.

Madam Chairman, as an original cosponsor of this legislation, I speak in strong support of the Family and Medical Leave Act. In the past 25 years, the American work force has changed dramatically, and these changes are having a significant effect on families. Two-thirds of mothers of children under the age of 3 work outside the home. Forty-five percent of the American work force are women and this number is steadily increasing.

There is precedent for this legislation—the Family and Medical Leave Act is modeled after long-standing standards such as the minimum wage, Social Security, and health and safety standards. The cost of not providing leave can be substantial. The study "unnecessary losses" sponsored by the Institute for Women's Policy Research estimates that—

The costs borne by workers because of childbirth, illness and dependent care are staggering, amounting to over $100 billion annually.

A number of national leaders in various fields support the need for the Family and Medical Leave Act. T. Berry Brazelton, professor of pediatrics at the Harvard Medical School states:

The first few months after a new baby comes are a critical time to support families in creating a sense of mutual understanding, trust, and love. New parents must be given a full, free choice to be at home to nurture a new infant, if that parent so desires.

Joseph Cardinal Bernardin, Archbishop of Chicago, commented:

The Family and Medical Leave Act acknowledges the important role of parents in a child's life. Policies of the work place—and all public policies—should support, not erode, family values. This legislation will enable us to become the decent, humane nation we yearn to be. It deserves our support.

I support the Weldon-Gordon substitute, which maintains a balance between the needs of business and working families. The worker may take 12 weeks a year for family or medical needs. It gives workers job security for these 12 weeks, and it allows businesses to replace employees who do not return after this time.

The compromise allows leave to care for a new child, or a sick spouse, child, or parent. This compromise exempts employers with fewer than 50 employees, and requires that medical certification be done by a doctor.

Seventeen States have responded to workers' family and medical needs by passing laws that pertain to these needs. Last year, 30 States considered enacting such legislation. The Federal Government lags behind these State initiatives and a Federal law would ensure that there be a uniform minimum standard for all American workers.

Many successful American companies already have family and medical leave policies. Johnson & Johnson, Colgate-Palmolive, and Hechinger are among these companies which provide leave and job security. These companies believe that having a leave policy is good business—such a policy builds a loyal, experienced, and hard-working work force.

Madam Chairman, this legislation is supported by the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the National Education Association, the American Federation of Government Employees, the American Association of Retired Persons, the Children's Defense Fund, the U.S. Catholic Conference, the American Jewish Conference, and many others. I urge my colleagues to adopt the Weldon-Gordon substitute. It is a bill that is fair to workers and business.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Chairman, I yield my remaining time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE].

Mr. HYDE. Madam Chairman, I have agonized over this bill considerably. I recognize the serious nature of the objections to it, that it is a mandate, that discrimination in hiring could result. There is a tradeoff for other benefits here. The flexibility is gone and the penalties, it seems to me, are very onerous; but on the other hand, I am not appalled that this is a Federal mandate. We mandate job security for jury service. We mandate job security for ROTC duty. It seems to me for motherhood, for caring for a sick member of your family, that our economy and our society should be compassionate enough to include them.

This will not be abused. There is no pay involved. A doctor's certificate is required; but in the final analysis and weighing all the equities, and they are considerable on both sides, we get down to the fact that society should have a policy of encouraging motherhood, not encouraging abortion. It seems to me if a working woman becomes pregnant, she needs to have job security and have an incentive to have that child, not to exterminate that child so she does not lose her job.

There are very few bills that involve apple pie and motherhood. This one does not involve apple pie, but it does involves motherhood, and it seems to me a social policy of encouraging motherhood is good. Therefore, for that reason, I will support this bill.

Mr. STOKES. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act, and to urge my colleagues to support the bipartisan Gordon-Weldon substitute, which strikes a compromise between the committee version of the bill, and some of the concerns of employers and the business community.

The Family and Medical Leave Act is responsible, necessary legislation, which fills the void left by employers in addresing the legitimate needs of their employees for these types of benefits. American families are finding it more and more difficult to meet both their work and family responsibilities. Today, most couples find they need two incomes simply to make ends meet. About two-thirds of all married women, 72 percent of married women with school-aged children, and 57 percent of women with preschool children work outside the home. American business has not responded to the new reality in the workplace.

A recent report issued by the Institute for Women's Policy Research on the costs to American workers of not having family and medical leave shows that these costs are staggering. The report, "Unnecessary Losses," shows that workers who have above average absence due to illness lose $12.2 billion yearly in lost earnings due to unemployment. Similarly, women workers who have babies lose $607 million annually in earnings because they do not have family and medical leave. The report also shows that those who are hurt most by lack of leave now are those with lower earnings, and those who are already disadvantaged in the labor market, such as black workers. The Family and Medical Leave Act in providing job-protected leave would enable workers to take short leaves for family and medical reasons with the security of knowing they can return to their jobs. The General Accounting Office has found that the costs of these benefits to business would be only about $200 million per year.

As a result of these trends, it is much more difficult for working parents to perform the functions of a traditional family, caring for young children, family members who are seriously ill, or a seriously ill parent. As a result, too many American workers are being forced to choose between maintaining their economic livelihood, and meeting their family responsibilities.

The Family and Medical Leave Act will address this problem by establishing a minimum level of benefits, so as to allow employers flexibility. The Gordon-Weldon substitute provides for one category of unpaid leave, which covers either family or medical leave, limited to 12 weeks per year. The Gordon-Weldon substitute will also permanently exempt all firms with less than 50 employees, thereby exempting 95 percent of all businesses from the act.

This compromise also addresses a number of other employer concerns regarding the original committee bill. The substitute specifies that only one parent at a time may take leave to care for a newly born child. It also specifies that certification of medical condition must be done by a doctor. In addition, the substitute allows for leave to care for a seriously ill parent or the employee's spouse. The committee bill did not allow for leave to care for one's spouse.

The Gordon-Weldon substitute, like the committee bill, would entail costs to the employer of $5.30 per covered employee, on average, as determined by the General Accounting Office. This is hardly an undue burden to place on American businesses, and would certainly not force employers to curtail other employee benefits. The facts clearly show that no reduction of other employee benefits has occurred in States which require family and medical leave, or in companies that have already adopted such policies.

I find it appalling that the administration, in the midst of congressional debate on this important legislation, would threaten to veto any form of family and medical leave legislation. Passage of the Family and Medical Leave Act will bring the United States into the modern world of employee leave policy. Every major industrial nation in the world, except the United States, requires some form of parental leave. In fact, most industrialized countries provide more weeks of leave, and many require employers or the government to pay workers for at least a portion of the leave. It is time to take this small step toward reconciling the realities of the workplace with the realities of the family.

Mr. FRENZEL. Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 770 as well as the Gordon-Weldon substitute which has been accepted by the authors of the bill.

I am sympathetic to claims that many employees do not have flexibility to take unpaid leave when family emergencies occur. However, I am not convinced that the Government should dictate any kind of employee benefits to private sector employers, especially smaller ones.

In 1989, the Bureau of Labor Statistics found that 89 percent of employees already have short term disability leave, which, under law, would have to include maternity leave. To me, that is quite an impressive statistic.

The trends in collective bargaining are positive when it comes to negotiating new employee benefits like these. There are even cafeteria plans where employees can choose which benefits are most appropriate to them. We are not in the best position to decide which employee benefits should be mandated. Many employees may not choose parental and medical leave in favor of child care or other benefits.

In my judgment, private companies should have the ability to work with their employees to find the most appropriate employee benefits. And, they should have the ability to communicate to their employees the reasons why they cannot provide certain benefits, especially if they happen to be in a shaky competitive position.

Mr. Chairman, I congratulate Congressmen GORDON and WELDON for their attempts to develop a compromise to H.R. 770. It is a better proposal. However, the same bottom line applies. This is an unfair, unnecessary, and counterproductive intrusion into private sector decisionmaking.

The Penny substitute is a more moderate approach that would not have quite the same negative impact on employers. I regret that the gentleman from Minnesota will not offer it. He believes that the House has developed such rigidity on this issue after more than a year of confrontation, that Members will not seriously consider a middle course.

We have become accustomed over the years to a continuous parade of benefit bills, promoted by the employee groups to be benefited. The sponsors' theory is to negotiate the cash benefits, and legislate the rest. U.S. employers pay the bill both ways, at a time when they are struggling for competitiveness in an increasingly internationalized market.

We have, and should maintain, a free marketplace in which labor negotiations can be conducted openly and fairly. We should not add extra burdens at the Government's whim. If these benefits are needed, employees should bargain for them.

I urge my colleagues to oppose H.R. 770 and the Gordon-Weldon substitute. The Government has imposed too many restrictions on businesses already. It is time to say, "No more mandates."

Mr. LAFALCE, Madam Chairman, when the idea of requiring employers to provide unpaid leave was first introduced in Congress several years ago, it was limited to leave for parents to care for newborn, newly adopted, or seriously ill children.

I supported that concept. I still support it strongly. Under the rule before us today we would have had an opportunity to express our support for one such approach but, regrettably in my view, the sponsor of an amendment which would have limited the bill to child care has decided not to offer it.

As chairman of the Committee on Small Business, I held hearings during the last Congress on the much broader proposals before us today—to provide leave for care of children, for the employee's own medical problems or to care for parents. Our goal was to review the potential impact such a program might have on smaller employers, and more generally to explore the need for a Federal policy of this kind.

Many witnesses at those hearings strongly opposed such an approach, testifying that a broad leave policy would be particularly burdensome to small firms due to the costs of hiring and training temporary employees, and that it would seriously disrupt their business operations. They also opposed the concept because it would impair an employer's flexibility to tailor benefits to meet specific employee needs.

I was pleased that a number of concerns raised at those hearings and elsewhere were addressed, to some extent at least, in the final version of H.R. 770 and even more so in the substitute being proposed today by Representatives WELDON and GORDON. An increase in the small business size exemption, limitation on the annual amount of leave, key employee provisions, and a tightening of the range of individuals for whose care leave could be taken are all, I believe, improvements which would make this program less onerous to American employers.

Nevertheless, Madam Chairman, the present bill offers a very broad program—in my judgment, too broad.

Based on research by my committee staff, I know of only one country in the world—Sweden—which offers anything comparable to the proposed eldercare provisions we are being asked to approve today. Many nations have leave policies limited to child care, as the committee report points out, but that is not the bill before us.

Similarly, evidence in the committee report about State level initiatives here in the United States indicates that almost all leave programs are limited to child care or to the employee's own medical problems. In fact, it appears that only two recently enacted programs, in Maine and Wisconsin, offer leave to care for other categories such as a parent or a spouse. Importantly, both have tighter limits on the amount of leave available for those purposes than would be the case nationally if we approve the proposal before us—Maine has 8 weeks in a 2-year period and Wisconsin only 2 weeks in a 1-year period. Further, neither has been on the books very long—Wisconsin's was enacted only last year, while Maine's became law in 1987.

Should we impose greater costs on our employers—costs not imposed on their foreign competitors—at a time when we are running trade deficits of enormous proportions? Should we impose nationwide standards that go beyond those adopted by any of the 50 States before we have the opportunity to assess how those State programs are performing? How can we benefit from experiments at the State level if we go beyond them before the results are in?

I have come reluctantly to the conclusion that, with regard to the "eldercare" provisions, this bill simply goes too far, too fast.

It appears likely that the House will approve this very broad approach today, although it also appears that the Senate will take a much more limited approach. Whether the administration would follow through on its veto threat depends, of course, on what comes out of conference, but if there is a veto and it is upheld, I would hope that we could revisit this issue and move forward with a more limited child care program which would more closely align the United States with international norms. I do want a Federal law—a maternity/paternity leave law—but the eldercare bill that is before us today simply presents too onerous of a burden for the employer community of America to shoulder at this time.

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of the concept of family and medical leave, but in opposition to the legislation brought before the House today. I believe employers should offer a leave program for their employees. I agree wholeheartedly that if an employee must temporarily leave his or her job to care for a sick parent or because of a new addition to his or her family or because the employee has had the misfortune to become ill, he or she should not have to worry whether or not his or her job will be there for him or her when he or she comes back. A sense of fairness and a good head for business will tell any employer an adequate leave program is a must. A prospective employee seeks a job that not only pays well, but that offers decent, reasonable benefits. As an employer myself, I have always striven to offer my employees a leave program that guarantees flexibility and job security. However, I part company with those who support this legislation when it comes to the idea of the Federal Government dictating what leave schedule is best for those whom I employ. In my view, such a program is best determined through cooperation and consultation between the employer and the employee. I believe it should be a fundamental right of employers and employees to determine what kind of benefits package will be offered. In addition, I have not seen any conclusive proof that all employees regardless of their age, sex and economic status will benefit equally from this legislation. Also, this legislation causes concern for its possible effect on women of childbearing years. Employers may be reluctant to hire women they believe are most likely to use up to 2½ months of leave time as allowed under H.R. 770 or 3 months under a compromise also offered. Therefore, Madam Chairman, I must conclude that while adequate family and medical leave makes perfect sense, legislation creating a Government dictate does not. The Government must not become a union boss that brokers deals that do not allow businesses to have a voice in the outcome.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Family and Medical Leave Act, which will require employers to provide unpaid leave to workers who need time to care for a newborn or seriously ill child, to care for a seriously ill spouse or parent, or to recover from a disabling personal illness.

It has been 5 years since my Committee on Post Office and Civil Service first reported the Family and Medical Leave Act, and I am gratified that, at long last, the House will have an opportunity to vote on this important legislation. Even more than the landmark child care bill this Congress is considering, H.R. 770 breaks new ground in the Federal Government's support of families and working parents. Whereas the child care bill provides the money and institutional support to make quality day care available and affordable for working people's families, the Family and Medical Leave Act provides important protection for their jobs.

The philosophy of the act is simple, and it is obviously right and just: No one should be fired because they have a child and need time to care for it; no one should be fired because they take a reasonable period of time to care for a seriously ill family member—whether it be a child, spouse, or parent. Working people should not be forced to make an impossible choice between caring for their families and keeping their jobs.

I believe this philosophy was always morally right. But today, when most women with children are by necessity in the work force, the issue is not just a moral one but an economic one as well. Indeed, the Family and Medical Leave Act addresses the profound transformation of the American work force—36 million children now live in homes where the sole parent or both parents work outside the homes. In addition, only 5 percent of the 27 million elderly are institutionalized in nursing homes. The vast majority of these folks may someday need the temporary care of their grown children. Clearly, the likelihood of finding oneself called to care for either a newborn or adopted child, a sick child, or a sick parent has become almost unavoidable for most of the working population.

To have a productive, world class work force, we have to strike an appropriate balance between the responsibilities people have to their families and their responsibilities as employers. Nobody works well when ill or incapacitated, when worried about a seriously ill family member, or when needed at home with a newborn child. This bill offers just such an equitable balance.

In the event of a family or medical crisis, employees can take 12 weeks of unpaid leave with the assurance that their former jobs will be there for them when they return. Is this too much to ask? I don't think so. Both the employer and the employee are winners. The experience of the employees won't be permanently lost to the employers when a personal crisis arises. Likewise, the loyalty of an employee to her employer will be reinforced and strengthened if she can be assured that her job will be preserved even in the event that she must leave work for an extended period to address a family or medical crisis.

FMLA does not impose onerous responsibilities on businesses. While the benefits of the leave policy for employers and employees will be great, the costs to the employers will be limited to the recruitment and training of temporary replacement employees and the extension of insurance coverage to these individuals. In addition, certain provisions of the bill protect against abuse of the leave privileges that would lead to serious disruptions of normal business. Chief among these provisions is the fact that the leave is unpaid.

Further, the notion that the imposition of these minimal standards will prove detrimental to our worldwide economic stature is unfounded. Germany's, Japan's, and Canada's paid parental leave policies are well documented. These requirements surely have not impaired those nations' economic strength. We will not win the battle to uphold our economic stature worldwide by compromising the welfare of American employees. We can only win by abolishing unfair trade practices, increasing productivity, and improving the quality of American-made products. The battle's casualties must not continue to include the American family.

In fact, passage of this bill will make us more productive and more competitive. The actual economic costs for the implementation of the Family and Medical Leave Act are negligible when compared to the present costs incurred as a result of the lack of a national leave program. The GAO study offers a clear picture on the savings. The cost of the bill to the employers will be $188 million per year—or a little over $5 per employee. On the other hand, $607 million a year in earnings is lost to working Americans when they lose their jobs because they can't take parental leave, and $12 billion in earnings is lost when they can't take medical leave. Society also must pay the cost of increased unemployment compensation and welfare expenditures that go to families who are precluded from taking such leave.

It is clear that the Family and Medical Leave Act makes both moral and economic sense. We cannot continue to ignore the needs of our work force and concomitantly the needs of our society. The failure to enact H.R. 770 would implicate Congress, too, in a national disgrace that has already destroyed the careers and the well-being of too many Americans.

Mr. GALLO. Madam Chairman, when the Federal Government steps in and imposes a mandated benefit program upon companies and employees without regard to economic capability, workers' needs, size and skill of the work force or the nature of the industry, the employer and the employee lose their right to decide what kind of benefits best suit their individual needs. This sort of Government intervention results in a one-size-fits-all approach to the ever-changing workplace.

H.R. 770 raises a number of serious concerns. As is too often the case with federally mandated benefits, H.R. 770 presumes that all workers have the same needs, desires and lifestyles. But employees value benefits differently. Older employees might prefer eye care benefits. Younger employees may want more vacation leave. Mothers and fathers might prefer insurance for their young adult children or access to more comprehensive health insurance. Companies should be free to tailor their benefit plans to their workers' needs—mandating one benefit could result in the loss of other nonmandated benefits.

Let's be honest—who are we really trying to help here? The truth is that while H.R. 770 is being sold as a proemployee bill, it actually hurts hard working employees who are struggling to make ends meet. Most single income parents simply will not be able to take advantage of the leave program because they cannot afford to be without money. Couples, neither of whom are paid professional-level salaries, also cannot afford to go without the two paychecks.

Not only does H.R. 770 discriminate against the working class, I believe it will lead to unconscious discrimination against women of child-bearing age. By mandating parental leave, women may be less likely be hired or advanced to positions of higher pay and authority. Another problem not often mentioned is that women care-givers to aged parents or relatives—they may also face the same consequences.

Proponents of mandated leave assert that an employer's cost in offering this benefit is minimal since the leave is unpaid. Unfortunately, uncompensated leave does not mean that there are no additional costs to employers. In fact, the General Accounting Office estimates that the bill will cost employers about $188 million a year, not including the substantial cost of continuing to pay for health insurance premiums for employees on leave.

A letter from a company manager in Maplewood, NJ emphasizes the problem. He writes:

I am deeply concerned with H.R. 770. I employ 100 people and to date have paid all health insurance premiums. With skyrocketing costs, (43% increase since January 1, 1989), that policy may not continue. On average, I pay $78.00 per employee per week for health insurance. Very few small businesses would be able to bear the burden of continuing these payments for such an extended period. This would most likely lead to discontinuing any health benefits. Most individuals would either purchase their own insurance (at even higher costs) or go without.

The proposal that no notice is required and leave can be intermittent would be devastating to any production scheduling. Two employees represent 8% of my work force! If I had to hire replacements and then discharge them upon the employees return, I would be liable for increased unemployment premiums as well.

Please oppose this legislation. Small businesses in this state need encouragement and stimulation, not devastating and restrictive legislation.

I do not believe that businesses are insensitive to the needs of employees. Most businesses value capable employees and will make arrangements on an individual basis to keep good workers when personal demands make it necessary. According to the National Federation of Independent Businesses, about 75 percent of its members now accommodate employees with time off to care for sick family members or the birth of a child when that leave is requested.

The benefits pie, however, cannot be expanded, only slices adjusted. To accommodate a new piece, employers must cut back on other preferred benefits. I strongly believe that employers should not be discouraged from providing a range of flexible policies and a variety of services or that Congress should step in and decide for all employers and employees what benefits they will and will not receive.

Madam Chairman, mandated benefits deny employers and employees the right to choose benefits most appropriate to their situation.

Mr. LEVINE of California. Madam Chairman, I rise today in full support of the Family and Medical Leave Act. The vast majority of industrialized nations have enacted laws guaranteeing working people paid leave in order to care for a newborn infant or a sick member of the family. Viewed in this light, the measure we are here debating is a very modest step forward. It will simply tell parents and children that they have the right to care for each other without risking the loss of their jobs.

This is an important pro-family bill. A majority of all women of childbearing age work. Many of these women carry the heavy burdens of providing primary care for both young children and aging parents in addition to full-time employment.

Numerous studies show that a mother's relationship with her infant is the best predictor of the growth and development in later life. The bill fosters a cohesive family environment as it puts value back into caregiving roles that employees sometimes must fill.

This bill is also good for business. Arnold Hiatt, chairman of the Stride Rite Corp., states that employees who are allowed time off to tend to the care of a newborn or to tend to a medical emergency, return to their jobs with a stronger morale and sense of commitment. As well, the GAO estimates that this bill, because the leave is not paid, will cost businesses an average of about $5 per employee per year. This amount is approximately $395 less than the average vacation package costs employers. Clearly, this legislation makes good sense for employers.

This is a win-win bill. Everyone benefits: employees, businesses, and most of all, society in general. Preserving the foundation of American society should be a consideration of every bill debated in this body. And in few bills is this intent as clear as it is in the Family and Medical Leave Act. I will support this legislation wholeheartedly and strongly urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. BROWN of California. Madam Chairman, I rise today to express my support for the bipartisan, compromise version of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The structure of the American family has changed dramatically over the last 30 years. The traditional family model, where dad worked for pay and mom took care of the children at home, is vanishing. Today, approximately half of the work force is female, and the majority of families consist of two-earner couples. When family obligations or emergencies arise, it is increasingly difficult to juggle family and work responsibilities.

Unfortunately, many businesses have failed to adopt flexible policies that take into account the changing structure of the family. While some employers do have a parental leave policy, parents returning to the workplace are not always ensured that they will return to their previous position. Often, the employee returns to a job which has been diminished: they find that their job involves fewer responsibilities and lower paycheck. In 1986 nearly two out of three large businesses failed to allow their employees family leave for very sick children. Similarly, a 1987 study disclosed that only 3 percent of employers permit their workers to take unpaid leave to care for elderly parents. All industrialized countries, except the United States and South Africa, have established a national leave policy.

During a serious illness, children need increased exposure to their parents at certain critical points if they are to have a good chance of growing into healthy adults. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, children who are hospitalized get well faster and have fewer complications when their parents are able to be with them. Furthermore, parents are often the only people to care for children after they are released from the hospital, but before they are ready to return to school or day care.

Now that Americans are living longer, many families are serving as double-duty caregivers—for both children and aging parents. Families provide between 80 and 90 percent of the medical and personal care of elderly family members. This care amounts to an average of 47 hours each week. It is nearly impossible to fulfill these responsibilities while maintaining a full-time job. The lack of a family or medical leave policy makes these trying times more stressful.

American workers should not be forced to choose between having a job and responding to major family needs. The Family and Medical Leave Act will guarantee that workers will be able to return to their jobs without the loss of seniority after a short period of leave. A maximum of 12 weeks of unpaid leave can be taken for the birth of a new child, the serious illness of an immediate family member, or the employee's own illness. Employers are required to continue health benefits during the leave period.

With this act, employers invest in an experienced, well-trained work force in which morale is high. The General Accounting Office estimates that it will cost employers less than $200 million per year or $4.50 per year for each employee to comply with the Family and Medical Leave Act. The societal costs of not having a national policy are far greater. We all lose when some Americans can't return to their jobs because of illness or the care of a newborn. Taxpayers pay the bill in lost tax revenues and higher payments for social programs, such as unemployment compensation, Medicaid, and Food Stamps.

The bill addresses the special needs of small businesses by exempting firms with fewer than 50 employees—95 percent of all employers—yet still covering 47 percent of all employees. It is my hope that many of these exempted businesses will recognize the importance of providing a positive and productive work environment for employees, and independently institute a leave policy for their workers.

Protecting the American family is a goal that we all share. I am disappointed that the President has threatened to veto this legislation. Families are the benchmark of the strength and health of our society, and I believe that we must rise above partisan politics to help working families across America. It is our responsibility to bring public policy in line with the realities of contemporary family life. I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to vote in support of the compromise version of H.R. 770.

Mr. SERRANO. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990, H.R. 770. This legislation will offer unpaid, job-guaranteed leave for new parents, seriously ill workers, and workers who must care for a seriously ill child or family member.

Madam Chairman, this legislation is a strong, affordable, forward-looking proposal. The estimated costs to implement the proposal are nominal for both employers and taxpayers. In fact, the proposal does not call for a dime in new Federal expenditures and it will not require businesses to spend money on new employee benefits. All it does is ensure that American workers have a job to come back to if they have a child, become seriously ill, or have a serious illness in their family.

The State of New York, with a work force of approximately 8.1 million employees, has no work-leave policy. New York State workers lose an estimated $3.1 billion annually as a result of compelling family needs. The taxpayers' share of these losses is approximately $464 million annually in payments from government programs such as unemployment insurance, supplemental security income and welfare to people who have lost their jobs for having experienced childbirth, tended to an ill family member, or become incapacitated by an illness themselves.

Madam Chairman, in my opinion, it makes sense to invest in America's workers by providing job protected leave in times of medical or other compelling family need, rather than spend much more in welfare, unemployment compensation, Medicaid, and other social programs when workers lose their jobs under such circumstances.

Overwhelming public opinion research data shows that the Family and Medical Leave Act has enormous support from the American public. A recent Gallup organization survey found that 81 percent of all Americans support this proposal. They believe the Government should ensure employees the right to be with their children during the first weeks of their life, to care for their family members in times of crisis, and to recover from serious illness—without risking their jobs.

Madam Chairman, I wholeheartedly support H.R. 770 and I urge my colleagues to support its final passage.

Mr. WALGREN. Madam Chairman, today I intend to vote for the new compromise Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990, H.R. 770. This bill presents us with a real opportunity to support those family values that all of us hold dear.

It is long past time to recognize the realities of family life today. This bill is important to all who must raise children and care for sick spouses or parents. The Family and Medical Leave Act would allow employees to elect to take up to 12 weeks of unpaid family leave per year for the birth of a child or the serious illness of a member of the household or elderly parents.

The workplace is rapidly changing in America. In fact, it has changed. And it is critical that our laws which govern employer-employee relationships change to take account of the new realities. The "traditional" family in which the father works and the mother stays home no longer describes most families in America. More than half of all women with children less than 1 year old are working; 2 out of 3 women with children under 3 years old are working. In today's economy, that second income is essential to provide most families the means to keep food on the table and a decent roof over the family's head.

Of equal importance is the fact that America's population is living longer and therefore growing older. As more women leave the home to work and as families that used to stay "in the hometown" disperse, many elderly parents are left alone, without traditional family support nearby. The fact that we have almost no home medical or nursing care is leading us toward a major crisis in how to care for the elderly.

The bill before us recognizes that when both women and men work, employers must allow them to care for extraordinary medical needs of their family at home. It is time to recognize the importance of home care by family members as an important part of what all employees have a right to expect. Most employers do. All should.

This bill provides a good answer to those who have argued that provisions like these would unreasonably increase the cost of goods and services. The time away from work required will be unpaid leave, limited to no more than 12 weeks per year. Common sense tells us that few are in a position to forego their income for longer—and that for a mother not to be able to stay with a newborn child less than 10 weeks old without losing her job is unconscionable.

I would like to quote from a letter I received from the American Academy of Pediatrics on the importance of this bill:

As pediatricians, we know that there are times when the need for a parent's care is critical.

During the first few months of a child's life. The bond between parent and child develops in this early stage.

When a child is hospitalized. Children are known to get well faster and have fewer complications when their parents are able to be with them.

When a child is newly adopted. The parents and the child require time to form physical as well as psychological attachments.

There is hardly a more compelling argument for this bill.

The compromise bill goes far in recognizing the special needs of small businesses by exempting employers with less than 50 employees. Employees must have worked 1,000 hours for their employer over a 12-month period to be eligible for the unpaid leave.

If "family" means anything of value to our society, government must take these kinds of steps. As our work force changes, certainly it would not be right for employers who have benefited from women wanting to work, to be unwilling to recognize the importance of family and medical leave. This is a bill that will make America a better place to work—and live. I hope the House will pass the bill today.

Mr. GLICKMAN. Madam Chairman, today the House of Representatives considered and passed H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act. I did not support this legislation because I am truly concerned about the practicality of Government involvement in this issue. I believe it would be extremely difficult to draft a logical law that takes into account the complex needs of working people across the country. The kind of leave that is needed and appropriate will vary from situation to situation. I voted against this bill because I believe that it precludes the ability of employers to work out suitable arrangements in special circumstances involving family sickness and other health and maternity situations.

The Federal Government traditionally has not imposed particular benefit packages on employers and employees, and it should not begin now. The kinds of benefits that a firm provides to its employees should continue to be decided by negotiations between labor and management—not mandated by the Government. No kind of mandated national benefit can take into account the unique circumstances that individual businesses face. This bill goes against the current trend to flexible benefits such as cafeteria plans and forces all employees to accept benefits that they may neither want nor need.

Coming from a small business background myself, I understand that each special circumstance determines what amount of leave is appropriate, whether it be 4, 8 or 12 weeks. Businesses large and small need the flexibility to work with their employees to provide the type of benefit package that helps them most. If we come in and mandate one lone piece of the employee benefits pie, who is to say that the other fringe benefits that make up the package aren't more important to employees? Employers may have workers who prefer flextime, dental insurance, more vacation, or other benefits. These employers and employees both will suffer without the flexibility to decide what is best for them.

This year, Congress is considering a number of mandates which will affect the average business in this country, many of which I support. New minimum wage standards, which I fully supported, went into effect in April. The Americans with Disabilities Act, which I also support, will soon be considered here in the House. That law requires that companies provide employment opportunity and equal access to the disabled. The Civil Rights Act of 1990, currently being considered in the House Judiciary Committee, and which I have cosponsored, strengthens the laws prohibiting employment discrimination. In addition, I expect that legislation providing minimum health benefits for all workers will also become a reality in the near future.

But the Government should mandate on the business sector only those requirements which cannot feasibly and sensibly be handled between employers and employees in a negotiated context. While the reasons for the family and medical leave bill are very real indeed, the bill creates more problems than it solves.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Chairman, today the House of Representatives has a historic opportunity to help American families. By passing the Family and Medical Leave Act we are recognizing the relationship between family obligations and professional responsibilities.

This is a vote for the American family, an institution that has come under hard times lately and truly needs and deserves this kind of boost.

The substitute that will be offered by Representatives GORDON and WELDON presents a generous compromise that both protects the leave provisions of the bill and takes into consideration the concerns raised by the business community.

As someone who has spent many years advocating the strengthening of our foster care and child welfare systems, I strongly support this bill. At a time when American families are breaking apart because of drug use, divorce, and child abuse, this legislation eases some of the conflicts and burdens many families face.

The provisions of this bill are especially critical to adoptive and foster families. Presently, there are over 31,000 children in the United States waiting to be adopted; some 240,000 children are presently living in family-foster-care situations. These children and their adoptive or foster parents need time to bond and become a family.

A large portion of these children living in foster care are older and have been the victims of sexual or physical abuse. Adjusting to a new family is not easy, but being able to take time off from a job to bond with a new child can help ease the transition.

Caring for a new family member can be tremendously stressful. By denying parents the opportunity to take a short leave to get their family together, we compound this stress. Imagine the conflicts a new parent must address if they have to choose between getting to know their newly-adopted child, who is experiencing emotional trauma after being placed in the home, and keeping the job that allows the parent to put food on the table, to clothe, and to protect that youth.

We cannot, and should not, continue to ask parents to choose between earning a living or fulfilling their obligations to their families.

I urge my colleagues to vote in support of the Gordon-Weldon substitute. American families are depending upon us.

Mr. SYNAR. Madam Chairman, today I rise in support of the Family and Medical Leave Act because it strikes the proper balance between family and work responsibilities. The bill provides employees with 12 weeks a year in unpaid family and/or medical leave and exempts businesses with under 50 employees.

Years ago, when fathers worked and mothers stayed home, there was no question about how to care for a sick relative or a newly born child. Today, 57 percent of married mothers with children under 6 work. Suddenly, providing care for a sick husband, child, or parent can mean choosing between your family or your job. Working Americans should not have to make that choice.

This is a bill which the vast majority of Americans want and need. According to a recent Gallup poll, 80 percent of all Americans believe parents should be with their children during the first weeks of life and should care for family members during illness without risk of losing their jobs.

Unfortunately, many working Americans have lost their jobs when they tried to juggle work and care for a sick family member. When working Americans lose their jobs because of a family medical crisis, we all lose. The rest of us pay the bill in lost tax revenues and higher payments for social programs, such as unemployment compensation, Medicaid, and Food Stamps. The Family and Medical Leave Act won't cost one penny in new Federal spending.

The bill includes exemptions for those small businesses who would have difficulty implementing a family and medical leave policy. While 95 percent of all businesses nationwide will be exempted, the remaining 5 percent of businesses that are covered employ 49 percent of all Americans. In Oklahoma, 39 percent of all employees will be covered by the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The Family and Medical Leave Act will help make American companies more competitive internationally by increasing employee productivity and decrease turnover. America's two toughest competitors—West Germany and Japan—guarantee at least 3 months of paid family leave. With this act, businessmen invest in an experienced, well-trained, happy work force and America invests in a more competitive work force.

Mr. WEISS. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the substitute amendment to H.R. 770 offered by Representative GORDON and Representative WELDON. This compromise represents a reasonable approach toward accommodating work and family needs of Americans. Workers should not be forced to make a choice between keeping their jobs and meeting their family responsibilities.

The composition of the work force has changed dramatically in recent years. Today, in most American families both parents are employed outside the home. Sixty-seven percent of women with children under the age of 3 are in the work force. One out of every four families is headed by a single parent. Clearly, there is a pressing need for a national policy which sufficiently addresses this changed work and home environment. The Gordon-Weldon substitute does just this.

Several recent studies, including one completed by the Institute for Women's Policy Research, has concluded that the cost to workers and taxpayers of the current lack of a national leave policy are many times greater than the costs to business of having a national policy. Having a national leave policy would reduce the costs to workers and society of the socially necessary tasks of childbirth, child care and eldercare, or of illness. Having the right to return to their jobs would reduce unemployment and earnings losses for workers who must be absent for these reasons.

While the cost borne by workers because of childbirth, illness, and dependent care amount to over $100 billion annually, according to the GAO H.R. 770 would cost employers only $188 million per year, and the compromise version significantly less than that.

In addition, to address the concerns of small business, the compromise legislation permanently exempts employers with 50 or fewer employees. As a result, approximately 95 percent of all employers would be exempt from the requirement of the bill.

I have supported family and medical leave legislation since its inception. Importantly, as the bill was originally introduced in the 99th Congress, its provisions went further to respond to the needs of the American family. This legislation exempted small employers with five workers or fewer. The compromise version of H.R. 770 exempts employers with 50 or fewer, which, as I stated before, will exempt 95 percent of all employers.

The original version of the Family and Medical Leave Act allowed an employee to take, in 1 calendar year, 18 weeks to care for a child and 26 weeks for a temporary disability or medical problem. The compromise version of H.R. 770 allows no more than 12 weeks total per year for any combination of leaves.

Clearly, the compromise version of H.R. 770 is modest. I urge my colleagues to support it, however; it takes important steps toward addressing the changing needs of the American work force and the American family.

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

I want to thank everyone who has worked so hard to bring this legislation to the floor, especially my esteemed colleagues on the Education and Labor Committee, the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, and the Committee on House Administration. These committees have worked together and with the leadership to present this compromise bill for our consideration today and I want to say thank you for your efforts.

I also want to thank the broad coalition of national, State and grass-roots organizations, including women's groups, labor, child and family advocates, disability rights groups, churches, and countless others who represent families and individuals trying to maintain economic stability.

President Bush says he is going to veto this bill. He says he supports parental leave, but thinks it should be a private decision by private businesses.

Does the President apply this same laissez-faire attitude in general?

Should the Government allow nondiscrimination to be a private decision by private businesses?

What about nonpollution activities? Should that be a private decision by private businesses, too?

How about worker health and safety? Maybe the President also thinks that ought to be a private decision by private business.

I do not think so.

Apparently, only when the issue primarily affects the women of America, the young families in our work force, the needs of new parents—only then does the President rise to the high principle of private business making private decisions.

Only when it would benefit the younger, less senior, less powerful new parents does the President summon up some great moral principle that Government should not tell private business how to operate.

Only a few weeks ago, this same President, who wants billions for new savings and loan bailouts, and billions for new weapons systems, and billions for new foreign aid—this same President threatened a veto when the Congress proposed new funding for child care for young families.

And now he threatens a veto over a modest proposal to relieve young workers of having to choose between a job and their families.

This is a President who practices the rhetoric of caring about families, but whose answer to the real financial and employment problems of America's families is not compassion, is not creativity, is not commitment: his answer is a veto threat.

And I just hope that America's families remember what he said and what he did on this critical subject.

Let us not let George Bush threaten to veto child care, threaten to veto parental and family leave, and then describe himself as pro-family.

The need for a parental leave policy first emerged during the yearlong bipartisan child care investigation conducted by the Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families in 1984. The select committee concluded that "financial considerations, the need for a continuous income and job security, often impede parents who may want to stay home to care for a newborn. For families who wish to choose infant care outside their own home, escalating costs are a major obstacle."

The select committee recommended, "Congress should review both the barriers and incentives to improving current leave and personnel policies. Policies should be developed which do not penalize parents for giving birth or spending an acceptable period at home with their infants."

Since then, study after study, including the most recent report from the National Academy of Sciences Panel on Child Care Policy, has reaffirmed the importance of parental and child-bonding following the birth or adoption of a child, and the need to develop policies in support of families.

The select committee has documented the extreme stress already faced by the families of more than 3 million children with serious chronic illness or disability, who must also decide every day between their jobs and their children, between financial stability and poverty, between keeping their children at home or institutionalizing them, at much greater costs to families, Government and society.

And, new evidence from the select committee further documents the increasing fragility among America's families. Hundreds of thousands of infants are now born drug-exposed each year, leaving them vulnerable to long-term illness and disability. These are the very families for whom bonding and support during those first critical weeks are essential.

I doubt that there are many among us who would deny that parents should spend time getting to know and learning how to care for their new infants, or that parents should be with their children during a serious illness. Or that people who are disabled on the job should not be punished by losing that job.

And with many of us faced with caring for our own elderly parents, it is hard for me to believe that we would force others to choose between keeping their jobs and tending to the needs of a critically ill or dying parent.

I do not believe that this is what the debate is about. The debate is about costs to be incurred by employers and about employer mandates. But the arguments are fallacious. The cost to employers of implementing family and medical leave under this legislation would amount to only about $102 million per year according to GAO, only $4.50 per year per covered employee. And this legislation excludes from coverage small employers, those who have argued that the costs of holding open a position can be devastating for employers with limited resources.

What about the lost income to the hundreds of thousands of working families who lose their jobs because they choose their families over their jobs? One study estimates that the lack of parental and related leave cost families more than $600 million per year—six times as great as the cost to their employers.

Then there is the cost to the taxpayers who pay more than $100 million every year in unemployment compensation and other social benefits for workers who have lost their jobs because they don't have guaranteed parental or medical leave.

In a time when we want more families in America to be self-sufficient and to reduce welfare dependency, failing to provide for parental leave is counterproductive. If parents are forced to choose between caring for their closest loved ones or losing their livelihoods, we are not offering them choices, only desperation and economic catastrophe.

I have listened to arguments that we do not need Federal legislation, that family and medical leave is a decision best left to individual employers. While many of the Fortune 500 companies offer some form of job-protected parental leave, according to the National Academy of Sciences, a substantial majority of employees in small, medium-sized or large firms have no leave of any kind available to care for infants. The Department of Labor's 1989 study found that only 37 percent of full-time female employees in the large and medium size firms surveyed could take unpaid maternity leave. In a study of 384 companies nationwide, only slightly more than one-third offered unpaid leave to fathers. Many employees have some sick leave benefits, but they are prohibited from using that leave to take care of a sick child or care for a dying parent.

States have not picked up the gauntlet either. Only five States currently require employers to offer disability leave, and less than half the States have some type of parental leave policy.

Recent research suggests that women without the right to such leave policies are precisely the most vulnerable members of the labor force—those workers who may be only a paycheck away from needing public assistance: unmarried and part-time workers, low-wage workers, young workers and those who have less education.

The United States prides itself on the leadership role that it plays among the nations of this world. But where is our leadership when it comes to taking care of our families?

Guaranteed maternity leave is a long-established Government policy in virtually every corner of the world, including 24 countries in Africa, 9 in Asia, 7 in the Middle East, 19 in Europe and 14 in Central America. Included in this list are the nations with the strongest national economies as well as most of the Third World countries that manufacture goods that are sold in this country. Apparently, concerns about cost or diminished ability to compete in world markets do not enter into the political decisions of these nations to offer family leave as a social benefit. What's more, virtually all of them—including many of the poorest ones—guarantee paid maternity leave. Yet in this country, we are still arguing over guaranteeing unpaid leave.

We can sit on our hands and keep on waiting for a voluntary system to help America's families, but how long will the American labor force have to wait for some minimal job protections that are guaranteed now to workers throughout the world? How long do we tell parents in this country that they will have to wait?

If you vote against this legislation, what will you say to people like James Callor, whose employer denied him time off to spend with his dying 4-year-old daughter, in spite of his 8 years of excellent work? How will you explain your vote to people like Deborah Drewek who was denied leave to care for her father who was dying of bone cancer—alone, halfway across the country? Will you tell them that maybe in a few more years, their employer will voluntarily adopt parental and medical leave policies? Will you tell that in order for America to stay competitive, their children and parents will have to die alone?

The American public believes that family leave should be a guaranteed protection. In a recent Gallup poll, more than four out of five respondents agreed that employers should be required to provide an unpaid leave to employees upon the birth or adoption of a child or to care for a sick child or other sick family members. More than three-fourths favored an employer requirement to maintain employee benefits during the leave period.

If you agree with the American public, if you believe that parents should have some time off to care for their newborn or newly adopted children, that parents should be able to care for their dying or critically ill children, without having to fear losing their jobs—and possibly the health insurance that goes with it—and if we want to keep families from welfare dependency, then there must be some job protection for workers in this country and it is time we did something about providing that protection.

In a time when we are tormented by our budget deficit, and searching for cost-effective programs, the Family and Medical Leave Act is one program that makes sense. It makes sense because it will keep families from financial ruin and from becoming dependent on the social welfare system for support.

This is a bare bones piece of legislation. It exempts small employers and many families from coverage. But it is of critical importance to those families for whom it will offer a floor of support that is desperately needed in an era when most parents have two jobs—one inside the home and one outside. And if they do not already, many of our Nation's moms and dads may soon have a third job—caring for their elderly and/or infirm parents.

Just a few weeks ago, the House passed the Early Childhood Education and Development Act of 1990. That piece of legislation, together with the Family and Medical Leave Act, represent the cornerstones of a new era for America, one where we recognize the contributions that our Nation's families make to society and where society in turn ensures that families do not suffer economic ruin as a result.

If you are truly concerned about cost, then think about the cost to America's families for not having parental and medical leave. And then vote to do something about it. Support this legislation.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

In America today, you can lose your job for having a baby. Fathers cannot spend time with a newborn son or daughter. Working women become unemployed mothers for the act of bearing children. Our sense of justice should tell us this is wrong.

Of all the industrialized nations, the United States stands alone with South Africa in denying working men and women the ability to care for a sick parent or child. Shall another Mother's Day pass where caring for your own mother can cost you your career?

On May 7, 1990, a family leave took effect in New Jersey. The New Jersey Family Leave Act was signed into law by Governor Kean as one of his last official acts. It is worth noting Governor is a Republican and a strong supporter of President Bush. H.R. 770 has as a principal sponsor Congresswoman MARGE ROUKEMA of New Jersey. She is also a Republican and a stalwart supporter of President Bush. Family leave is not a partisan issue nor is it a labor issue; it is a family issue.

This bill is not antibusiness, 95 percent of all businesses in America will not be affected by this bill. This bill is proworking family because it will protect nearly half of all employees.

In this body, many Members label themselves as "profamily." Well, firing someone for having a baby is antifamily. Telling parents who adopt to make a decision between their career and getting to know an adopted child is antifamily. Making a person work when a serious ill parent or child is at home in need of care is antifamily. If you want to be profamily, here is a vote to prove it.

Mr. RAY. Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The Family and Medical Leave Act is well-intentioned legislation. I believe businesses should make every effort to provide leave for family medical emergencies. However, the Federal Government has no business mandating the type of benefits a business should offer.

Throughout the history of this Nation, the Government has allowed employers and employees to design the wage and benefit package they desire using their own particular situation. This is proper. Quite frankly, I do not know why the Congress has decided they can do a better job of setting employee benefits.

Our Nation finds itself in a precarious situation. The budget deficit is increasing, corporate profits are down, and inflation and interest rates are increasing. This is not the time to mandate new costly benefits on business. Indeed, I believe it is important to legislate in a way which will encourage and motivate business. Businesses are already heavily shackled with Government mandates, and the ultimate result will be slower business growth and an increased number of people out of work. I do not believe any of us want that type of end result.

I support America's work force and good jobs for families. Economically sound business without Federal mandates is the best vote I can make to accomplish this.

Madam Chairman, in conclusion, it is more proper to allow workers to choose their benefits rather than those of us in Congress choosing their benefits.

Mr. STENHOLM. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 770 as reported, as it would be amended by the Gordon-Weldon substitute, and, in fact, in just about any form.

Family and medical leave are good benefits; however, a Federal mandate that all employers, regardless of individual circumstances, be required to provide this extended time off from work, would be bad law.

We've heard a lot about how the Gordon-Weldon substitute is purported to be a compromise, watering down H.R. 770 as reported, which in turn is supposed to have watered down previous proposals.

I've examined the Gordon-Weldon substitute. For all the watering down that is supposed to have happened, I'm a little surprised—the bill looks about as dry as the lower Rio Grande during a draught.

I certainly respect and like the gentlemen sponsoring the substitute, but I can not support their proposal.

Public support for mandated leave is not nearly as strong as claimed. Supporters repeatedly cite polling data showing overwhelming support for these kinds of benefits. Of course, to paraphrase the National Rifle Association, statistics don't kill; people kill.

At any rate, some folks torture statistics until they say what those folks want to hear. I am reminded of the polls that showed a majority of Americans opposed to abortion on demand, but a majority also opposed to prohibiting abortion. And, from just a very few years ago, I am reminded of polls that showed a majority of Americans supporting the United States aiding resistance to Communism in Central America, but also a majority opposed to the United States assisting guerrillas seeking to overthrow the government of Nicaragua.

The conventional wisdom notwithstanding, support for a good benefit in principle is far different from a demand for a universal, Federal mandate. Support for such mandates has evaporated in surveys when respondants are asked in more detail about the Federal Government mandating that employers provide such time off. Overwhelming majorities in poll after poll have expressed the strongest support for flexible benefit packages, where the benefits can be tailored to the needs and circumstances of employees. And certainly this one benefit is not a high priority; in an April 1989 Washington Post poll, only 3 percent of respondents rated parental leave—even without the mandate issue raised—as the most important of four issues.

This bill will be especially burdensome to small businesses, which are labor intensive, have greater difficulty replacing employees and require flexibility to remain competitive.

In general, small businesses operate on tighter budgets and smaller margins than big businesses.

Costs the bill would impose include: Overtime of workers absorbing an absent employee's workload; cost of hiring temporary workers; cost of training replacement workers; unemployment insurance costs; and loss of productivity associated with these and other factors.

Many employees have unique and critical skills and would have to be replaced immediately by new employees; for example, lawyers, accountants, physics or special ed teachers, RNs, emergency room personnel, medical technicians, respiratory therapists, radiologic technicians and, I'd like to think, vocational agriculture teachers. Sometimes, finding a temporary replacement with such specialized skills will be exceedingly difficult, especially in small towns and rural areas. In other cases, the marketplace will require an employer to hire a replacement employee on a permanent basis; costs will thus increase as employers provide pay and benefits for duplicate employees.

Let's not lull ourselves into a false sense of security over the bill's 50-employee "small business threshold":

First, there are a lot of businesses with 50 or 100 or 200 employees that, for their industries, are small. For those going through troubled times—auto dealers, right now, for example—this is exactly the type of bill that could put them over the brink.

Second, we know the companion bill in the other body has been reported with a 20-employee threshold. We remember that H.R. 925, in the last Congress, had a 15-employee threshold.

We can guess where the conference would go; we understand where the agenda of the groups pushing this bill is headed.

Besides opposing the principle of this mandated intrusion into employer-employee relations, many small business men and women quite reasonably fear that this mandate could easily be expanded in the future to apply to all employers.

A powerful example of the harmful effects this bill would have can be found in a rural hospital setting, the kind that is so familiar in the 17th District of Texas.

One benefits manager for a hospital testified before a Senate subcommittee regarding H.R. 770's companion bill as follows:

> It costs us $28,000 to train one RN to work in our Operating Room, $18,000 to train a Critical Care RN, and $13,000 to train an RN to work on a medical or surgical floor. . . . If a hospital can't hire all the nurses it needs at the outset, it won't be able to hire replacement workers either if the supply was inadequate to begin with.

In the 35 counties of the 17th District of Texas, we have 42 hospitals, mostly small—28 have 50 beds or fewer. We have several whole counties that have only one or a few registered nurses, some of them adjoining counties that have none. To attract qualified, capable personnel, such a hospital may offer generous benefits that, for obvious good reasons, can not include several kinds of extended time off. Instead, the benefits negotiated will be more cost-effective to the hospital and, very frequently, more useful and desirable to the employee.

Administration and enforcement of this bill would be a nightmare. This bill would ultimately require a much-expanded Federal bureaucracy to administer and enforce its requirements.

By allowing law suits in Federal courts, the bill would increase workloads in an already over-burdened court system; allow punitive damages of up to 3 times regular, compensatory damages—for lost wages, benefits, and interest, punitive damages unprecedented under existing Federal employment discrimination law; encourage law suits by parties with marginal cases in hopes of high out-of-court settlements; and unfairly threaten often-innocent employers with lengthy, expensive administrative reviews and court litigation.

This bill restricts employees' ability to negotiate for other job benefits they themselves prefer, since fringe benefits are carved out within a finite "pie" of costs.

The BLS [Department of Labor Bureau of Labor Statistics] estimates that more than 25 percent of all employee compensation currently is in the form of benefits; more than 8 percent is mandatory participation in government benefit programs for example, Social Security, unemployment insurance, worker's compensation.

It's simple math: If this bill raises the mandatory portion to 9 or 10 or 11 percent, the voluntary—that is, flexible, negotiated portion—is going to decline from 17 percent to 16 or 15 or 14 percent. Therefore, some employees will lose other benefits they prefer to benefits in this bill. Unfairly, some employees who don't need or can't qualify for family or medical leave will have to give up benefits from their package to pay for these mandated benefits provided for other employees. This bill discourages innovative benefits. Such a mandate will stifle positive trends toward flexible benefits, such as cafeteria plans and flextime, which provide all employees with benefits more suited to their individual needs.

Rigid work force mandates will impair our international competitiveness. Supporters of this bill point to similar benefits in other industrialized nations, particularly in Europe; however, this is one of several rigid restrictions on workplace flexibility that have led to zero job creation in Europe since 1970 versus 40 million new jobs in the United States.

The GAO cost study of this bill is seriously flawed. GAO's 1988 study estimated annual costs to the economy of about $200 million per year. These were revised upward a year later by 30 percent & even GAO acknowledges they would double with the addition of spousal leave—such as the Gordon-Weldon substitute proposes.

Moreover, GAO's methodology was seriously flawed. The sample size in GAO's survey was too small to be statistically valid. GAO's unrepresentative survey covered only 80 firms in 2 labor markets: Detroit, Michigan, and Charleston, SC—There are 4.5 million small business employers in the United States.

GAO ignored such significant cost items as: Overtime of workers absorbing an absent employee's workload; cost of hiring temporary workers; cost of training replacement workers; unemployment insurance costs; and loss of productivity associated with these and other factors.

GAO also estimated that only 1 in 300 employees would take such leave, an unsupportable, unrealistic, and highly debatable figure.

Unintended discrimination will result. Employers will discriminate in hiring, even unconsciously, in favor of those least likely to use such leave, for example, single, healthy, orphaned males apparently past child-rearing age. In fact, a survey by the certified employee benefits specialists found that 61 percent are worried that mandated leave would result in discrimination—much of it not even intended—against prospective employees most likely to use the leave.

This is a Yuppie bill. Those working on lower economic rungs can't afford 10 to 15 weeks of unpaid leave. Lower paid workers will be forced to give up part of their firm's benefits pie to pay for higher costs caused by better off employees taking advantage of these mandated benefits. But, then, that's consistent with the agenda of the groups pushing this bill. This year they will say the United States is backward because Europe has mandated paid leave and we have no leave. Next year they'll tell us we're backward because Europe has paid leave and we have only unpaid leave.

There are better, pro-family initiatives that would provide flexibility and increase economic resources for working families with lost income. In fact, one such provision was included in the child care substitute I offered just a few weeks ago, along with the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SHAW], namely, the wee-pots supplement to the earned income tax credit, for families with a child under age 1.

CONCLUSION

This is a bad bill, for employees, employers, and the economy.

The Gordon-Weldon substitute—which we'll discuss shortly—is no improvement, because it's not really any different.

Some of our colleagues have spoken of the tortured, 5-year journey this bill has made to the floor of the House. I'm sympathetic. It's time to put this bill out of its misery once and for all.

Mr. SCHUETTE. Madam Chairman, the Family and Medical Leave Act is a dangerous proposition. While the gesture to require businesses with 50 or more employees to provide 10 weeks of job-guaranteed family leave every 2 years, and 15 weeks of job-guaranteed sick leave annually is well-intended, I have very basic concerns about both H.R. 770 as it has been reported and the substitutes introduced by Mr. PENNY, and Mr. GORDON, and Mr. WELDON.

Requiring an employee to provide reasonable and practicable notice so as not to unduly disrupt the operations of an employer lacks the specificity which ought to be contained in legislation which forces an employer to hold open, or fill with a temporary worker, any position in the firm. The bill does not even allow employers to require advance notice of an employee's intent to return.

The eligibility requirements in the bill are also extremely vague. There is no specific definition of serious health conditions. Also an employee is entitled to the leave regardless of whether an ablebodied spouse or other relative is actually attending to the needs of the family member who is ill, with family member being defined so loosely that it only exacerbates the problem. Under those loose definitions, the bill would subject an employer to triple damages if a civil suit is brought.

The Gordon-Weldon substitute attempts to better the bill at the margins only. Requiring doctor instead of nurse certification, something of which the original sponsors should have thought, is clearly an improvement. Another is tightening the few requirements which do exist in the committee report. The Gordon/Weldon changes are a start, but hardly enough to correct the fundamental structural flaws of the bill.

The Penny substitute moves further in the right direction, but the fact remains that this type of legislation will cost employers at least $300 million annually for payment of health benefits and temporary replacement worker salaries alone. It is a fact these costs, even if not seriously underestimated, increase geometrically every year due to increases in the costs of health benefits. Furthermore, the estimate does not even include the cost to businesses from lost productivity, of training workers who will only be temporary, or retraining employees who have been on extended leave.

More importantly, I have grave concerns about the effect this legislation will have on employees. Unquestionably, employers have limited budgets for benefits. This is especially true of the small business employers who produced much of the employment growth in the last decade. What benefits will be foregone by those employees who do not take such leave in order to pay the costs of those who do? Also, it is a fact that more women than men take parental and care-giving leave. This legislation could lead to discrimination against female employees whether conscious or not by employers purely for cost effective reasons. Again, the substitutes do little or nothing to correct this fundamental structural flaw. I am absolutely and unalterably opposed to discrimination in the workplace.

The biggest problem with this legislation, however, is that it is based on the faulty assumption that the Government does a better job of managing the economy than employers and employees. The fact is that business owners and employees have been working together in good faith and with great success to negotiate parental leave and child care employment policies. In 1987 two-thirds of all employers including small business provided flexible work and child care policies for their employees. Of medium and large firms 90 percent had disability leave, which by federal law includes pregnancy and child birth. Many employers consider this leave separate from sick or vacation leave which may also be used for this purpose. Frankly, with the cost of training employees as high as it is many other employers accommodate their valued employees on a case by case basis.

Madam Chairman, for all these reasons and after careful consideration, I find I cannot support H.R. 770 or its substitutes as I feel it will be detrimental to rank and file employees, employers, and the general economy.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Madam Chairman, as a cosponsor of H.R. 770, I urge my House colleagues to adopt the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The vital legislation will provide adequate employee leave for workers during some of the most emotionally trying times in one's life. The bill guarantees 10 weeks of unpaid leave for non-Federal workers during the birth or adoption of a child. In addition, the measure provides the same amount of leave when the care of a seriously ill child or parent requires the employee to remain in the home. H.R. 770 extends even more generous leave to Federal workers—18 weeks of unpaid leave—under the same critical circumstances.

A vital provision of this legislation is the job protection provided to employees who utilize the upaid leave. Even after 10 weeks of family or medical leave, an employee is guaranteed his or her job upon returning to their place of employment. During this leave, the employee will continue to enjoy their full health insurance benefits without any interruption in coverage. While the bill's provisions appropriately are provided to employees of the U.S. House of Representatives, a small business exemption is included. Those enterprises with fewer than 50 employees are not required to provide this benefit to their workers; however, that number drops to 35 employees after 3 years.

Madam Chairman, one need only look at our neighbors to the North to see family and medical leave benefits in place. In Canada maternity leave is provided for mothers allowing them up to 41 weeks of leave so that they may care for their child during the precious early stages of growth. For the first 15 weeks of leave, in fact, the mother receives 60 percent of her salary. Yet, Canada is not alone in providing these benefits; 135 countries around the globe offer some form of maternity benefits, while 127 include wages with the leave. The benefits provided by H.R. 770 are very modest when compared with those provided by our industrialized trading partners in Europe and Japan.

I am also interested in securing the passage of this bill since my home State has already taken the lead in providing similar benefits under State law. Effective just this week Mr. Chairman, New Jersey now has one of the most comprehensive family and medical leave policies in the Nation. Our State's new law includes the same basic benefits found in H.R. 770. Sound policy for our State, and sound policy for the Nation.

Before we vote today, I urge my colleagues to review the need for this legislation. Dramatic demographic changes, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, have altered the structure of the American family. Parents are working outside of the home at unprecedented numbers, 96 percent of fathers and 60 percent of mothers are not available to meet family needs in the home on a daily basis. This trend is especially hard on families with young children; 52 percent of mothers with children under age 3 now work outside of the home. The federally protected leave which we are debating today would clearly provide needed help to families with working parents as well as the many fatherless families. In addressing a slightly different demographic aspect, this legislation would also provide help to those 2.2 million people who need to care for aged parents or spouses.

The Family and Medical Leave Act is timely legislation that deserves our enthusiastic support.

Mr. ARMEY. Madam Chairman, I oppose H.R. 770 because I believe it would set a dangerous precedent by mandating employee benefits for virtually the first time. Benefits that are commonly offered in America today—everything from vacation time and sick leave to health insurance and retirement pensions—are available despite the absence of a mandate from Washington. Beginning to mandate other benefits with this legislation would open an entirely new area of Government regulation. That would have significant consequence for our economy and even, I would argue, for our liberty. Limited government is, of course, a fundamental value in a free society; regulations of this type are inconsisent with it.

I would, however, like to make a couple of practical points against the legislation.

First, it would impose certain burdens on low-income workers. Realistically, lower paid employees will not be able or willing to avail themselves of 12 weeks' of unpaid leave. Those who would take advantage of this benefit will primarily be higher paid professional employees who can afford a disruption of their income. But when these higher income workers take leave, someone will be required to do their job during their absence. Most businesses will be unable to hire replacements for them for only a 12-week period. More often, businesses will require their coworkers or the support personnel to handle their duties to the extent possible.

Consider a law firm, for example. When one of the lawyers takes parental leave, the firm will not be able to call a temporary service to replace him or her. Instead, the firm's paralegals and secretaries will be forced to do as much of the lawyer's routine tasks as possible. Thus, the lower income worker—who generally will not take the offered leave—will be forced to work harder in order to supply the benefit to a higher income employee.

Second, I'm concerned that because of the costs of offering this benefit, some businesses will discriminate against those likely to take the benefit. Obviously, if an employer has a choice between hiring two job candidates—one of whom is likely to take a leave and disrupt the business' operations, and one of whom is not—he may be inclined to hire the latter, all other factors being equal. This is not necessarily right, but it is likely to occur.

In fact, when this legislation was considered by the Education and Labor Committee, on which I served, I examined unemployment statistics for women of child-bearing age in several European countries and the United States. There was an unmistakable correlation between high unemployment rates of individuals in this category and extensive mandated leave laws. The unemployment rate for woman of child-bearing age in the United States was lower than in any of the European countries.

For these and other reasons, I urge my colleagues to oppose H.R. 770.

Mr. KLECZKA. Madam Chairman, parental and medical leave coverage for workers is an overdue improvement in American labor policy that also makes good sense for our businesses. For these reasons, the Family and Medical Leave Act [H.R. 770] has my full support.

Generous leave laws are standard labor policy in 137 industrialized and Third World nations—including our major trade competitor, Japan. However, despite the economic and social success of these policies elsewhere, the United States remains almost the only developed country without a national leave policy.

A mandated, rather than a voluntary leave policy is necessary precisely because certain businesses have been unwilling to create leave policies to accommodate the changing work force. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics [BLS], the number of large businesses providing some sort of leave coverage, 33 percent, has not increased substantially since 1986—although the number of women in the work force with young children climbed 10 percent during this period. Nor are negotiations between labor and management a cure for this problem. Less than 17 percent of our work force is represented by labor unions today. Of those unionized workers, nearly 40 percent still do not have leave coverage.

The lack of family and medical leave coverage has forced millions of workers to make the painful choice between their family's well-being and the job which provides their livelihood. These choices tear families apart. Nobody should have to make such choices.

The public pays for lost wages and opportunities. According to the Institute for Women's Policy Research [IWPR], nearly $12 billion of public assistance spending a year is allocated to help dislocated workers with no leave coverage to survive. This spending could be limited if businesses provided reasonable family and medical leave coverage to their employees. The General Accounting Office [GAO] estimates that the cost to businesses of providing such coverage to the employees made eligible for it under this bill would amount to less than $240 million a year. This figure represents a cost to businesses of $5.30 a day.

It is clear that family and medical leave coverage would promote family stability at a time when only a small number of American households resemble that of Ward and June Cleaver. Moreover, reasonable leave coverage, such as H.R. 770 proposes, enhances worker morale and commitment to the companies which allow employees to care for newborns or ill family members without worrying about whether they will have a job to return to.

My colleagues should note that this legislation is very similar to successful leave coverage mandated in my home State of Wisconsin. It is one of the most important pro-family bills Congress will consider this session, and deserves to become public law this year.

Ms. PELOSI. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act. This bill will provide job security for our working families who must take leave due to the birth of a child or to take care of a sick spouse or parent.

Many of us in this body are parents and know first hand how important it is to be at home when a baby is born. Some of us know the time and energy it requires to take care of an ailing parent. It is during these important times of our lives—when one desperately needs to be with their family, that we need the Family and Medical Leave Act. Families need the assurance that they can be with their families when needed and not have to worry about losing a job. As we all know, the demographics of the American family are drastically changing. In 1987 for the first time, more than half of all mothers with babies 1 year old or younger, were working or looking for work. These mothers are raising families, working to support their families and often times single. They must have job security to keep their family together.

To be fair to everyone, we need a minimum level of family and medical leave, so as not to have any confusion or discrimination. A gentleman who works in my district of San Francisco requested time off from their work to take care of his wife and new born child. His employer denied him the leave. As it turns out, his wife had twins by caesarean section and needed her husband's assistance and support after a difficult pregnancy and then needed him to take care of their two other children. He finally was allowed a minimal leave, but only after his employer realized the compelling necessity of his being home. One does not need the additional burden of fighting for a job, when there is no question they are needed by their families.

The President has said that he hopes businesses will provide family and medical leave and that the Federal Government does not need to get involved. However, I believe we cannot sit here and just hope. We must act now to protect our families by requiring a minimum level of family and medical leave. Corporate America is not keeping step with the changes occurring with America's families. The U.S. Government will not be keeping step either, if we do not pass this legislation, for many of our allies around the world already have paid parental leave laws. This legislation is in the same order of previous Federal minimum labor laws, such as the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act and the Occupational Safety and Health Act. It is nothing extraordinary. It is ordinary protection that should be allowed for America's workers and their families.

This legislation is based on values—family and work and I am certain all of us take great pride in these two values. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this legislation, without any weakening amendments for all families.

Mr. RAHALL. Madam Chairman, I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 770, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

We have all heard the horror stories that have been put out concerning what will happen to employees if this bill is passed. We have heard that their other employer provided benefits will have to be terminated in order for them to be given family and medical leave.

We have been told that many employees don't want a decent leave policy. If they don't want it or can't use it, they don't have to use it. But should disaster hit them or their family members from some unforeseen quarter, it will be there for them.

I guess we just have to insist on doing the right thing here, as we are often forced to do in the face of fierce opposition. Only time will tell—and it usually always does—that the doom and gloom predictions never quite come time.

It is the least we can do on behalf of working Americans.

Madam Chairman, Congress has been busy this last 8 or 9 years it seems, restoring civil rights to Americans—civil rights we had hoped were taken care by the 1964 act. Many of our actions are necessary because we have to undo the harm done through court decisions affecting those civil rights.

A couple of years ago we passed the Civil Rights Restoration Act here on the floor of the House. More recently, we have brought the Americans With Disabilities Act all the way through four House committees of jurisdiction, and it is ready for floor consideration and passage, perhaps even by next week.

In the past several months, the Education and Labor Committee has reported a bill to restore employee rights under the Anti-Age Discrimination Act in the Betts case. The chairman also introduced H.R. 4000, the Civil Rights Act of 1990, and yesterday saw it finally reported favorably from the committee—again, a bill restoring the civil rights of Americans lost to them under Supreme Court rulings that set back employee civil rights by 18 years.

And though it has not been billed as such, I believe H.R. 770 can be described as a civil rights bill—finally giving job protection to workers, enabling them to take short leaves for family and medical reasons secure in the knowledge that they can return to their jobs.

Its about time.

West Virginia, just a few short years ago, finally enacted legislation giving State workers a guaranteed 12 weeks leave to care for a family member. But not in time to help Susan Noggi of Buckhannon, WV, who lost her job because she was away from her job for 8 weeks in 1987 caring for her terminally ill father.

Susan Noggi said: "Children shouldn't have to choose between being at their parent's side or losing their jobs."

I agree. And I will just add "Parents shouldn't have to choose between being at their children's side or losing their jobs."

Madam Chairman, luckily there are many employers in this country who do have family and medical leave policies that guarantee them their jobs when they are able to return.

But unfortunately, not every employer does so, leaving our society, so advanced in many ways, a society in which people still lose their jobs when they have compelling family or medical needs that keep them out of work for short periods of time.

Such losses can and have percipitated a descent into poverty and even homelessness for many a worker—some of whom have had 15 and 18 and 20 years seniority on their jobs with good work records—suddenly finding themselves with no job, no mortgage payment, no health insurance or medical coverage, and often no self-respect because they have been made to feel inferior for having been let go or laid off or fired—depending on the word or phrase used by employers who did not permit adequate, if any, family or medical leave for employees.

I believe this is a civil rights bill—but whatever we call it, it is about time.

I support wholeheartedly the Gordon-Weldon substitute being offered today, reducing the number of weeks of unpaid leave required to be offered, and exempting permanently businesses with 50 employees or less, which should take care of the concerns of the small business employer community. I believe the substitute accommodates or should alleviate concerns and anxieties expressed by opponents to the original bill reported out of our committee.

I commend my colleagues from both sides of the aisle who worked to put this compromise, or substitute, together. I commend both my committee Chairman, Mr. HAWKINS, and the distinguished manager of the bill, Mr. CLAY, for having the strength of their resolve in staying with this legislation and insisting upon its enactment.

I join the Speaker of the House, the Honorable TOM FOLEY in the hope that given time, the President will rethink his threat of vetoing this legislation and will, by the time it reaches his desk, have decided to sign it into law.

Opponents of this legislation will call it a mandate, and call it undue and unwarranted intervention in the lives of the family unit that makes up this great country of ours. But I say Mr. Chairman, the family unit in this country is struggling to remain a unit, struggling to care for children when both parents must work to support families when unexpected illness or disease strikes. And there are single parents trying as hard as they can to form a family unit, a self-supporting family unit, caring for their children, until devastating accidents, disease or illness strikes. What about struggling children with parents who are aged and infirm, and who need their attention and their time every once in a while? What is to happen to them? Shall we just continue to say to them what the President's spokesperson said to reporters yesterday? Mr. Fitzwater said: "If they can't get their present employer to offer adequate leave time, let them look for another job." Do we want to keep on saying that to America's workers?

I don't think so.

As I said, I have a tendency to call it a civil rights bill—a bill that guarantees American workers the right—the civil right—to return to their old jobs, or jobs with equivalent pay or status, after they have been assured and have used, up to 12 weeks of unpaid family or medical leave in order to care for themselves, their children, their spouse, or their parents.

H.R. 770 is not a mandate as much as it is our effort to establish a minimum Federal labor standard calling for humanitarian assistance and support by employers for their employees in times of family hardships brought about by illness of children, spouse or other family member, or made necessary by virtue of a decision to have a child or adopt a child, or for one's own personal medical necessities. In exchange for this leave policy, Mr. Chairman, the employees agree to take such leave in an unpaid status, as long as health benefits and job security remains. That's a pretty even exchange, I think.

A vote for the Family and Medical Leave Act is a vote for children and their families. Let's put an end to our unenviable position as one of the few industrial countries in the world still without a national policy on family leave.

And if that doesn't persuade you to support the bill, ask yourself if it might not be you or a member of your family who are next forced to make the intolerable choice between financial security and parental responsibility.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the amendment in the nature of a substitute consisting of the text printed in part 1 of House Report 101-479 shall be considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment and shall be considered as having been read.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a subsitute is as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—

Section 1. Short title; table of contents.
TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR FAMILY LEAVE AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE
Sec. 101. Definitions.
Sec. 102. Inapplicability.
Sec. 103. Family leave requirement.
Sec. 104. Temporary medical leave requirement.
Sec. 105. Certification.
Sec. 106. Employment and benefits protection.
Sec. 107. Prohibited acts.
Sec. 108. Administrative enforcement.
Sec. 109. Enforcement by civil action.
Sec. 110. Investigative authority.
Sec. 111. Relief.
Sec. 112. Special rules concerning employees of local educational agencies.
Sec. 113. Notice.
TITLE II—PARENTAL LEAVE AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE FOR CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES
Sec. 201. Parental and temporary medical leave.
TITLE III—COMMISSION ON FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE
Sec. 301. Establishment.
Sec. 302. Duties.
Sec. 303. Membership.
Sec. 304. Compensation.
Sec. 305. Powers.

Sec. 306. Termination.
TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS
Sec. 401. Effect on other laws.
Sec. 402. Effect on existing employment benefits.
Sec. 403. Encouragement of more generous leave policies.
Sec. 404. Regulations.
Sec. 405. Effective dates.
TITLE V—FAMILY LEAVE AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE FOR EMPLOYEES IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Sec. 501. Family leave and temporary medical leave for employees in the House of Representatives.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the number of single-parent households and two-parent households in which the single parent or both parents work is increasing significantly;

(2) it is important to the development of the child and to the family unit that fathers and mothers be able to participate in early childrearing and the care of their family members who have serious health conditions;

(3) the lack of employment opportunities to accommodate working parents can force individuals to choose between job security and parenting;

(4) there is inadequate job security for some employees who have serious health conditions that prevent them from working for temporary periods;

(5) due to the nature of women's and men's roles in our society, the primary responsibility for family caretaking often falls on women, and such responsibility affects their working lives more than it affects the working lives of men; and

(6) employment standards that apply to one gender only have serious potential for encouraging employers to discriminate against employees and applicants for employment who are of that gender.

(b) PURPOSES.—The Congress therefore declares that the purposes of this Act are—

(1) to balance the demands of the workplace with the needs of families, to promote stability and economic security in families, and to promote Federal interests in preserving family integrity;

(2) to entitle employees to take reasonable leave for medical reasons, for the birth or adoption of a child, and for the care of a child or parent who has a serious health condition;

(3) to accomplish such purposes in a manner which accommodates the legitimate interests of employers;

(4) to accomplish such purposes in a manner which, consistent with the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, minimizes the potential for discrimination on the basis of sex by ensuring generally that leave is available for eligible medical reasons (including maternity-related disability) and for compelling family reasons, on a gender-neutral basis; and

(5) to promote the goal of equal employment opportunity for women and men, pursuant to such clause.

TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR FAMILY LEAVE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

SEC. 101. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title the following terms have the following meanings:

(1) The terms "commerce" and "industry or activity affecting commerce" mean any activity, business, or industry in commerce or in which a labor dispute would hinder or obstruct commerce or the free flow of commerce, and include "commerce" and any activity or industry "affecting commerce" within the meaning of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947 (29 U.S.C. 141 et seq.).

(2) The terms "employ", "person", and "State" have the meanings given such terms in sections 3(g), 3(a), and 3(c), respectively, of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(g), 203(a), 203(c)).

(3)(A) The term "eligible employee" means any employee as defined in section 3(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(e)) who has been employed by the employer with respect to whom benefits are sought under this section for at least—

(i) 1,000 hours of service during the previous 12-month period, and

(ii) 12 months.

(B) Such term does not include any Federal officer or employee covered under subchapter V of chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code (as added by title II of this Act).

(4) The term "employee" means any individual employed by an employer.

(5)(A) The term "employer" means any person engaged in commerce or any activity affecting commerce who—

(i) during the 3-year period beginning after the effective date of this title, employs 50 or more employees for each working day during each of 20 or more calendar workweeks in the current or preceding calendar year; or

(ii) after such period, employs 35 or more employees for each working day during each of 20 or more calendar workweeks in the current or preceding calendar year.

(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "person" includes, among other things—

(i) any person who acts, directly or indirectly, in the interest of an employer to any of the employer's employees;

(ii) any successor in interest of an employer; and

(iii) any public agency, as defined in section 3(x) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(x)).

(C) For purposes of subparagraph (A), a public agency shall be deemed to be a person engaged in commerce or in an activity affecting commerce.

(6) The term "employment benefits" means all benefits provided or made available to employees by an employer, and include group life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, sick leave, annual leave, educational benefits, and pensions, regardless of whether such benefits are provided by a policy or practice of an employer or through an employee benefit plan as defined in section 3(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1002(1)).

(7) The term "health care provider" means—

(A) any person licensed under Federal, State, or local law to provide health care services; or

(B) any other person determined by the Secretary to be capable of providing health care services.

(8) The term "reduced leave schedule" means leave scheduled for fewer than an employee's usual number of hours per workweek or hours per workday.

(9) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Labor.

(10) The term "serious health condition" means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental conditions which involves—

(A) inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential health care facility, or

(B) continuing treatment or continuing supervision by a health care provider.

(11) The term "son or daughter" means a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, a legal ward, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis, who is—

(A) under 18 years of age, or

(B) 18 years of age or older and incapable of self-care because of mental or physical disability.

(12) The term "parent" means a biological, foster, or adoptive parent, a parent-in-law, a stepparent, or a legal guardian.

SEC. 102. INAPPLICABILITY.

The rights provided under this title shall not apply—

(1) during the 3-year period beginning after the effective date of this title, with respect to employees of any facility of an employer at which fewer than 50 employees are employed, and when the combined number of employees employed by the employer within 75 miles of the facility is fewer than 50; and

(2) after such period, with respect to employees of any facility of an employer at which fewer than 35 employees are employed, and when the combined number of employees employed by the employer within 75 miles of the facility is fewer than 35.

SEC. 103. FAMILY LEAVE REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) An eligible employee shall be entitled, subject to section 105, to 10 workweeks of family leave during any 24-month period—

(A) because of the birth of a son or daughter of the employee;

(B) because of the placement of a son or daughter with the employee for adoption or foster care; or

(C) in order to care for the employee's son, daughter, or parent who has a serious health condition.

(2) The entitlement to leave under paragraphs (1)(A) and (1)(B) shall expire at the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of such birth or placement.

(3) In the case of a son, daughter, or parent, who has a serious health condition, such leave may be taken intermittently when medically necessary, subject to subsection (e). Leave under either such paragraph may not be taken intermittently unless the employer and employee agree otherwise.

(b) REDUCED LEAVE.—Upon agreement between the employer and the employee, leave under this section may be taken on a reduced leave schedule, however, such reduced leave schedule shall not result in a reduction in the total amount of leave to which the employee is entitled.

(c) UNPAID LEAVE PERMITTED.—Leave under this section may consist of unpaid leave, except as provided in subsection (d).

(d) RELATIONSHIP TO PAID LEAVE.—(1) If an employer provides paid family leave for fewer than 10 workweeks, the additional weeks of leave added to attain the 10-workweek total may be unpaid.

(2) An eligible employee or employer may elect to substitute any of the employee's paid vacation leave, personal leave, or family leave for any part of the 10-week period.

(e) FORESEEABLE LEAVE.—(1) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on an expected birth or adoption, the eligible employee shall provide the employer with prior notice of such expected birth or adoption in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

(2) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

(A) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employer, subject to the approval of the health care provider of the employee's son, daughter, or parent; and

(B) shall provide the employer with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

(f) SPOUSES EMPLOYED BY THE SAME EMPLOYER.—In any case in which a husband and wife entitled to family leave under this section are employed by the same employer, the aggregate number of workweeks of family leave to which both may be entitled may be limited to 10 workweeks during any 24-month period, if such leave is taken—

(1) under subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(1); or

(2) to care for a sick parent under subparagraph (C) of such subsection.

SEC. 104. TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Any eligible employee who, because of a serious health condition, becomes unable to perform the functions of such employee's position, shall be entitled, subject to section 105, to temporary medical leave. Such entitlement shall continue for as long as the employee is unable to perform such functions, except that it shall not exceed 15 workweeks during any 12-month period.

(2) Such leave may be taken intermittently when medically necessary, subject to subsection (d).

(b) UNPAID LEAVE PERMITTED.—Such leave may consist of unpaid leave, except as provided in subsection (c).

(c) RELATIONSHIP TO PAID LEAVE.—(1) If an employer provides paid temporary medical leave or paid sick leave for fewer than 15 weeks, the additional weeks of leave added to attain the 15-week total may be unpaid.

(2) An eligible employee or employer may elect to substitute the employee's accrued paid vacation leave, sick leave, or medical leave for any part of the 15-week period, except that nothing in this Act shall require an employer to provide paid sick leave or paid medical leave in any situation in which such employer would not normally provide any such paid leave.

(d) FORESEEABLE LEAVE.—In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

(1) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employer, subject to the approval of the employee's health care provider; and

(2) shall provide the employer with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

SEC. 105. CERTIFICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An employer may require that a claim for family leave under section 103(a)(1)(C), or temporary medical leave under section 104, be supported by certification issued by the health care provider of the eligible employee or of the employee's son, daughter, or parent, whichever is appropriate. The employee shall provide a copy of such certification to the employer.

(b) SUFFICIENT CERTIFICATION.—Such certification shall be sufficient if it states—

(1) the date on which the serious health condition commenced,

(2) the probable duration of the condition;

(3) the appropriate medical facts within the provider's knowledge regarding the condition; and

(4)(A) for purposes of leave under section 104, a statement that the employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position; and

(B) for purposes of leave under section 103(a)(1)(C), an estimate of the amount of time that the eligible employee is needed to care for the son, daughter, or parent.

(c) EXPLANATION OF INABILITY TO PERFORM JOB FUNCTIONS.—The employer may request that, for purposes of section 106(d), certification under this section that is issued in any case involving leave under section 104 include an explanation of the extent to which the eligible employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

(d) SECOND OPINION.—(1) In any case in which the employer has reason to doubt the validity of the certification provided under subsection (a), the employer may require, at its own expense, that the eligible employee obtain the opinion of a second health care provider designated or approved by the employer concerning any information certified under subsection (b).

(2) Any health care provider designated or approved under paragraph (1) may not be employed on a regular basis by the employer.

(e) RESOLUTION OF CONFLICTING OPINIONS.—(1) In any case in which the second opinion described in subsection (d) differs from the original certification provided under subsection (a), the employer may require, at its own expense, that the employee obtain the opinion of a third health care provider designated or approved jointly by the employer and the employee concerning the information certified under subsection (b).

(2) The opinion of the third health care provider concerning the information certified under subsection (b) shall be considered to be final and shall be binding on the employer and the employee.

(f) SUBSEQUENT RECERTIFICATION.—The employer may require that the eligible employee obtain subsequent recertifications on a reasonable basis.

SEC. 106. EMPLOYMENT AND BENEFITS PROTECTION.

(a) RESTORATION TO POSITION.—(1) Any eligible employee who takes leave under section 103 or 104 for its intended purpose shall be entitled, upon return from such leave—

(A) to be restored by the employer to the position of employment held by the employee when the leave commenced; or

(B) to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment.

(2) The taking of leave under this title shall not result in the loss of any employment benefit earned before the date on which the leave commenced.

(3) Except as provided in subsection (b), nothing in this section shall be construed to entitle any restored employee to—

(A) the accrual of any seniority or employment benefits during any period of leave; or

(B) any right, benefit, or position of employment other than any right, benefit, or position to which the employee would have been entitled had the employee not taken the leave.

(4) As a condition to restoration under paragraph (1), the employer may have a policy that requires each employee to receive certification from the employee's health care provider that the employee is able to resume work, except that nothing in this paragraph shall supersede a valid State or local law, or a collective bargaining agreement that governs the return to work of employees taking medical leave.

(b) EXEMPTION CONCERNING CERTAIN HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—(1) An employer may deny restoration under this subsection to any eligible employee described in paragraph (2) if—

(A) such denial is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the employer's operations;

(B) the employer notifies the employee of its intent to deny restoration on such basis at the time the employer determines that such injury would occur; and

(C) in any case in which the leave has commenced, the employee elects not to return to employment after receiving such notice.

(2) An eligible employee described in this paragraph is a salaried eligible employee who is among the—

(A) highest paid 10 percent of employees, or

(B) 5 highest paid employees,

whichever is greater, of the employees employed by the employer within 75 miles of the facility at which the employee is employed.

(c) MAINTENANCE OF HEALTH BENEFITS.—During any period an eligible employee takes leave under section 103 or 104, the employer shall maintain coverage under any group health plan (as defined in section 162(i)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) for the duration of such leave at the level and under the conditions coverage would have been provided if the employee had continued in employment continuously from the date the employee commenced the leave until the date the employee is restored under subsection (a).

(d) NO BAR TO AGREEMENT CONCERNING ALTERNATIVE EMPLOYMENT.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to prohibit an employer and an eligible employee from mutually agreeing to alternative employment for the employee throughout the period during which the employee would be entitled to leave under this title. Any such period of alternative employment shall not cause a reduction in the period of temporary medical leave to which the employee is entitled under section 104.

SEC. 107. PROHIBITED ACTS.

(a) INTERFERENCE WITH RIGHTS.—(1) It shall be unlawful for any employer to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of or the attempt to exercise, any right provided under this title.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any employer to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual for opposing any practice made unlawful by this title.

(b) INTERFERENCE WITH PROCEEDINGS OR INQUIRIES.—It shall be unlawful for any person to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual because such individual—

(1) has filed any charge, or has instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding, under or related to this title;

(2) has given, or is about to give, any information in connection with any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title; or

(3) has testified, or is about to testify in any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title.

SEC. 108. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall issue such rules and regulations as are necessary to carry out this section, including rules and regulations concerning service of complaints, notice of hearings, answers and amendments to complaints, and copies of orders and records of proceedings.

(b) CHARGES.—(1) Any person (or person, including a class or organization, on behalf of any person) alleging an act which violates any provision of this title may file a charge respecting such violation with the Secretary. Charges shall be in such form and contain such information as the Secretary shall require by regulation.

(2) Not more than 10 days after the Secretary receives notice of the charge, the Secretary—

(A) shall serve a notice of the charge on the person charged with the violation; and

(B) shall inform such person and the charging party as to the rights and procedures provided under this title.

(3) A charge may not be filed more than 1 year after the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation.

(4) The charging party and the person charged with the violation may enter into a settlement agreement concerning the violation alleged in the charge before any determination is reached by the Secretary under subsection (c). Such an agreement shall be effective unless the Secretary determines, within 30 days after notice of the proposed agreement, that the agreement is not generally consistent with the purposes of this title.

(c) INVESTIGATION; COMPLAINT.—(1) Within the 60-day period after the Secretary receives any charge, the Secretary shall investigate the charge and issue a complaint based on the charge or dismiss the charge.

(2) If the Secretary determines that there is no reasonable basis for the charge, the Secretary shall dismiss the charge and promptly notify the charging party and the respondent as to the dismissal.

(3) If the Secretary determines that there is a reasonable basis for the charge, the Secretary shall issue a complaint based on the charge and promptly notify the charging party and the respondent as to the issuance.

(4) Upon the issuance of a complaint, the Secretary and the respondent may enter into a settlement agreement concerning a violation alleged in the complaint. Any such settlement shall not be entered into over the objection of the charging party, unless the Secretary determines that the settlement provides a full remedy for the charging party.

(5) If, at the end of the 60-day period referred to in paragraph (1), the Secretary—

(A) has not made a determination under paragraph (2) or (3),

(B) has dismissed the charge under paragraph (2), or

(C) has disapproved a settlement agreement under subsection (b)(4) or has not entered into a settlement agreement under paragraph (4) of this subsection,

the charging party may elect to bring a civil action under section 109. Such election shall bar further administrative action by the Secretary with respect to the violation alleged in the charge.

(6) The Secretary may issue and serve a complaint alleging a violation of this title on the basis of information and evidence gathered as a result of an investigation initiated by the Secretary pursuant to section 110.

(7) The Secretary shall have the power to petition the United States district court for the district in which the violation is alleged to have occurred, or in which the respondent resides or transacts business, for appropriate temporary relief or restraining order. Upon the filing of any such petition, the court shall cause notice of the petition to be served upon the respondent, and the court shall have jurisdiction to grant to the Secretary such temporary relief or restraining order as it deems just and proper.

(d) RIGHTS OF PARTIES.—(1) In any case in which a complaint is issued under subsection (c), the Secretary shall, not more than 10 days after the date on which the complaint is issued, cause to be served on the respondent a copy of the complaint.

(2) Any person filing a charge alleging a violation of this title may elect to be a party to any complaint filed by the Secretary alleging such violation. Such election must be made before the commencement of the hearing.

(3) The failure of the Secretary to comply in a timely manner with any obligation assigned to the Secretary under this title shall entitle the charging party to elect, at the time of such failure, to bring a civil action under section 109.

(e) CONDUCT OF HEARING.—(1) The Secretary shall have the duty to prosecute any complaint issued under subsection (b).

(2) An administrative law judge shall conduct a hearing on the record with respect to any complaint issued under this title. The hearing shall be commenced within 60 days after the issuance of such complaint, unless the judge, in the judge's discretion, determines that the purposes of this Act would best be furthered by commencement of the action after the expiration of such period.

(f) FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS.—(1) After the hearing conducted under this section, the administrative law judge shall promptly make findings of fact and conclusions of law, and, if appropriate, issue an order for relief as provided in section 111.

(2) The administrative law judge shall inform the parties, in writing, of the reason for any delay in making such findings and conclusions if such findings and conclusions are not made within 60 days after the conclusion of such hearing.

(g) FINALITY OF DECISION; REVIEW.—(1) The decision and order of the administrative law judge shall become the final decision and order of the agency unless, upon appeal by an aggrieved party taken not more than 30 days after such action, the Secretary modifies or vacates the decision, in which case the decision of the Secretary shall be the final decision and the order of the agency.

(2) Not later than 60 days after the entry of such final order, any person aggrieved by such final order may seek a review of such order in the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the violation is alleged to have occurred or in which the employer resides or transacts business.

(3) Upon the filing of the record with the court, the jurisdiction of the court shall be exclusive and its judgment shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

(h) COURT ENFORCEMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE ORDERS.—(1) If an order of the agency is not appealed under subsection (g)(2), the Secretary may petition the United States district court for the district in which the violation is alleged to have occurred, or in which the respondent resides or transacts business, for the enforcement of the order of the Secretary, by filing in such court a written petition praying that such order be enforced.

(2) Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall have jurisdiction to make and enter a decree enforcing the order of the Secretary. In such a proceeding, the order of the Secretary shall not be subject to review.

(3) If, upon appeal of an order under subsection (g)(2), the United States court of appeals does not reverse such order, such court shall have the jurisdiction to make and enter a decree enforcing the order of the Secretary.

SEC. 109. ENFORCEMENT BY CIVIL ACTION.

(a) RIGHT TO BRING CIVIL ACTION.—(1) Subject to the limitations in this section, an eligible employee or any person, including a class or organization on behalf of any eligible employee or the Secretary may bring a civil action against any employer (including any State employer) to enforce the provisions of this title in any appropriate court of the United States or in any State court of competent jurisdiction.

(2) Subject to paragraph (3), a civil action may be commenced under this subsection without regard to whether a charge has been filed under section 108(b).

(3) No civil action may be commenced under paragraph (1) if the Secretary—

(A) has approved a settlement agreement or has failed to disapprove a settlement agreement under section 108(b)(4), in which case no civil action may be filed under this subsection if such action is based upon a violation alleged in the charge and resolved by the agreement; or

(B) has issued a complaint under section 108(c)(3) or 108(c)(6), in which case no civil action may be filed under this subsection if such action is based upon a violation alleged in the complaint.

(4) Notwithstanding paragraph (3)(A), a civil action may be commenced to enforce the terms of any such settlement agreement.

(5)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), no civil action may be commenced more than 1 year after the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation.

(B) In any case in which—

(i) a timely charge is filed under section 108(b), and

(ii) the failure of the Secretary to issue a complaint or enter into a settlement agreement based on the charge (as provided under section 108(c)(4)) occurs more than 11 months after the date on which any alleged violation occurred, the charging party may commence a civil action not more than 60 days after the date of such failure.

(6) The Secretary may not bring a civil action against any agency of the United States.

(7) Upon the filing of the complaint with the court, the jurisdiction of the court shall be exclusive.

(b) VENUE.—An action brought under subsection (a) in a district court of the United States may be brought—

(1) in any appropriate judicial district under section 1391 of title 28, United States Code, or

(2) in the judicial district in the State in which—

(A) the employment records relevant to such violation are maintained and administered, or

(B) the aggrieved person worked or would have worked but for the alleged violation.

(c) NOTIFICATION OF THE SECRETARY; RIGHT TO INTERVENE.—A copy of the complaint in any action by an eligible employee under subsection (a) shall be served upon the Secretary by certified mail. The Secretary shall have the right to intervene in a civil action brought by an employee under subsection (a).

(d) ATTORNEYS FOR THE SECRETARY.—In any civil action under subsection (a), attorneys appointed by the Secretary may appear for and represent the Secretary, except that the Attorney General and the Solicitor General shall conduct any litigation in the Supreme Court.

SEC. 110. INVESTIGATIVE AUTHORITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To ensure compliance with the provisions of this title, or any regulation or order issued under this title, the Secretary shall have, subject to subsection (c), the investigative authority provided under section 11(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act (29 U.S.C. 211(a)).

(b) OBLIGATION TO KEEP AND PRESERVE RECORDS.—Any employer shall keep and preserve records in accordance with section 11(c) of such Act and in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary.

(c) REQUIRED SUBMISSIONS GENERALLY LIMITED TO AN ANNUAL BASIS.—The Secretary may not under the authority of this section require any employer or any plan, fund, or program to submit to the Secretary any books or records more than once during any 12-month period, unless the Secretary has reasonable cause to believe there may exist a violation of this title or any regulation or order issued pursuant to this title, or is investigating a charge pursuant to section 108.

(d) SUBPOENA POWERS, ETC.—For the purposes of any investigation provided for in this section, the Secretary shall have the subpoena authority provided under section 9 of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

SEC. 111. RELIEF.

(a) INJUNCTIVE.—(1) Upon finding a violation under section 108, the administrative law judge shall issue an order requiring such person to cease and desist from any act or practice which violates this title.

(2) In any civil action brought under section 109, the court may grant as relief against any employer (including any State employer) any permanent or temporary injunction, temporary restraining order, and other equitable relief as the court deems appropriate.

(b) MONETARY.—(1) Any employer (including any State employer) that violates any provision of this title shall be liable to the injured party in an amount equal to—

(A) any wages, salary, employment benefits, or other compensation denied or lost to such eligible employee by reason of the violation, plus interest on the total monetary damages calculated at the prevailing rate; and

(B) an additional amount equal to the greater of (i) the amount determined under subparagraph (A), or (ii) consequential damages, not to exceed 3 times the amount determined under such subparagraph.

(2) If an employer who has violated this title proves to the satisfaction of the administrative law judge or the court that the act or omission which violated this title was in good faith and that the employer had reasonable grounds for believing that the act or omission was not a violation of this title, such judge or the court may, in its discretion, reduce the amount of the liability provided for under this subsection to the amount determined under paragraph (1)(A).

(c) ATTORNEYS' FEES.—The prevailing party (other than the United States) may be awarded a reasonable attorneys' fee as part of the costs, in addition to any relief awarded. The United States shall be liable for costs the same as a private person.

(d) LIMITATION.—Damages awarded under subsection (b) may not accrue from a date more than 2 years before the date on which a charge is filed under section 108(b) or a civil action is brought under section 109.

SEC. 112. SPECIAL RULES CONCERNING EMPLOYEES OF LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the rights, remedies, and procedures under this Act shall apply to any local educational agency (as defined in section 1471(12) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2891(12))) and its employees, including the rights under section 106, which shall extend throughout the period of any employee's leave under this section.

(b) LEAVE DOES NOT VIOLATE CERTAIN OTHER FEDERAL LAWS.—A local educational agency shall not be in violation of the Education of the Handicapped Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.), section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 794), or title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.), solely as a result of an eligible employee of such agency exercising such employee's rights under this Act.

(c) INTERMITTENT LEAVE FOR INSTRUCTIONAL EMPLOYEES.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), in any case in which an employee employed principally in an instructional capacity by any such educational agency seeks to take leave under section 103(a)(1)(C) or 104 which is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision and the employee would be on leave for greater than 20 percent of the total number of working days in the period during which the leave would extend, the agency may require such employee to elect either—

(A) to take leave for periods of a particular duration, not to exceed the planned medical treatment or supervision; or

(B) to transfer temporarily to an available alternative position offered by the employer for which the employee is qualified, and which—

(i) has equivalent pay and benefits, and

(ii) better accommodates recurring periods of leave than the employee's regular employment position.

(2) The elections described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) shall apply only with respect to an employee who complies with section 103(e)(2) or 104(d) (whichever is appropriate).

(d) RULES APPLICABLE TO PERIODS NEAR THE CONCLUSION OF AN ACADEMIC TERM.—The following rules shall apply with respect to periods of leave near the conclusion of an academic term in the case of any employee employed principally in an instructional capacity by any such educational agency:

(1) If the employee begins leave under section 103 or 104 more than 5 weeks before the end of the academic term, the agency may require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of at least 3 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 3-week period before the end of such term.

(2) If the employee begins leave under section 103 during the period that commences 5 weeks before the end of the academic term, the agency may require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of greater than 2 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 2-week period before the end of such term.

(3) If the employee begins leave under section 103 during the period that commences 3 weeks before the end of the academic term and the duration of the leave is greater than 5 working days, the agency may require the employee to continue to take leave until the end of such term.

(e) RESTORATION TO EQUIVALENT EMPLOYMENT POSITION.—For purposes of determinations under section 106(a)(1)(B) (relating to an employee's restoration to an equivalent position) in the case of a local educational agency, such determination shall be made on the basis of established school board policies, practices, and collective bargaining agreements.

(f) REDUCTION OF THE AMOUNT OF LIABILITY.—If a local educational agency which has violated title I proves to the satisfaction of the administrative law judge or the court that the agency or department had reasonable grounds for believing that the underlying act or omission was not a violation of such title, such judge or court may, in its discretion, reduce the amount of the liability provided for under section 111(b)(1) to the amount determined under subparagraph (A) of such section.

SEC. 113. NOTICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each employer shall post and keep posted, in conspicuous places upon its premises where notices to employees and applicants for employment are customarily posted, a notice, to be prepared or approved by the Secretary, setting forth excerpts from, or summaries of, the pertinent provisions of this title and information pertaining to the filing of a charge.

(b) PENALTY.—Any employer that willfully violates this section shall be assessed a civil money penalty not to exceed $100 for each separate offense.

TITLE II—FAMILY LEAVE AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE FOR CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES

SEC. 201. FAMILY AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subchapter:

"Subchapter V—Family and Temporary Medical leave

"§ 6381. Definitions

"For purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) 'employee' means—

"(A) an employee as defined by section 6301(2) of this title (excluding an individual employed by the government of the District of Columbia); and

"(B) an individual under clause (v) or (ix) of such section;

whose employment is other than on a temporary or intermittent basis;

"(2) 'serious health condition' means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition which involves—

"(A) inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential health care facility; or

"(B) continuing treatment, or continuing supervision, by a health care provider;

"(3) 'child' means an individual who is—

"(A) a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, a legal ward, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis, and

"(B)(i) under 18 years of age, or

"(ii) 18 years of age or older and incapable of self-care because of mental or physical disability; and

"(4) 'parent' means a biological, foster, or adoptive parent, a parent-in-law, a stepparent, or a legal guardian.

"§ 6382. Family leave

"(a) Leave under this section shall be granted on the request of an employee if such leave is requested—

"(1) because of the birth of a child of the employee;

"(2) because of the placement for adoption or foster care of a child with the employee; or

"(3) in order to care for the employee's child or parent who has a serious health condition.

"(b) Leave under this section—

"(1) shall be leave without pay;

"(2) may not, in the aggregate, exceed the equivalent of 18 administrative workweeks of the employee during any 24-month period; and

"(3) shall be in addition to any annual leave, sick leave, temporary medical leave, or other leave or compensatory time off otherwise available to the employee.

"(c) An employee may elect to use leave under this section—

"(1) immediately before or after (or otherwise in coordination with) any period of annual leave, or compensatory time off, otherwise available to the employee;

"(2) under a method involving a reduced workday, a reduced workweek, or other alternative work schedule;

"(3) on either a continuing or intermittent basis; or

"(4) any combination thereof.

"(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section—

"(1) a request for leave under this section based on the birth of a child may not be granted if, or to the extent that, such leave would be used after the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of such child's birth; and

"(2) a request for leave under this section based on the placement for adoption or foster care of a child may not be granted if, or to the extent that, such leave would be used after the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date on which such child is so placed.

"(e)(1) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on an expected birth or adoption, the employee shall provide the employing agency with prior notice of such expected birth or adoption in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

"(2) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

"(A) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employing agency, subject to the approval of the health care provider of the employee's child or parent; and

"(B) shall provide the employing agency with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

"§ 6383. Temporary medical leave

"(a) An employee who, because of a serious health condition, becomes unable to perform the functions of such employee's position shall, on request of the employee, be entitled to leave under this section.

"(b) Leave under this section—

"(1) shall be leave without pay;

"(2) shall be available for the duration of the serious health condition of the employee involved, but may not, in the aggregate, exceed the equivalent of 26 administrative workweeks of the employee during any 12-month period; and

"(3) shall be in addition to any annual leave, sick leave, family leave, or other leave or compensatory time off otherwise available to the employee.

"(c) An employee may elect to use leave under this section—

"(1) immediately before or after (or otherwise in coordination with) any period of annual leave, sick leave, or compensatory time off otherwise available to the employee;

"(2) under a method involving a reduced workday, a reduced workweek, or other alternative work schedule;

"(3) on either a continuing or intermittent basis; or

"(4) any combination thereof.

"(d) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

"(1) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employing agency, subject to the approval of the employee's health care provider; and

"(2) shall provide the employing agency with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

"§ 6384. Certification

"(a) An employing agency may require that a request for family leave under section 6382(a)(3) or temporary medical leave under section 6383 be supported by certification issued by the health care provider of the employee or of the employee's child or parent, whichever is appropriate. The employee shall provide a copy of such certification to the employing agency.

"(b) Such certification shall be sufficient if it states—

"(1) the date on which the serious health condition commenced;

"(2) the probable duration of the condition;

"(3) the medical facts within the provider's knowledge regarding the condition; and

"(4) for purposes of section 6383, a statement that the employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

"§ 6385. Job protection

"An employee who uses leave under section 6382 or 6383 of this title is entitled to be restored to the position held by such employee immediately before the commencement of such leave.

"§ 6386. Prohibition of coercion

"(a) An employee may not directly or indirectly intimidate, threaten, or coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, or coerce, any other employee for the purpose of interfering with such employee's rights under this subchapter.

"(b) For the purpose of this section, 'intimidate, threaten, or coerce' includes promising to confer or conferring any benefit (such as appointment, promotion, or compensation), or effecting or threatening to effect any reprisal (such as deprivation of appointment, promotion, or compensation).

"§ 6387. Health insurance

"An employee enrolled in a health benefits plan under chapter 89 of this title who is placed in a leave status under section 6382 or 6383 of this title may elect to continue the employee's health benefits enrollment while in such leave status and arrange to pay into the Employees Health Benefits Fund (described in section 8909 of this title), through that individual's employing agency, the appropriate employee contributions.

"§ 6388. Regulations

"The Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe regulations necessary for the administration of this subchapter. The regulations prescribed under this subchapter shall be consistent with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Labor under title I of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990.".

(2) The table of contents for chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SUBCHAPTER V—FAMILY AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE

"6381. Definitions.
"6382. Family leave.
"6383. Temporary medical leave.
"6384. Certification.
"6385. Job protection.
"6386. Prohibition of coercion.
"6387. Health insurance.
"6388. Regulations.".

(b) EMPLOYEES PAID FROM NONAPPROPRIATED FUNDS.—Section 2105(c)(1) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out "53" and inserting in lieu thereof "53, and subchapter III of chapter 63,".

TITLE III—COMMISSION ON FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE

SEC. 301. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the Commission on Family and Medical Leave (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Commission").

SEC. 302. DUTIES.

The Commission shall—

(1) conduct a comprehensive study of—

(A) existing and proposed policies relating to family leave and temporary medical leave,

(B) the potential costs, benefits, and impact on productivity of such policies on businesses which employ fewer than 50 employees, and

(C) alternative and equivalent State enforcement of this Act with respect to employees described in section 113; and

(2) within 2 years after the date on which the Commission first meets, submit a report to the Congress, which may include legislative recommendations concerning coverage of businesses which employ fewer than 50 employees and alternative and equivalent State enforcement of this Act with respect to employees described in section 113.

SEC. 303. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) COMPOSITION.—The Commission shall be composed of 12 voting members and 2 ex-officio members appointed not more than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act as follows:

(1) One Senator shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate, and one Senator shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate.

(2) One member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and one Member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(3)(A) Two members each shall be appointed by—

(i) the Speaker of the House of Representatives,

(ii) the majority leader of the Senate,

(iii) the minority leader of the House of Representatives, and

(iv) the minority leader of the Senate.

(B) Such members shall be appointed by virtue of demonstrated expertise in relevant family, temporary disability, and labor-management issues and shall include representatives of small business.

(4) The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Labor shall serve on the Commission as nonvoting ex-officio members.

(b) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(c) CHAIRPERSON AND VICE CHAIRPERSON.—The Commission shall elect a chairperson and a vice chairperson from among its members.

(d) QUORUM.—Eight members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for all purposes, except that a lesser number may constitute a quorum for the purpose of holding hearings.

SEC. 304. COMPENSATION.

(a) PAY.—Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation.

(b) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Members of the Commission shall be allowed reasonable travel expenses, including a per diem allowance, in accordance with section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, when performing duties of the Commission.

SEC. 305. POWERS.

(a) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall first meet not more than 30 days after the date on which members are appointed, and the Commission shall meet thereafter upon the call of the chairperson or a majority of the members.

(b) HEARINGS AND SESSIONS.—The Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses appearing before it.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this Act. Upon the request of the chairperson or vice chairperson of the Commission, the head of such agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(d) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—The Commission may appoint an Executive Director from the personnel of any Federal agency to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties.

(e) USE OF FACILITIES AND SERVICES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may make available to the Commission any of the facilities and services of such agency.

(f) PERSONNEL FROM OTHER AGENCIES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may detail any of the personnel of such agency to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties.

SEC. 306. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall terminate 30 days after the date of the submission of its report to the Congress.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) FEDERAL AND STATE ANTIDISCRIMINATION LAWS.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to modify or affect any Federal or State law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of race, religion, color, national origin, sex, age, or handicapped status.

(b) STATE AND LOCAL LAWS.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to supersede any provision of any State and local law which provides greater employee family or medical leave rights than the rights established under this Act.

SEC. 402. EFFECT ON EXISTING EMPLOYMENT BENEFITS.

(a) MORE PROTECTIVE.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to diminish an employer's obligation to comply with any collective-bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan which provides greater family and medical leave rights to employees than the rights provided under this Act.

(b) LESS PROTECTIVE.—The rights provided to employees under this Act may not be diminished by any collective-bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan.

SEC. 403. ENCOURAGEMENT OF MORE GENEROUS LEAVE POLICIES.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to discourage employers from adopting or retaining leave policies more generous than any policies which comply with the requirements under this Act.

SEC. 404. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out title I of this Act, within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 405. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) TITLE III.—Title III shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) OTHER TITLES.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), titles I, II, and IV shall take effect 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) In the case of a collective-bargaining agreement in effect on the effective date of paragraph (1), title I shall apply on the earlier of—

(A) the date of the termination of such agreement; or

(B) the date which occurs 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE V—FAMILY LEAVE AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE FOR EMPLOYEES IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SEC. 501. FAMILY LEAVE AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE FOR EMPLOYEES IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b) and subsection (c), the rights and protections under sections 103 through 107 shall apply with respect to any employee in an employment position in the House of Representatives and any employing authority of the House of Representatives.

(b) NONAPPLICABILITY OF EXEMPTION CONCERNING CERTAIN HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—Section 106(b) shall not apply with respect to any employee in an employment position in the House of Representatives.

(c) SPECIAL LIMITATION ON DURATION.—Notwithstanding section 103 and section 104, the duration of family leave under such section 103 shall be limited as provided in section 6382 of title 5, United States Code, and the duration of temporary medical leave shall be limited as provided in section 6383 of title 5, United States Code.

(d) ADMINISTRATION.—In the administration of this section, the remedies and procedures under the Fair Employment Practices Resolution shall be applied.

(e) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "Fair Employment Practices Resolution" means House Resolution 558, One Hundredth Congress, agreed to October 3, 1988, as continued in effect by House Resolution 15, One Hundred and First Congress, agreed to January 3, 1989.

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment to said substitute shall be in order except those amendments printed in part 2 of House Report 101-479. Said amendments shall be considered in the order and manner specified in said report, shall be considered as having been read, and shall not be subject to amendment except as specified in said report. Debate time specified for each amendment shall be equally divided and controlled by the proponent of the amendment and a Member opposed thereto.

It shall be in order to consider the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] or his designee, printed in part 2 of House Report 101-479, as pending simultaneously to both amendments offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM]. Said amendments shall be considered en bloc and shall not be subject to a demand for a division of the question. The Chair shall put the question on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from Missouri as one question.

Where House Report 101-479 indicates that amendments shall be pending simultaneously to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] and to the amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as an original text by House Resolution 388, said amendments shall be considered en bloc and shall not be subject to a demand for a division of the question. The Chair shall put the question on the amendments en bloc as one question.

If more than one amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in part 2 of House Report 101-479 is adopted, only the latter amendment adopted shall be considered as finally adopted and reported back to the House.

It is now in order to consider amendment No. 1 printed in part 2 of House Report 101-479.

Apparently, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY] does not seek recognition.

It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in part 2 of House Report 101-479.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. GORDON

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. GORDON:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.
Sec. 2. Findings and purposes.
TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR LEAVE
Sec. 101. Definitions.
Sec. 102. Leave requirement.
Sec. 103. Certification.
Sec. 104. Employment and benefits protection.
Sec. 105. Prohibited acts.
Sec. 106. Administrative enforcement.
Sec. 107. Enforcement by civil action.
Sec. 108. Investigative authority.
Sec. 109. Relief.
Sec. 110. Special rules concerning employees of local educational agencies and private elementary and secondary schools.
Sec. 111. Notice.
Sec. 112. Regulations.
TITLE II— LEAVE FOR CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES
Sec. 201. Parental and temporary medical leave.
TITLE III—COMMISSION ON LEAVE
Sec. 301. Establishment.
Sec. 302. Duties.
Sec. 303. Membership.
Sec. 304. Compensation.
Sec. 305. Powers.
Sec. 306. Termination.
TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS
Sec. 401. Effect on other laws.
Sec. 402. Effect on existing employment benefits.
Sec. 403. Encouragement of more generous leave policies.
Sec. 404. Effective dates.
TITLE V—COVERAGE OF CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES
Sec. 501. Leave for certain congressional employees.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the number of single-parent households and two-parent households in which the single parent or both parents work is increasing significantly;

(2) it is important to the development of the child and to the family unit that fathers and mothers be able to participate in early childrearing and the care of their family members who have serious health conditions;

(3) the lack of employment opportunities to accommodate working parents can force individuals to choose between job security and parenting;

(4) there is inadequate job security for some employees who have serious health conditions that prevent them from working for temporary periods;

(5) due to the nature of women's and men's roles in our society, the primary responsibility for family caretaking often falls on women, and such responsibility affects their working lives more than it affects the working lives of men; and

(6) employment standards that apply to one gender only have serious potential for encouraging employers to discriminate against employees and applicants for employment who are of that gender.

(b) PURPOSES.—The Congress therefore declares that the purposes of this Act are—

(1) to balance the demands of the workplace with the needs of families, to promote stability and economic security in families, and to promote Federal interests in preserving family integrity;

(2) to entitle employees to take reasonable leave for medical reasons, for the birth or adoption of a child, and for the care of a child, spouse, or parent who has a serious health condition;

(3) to accomplish such purposes in a manner which accommodates the legitimate interests of employers;

(4) to accomplish such purposes in a manner which, consistent with the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, minimizes the potential for discrimination on the basis of sex by ensuring generally that leave is available for eligible medical reasons (including maternity-related disability) and for compelling family reasons, on a gender-neutral basis; and

(5) to promote the goal of equal employment opportunity for women and men, pursuant to such clause.

TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR LEAVE

SEC. 101. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title:

(1) The terms "commerce" and "industry or activity affecting commerce" mean any activity, business, or industry in commerce or in which a labor dispute would hinder or obstruct commerce or the free flow of commerce, and include "commerce" and any activity or industry "affecting commerce" within the meaning of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947 (29 U.S.C. 141 et seq.).

(2) The terms "employ" and "State" have the meanings given such terms in sections 3(g) and 3(c), respectively, of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(g), 203(a), 203(c)).

(3)(A) The term "eligible employee" means any employee as defined in section 3(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(e)) who has been employed by the employer with respect to whom leave is sought under section 102 for at least—

(i) 1,000 hours of service during the previous 12-month period, and

(ii) 12 months.

(B) Such term does not include—

(i) any Federal officer or employee covered under subchapter V of chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code (as added by title II of this Act), or

(ii) any employee of an employer employed at a worksite at which such employer employs less than 50 employees if the total number of employees employed by that employer within 75 miles of that worksite is less than 50.

(4) The term "employee" means any individual employed by an employer.

(5)(A) The term "employer" means any person engaged in commerce or any activity affecting commerce who employs 50 or more employees for each working day during each of 20 or more workweeks in the current or preceding calendar year.

(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term "person" includes—

(i) any person who acts, directly or indirectly, in the interest of an employer to any of the employer's employees;

(ii) any successor in interest of an employer; and

(iii) any public agency, as defined in section 3(x) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(x)).

(C) For purposes of subparagraph (A), a public agency shall be deemed to be a person engaged in commerce or in an activity affecting commerce.

(6) The term "employment benefits" means all benefits provided or made available to employees by an employer, and include group life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, sick leave, annual leave, educational benefits, and pensions, regardless of whether such benefits are provided by a policy or practice of an employer or through an employee benefit plan as defined in section 3(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1002(1)).

(7) The term "health care provider" means a doctor of medicine or osteopathy legally authorized to practice medicine and surgery by the State in which the doctor performs such function or action.

(8) The term "reduced leave schedule" means leave scheduled for fewer than an employee's usual number of hours per workweek or hours per workday.

(9) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Labor.

(10) The term "serious health condition" means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental conditions which involves—

(A) inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential health care facility, or

(B) continuing treatment or continuing supervision by a health care provider.

(11) The term "son or daughter" means a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, a legal ward, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis, who is—

(A) under 18 years of age, or

(B) 18 years of age or older and incapable of self-care because of mental or physical disability.

(12) The term "parent" means the biological parent of the child or an individual who stood in loco parentis to a child when the child was a son or daughter.

SEC. 102. LEAVE REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) An eligible employee shall be entitled, subject to section 103, to 12 workweeks of leave during any 12-month period—

(A) because of the birth of a son or daughter of the employee;

(B) because of the placement of a son or daughter with the employee for adoption or foster care;

(C) in order to care for the employee's son, daughter, spouse, or parent who has a serious health condition; or

(D) because of a serious health condition which makes the employee unable to perform the functions of such employee's position.

(2)(A) The entitlement to leave under paragraphs (1)(A) and (1)(B) for a birth or placement of a son or daughter shall expire at the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of such birth or placement. If one parent of a son or daughter takes leave under paragraph (1)(A), the other parent of such son or daughter may not take leave under such paragraph at the same time.

(B) Leave under paragraph (1)(A) or (1)(B) may not be taken by an employee intermittently unless the employee and the employee's employer agree otherwise. Leave under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) may be taken intermittently when medically necessary, subject to subsection (e).

(b) REDUCED LEAVE.—Upon agreement between the employer and the employee, leave under subsection (a) may be taken on a reduced leave schedule. Such reduced leave schedule shall not result in a reduction in the total amount of leave to which the employee is entitled.

(c) UNPAID LEAVE PERMITTED.—Leave under subsection (a) may consist of unpaid leave, except as provided in subsection (d).

(d) RELATIONSHIP TO PAID LEAVE.—(1)(A) An eligible employee may elect, or an employer may require the employee, to substitute for leave under paragraph (1)(A), (1)(B), or (1)(C) of subsection (a) any of the employee's paid vacation leave, personal leave, or family leave for any part of the 12-week period of such leave under such paragraph.

(B) An eligible employee or employer may elect, or an employer may require the employee, to substitute for leave under paragraph (1)(D) of subsection (a) any of the employee's paid vacation leave, personal leave, or medical or sick leave for any part of the 12-week period of such leave under such paragraph, except that nothing in this Act shall require an employer to provide paid sick leave or paid medical leave in any situation in which such employer would not normally provide any such paid leave.

(2) If an eligible employee is entitled to leave under subsection (a), if under paragraph (1) the employee elects to substitute or is required by the employee's employer to substitute paid leave for such leave, and if such paid leave is less than the 12 weeks leave under subsection (a), the employee's employer shall provide the employee such additional weeks of leave as may be necessary to attain such 12 weeks.

(e) FORESEEABLE LEAVE.—(1) In any case in which the necessity for leave under paragraph (1)(A) or (1)(B) of subsection (a) is foreseeable based on an expected birth or adoption, the eligible employee shall provide the employer with prior notice of such expected birth or adoption in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

(2) In any case in which the necessity for leave under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) of subsection (a) is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

(A) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employer, subject to the approval of the employee's health care provider or the health care provider of the employee's son, daughter, or parent; and

(B) shall provide the employer with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

(f) SPOUSES EMPLOYED BY THE SAME EMPLOYER.—In any case in which a husband and wife entitled to leave under subsection (a) are employed by the same employer, the aggregate number of workweeks of leave to which both may be entitled may be limited to 12 workweeks during any 12-month period, if such leave is taken—

(1) under subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(1); or

(2) to care for a sick parent under subparagraph (C) of such subsection.

SEC. 103. CERTIFICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An employer may require that a claim for leave under section 102(a)(1)(C) or 102(a)(1)(D) be supported by certification issued by the health care provider of the eligible employee or of the employee's son, daughter, spouse, or parent, whichever is appropriate. The employee shall provide a copy of such certification to the employer.

(b) SUFFICIENT CERTIFICATION.—Such certification shall be sufficient if it states—

(1) the date on which the serious health condition commenced,

(2) the probable duration of the condition;

(3) the appropriate medical facts within the provider's knowledge regarding the condition; and

(4)(A) for purposes of leave under section 102(a)(1)(C), an estimate of the amount of time that the eligible employee is needed to care for the son, daughter, spouse, or parent; and

(B) for purposes of leave under section 102(a)(1)(D), a statement that the employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

(c) EXPLANATION OF INABILITY TO PERFORM JOB FUNCTIONS.—The employer may request that, for purposes of section 104(d), certification under subsection (a) that is issued in any case involving leave under section 102(a)(1)(D) include an explanation of the extent to which the eligible employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

(d) SECOND OPINION.—(1) In any case in which the employer has reason to doubt the validity of the certification provided under subsection (a) for leave under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) of section 102(a), the employer may require, at its own expense, that the eligible employee obtain the opinion of a second health care provider designated or approved by the employer concerning any information certified under subsection (a) for such leave.

(2) Any health care provider designated or approved under paragraph (1) may not be employed on a regular basis by the employer.

(e) RESOLUTION OF CONFLICTING OPINIONS.—In any case in which the second opinion described in subsection (d) differs from the original certification provided under subsection (a), the employer may require, at its own expense, that the employee obtain the opinion of a third health care provider designated or approved jointly by the employer and the employee concerning the information certified under subsection (a). The opinion of the third health care provider concerning the information certified under subsection (a) shall be considered to be final and shall be binding on the employer and the employee.

(f) SUBSEQUENT RECERTIFICATION.—The employer may require that the eligible employee obtain subsequent recertifications on a reasonable basis.

SEC. 104. EMPLOYMENT AND BENEFITS PROTECTION.

(a) RESTORATION TO POSITION.—(1) Any eligible employee who takes leave under section 102 for its intended purpose shall be entitled, upon return from such leave—

(A) to be restored by the employer to the position of employment held by the employee when the leave commenced; or

(B) to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment.

(2) The taking of leave under section 102 shall not result in the loss of any employment benefit earned before the date on which the leave commenced.

(3) Except as provided in subsection (b), nothing in this subsection shall be construed to entitle any restored employee to—

(A) the accrual of any seniority or employment benefits during any period of leave; or

(B) any right, benefit, or position of employment other than any right, benefit, or position to which the employee would have been entitled had the employee not taken the leave.

(4) As a condition to restoration under paragraph (1), the employer may have a policy that requires each employee to receive certification from the employee's health care provider that the employee is able to resume work, except that nothing in this paragraph shall supersede a valid State or local law or a collective bargaining agreement that governs the return to work of employees taking leave under section 102(a)(1)(D).

(b) EXEMPTION CONCERNING CERTAIN HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—(1) An employer may deny restoration under subsection (a) to any eligible employee described in paragraph (2) if—

(A) such denial is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the employer's operations;

(B) the employer notifies the employee of its intent to deny restoration on such basis at the time the employer determines that such injury would occur; and

(C) in any case in which the leave has commenced, the employee elects not to return to employment after receiving such notice.

(2) An eligible employee described in this paragraph is a salaried eligible employee who is among the highest paid 10 percent of the employees employed by the employer within 75 miles of the facility at which the employee is employed.

(c) MAINTENANCE OF HEALTH BENEFITS.—During any period an eligible employee takes leave under section 102, the employer shall maintain coverage under any group health plan (as defined in section 162(i)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) for the duration of such leave at the level and under the conditions coverage would have been provided if the employee had continued in employment continuously from the date the employee commenced the leave until the date the employee is restored under subsection (a).

(d) NO BAR TO AGREEMENT CONCERNING ALTERNATIVE EMPLOYMENT.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to prohibit an employer and an eligible employee from mutually agreeing to alternative employment for the employee throughout the period during which the employee would be entitled to leave under section 102. Any such period of alternative employment shall not cause a reduction in the period of temporary leave to which the employee is entitled under section 102(a)(1)(D).

SEC. 105. PROHIBITED ACTS.

(a) INTERFERENCE WITH RIGHTS.—(1) It shall be unlawful for any employer to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of or the attempt to exercise, any right provided under this title.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any employer to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual for opposing any practice made unlawful by this title.

(b) INTERFERENCE WITH PROCEEDINGS OR INQUIRIES.—It shall be unlawful for any person to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual because such individual—

(1) has filed any charge, or has instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding, under or related to this title;

(2) has given, or is about to give, any information in connection with any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title; or

(3) has testified, or is about to testify in any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title.

SEC. 106. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as are necessary to carry out this section, including regulations concerning service of complaints, notice of hearings, answers and amendments to complaints, and copies of orders and records of proceedings.

(b) CHARGES.—(1) Any person (or person, including a class or organization, on behalf of any person) alleging an act which violates any provision of this title may file a charge respecting such violation with the Secretary. Charges shall be in such form and contain such information as the Secretary shall require by regulation.

(2) Not more than 10 days after the Secretary receives notice of the charge, the Secretary—

(A) shall serve a notice of the charge on the person charged with the violation; and

(B) shall inform such person and the charging party as to the rights and procedures provided under this title.

(3) A charge may not be filed more than 1 year after the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation.

(4) The charging party and the person charged with the violation may enter into a settlement agreement concerning the violation alleged in the charge before any determination is reached by the Secretary under subsection (c). Such an agreement shall be effective unless the Secretary determines, within 30 days after notice of the proposed agreement, that the agreement is not generally consistent with the purposes of this title.

(c) INVESTIGATION; COMPLAINT.—(1) Within the 60-day period after the Secretary receives any charge respecting a violation of this title, the Secretary shall investigate the charge and issue a complaint based on the charge or dismiss the charge.

(2) If the Secretary determines that there is no reasonable basis for the charge, the Secretary shall dismiss the charge and promptly notify the charging party and the respondent as to the dismissal.

(3) If the Secretary determines that there is a reasonable basis for the charge, the Secretary shall issue a complaint based on the charge and promptly notify the charging party and the respondent as to the issuance.

(4) Upon the issuance of a complaint, the Secretary and the respondent may enter into a settlement agreement concerning a violation alleged in the complaint. Any such settlement shall not be entered into over the objection of the charging party, unless the Secretary determines that the settlement provides a full remedy for the charging party.

(5) If, at the end of the 60-day period referred to in paragraph (1), the Secretary—

(A) has not made a determination under paragraph (2) or (3),

(B) has dismissed the charge under paragraph (2), or

(C) has disapproved a settlement agreement under subsection (b)(4) or has not entered into a settlement agreement under paragraph (4) of this subsection,

the charging party may elect to bring a civil action under section 107. Such election shall bar further administrative action by the Secretary with respect to the violation alleged in the charge.

(6) The Secretary may issue and serve a complaint alleging a violation of this title on the basis of information and evidence gathered as a result of an investigation initiated by the Secretary pursuant to section 108.

(7) The Secretary shall have the power to petition the United States district court for the district in which the violation is alleged to have occurred, or in which the respondent resides or transacts business, for appropriate temporary relief or restraining order. Upon the filing of any such petition, the court shall cause notice of the petition to be served upon the respondent, and the court shall have jurisdiction to grant to the Secretary such temporary relief or restraining order as it deems just and proper.

(d) RIGHTS OF PARTIES.—(1) In any case in which a complaint is issued under subsection (c), the Secretary shall, not more than 10 days after the date on which the complaint is issued, cause to be served on the respondent a copy of the complaint.

(2) Any person filing a charge alleging a violation of this title may elect to be a party to any complaint filed by the Secretary alleging such violation. Such election must be made before the commencement of the hearing.

(3) The failure of the Secretary to comply in a timely manner with any obligation assigned to the Secretary under this title shall entitle the charging party to elect, at the time of such failure, to bring a civil action under section 107.

(e) CONDUCT OF HEARING.—(1) The Secretary shall have the duty to prosecute any complaint issued under subsection (b).

(2) An administrative law judge shall conduct a hearing on the record with respect to any complaint issued under this title. The hearing shall be commenced within 60 days after the issuance of such complaint, unless the judge, in the judge's discretion, determines that the purposes of this Act would best be furthered by commencement of the action after the expiration of such period.

(f) FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS.—(1) After the hearing conducted under this section, the administrative law judge shall promptly make findings of fact and conclusions of law, and, if appropriate, issue an order for relief as provided in section 109.

(2) The administrative law judge shall inform the parties, in writing, of the reason for any delay in making such findings and conclusions if such findings and conclusions are not made within 60 days after the conclusion of such hearing.

(g) FINALITY OF DECISION; REVIEW.—(1) The decision and order of the administrative law judge shall become the final decision and order of the agency unless, upon appeal by an aggrieved party taken not more than 30 days after such action, the Secretary modifies or vacates the decision, in which case the decision of the Secretary shall be the final decision and the order of the agency.

(2) Not later than 60 days after the entry of such final order, any person aggrieved by such final order may seek a review of such order in the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the violation is alleged to have occurred or in which the employer resides or transacts business.

(3) Upon the filing of the record with the court, the jurisdiction of the court shall be exclusive and its judgment shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

(h) COURT ENFORCEMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE ORDERS.—(1) If an order of the agency is not appealed under subsection (g)(2), the Secretary may petition the United States district court for the district in which the violation is alleged to have occurred, or in which the respondent resides or transacts business, for the enforcement of the order of the Secretary, by filing in such court a written petition praying that such order be enforced.

(2) Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall have jurisdiction to make and enter a decree enforcing the order of the Secretary. In such a proceeding, the order of the Secretary shall not be subject to review.

(3) If, upon appeal of an order under subsection (g)(2), the United States court of appeals does not reverse such order, such court shall have the jurisdiction to make and enter a decree enforcing the order of the Secretary.

SEC. 107. ENFORCEMENT BY CIVIL ACTION.

(a) RIGHT TO BRING CIVIL ACTION.—(1) Subject to the limitations in this section, an eligible employee or any person, including a class or organization on behalf of any eligible employee or the Secretary may bring a civil action against any employer (including any State employer) to enforce the provisions of this title in any appropriate court of the United States or in any State court of competent jurisdiction.

(2) Subject to paragraph (3), a civil action may be commenced under this subsection without regard to whether a charge has been filed under section 106(b).

(3) No civil action may be commenced under paragraph (1) if the Secretary—

(A) has approved a settlement agreement or has failed to disapprove a settlement agreement under section 106(b)(4), in which case no civil action may be filed under this subsection if such action is based upon a violation alleged in the charge and resolved by the agreement; or

(B) has issued a complaint under section 106(c)(3) or 106(c)(6), in which case no civil action may be filed under this subsection if such action is based upon a violation alleged in the complaint.

(4) Notwithstanding paragraph (3)(A), a civil action may be commenced to enforce the terms of any such settlement agreement.

(5)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), no civil action may be commenced more than 1 year after the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation.

(B) In any case in which—

(i) a timely charge is filed under section 106(b), and

(ii) the failure of the Secretary to issue a complaint or enter into a settlement agreement based on the charge (as provided under section 106(c)(4)) occurs more than 11 months after the date on which any alleged violation occurred, the charging party may commence a civil action not more than 60 days after the date of such failure.

(6) The Secretary may not bring a civil action against any agency of the United States.

(7) Upon the filing of the complaint with the court, the jurisdiction of the court shall be exclusive.

(b) VENUE.—An action brought under subsection (a) in a district court of the United States may be brought—

(1) in any appropriate judicial district under section 1391 of title 28, United States Code, or

(2) in the judicial district in the State in which—

(A) the employment records relevant to such violation are maintained and administered, or

(B) the aggrieved person worked or would have worked but for the alleged violation.

(c) NOTIFICATION OF THE SECRETARY; RIGHT TO INTERVENE.—A copy of the complaint in any action by an eligible employee under subsection (a) shall be served upon the Secretary by certified mail. The Secretary shall have the right to intervene in a civil action brought by an employee under subsection (a).

(d) ATTORNEYS FOR THE SECRETARY.—In any civil action under subsection (a), attorneys appointed by the Secretary may appear for and represent the Secretary, except that the Attorney General and the Solicitor General shall conduct any litigation in the Supreme Court.

SEC. 108. INVESTIGATIVE AUTHORITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To ensure compliance with this title, or any regulation or order issued under this title, the Secretary shall have, subject to subsection (c), the investigative authority provided under section 11(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 211(a)).

(b) OBLIGATION TO KEEP AND PRESERVE RECORDS.—Any employer shall keep and preserve records in accordance with section 11(c) of such Act and in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary.

(c) REQUIRED SUBMISSIONS GENERALLY LIMITED TO AN ANNUAL BASIS.—The Secretary may not under the authority of this section require any employer or any plan, fund, or program to submit to the Secretary any books or records more than once during any 12-month period, unless the Secretary has reasonable cause to believe there may exist a violation of this title or any regulation or order issued pursuant to this title, or is investigating a charge pursuant to section 106.

(d) SUBPOENA POWERS, ETC.—For the purposes of any investigation provided for in this section, the Secretary shall have the subpoena authority provided under section 9 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.

SEC. 109. RELIEF.

(a) INJUNCTIVE.—(1) Upon finding a violation under section 106, the administrative law judge shall issue an order requiring such person to cease and desist from any act or practice which violates this title.

(2) In any civil action brought under section 107, the court may grant as relief against any employer (including any State employer) any permanent or temporary injunction, temporary restraining order, and other equitable relief as the court deems appropriate.

(b) MONETARY.—(1) Any employer (including any State employer) that violates any provision of this title shall be liable to the injured party in an amount equal to—

(A) any wages, salary, employment benefits, or other compensation denied or lost to such eligible employee by reason of the violation, plus interest on the total monetary damages calculated at the prevailing rate; and

(B) an additional amount equal to the greater of (i) the amount determined under subparagraph (A), or (ii) consequential damages, not to exceed 3 times the amount determined under such subparagraph.

(2) If an employer who has violated this title proves to the satisfaction of the administrative law judge or the court that the act or omission which violated this title was in good faith and that the employer had reasonable grounds for believing that the act or omission was not a violation of this title, such judge or the court may, in its discretion, reduce the amount of the liability provided for under this subsection to the amount determined under paragraph (1)(A).

(c) ATTORNEYS' FEES.—The prevailing party (other than the United States) may be awarded a reasonable attorneys' fee as part of the costs, in addition to any relief awarded. The United States shall be liable for costs the same as a private person.

(d) LIMITATION.—Damages awarded under subsection (b) may not accrue from a date more than 2 years before the date on which a charge is filed under section 106(b) or a civil action is brought under section 107.

SEC. 110. SPECIAL RULES CONCERNING EMPLOYEES OF LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the rights, remedies, and procedures under this Act shall apply to—

(1) any local educational agency (as defined in section 1471(12) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2891(12))) and its employees, and

(2) any private elementary and secondary school and its employees, including the rights under section 104, which shall extend throughout the period of any employee's leave under this section.

(b) LEAVE DOES NOT VIOLATE CERTAIN OTHER FEDERAL LAWS.—A local educational agency and a private elementary and secondary school shall not be in violation of the Education of the Handicapped Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.), section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 794), or title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.), solely as a result of an eligible employee of such agency or school exercising such employee's rights under this Act.

(c) INTERMITTENT LEAVE FOR INSTRUCTIONAL EMPLOYEES.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), in any case in which an employee employed principally in an instructional capacity by any such educational agency or school seeks to take leave under section 102(a)(1)(C) or 102(a)(1)(D) which is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision and the employee would be on leave for greater than 20 percent of the total number of working days in the period during which the leave would extend, the agency or school may require such employee to elect either—

(A) to take leave for periods of a particular duration, not to exceed the planned medical treatment or supervision; or

(B) to transfer temporarily to an available alternative position offered by the employer for which the employee is qualified, and which—

(i) has equivalent pay and benefits, and

(ii) better accommodates recurring periods of leave than the employee's regular employment position.

(2) The elections described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) shall apply only with respect to an employee who complies with section 102(e)(2).

(d) RULES APPLICABLE TO PERIODS NEAR THE CONCLUSION OF AN ACADEMIC TERM.—The following rules shall apply with respect to periods of leave near the conclusion of an academic term in the case of any employee employed principally in an instructional capacity by any such educational agency or school:

(1) If the employee begins leave under section 102 more than 5 weeks before the end of the academic term, the agency or school may require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of at least 3 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 3-week period before the end of such term.

(2) If the employee begins leave under paragraph (1)(A), (1)(B), or (1)(C) of section 102(a)(1) during the period that commences 5 weeks before the end of the academic term, the agency or school may require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of greater than 2 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 2-week period before the end of such term.

(3) If the employee begins leave under paragraph (1)(A), (1)(B), or (1)(C) of section 102 during the period that commences 3 weeks before the end of the academic term and the duration of the leave is greater than 5 working days, the agency or school may require the employee to continue to take leave until the end of such term.

(e) RESTORATION TO EQUIVALENT EMPLOYMENT POSITION.—For purposes of determinations under section 104(a)(1)(B) (relating to an employee's restoration to an equivalent position) in the case of a local educational agency or a private elementary and secondary school, such determination shall be made on the basis of established school board policies and practices, private school policies and practices, and collective bargaining agreements.

(f) REDUCTION OF THE AMOUNT OF LIABILITY.—If a local educational agency or a private elementary and secondary school which has violated title I proves to the satisfaction of the administrative law judge or the court that the agency, school, or department had reasonable grounds for believing that the underlying act or omission was not a violation of such title, such judge or court may, in its discretion, reduce the amount of the liability provided for under section 109(b)(1) to the amount determined under subparagraph (A) of such section.

SEC. 111. NOTICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each employer shall post and keep posted, in conspicuous places upon its premises where notices to employees and applicants for employment are customarily posted, a notice, to be prepared or approved by the Secretary, setting forth excerpts from, or summaries of, the pertinent provisions of this title and information pertaining to the filing of a charge.

(b) PENALTY.—Any employer that willfully violates this section shall be assessed a civil money penalty not to exceed $100 for each separate offense.

SEC. 112. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out this title (including regulations under section 106(a)) within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE II—FAMILY LEAVE AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE FOR CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES

SEC. 201. FAMILY AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subchapter:

"Subchapter V—Family and Temporary Medical Leave

"§ 6381. Definitions

"For purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) 'employee' means—

"(A) an employee as defined by section 6301(2) of this title (excluding an individual employed by the government of the District of Columbia); and

"(B) an individual under clause (v) or (ix) of such section;

whose employment is other than on a temporary or intermittent basis;

"(2) 'serious health condition' means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition which involves—

"(A) inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential health care facility; or

"(B) continuing treatment, or continuing supervision, by a health care provider;

"(3) 'child' means an individual who is—

"(A) a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, a legal ward, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis, and

"(B)(i) under 18 years of age, or

"(ii) 18 years of age or older and incapable of self-care because of mental or physical disability; and

"(4) 'parent' means a biological, foster, or adoptive parent, a parent-in-law, a stepparent, or a legal guardian.

"§ 6382. Family leave

"(a) Leave under this section shall be granted on the request of an employee if such leave is requested—

"(1) because of the birth of a child of the employee;

"(2) because of the placement for adoption or foster care of a child with the employee; or

"(3) in order to care for the employee's child or parent who has a serious health condition.

"(b) Leave under this section—

"(1) shall be leave without pay;

"(2) may not, in the aggregate, exceed the equivalent of 18 administrative workweeks of the employee during any 24-month period; and

"(3) shall be in addition to any annual leave, sick leave, temporary medical leave, or other leave or compensatory time off otherwise available to the employee.

"(c) An employee may elect to use leave under this section—

"(1) immediately before or after (or otherwise in coordination with) any period of annual leave, or compensatory time off, otherwise available to the employee;

"(2) under a method involving a reduced workday, a reduced workweek, or other alternative work schedule;

"(3) on either a continuing or intermittent basis; or

"(4) any combination thereof.

"(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section—

"(1) a request for leave under this section based on the birth of a child may not be granted if, or to the extent that, such leave would be used after the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of such child's birth; and

"(2) a request for leave under this section based on the placement for adoption or foster care of a child may not be granted if, or to the extent that, such leave would be used after the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date on which such child is so placed.

"(e)(1) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on an expected birth or adoption, the employee shall provide the employing agency with prior notice of such expected birth or adoption in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

"(2) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

"(A) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employing agency, subject to the approval of the health care provider of the employee's child or parent; and

"(B) shall provide the employing agency with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

"§ 6383. Temporary medical leave

"(a) An employee who, because of a serious health condition, becomes unable to perform the functions of such employee's position shall, on request of the employee, be entitled to leave under this section.

"(b) Leave under this section—

"(1) shall be leave without pay;

"(2) shall be available for the duration of the serious health condition of the employee involved, but may not, in the aggregate, exceed the equivalent of 26 administrative workweeks of the employee during any 12-month period; and

"(3) shall be in addition to any annual leave, sick leave, family leave, or other leave or compensatory time off otherwise available to the employee.

"(c) An employee may elect to use leave under this section—

"(1) immediately before or after (or otherwise in coordination with) any period of annual leave, sick leave, or compensatory time off otherwise available to the employee;

"(2) under a method involving a reduced workday, a reduced workweek, or other alternative work schedule;

"(3) on either a continuing or intermittent basis; or

"(4) any combination thereof.

"(d) In any case in which the necessity for leave under this section is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

"(1) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employing agency, subject to the approval of the employee's health care provider; and

"(2) shall provide the employing agency with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

"§ 6384. Certification

"(a) An employing agency may require that a request for family leave under section 6382(a)(3) or temporary medical leave under section 6383 be supported by certification issued by the health care provider of the employee or of the employee's child or parent, whichever is appropriate. The employee shall provide a copy of such certification to the employing agency.

"(b) Such certification shall be sufficient if it states—

"(1) the date on which the serious health condition commenced;

"(2) the probable duration of the condition;

"(3) the medical facts within the provider's knowledge regarding the condition; and

"(4) for purposes of section 6383, a statement that the employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

"§ 6385. Job protection

"An employee who uses leave under section 6382 or 6383 of this title is entitled to be restored to the position held by such employee immediately before the commencement of such leave.

"§ 6386. Prohibition of coercion

"(a) An employee may not directly or indirectly intimidate, threaten, or coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, or coerce, any other employee for the purpose of interfering with such employee's rights under this subchapter.

"(b) For the purpose of this section, 'intimidate, threaten, or coerce' includes promising to confer or conferring any benefit (such as appointment, promotion, or compensation), or effecting or threatening to effect any reprisal (such as deprivation of appointment, promotion, or compensation).

"§ 6387. Health insurance

"An employee enrolled in a health benefits plan under chapter 89 of this title who is placed in a leave status under section 6382 or 6383 of this title may elect to continue the employee's health benefits enrollment while in such leave status and arrange to pay into the Employees Health Benefits Fund (described in section 8909 of this title), through that individual's employing agency, the appropriate employee contributions.

"§ 6388. Regulations

"The Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe regulations necessary for the administration of this subchapter. The regulations prescribed under this subchapter shall be consistent with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Labor under title I of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990.".

(2) The table of contents for chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SUBCHAPTER V—FAMILY AND TEMPORARY MEDICAL LEAVE

"6381. Definitions.
"6382. Family leave.
"6383. Temporary medical leave.
"6384. Certification.
"6385. Job protection.
"6386. Prohibition of coercion.
"6387. Health insurance.
"6388. Regulations.".

(b) EMPLOYEES PAID FROM NONAPPROPRIATED FUNDS.—Section 2105(c)(1) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out "53" and inserting in lieu thereof "53, and subchapter III of chapter 63,".

TITLE III—COMMISSION ON LEAVE

SEC. 301. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the Commission on Leave (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Commission").

SEC. 302. DUTIES.

The Commission shall—

(1) conduct a comprehensive study of—

(A) existing and proposed policies relating to leave,

(B) the potential costs, benefits, and impact on productivity of such policies on businesses which employ fewer than 50 employees, and

(C) alternative and equivalent State enforcement of this Act with respect to employees described in section 110; and

(2) within 2 years after the date on which the Commission first meets, submit a report to the Congress, which may include legislative recommendations concerning coverage of businesses which employ fewer than 50 employees and alternative and equivalent State enforcement of this Act with respect to employees described in section 110.

SEC. 303. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) COMPOSITION.—The Commission shall be composed of 12 voting members and 2 ex-officio members appointed not more than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act as follows:

(1) One Senator shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate, and one Senator shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate.

(2) One member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and one Member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(3)(A) Two members each shall be appointed by—

(i) the Speaker of the House of Representatives,

(ii) the majority leader of the Senate,

(iii) the minority leader of the House of Representatives, and

(iv) the minority leader of the Senate.

(B) Such members shall be appointed by virtue of demonstrated expertise in relevant family, temporary disability, and labor-management issues and shall include representatives of small business.

(4) The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Labor shall serve on the Commission as nonvoting ex-officio members.

(b) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(c) CHAIRPERSON AND VICE CHAIRPERSON.—The Commission shall elect a chairperson and a vice chairperson from among its members.

(d) QUORUM.—Eight members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for all purposes, except that a lesser number may constitute a quorum for the purpose of holding hearings.

SEC. 304. COMPENSATION.

(a) PAY.—Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation.

(b) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Members of the Commission shall be allowed reasonable travel expenses, including a per diem allowance, in accordance with section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, when performing duties of the Commission.

SEC. 305. POWERS.

(a) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall first meet not more than 30 days after the date on which members are appointed, and the Commission shall meet thereafter upon the call of the chairperson or a majority of the members.

(b) HEARINGS AND SESSIONS.—The Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses appearing before it.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this Act. Upon the request of the chairperson or vice chairperson of the Commission, the head of such agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(d) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—The Commission may appoint an Executive Director from the personnel of any Federal agency to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties.

(e) USE OF FACILITIES AND SERVICES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may make available to the Commission any of the facilities and services of such agency.

(f) PERSONNEL FROM OTHER AGENCIES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may detail any of the personnel of such agency to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties.

SEC. 306. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall terminate 30 days after the date of the submission of its report to the Congress.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) FEDERAL AND STATE ANTIDISCRIMINATION LAWS.—Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to modify or affect any Federal or State law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of race, religion, color, national origin, sex, age, or handicapped status.

(b) STATE AND LOCAL LAWS.—Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to supersede any provision of any State and local law which provides greater employee leave rights than the rights established under this Act or any amendment made by this Act.

SEC. 402. EFFECT ON EXISTING EMPLOYMENT BENEFITS.

(a) MORE PROTECTIVE.—Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to diminish an employer's obligation to comply with any collective-bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan which provides greater family and medical leave rights to employees than the rights provided under this Act or any amendment made by this Act.

(b) LESS PROTECTIVE.—The rights provided to employees under this Act or any amendment made by this Act may not be diminished by any collective bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan.

SEC. 403. ENCOURAGEMENT OF MORE GENEROUS LEAVE POLICIES.

Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to discourage employers from adopting or retaining leave policies more generous than any policies which comply with the requirements under this Act or any amendment made by this Act.

SEC. 404. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) TITLE III.—Title III shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) OTHER TITLES.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), titles I and II and this title shall take effect 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) In the case of a collective bargaining agreement in effect on the effective date prescribed by paragraph (1), title I shall apply on the earlier of—

(A) the date of the termination of such agreement; or

(B) the date which occurs 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 405. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out this title within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE V—COVERAGE OF CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES

SEC. 501. LEAVE FOR CERTAIN CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The rights and protections under sections 102 through 105 (other than section 104(b)) shall apply to any employee in an employment position and any employing authority of the House of Representatives.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—In the administration of this section, the remedies and procedures under the Fair Employment Practices Resolution shall be applied.

(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "Fair Employment Practices Resolution" means House Resolution 558, One Hundredth Congress, agreed to October 3, 1988, as continued in effect by House Resolution 15, One Hundred and First Congress, agreed to January 3, 1989.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] will be recognized for 15 minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON].

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. GORDON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, first I want to take a moment to recognize the contribution of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY] on this issue. The gentleman has played a constructive role and has raised important issues about this bill.

Madam Chairman, today we have an opportunity. After 5 years of work by scores of those dedicated to the well-being of America's families. We have the chance to give our Nation's workers job security while they care for a member of their own household.

America has changed in the last 30 years. Two income households have become the norm rather than the exception. There are more single parents than ever before. The cost of raising a child or caring for a sick parent has never been greater.

And now is the time for real competition with nations such as Japan and West Germany. These countries assure their workers of job-secure leave. It's time to make sure that the productive and dedicated workers America needs are never burdened with the anxiety of choosing between work and family.

The Gordon-Weldon amendment offers the best chance at giving America a workable, commonsense family and medical leave bill this year.

Our amendment is the product of legitimate concerns expressed about the committee bill. Those concerns brought Republicans like CURT WELDON and MARGE ROUKEMA together with Democrats like me in an effort to give American businesses a fair bill and America's families and a bill that makes a real difference.

Some feel the original bill's 15 weeks per year for personal medical leave and 10 weeks every 2 years for family leave is too much. Our amendment allows an employee one period of unpaid leave of no more than 12 weeks total in a year.

The committee bill allows both new parents to be on leave at the same time. Our amendment allows only one parent to take leave at a time.

The committee bill's definition on a parent includes in-laws, legal guardians and step-parents. We have tightened that provision to include only biological parents or those who actually raised the employee.

Certification of illness under our amendment must be provided by a doctor, rather than simply anyone defined as a health care provider.

And what about small businesses, the businesses that are the backbone of the American economy?

I hope that the hardware store on the square in Murfreesboro, TN or the beauty salon in CURT WELDON's home town of Aston, PA, will give their employees the same choices outlined in our amendment.

But we understand that America's small businesses really are special. They need special flexibility. And they need the 50-employee permanent exemption provided in our amendment.

Our amendment also exempts the key employees that no business can afford to do without.

Some supporters of family leave say we haven't done enough for working families. Opponents say we go too far, that working families should not have the option of 12 weeks of unpaid leave under any circumstances.

That criticism tells me our bipartisan compromise amendment is just where it should be. And that's what compromise is all about.

As we consider this amendment, let's not forget the message that we time and again give our young, "Work hard, raise a family, always care for your parents."

Work and family, those basic values are the social fabric that binds this country together.

Today millions of Americans, Americans in every congressional district represented in this body, are choosing between beginning a family and staying on the job. They're choosing between work and caring for an older parent. They're doing their best to reach a balance between the values they believe are important—work and family.

No act of Congress can make those choices easy. Twelve weeks of unpaid leave spent with a newborn baby or ill parent is not a vacation, but it is an option that every working American deserves.

□ 1140

Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ROSE].

Mr. ROSE. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by Representative GORDON and Representative WELDON. A lot of hard work has gone into this compromise. I want to commend my colleagues on the Education and Labor and Post Office and Civil Service Committees for drafting a bill which Members from both sides of the aisle can support today.

Madam Chairman, opponents of this bill have spend a lot of time talking about their fundamental opposition to Federal mandates, you know, the principle of the thing. Let us spend just a minute talking about the reality of the benefits we are considering here today. The employers I have heard from insist that mothers do not need 12 weeks to recover from the birth of a child. You know, in most cases, they are probably right, but they assume that every employee who is eligible for leave is going to take the maximum 12 weeks. Remember, an employee is not required to stay away from work for 3 months just because he or she is eligible.

I am not speaking for any other State, but I want to remind my colleagues from North Carolina, and I do not mention this with pride, that we have the lowest average manufacturing wages in the Nation. Now I wonder how many new parents are going to be able to afford to go 3 months without a paycheck? Maybe those employees in the top 10 percent of the salary structure can afford it, but, hey, they are not covered under this bill. Opponents of the bill say business cannot afford leave benefits; if anyone cannot afford it, it's employees. Let us show a little faith in this Nation's employees. They are not interested in putting their bosses out of business.

What this bill is all about is the changing needs of American workers and employers as well. Why do we not stop treating worstcase scenario's like the gospel, and start listening to what American workers are really saying, and that is: "We need a little job protection for our families, but we want to work together with you on this thing."

Mr. GRANDY, Madam Chairman, may I inquire as to how much time I have?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has 15 minutes.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I would take this time to inquire of the authors of the Weldon-Gordon substitute about the provisions in the bill. I would ask that, under the so-called compromise, time can be taken off, and I would ask this to either sponsor of the bill: Time can be taken off for a so-called serious health condition. How is that defined in the bill?

I will be happy to yield to either the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] or the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] for an answer to this.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, one is either in a hospital or in the constant supervision of a health-care provider.

Mr. GRANDY. It is the continuing supervision of a health-care provider, is it not?

Mr. GORDON. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. GRANDY. Let me now ask about the term "serious health condition." Did not the General Accounting Office say that that term was subject to varying interpretations?

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, on that point, if the gentleman would understand it, there has been a very significant tightening up of the certification process and requirement that requires not just a medical practitioner but a medical doctor as defined by Medicare to certify that the illness is of such a nature that an individual should, in fact, provide care at home and, in addition to that, there is a three-step process.

If the employer disagrees with the advice and counsel of the individual employee's doctor or physician, then the employer can have their doctor or physician assess the merits of the leave request.

Mr. GRANDY. I am going to reclaim my time on this point.

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, the gentleman has asked me for an answer.

Mr. GRANDY. I am reclaiming my time.

Mr. WELDON. And obviously the gentleman will not allow me to answer his question.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, who has the time?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has the floor.

Mr. GRANDY. I take that time back, because it is my understanding that it is not necessarily the employer's physician. It is a physician agreed to by the employer and the employee, and the employer pays for that decision. Is that not correct?

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, is the gentleman going to yield and allow me to answer?

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I will yield, and I will allow the gentleman to answer that question.

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, as I was explaining the three-part certification process, the physician as selected and paid by the employer, if they disagree with the recommendation of the employee's physician, then can refer it to a neutral third party who then decides and arbitrates whether or not the leave is in fact justified.

I think this far and away protects the concerns that anyone would raise about someone who would try to abuse this process.

Mr. GRANDY. Reclaiming my time, I appreciate the gentleman's answer. May I ask another question?

What obligations are there for employees under this substitute to meet in taking leave and then in returning? Is there any obligation at all to give advance notice of intent to return to work? An employee has gone out on leave; is there any obligation by that employee to give that employer notice to return to work?

Mr. GORDON. If the gentleman will yield further, they have to give notice they are going to take the leave, and then they would be limited to 12 weeks thereafter.

Mr. GRANDY. But they are not obligated to give notice as to when they are coming back? Is that correct?

Mr. GORDON. If the gentleman will yield further, there is no more than 12 weeks that would be eligible.

Mr. GRANDY. Could an employee simply take all the leave together with obviously the continued health insurance coverage and then choose not to return to work?

Mr. WELDON. If the gentleman will yield further, this is not a change, by the way, from the initial legislation, so I do not understand why it was not questioned on the initial general debate. This is the same as the initial bill provided. The employer can, in fact, question the fitness or the ability of the employee to return to work during the process of the leave.

Mr. GRANDY. Again, that is not the question.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, this is unpaid leave, and certainly the employee would not have to come back to work, just as an employee could walk out of a job at any time.

Mr. GRANDY. However, if an employee walks off the job, an employer is not required to maintain the health benefits. If this employee walks off the job while he is on leave and never returns, the employer is obligated to pay those health benefits, is he not, and the employee is not necessarily obligated to contribute to those health benefits?

Mr. GORDON. If there was never an intention to return, he would not be obligated. However, this is a hypothetical that is a pretty bizarre and extreme motive. If the gentleman would like to cite a specific example of where this has happened, maybe we could deal with it more specifically.

Mr. GRANDY. I only take that point because there are provisions in State law, Rhode Island being one, that requires an employee to make a good-faith gesture of putting their health contributions into an escrow plan so that should they decide to use what would normally be maternity leave to look for another job, let us say, after taking some leave, they would forfeit those benefits.

□ 1150

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I yield to the gentlewoman from Colorado.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Madam Chairman, one of the very important tools that the employer still has, if you take the worst case, which is what I assume the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] is talking about, someone who takes the 12 weeks of leave knowing they are going to quit anyway and does not tell the employer, and the gentleman is saying the employer paid the health care benefits and so the employer is left high and dry, if you take that worst case, I still think there would be very few employees that would ever do that because the minute the employee goes to get another job, the first person they turn to is the employer for a recommendation.

I want to tell you if I were the employer of an employee that did that, I can tell you what kind of recommendation I would give. I think the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] knows that. We do not need to put that in the law. That is human nature and common sense.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, I would quote from the committee report on H.R. 770. Testimony was given by a witness who said the following:

> We recently had a young woman who requested 3 months maternity leave which we granted. In order to hold her job, we employed a temporary employment service to fill this job as secretary-receptionist. During the leave we paid all benefits. At the end of the leave the individual informed us of her decision not to return to the labor force. In other words, we went through a period of inefficiency and delay and being able to seek and train a replacement, as well as the monetary outlay to cover fringe benefits.

Madam Chairman, I might point out here none of the costs referred to in this particular paragraph are covered in the supposed costs of H.R. 770 or Gordon-Weldon.

> In other words, we went through a period of inefficiency and delay in being able to seek and train a replacement for an employee who did not return.

Hypotheticals notwithstanding, there is precedent for this kind of behavior. That is why some States have taken preventive measures.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I concur and agree there are some sorry people in this world, and there will be situations where this, as any benefit, will be taken advantage of. But they are going to be very rare and it will be the exception. But yes, the gentleman is right, there are sorry people in the world.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] for his comment, because the gentleman is talking about sorry employers. I am talking about sorry employees, and his legislation talks about sorry employers.

I would guarantee that no matter how tightly we draft the statute, we will not catch everybody in our net. But as I refer to some of the problems in this bill, I see some loopholes here that could provide for some real problems to the employers who at this point can offer this leave, but have no requirement from the employee to notify them if they are coming back. They will still be on the hook for all of the benefits, regardless of whether that person comes back to the workplace or bolts from the workplace.

Let me ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] this: Is there any requirement in the bill for emergency or pressing circumstances to exist before taking leave? Is there any criteria for that?

Mr. GORDON. If the gentleman will yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, you yourself have to have a family health condition or a family member has to have a serious health condition and there has to be a doctor's certification.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, could, for example, an employee take time off to care for a child living separately with a divorced spouse? Are there requirements for the child to live with the parent?

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, if it was a natural child and only if you were going to be caring for that child.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, reclaiming my time, I have some other questions, but at this point I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS. Madam Chairman, I have listened to this debate very carefully, and I support the substitute offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON].

I worked on the substitute. I think this is a much better bill. I want to tell Members why I support it.

Think of all of the votes we make on the House floor. There are a few that you occasionally want to retrieve. If you vote for this bill, we may want to retrieve that vote from a political standpoint. It may not be too popular.

If you vote against this bill, sometime down the road you are going to wish that you could retrieve this vote. Because a vote for this bill is the right thing to do.

Now, I have heard the arguments against it, that this does not help poor people. My friends, you would be surprised what a mother can do, a poor person, that has a terminally ill child. They will find a way to live, to eat, but this would help them a bit to go back to work.

But even so, say it only helps middle-income people, the so-called yuppies. What is wrong in America today to occasionally helping a middle-income worker? I do not know what is wrong with helping middle-income America. Have we abandoned those people who work every day of their lives, paying taxes, asking for nothing more than decency and compassion?

I say to you that there are those who say good employers do this anyway. Well, wonderful. I am delighted. I agree. So this bill primarily will just apply to bad employers, who do not have the compassion, who do not have the feeling, who do not have any interest in the family.

I want to pay tribute to our colleague from Illinois who says this is a pro-family bill. Yes, it is a pro-family bill. You do not know what goes through the mind of a young working mother who is pregnant again and must make a decision as to whether or not to have an abortion or to have that child.

Yes, it is pro-family. No, it may not be the right political vote, but it is the right vote. I urge Members to vote for the substitute.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY].

Mr. CLAY. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment and want to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. JENKINS] who just preceded me in the well.

I think this substitute is good legislation. I think it is good for families. I think it is good for the morale of the workplace. It is a reasonable compromise. Madam Chairman, I think it preserves the intent and the integrity of the original legislation introduced 5 years ago by the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Madam Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support the compromise.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCMILLEN].

Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland. Madam Chairman, I want to commend the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] for forging this compromise. It is sensitive to the concerns of small business.

These provisions for a permanent 50-employee exemption are a very positive change. While I would have preferred for emphasis on parental leave, I think this compromise is a major step forward in labor-business relations. But more important, this compromise is the drive toward the hodgepodge of State laws.

This administration has consistently abdicated national responsibility in the areas of transportation, education, and other areas, and once again today they are saying let us have 50 different State standards, so that that is the way we prepare this Nation to compete against the Common Market in 1992, where they are dropping these kinds of different standards.

The lastest General Accounting Office estimates are that compliance costs will be a little over $100 million. That compares very favorably with the $600 million in lost wages due to the fact that we do not have a national standard in this country.

Madam Chairman, I urge the adoption of the substitute.

Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the compromise version of this bill offered by the gentleman from Tennessee and the gentleman from Pennsylvania. They have forged a compromise that I feel all of us—business and labor—can live with. The amendment in the nature of a substitute simpifies H.R. 770 and addresses some of businesses' concerns about onerous mandates from the Federal Government. For instance, the exemption for businesses of fewer than 50 persons is an improvement—small businesses simply don't have the personnel redundancy to permit unscheduled periods of leave.

While I endorse the compromise version, I believe that the emphasis should be on parental leave—in this way, we would have a better handle on the cost to businesses involved. This is because it is easier to estimate the number of workers likely to take parental, rather than medical, leave. Further, slightly reducing the number of weeks one is entitled to under this proposal would be a welcome refinement, giving both businesses greater flexibility in personnel management.

In a country where citizens must juggle work and family responsibilities, family and medical leave is really our only course of action. It is the only way we as a society can position ourselves for maximum productivity in the global marketplace in the coming century. Not only that, you can be sure that without a Federal statute, there would be a hodgepodge of State laws, many of which may be conflicting. This is antithetical to an economy that operates largely on a national scale, such as the American economy. It is important to note that a Federal regulation would not preclude various State standards, but would instead discourage the formation of inconsistent State initiatives.

In fact, it can argued that a Federal law actually helps businesses. Federal legislation would allow national corporations to avoid the potential disruption created by having to contend with a patchwork of State and medical leave regulations. In this instance, the Federal Government should not shy away from Federal intervention in the workplace—it will clearly have positive consequences here. As has been the case with transportation, education and environmental protection, the Federal Government cannot surrender jurisdiction to the 50 States—in these cases, an overarching framework, established by the Federal Government, is essential.

Family and medical leave has been a hotly debated issue for at least the past 5 years. Since then interested parties have worked diligently to seek a common ground on this potentially explosive issue. This bill, GAO estimates, will have a compliance cost of about $107 million a year for American businesses. This compares favorably with the annual societal cost of $607 million for lost wages and productivity that results from no national family and medical leave policy. I urge my colleagues to support the compromise and to oppose weakening amendments.

□ 1200

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time pending resolution of amendments to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, may I inquire as to how much time remains?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has 6 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] has 5½ minutes remaining.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes for the purpose of asking a question. I would ask again the cosponsors of the amendment if they can clarify for me the exemption for covered employees in the bill. I am curious about the so-called key employee exemption that the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] has offered and referred to. Under what circumstances would the key employee not be allowed to take leave? I would ask either the gentleman from Tennessee or the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, since this was also part of the original bill, I would ask my colleague to yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

Mr. GRANDY. I yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA].

Mrs. ROUKEMA. The key employee exemption has to do with those top employees without whom, of course, it is obvious that the business cannot continue. For example, if there is a business with one engineer, one draftsman and one person where there would be grievous economic injury to the business, that employer is exempted from the requirements. The employee is identified clearly in the bill. We tried to go through some other formula.

Mr. GRANDY. Let me reclaim my time. I just want to know one thing, because here is where I am unclear. Are we talking about denying that employee leave or are we talking about denying restoration?

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Restoration, we are denying the restoration should the employer learn that he cannot continue the operations of the business without the key employee.

Mr. GRANDY. So unlike the New Jersey law which did deny family leave to an employee who is a salaried employee among the highest 5 percent of employees or seven highest employees, we are talking about here allowing that key employee back into the workplace, is that correct?

Mrs. ROUKEMA. There is no requirement for reinstatement. I think it is very clear in the legislation, and I do not know why the gentleman is obfuscating the issue.

Mr. GRANDY. Allow me to reclaim my time, Madam Chairman. I think the amendment or the provision, I should say, obfuscates the issue because we are saying that the key employee cannot be denied leave, he can just be denied restoration. If he is a key employee, why would we do that? What use is it?

I thought I understood the intent of this, but there are no conditions under which a key employee could be denied leave. So who cares if he is a key employee?

I wonder if this kind of intent is going to wind up causing problems with the implementation of this legislation.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN].

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding time to me, and I rise in strong support of the Family and Medical Leave Act and the bipartisan Gordon-Weldon compromise.

Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Family and Medical Leave Act, and the bipartisan Gordon-Weldon compromise.

I have looked forward to consideration of this legislation on the House floor since the day I first entered this body. Legislation enabling American workers to cope with their own serious medical conditions and with their obligations to their families is long overdue.

Twelve years ago, I authored the California pregnancy disability law. My intention in moving that bill was to recognize that employment policies which provide inadequate or no leave to workers disabled by pregnancy have a disparate impact upon female employees. The object of my bill was to ensure equality of treatment in the workplace by making certain that women do not lose their jobs as a result of loss of time from work due to pregnancy.

My bill accomplished that objective by requiring employers to provide up to 4 months unpaid leave to employees disabled by pregnancy, and to reinstate the returning employee. I was gratified that the U.S. Supreme Court upheld that law in 1987.

But proud as I am, I am convinced that maternity leave, even if it is expanded beyond pregnancy disability to cover care for a newborn child or for a newly adopted child, as the substitute would do, does not suffice.

All workers face the prospect of needing to take time off due to disability or very serious family responsibilities. That is why I have enlisted in the effort to extend to all workers the benefits accorded some workers under California law.

Labor standards have historically evolved in just this fashion. In response to pressing human needs, the States often act first, resulting in a spotty patchwork of State laws which make it particular difficult for companies operating in more than one State to do business. The need for a uniform, Federal law becomes urgent. That is why it becomes essential for us to act: Because the human need is pressing, and because we do not want to leave employees or employers subject to the vagaries of where they happen to work or do business.

I feel compelled to respond to the argument of opponents of this legislation that it would destroy the flexibility needed to permit employers and employees to tailor benefits to their own needs. "Don't mandate benefits" is the slogan.

I can understand the self interest of employers in tailoring employee benefits to suit the needs of employers, but I cannot let employers get away with the assertion that H.R. 770 hobbles the ability of employees to bargain for employee rights.

The fact is that securing family and medical leave is a top priority for American workers. If employers were uniformly extending these rights to workers, this legislation would not be before us today.

I am also irked that the competitiveness argument is being dragged out in the service of employer opposition to H.R. 770. The argument that providing decent employee benefits makes American business less competitive and productive in the world market is a patently bogus excuse. Can it fairly be said that it enhances America's competitive edge when experienced, dedicated employees are compelled to quit or be fired in lieu of human leave policies?

The other industrialized nations have frankly left us in the dust when it comes to establishing sound leave policies, so I find it hard to believe that enactment of H.R. 770 would harm the competitive position of the United States.

H.R. 770 balances the needs of employers with the needs of workers and their families. I urge my colleagues to support the Family and Medical Leave Act and the Gordon-Weldon substitute, and to oppose all weakening substitutes and amendments.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, once again I reserve the balance of my time pending the resolution of the amendments to this amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I was under the impression that the sequence of amendments began with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] and then there was to be a perfecting amendment by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY]. Am I correct?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sees no Member seeking recognition, and unless an amendment made in order as a perfecting amendment is offered when the Chair calls on them, the debate will proceed.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Parliamentary inquiry, Madam Chairman. I need a clarification of the parliamentary situation. I am not quite sure about it. Is the time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] reserved under this agreement?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] has no time. The time right now is that of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] who has 5½ minutes remaining.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, with our 5½ minutes remaining, I will yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] at the conclusion of any amendments that might be introduced.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Then my parliamentary inquiry stated the situtation correctly, that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] has time reserved under the parliamentary procedure following the disposition of amendments, is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN. Unless there is another Member who is seeking recognition on a perfecting amendment, and the Chair does not see another Member, the time must be used.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, then I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON].

Mr. WELDON. I have a parliamentary inquiry, Madam Chairman. Does not the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] have the right to close debate on this amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. WELDON. In that case, then the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has to use his time first.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. GRANDY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I would like to ask one more question regarding the cost of this. One of the changes that I have discerned in this substitute is that it does make provision to include spouses, and I assumed that this was an omission from H.R. 770. There is obviously the ability to go home and care for an ill spouse.

Could either gentleman tell me what the cost of this provision is estimated to add to the cost of the bill, because we have presumed throughout this bill that we were talking about a price tag of roughly between $188 million and $212 million, depending upon how one estimates health care costs, and that has been disputed. But I would just like to know what the cost of spousal illness is, because I think that would probably add costs to the bill, and I would like those few Members who maybe are undecided on this legislation to know what we are adding in this provision.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, the substitute does not change that situation, so it should not cost any more than the original bill.

Mr. GRANDY. I would argue that if we add another class of individuals to be included under this bill there is increased costs, and indeed the GAO in April of this year said that by including spouses under this provision the addition will increase the cost to $330 million annually.

Madam Chairman, in the time I have remaining let me address this substitute, such as it is.

On the approach, H.R. 770 is a Federal mandate. The Weldon-Gordon substitute is the same.

On intermittent leave under H.R. 770, medical time can be taken at any day or hour. There is no requirement to take it consecutively for medical leave. Weldon-Gordon is the same.

There are quadruple damages under both bills.

There is part-time and seasonal coverage under both bills. In other words, an employee with 1,000 hours of work in the previous calendar year will entitle that employee to take 12 weeks of unpaid leave in the subsequent year.

Under both bills health care benefits are required to be continued for the entire leave period.

Under the job guarantee, the employer is required to hold the job open with no incentive or requirement for an employee to return to work.

The serious health condition definition for less-than-serious or life threatening reasons can simply be under the continuing treatment or continuing supervision by a health care provider, and is the same in both bills.

Notice, under both bills, the employee should give notice only to the extent that is reasonable and practicable. That is not a requirement, and they should schedule medical leave so as not to unduly disrupt, whatever, that means.

Madam Chairman, I would only argue that this is the same circus in a different tent. I urge defeat of the substitute and H.R. 770.

Madam Chairman, I have no time remaining, is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa has no time remaining.

The Chair at this time will inquire does the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] intend to offer his amendment?

If not, does the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] intend to offer his amendment?

If not, does the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTLETT] intend to offer his amendment?

If not, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] to close debate.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON].

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and I appreciate his support on this bipartisan compromise.

I was not an original supporter of H.R. 770, and I am also a proud supporter of the free enterprise system in this country. My voting record and my efforts in terms of my campaigns have shown me to be an ardent supporter of the private sector and the free enterprise system. I have made some tough votes in this body on behalf of the free enterprise system, on minimum wage where I stuck with the President, high-risk notification, unlimited liability on the oil pollution bill.

But business sometimes, Madam Chairman, overreacts, much as we saw with the plant closing legislation some 2 years ago, as summarized in an article written in U.S. News & World Report 1 year later, looking at that legislation and the impact that it was going to have on our economy, entitled: "The Disaster That Never Happened."

We were told by business leaders that if we adopted the plant closing legislation, it would be a disaster for our industry and our employees. We were told by members of Congress in this very body that it would create a torrent of litigation and choke off economic growth.

□ 1210

Well, 1 year later, as the business department of the U.S. News & World Report reported in their February issue of this year, none of that happened. As a matter of fact, everything was overstated.

And in the words of U.S. News & World Report, "another example of Washington's knack for turning a molehill-sized issue into a mountain."

I think that is the case in this situation with the Gordon/Weldon compromise. This effort for this legislation has been pushed by its backers as being pro-family. It is being covered by the media as being pro-family. It has been perceived by the voters as being pro-family as determined by poll after poll.

Madam Chairwoman, as the youngest of nine children, married to the middle of seven and the father of five, I say this legislation is pro-family. This particular bill has been called a mandated benefit.

Well, that is just not so. Madam Chairwoman, there is a responsible role for Government to play in setting parameters for the private sector, for business and industry just as we did in support of our President on the minimum wage bill, where 382 of our colleagues, including myself, voted in favor of that legislation, including 135 of my Republican colleagues.

Just as we did in this body on the plant closing bill where 308 of us joined in bipartisan support of that parameter for the private sector; just as we have done for worker safety with our OSHA regulations, and just as we have done for child labor laws.

Yes, Madam Chairman, there is a role for Government to play in setting the parameters for the private sector. To say that this compromise is not in fact a compromise is just pure hogwash. It is a sincere effort to reach a workable agreement.

My business groups back in my district, my Chamber of Commerce representing 2,000 workers, my small-business group representing 5,000 employer-groups says that they can live with this compromise.

Some have argued that without this legislation on a cost basis we are losing $12 billion a year.

Well, I will not make that argument; but let me give you a real example, an example dealing with the care that we need to provide for our aging senior citizen population: I sit on the board of a hospital serving the poorest of the poor in one of the towns in my district. My wife is a nurse, been that for 18 years, and has worked as a hospice nurse.

The cost to provide quality care in the hospital today for an ailing senior citizen is $500 in my district. The cost for that senior citizen to be given loving care at home in a hospice program is $65 a day.

Madam Chairman, that care cannot be provided unless there is a quality care provider at home, a relative who is able to care for that human being.

Why, this bill and this compromise is being supported by so many groups across the broad spectrum of America. Make no mistake about it, this legislation is about promoting and protecting the American family. It is not about management versus labor, it is not about employers versus employees and it is certainly not about the AFL-CIO versus the Chamber of Commerce.

This legislation is about allowing a single mother the chance to take an unpaid leave for up to 12 weeks to care for a sick child; this legislation is about allowing the worker to have time off after first using their paid vacation time to care for a newly adopted child, a sick spouse or a dying parent.

With over 95 percent of American companies exempted, the cost of this is minimal. We need to support the bipartisan compromise.

Madam Chairman, I urge my colleagues to join with us in this effort.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] is recognized for 30 seconds.

Mr. GORDON. Madam Chairman, American families need this bill, and the Gordon-Weldon amendment is our best shot at making it the law of the land. This amendment is for the mother who cannot care for her baby because she does not have enough time off from work, it is for the grandparents who need temporary care from someone who loves them rather than from an institution, for the father who fights to hold his family together while his spouse fights cancer.

Madam Chairman, American families deserve this bipartisan bill.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Madam Chairman, let me begin by congratulating Congressman CLAY, Congresswoman ROUKEMA, our other friends on the Education and Labor Committee, Congresswoman SCHROEDER, Congressman WELDON, and Congressman GORDON for bringing this legislation to the point of passage today.

I believe this bill represents Congress and public service at its best, because it recognizes the real life circumstances of the working Americans who make this country strong.

There are no higher purposes in public service than standing for a competitive economy and a just society.

This spring, we in Congress have stood for those values by passing child care legislation, a budget that invests in the future, and by bringing forward an Americans with Disabilities Act and, this week, a family and medical leave bill.

This is a proud moment for the House. Our debate today is not between Republicans and Democrats, because this legislation has support on both sides of the aisle.

Our debate today is not between liberals and conservatives, because conscientious Members who hold widely disparate views on many issues which divide us are standing together for this bill. Today, this debate is between old thinking and new thinking about our economy.

The old thinking says to families in the work force. You must choose between a newborn baby and your job.

You must choose between a sick child or a sick parent and your career.

You must choose between your obligations as a family member and a bread winner.

And we say today: Those choices are immoral, antifamily, and unacceptable in a society that needs the contributions of every talented worker, regardless of his family's circumstances.

There are progressive businessmen and businesswomen in this country who understand that old thinking represents a false choice.

I was in Kansas City the other day, and business leaders there told me the following. If Congress wants this country to be competitive, it is not enough to get the budget right.

It is not enough to get the cost of capital down. It is not enough to enforce the rules of international trade. You must also understand the demographics and dynamics of the work force.

If we do not strengthen our families and help our kids, this country is going to go down the tubes.

My friends, this is what this legislation is all about. It is good for our families and it is good for business.

Family and medical leave is a matter of policy and law in the nations against which we must compete economically, and we need this legislation adopted today.

Let me conclude by urging the administration to hear the voices of America's families over the din of the special interests.

It is not enough to support rhetorically the need for a kinder, gentler society, if you are unwilling to back up campaign poetry with the prose of governing.

Family and medical leave, as with child care and disabilities legislation, will make America stronger and better. To stand with working families, we urge adoption of this bill.

Mr. LEWIS of Florida. Madam Chairman, the Family and Medical Leave Act, H.R. 770, though well-intended, is a prime example of congressional interference in an area that is better handled by the private sector. Everyone agrees that family and medical leave is a desirable employee benefit. In fact, most employers provide such leave in order to recruit and retain good employees.

However, it is counterproductive for Congress to step in and apply one set of leave benefits for the entire country. Leave is just one of a package of benefits that employers and employees negotiate. A congressional mandate on leave, or any other employee benefit, deprives businesses and workers latitude in these negotiations. Other, more desirable benefits would have to be sacrificed in order to comply with a congressional mandate on one specific benefit. In short, Congress has no business interfering with benefit arrangements worked out in the private sector.

And H.R. 770 is not a simple bill; it would hamstring the private sector with a host of new regulations and requirements. In a time when there is much concern about American competitiveness in world markets, we do not need to saddle our businesses with new, complicated, and ultimately costly Federal regulations. I favor family and medical leave, but I do not favor a one-size-fits-all Federal leave policy. H.R. 770 is a shortsighted proposal.

Mrs. SAIKI. Madam Chairman, I am speaking today in favor of the Gordon-Weldon bipartisan compromise to the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1990, H.R. 770.

When I look around this Chamber, I do not see the Federal Government, I see mothers and fathers and sons and daughters. Further, we all are employers. We have staffs both here and at home and many of us are also private businesswomen and men. With those kind of qualifications no one can claim that we do not have the knowledge and the justification to be involved in this issue.

As a former working mother of five children, I know what it is like to be denied the opportunity to stay at home with a sick child. After experiencing the agony of being made to choose between a family obligation and work commitment, I cannot imagine not supporting this measure.

We have all heard the data on the changing demographics of the workplace along with the growing economic pressures that require two paychecks for families to survive. We have heard the success stories from the businesses and the States which have some form of medical and family leave policy in place. And, we have heard the horror stories of those who have lost their jobs or placed the welfare of their families at risk because they worked for employers who have no minimum standards for emergency family leave.

Now it is time, Madam Chairman, to look to ourselves and ask what kind of support, what kind of policy, we would want from an employer if family circumstances required a prolonged absence from work. I believe that most of us would want the peace of mind that an established leave policy would give us.

I ask my colleagues to vote in favor of the Gordon-Weldon substitute. It is the right answer for the American family and it is the right answer for American business. With the passage of this legislation American business will continue to prosper because it will be run by loyal, experienced, and hard working individuals. And with passage, the American family will be given a lifeline to survival.

Mr. MFUME. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of the right of all Americans to have the benefit of enjoying a career and raising a family. America's workers should not have to choose between caring for their families and losing their jobs. Rather they should be secure in the knowledge that no values are more important to America than family and work.

Increasingly more women with children of preschool age are entering the work force, often to contribute to household income. In fact, 57 percent of married mothers with children under 6 years old, are in the work force. And one of every two single mothers with preschool aged children works outside the home.

Madam Chairman, more than 47 percent of America's workers are employed by businesses with 50 employees or less, about 5 percent of all businesses in the United States. Unfortunately, many of these workers do not have the benefit of a parental leave policy; and they certainly are not afforded any type of job security after a medically-related leave of absence. We all lose when America's workers have no alternatives in dealing with family matters and cannot return to their jobs.

Madam Chairman, I support a national family and medical leave policy because America's working families are well worth it. Our young couples starting new families deserve to spend time with their newly born or adopted child; that experience cannot be defined in terms of a profit margin or a bottom line. Certainly they are worth it.

And our more mature, compassionate workers caring for aged parents; for them it is often a distressing experience to choose between caring for their own children or caring for their parents who now need them. Even for those who may be able to afford the ever-increasing cost of nursing home care or in-home health care, compassion is far and away, priceless.

A family and medical leave policy is as American as free enterprise. Such a national policy is good for America's families, and for America's businesses. There is no need for this divergence to continue. I urge my colleagues to support the measure and to support America.

Mr. SCHIFF. Madam Chairman, today I regretfully cast a "no" vote on the Family and Medical Leave Act. I say regretfully because I understand and appreciate the intent of this bill. I can personally identify with the American families' difficulties in meeting both their work and family responsibilities. I grew up in a family where both mother and father worked; now my wife and I are both part of the ever growing work force, while raising two young children.

However, because a bill has a good intent, does not mean it will create a good or necessary law. It is my understanding that most employers of more than 50 employees in this country already provide leave to their employees in time of family emergency. These policies often meet or exceed the proposal here today. I know that while holding the position of District Attorney of Bernalillo County for 8 years, I established a policy of maternity and paternity and emergency leave which provided much better benefits, including paid leave, to my staff members than we would enact here. Most employers realize that providing special leave is both humane and makes good business sense.

In the cases of those few businesses employing over 50 people who really do not provide unpaid leave, their employees might still prefer to choose other benefits, such as better health insurance, over unpaid leave, which we would be imposing by enacting this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device and there were—ayes 259, noes 157, not voting 17, as follows;

[Roll No. 105]

AYES—259

Ackerman	Foglietta	McGrath
Akaka	Ford (MI)	McHugh
Alexander	Ford (TN)	McMillen (MD)
Anderson	Frank	McNulty
Andrews	Frost	Mfume
Annunzio	Gaydos	Miller (CA)
Anthony	Gejdenson	Miller (WA)
Applegate	Gephardt	Mineta
Aspin	Gibbons	Moakley
Atkins	Gillmor	Molinari
AuCoin	Gilman	Mollohan
Bates	Gonzalez	Moody
Bellenson	Gordon	Morella
Bennett	Gray	Morrison (CT)
Bereuter	Green	Morrison (WA)
Berman	Guarini	Mrazek
Bevill	Hall (OH)	Murphy
Bilbray	Hamilton	Murtha
Bilirakis	Harris	Nagle
Boehlert	Hatcher	Natcher
Boggs	Hawkins	Neal (MA)
Bonior	Hayes (IL)	Nielson
Borski	Hayes (LA)	Nowak
Bosco	Hefner	Oakar
Boucher	Hertel	Oberstar
Boxer	Hoagland	Obey
Brennan	Hochbrueckner	Olin
Brooks	Horton	Ortiz
Browder	Hoyer	Owens (NY)
Brown (CA)	Hughes	Pallone
Bruce	Hyde	Panetta
Bryant	Jacobs	Pashayan
Bustamante	Jenkins	Payne (NJ)
Cardin	Johnson (CT)	Pease
Carper	Johnson (SD)	Pelosi
Carr	Johnston	Perkins
Chapman	Jones (GA)	Poshard
Clay	Jones (NC)	Price
Clement	Jontz	Rahall
Coleman (TX)	Kanjorski	Rangel
Collins	Kaptur	Ravenel
Condit	Kastenmeier	Regula
Conte	Kennedy	Richardson
Conyers	Kennelly	Rinaldo
Costello	Kildee	Ritter
Coughlin	Kleczka	Roe
Coyne	Kolter	Ros-Lehtinen
Crockett	Kostmayer	Rose
Davis	LaFalce	Roukema
de la Garza	Lancaster	Rowland (CT)
DeFazio	Lantos	Roybal
Dellums	Lehman (CA)	Russo
DeWine	Lehman (FL)	Sabo
Dicks	Levin (MI)	Saiki
Dingell	Levine (CA)	Sangmeister
Dixon	Lewis (GA)	Savage
Dorgan (ND)	Lipinski	Sawyer
Downey	Long	Scheuer
Durbin	Lowey (NY)	Schiff
Dwyer	Luken, Thomas	Schneider
Dymally	Machtley	Schroeder
Dyson	Madigan	Schumer
Early	Manton	Serrano
Eckart	Markey	Sharp
Edwards (CA)	Martin (IL)	Shays
English	Martin (NY)	Sikorski
Erdreich	Martinez	Sisisky
Espy	Matsui	Skaggs
Evans	Mavroules	Slaughter (NY)
Fascell	Mazzoli	Smith (FL)
Fazio	McCloskey	Smith (IA)
Feighan	McCurdy	Smith (NE)
Fish	McDade	Smith (NJ)
Flake	McDermott	Smith (TX)
Smith (VT)	Torres	Weldon
Snowe	Torricelli	Wheat
Solarz	Towns	Whitten
Solomon	Traficant	Williams
Spence	Traxler	Wise
Spratt	Unsoeld	Wolpe
Staggers	Vento	Wyden
Stark	Visclosky	Yates
Stokes	Volkmer	Yatron
Studds	Walgren	Young (AK)
Synar	Washington	Young (FL)
Tauzin	Waxman
Taylor	Weiss

NOES—157

Archer	Hammerschmidt	Porter
Armey	Hancock	Pursell
Baker	Hansen	Quillen
Ballenger	Hastert	Ray
Barnard	Hefley	Rhodes
Bartlett	Henry	Ridge
Barton	Herger	Roberts
Bateman	Hiler	Rogers
Bliley	Holloway	Rohrabacher
Broomfield	Hopkins	Roth
Brown (CO)	Houghton	Rowland (GA)
Buechner	Hubbard	Sarpalius
Bunning	Huckaby	Saxton
Burton	Hunter	Schaefer
Byron	Hutto	Schuette
Callahan	Inhofe	Schulze
Campbell (CA)	Ireland	Sensenbrenner
Campbell (CO)	James	Shaw
Chandler	Kasich	Shumway
Clarke	Kolbe	Shuster
Clinger	Kyl	Skeen
Coleman (MO)	Lagomarsino	Skelton
Combest	Leach (IA)	Slattery
Cooper	Leath (TX)	Slaughter (VA)
Courter	Lent	Smith, Denny (OR)
Cox	Lewis (FL)	Smith, Robert (NH)
Craig	Lightfoot	Smith, Robert (OR)
Crane	Livingston	Stallings
Dannemeyer	Lowery (CA)	Stangeland
Darden	Lukens, Donald	Stearns
DeLay	Marlenee	Stenholm
Derrick	McCandless	Stump
Dickinson	McCollum	Sundquist
Donnelly	McCrery	Tallon
Dornan (CA)	McEwen	Tanner
Douglas	McMillan (NC)	Tauke
Dreier	Meyers	Thomas (CA)
Duncan	Michel	Thomas (GA)
Fawell	Miller (OH)	Thomas (WY)
Fields	Montgomery	Upton
Frenzel	Moorhead	Valentine
Gallegly	Myers	Vander Jagt
Gallo	Neal (NC)	Vucanovich
Gekas	Oxley	Walker
Geren	Packard	Walsh
Gingrich	Parker	Weber
Glickman	Parris	Whittaker
Goodling	Patterson	Wolf
Goss	Paxon	Wylie
Gradison	Payne (VA)
Grandy	Penny
Grant	Petri
Gunderson	Pickett
Hall (TX)	Pickle

NOT VOTING—17

Bentley	Laughlin	Rostenkowski
Coble	Lewis (CA)	Swift
Edwards (OK)	Lloyd	Udall
Emerson	Nelson	Watkins
Engel	Owens (UT)	Wilson
Flippo	Robinson

□ 1236

The CLerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Nelson of Florida for, with Mr. Lewis of California against.

Messrs. BARTLETT, MOORHEAD, and JAMES changed their vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. MADIGAN changed his vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Madam Chairman, during the vote on the Gordon substitute to the bill H.R. 770 earlier today, rollcall No. 105, I was not recorded.

I was attending a meeting on the Senate side of the Capitol with my colleague from the Senate, Mr. HATCH, and, for reasons not clear, my beeper did not sound to alert me to the vote.

Had I been present I would have voted "aye".

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text, as amended.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the committee rises.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the Chair, Mrs. KENNELLY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 770) to entitle employees to family leave in certain cases involving a birth, an adoption, or a serious health condition and to temporary medical leave in certain cases involving a serious health condition, with adequate protection of the employees' employment and benefit rights, and to establish a commission to study ways of providing salary replacement for employees who take any such leave, pursuant to House Resolution 388, reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text?

If not, the question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text as amended.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text as amended, was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. GRANDY

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] the designee of the Republican leader of the House?

Mr. GRANDY. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. GRANDY. I am, Mr. Speaker, in its present form.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GRANDY moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 770, to the Committee on Education and Labor with instructions to report the same forthwith to the House with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

TITLE I—COMMISSION ON LEAVE

SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the Commission on Leave (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Commission").

SEC. 102. DUTIES.

The Commission shall—

(1) conduct a comprehensive study of—

(A) existing and proposed policies and State and local laws relating to leave,

(B) the potential costs, benefits, and impact on productivity of such policies on businesses which employ fewer than 50 employees, and

(2) within 2 years after the date on which the Commission first meets, submit a report to the Congress, which may include legislative recommendations concerning coverage of businesses which employ fewer than 50 employees.

SEC. 103. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) COMPOSITION.—The Commission shall be composed of 12 voting members and 2 ex-officio members appointed not more than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act as follows:

(1) One Senator shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate, and one Senator shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate.

(2) One member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and one Member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(3)(A) Two members each shall be appointed by—

(i) The Speaker of the House of Representatives,

(ii) the majority leader of the Senate,

(iii) the minority leader of the House of Representatives, and

(iv) the minority leader of the Senate.

(B) Such members shall be appointed by virtue of demonstrated expertise in relevant family, temporary disability, and labor-management issues and shall include representatives of small business.

(4) The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Labor shall serve on the Commission as nonvoting ex-officio members.

(b) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(c) CHAIRPERSON AND VICE CHAIRPERSON.—The Commission shall elect a chairperson and a vice chairperson from among its members.

(d) QUORUM.—Eight members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for all purposes, except that a lesser number may constitute a quorum for the purpose of holding hearings.

SEC. 104. COMPENSATION.

(a) PAY.—Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation.

(b) TRAVEL EXPENSE.—Members of the Commission shall be allowed reasonable travel expenses, including a per diem allowance, in accordance with section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, when performing duties of the Commission.

SEC. 105. POWERS.

(a) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall first meet not more than 30 days after the date on which members are appointed, and the Commission shall meet thereafter upon the call of the chairperson or a majority of the members.

(b) HEARINGS AND SESSIONS.—The Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses appearing before it.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this Act. Upon the request of the chairperson or vice chairperson of the Commission, the head of such agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(d) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—The Commission may appoint an Executive Director from the personnel of any Federal agency to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties.

(e) USE OF FACILITIES AND SERVICES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may make available to the Commission any of the facilities and services of such agency.

(f) PERSONNEL FROM OTHER AGENCIES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may detail any of the personnel of such agency to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties.

SEC. 106. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall terminate 30 days after the date of the submission of its report to the Congress.

TITLE II—FAMILY LEAVE FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SEC. 201. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title:

(1) The terms "commerce" and "industry or activity affecting commerce" mean any activity, business, or industry in commerce or in which a labor dispute would hinder or obstruct commerce or the free flow of commerce, and include "commerce" and any activity or industry "affecting commerce" within the meaning of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947 (29 U.S.C. 141 et seq.).

(2) The terms "employ" and "State" have the meanings given such terms in sections 3(g) and 3(c), respectively, of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(g), 203(a), 203(c)).

(3) The terms "eligible employee" means any employee as defined in section 3(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(e)) who is in an employment position in the House of Representatives.

(4) The term "employer" means any employing authority of the House of Representatives.

(5) The term "employment benefits" means all benefits provided or made available to employees by an employer, and include group life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, sick leave, annual leave, educational benefits, and pensions, regardless of whether such benefits are provided by a policy or practice of an employer or through an employee benefit plan as defined in section 3(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1002(1)).

(6) The term "health care provider" means a doctor of medicine or osteopathy legally authorized to practice medicine and surgery by the State in which the doctor performs such function or action.

(7) The term "reduced leave schedule" means leave scheduled for fewer than an employee's usual number of hours per workweek or hours per workday.

(8) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Labor.

(9) The term "serious health condition" means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental conditions which involves—

(A) inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential health care facility, or

(B) continuing treatment or continuing supervision by a health care provider.

(10) The term "son or daughter" means a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, a legal ward, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis, who is—

(A) under 18 years of age, or

(B) 18 years of age or older and incapable of self-care because of mental or physical disability.

(11) The term "parent" means the biological parent of the child or an individual who stood in loco parentis to a child when the child was a son or daughter.

SEC. 202. LEAVE REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) an eligible employee shall be entitled, subject to section 203, to 12 workweeks of leave during any 12-month period—

(A) because of the birth of a son or daughter of the employee;

(B) because of the placement of a son or daughter with the employee for adoption or foster care;

(C) in order to care for the employee's son, daughter, spouse, or parent who has a serious health condition; or

(D) because of a serious health condition which makes the employee unable to perform the functions of such employee's position.

(2)(A) The entitlement to leave under paragraphs (1)(A) and (1)(B) for a birth or placement of a son or daughter shall expire at the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of such birth or placement. If one parent of a son or daughter takes leave under paragraph (1)(A), the other parent of such son or daughter may not take leave under such paragraph at the same time.

(B) Leave under paragraph (1)(A) or (1)(B) may not be taken by an employee intermittently unless the employee and the employee's employer agree otherwise. Leave under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) may be taken intermittently when medically necessary, subject to subsection (e).

(b) REDUCED LEAVE.—Upon agreement between the employer and the employee, leave under subsection (a) may be taken on a reduced leave schedule. Such reduced leave schedule shall not result in a reduction in the total amount of leave to which the employee is entitled.

(c) UNPAID LEAVE PERMITTED.—Leave under subsection (a) may consist of unpaid leave, except as provided in subsection (d).

(d) RELATIONSHIP TO PAID LEAVE.—(1)(A) An eligible employee may elect, or an employer may require the employee, to substitute for leave under paragraph (1)(A), (1)(B), or (1)(C) of subsection (a) any of the employee's paid vacation leave, personal leave, or family leave for any part of the 12-week period of such leave under such paragraph.

(B) An eligible employee or employer may elect, or an employer may require the employee, to substitute for leave under paragraph (1)(D) of subsection (a) any of the employee's paid vacation leave, personal leave, or medical or sick leave for any part of the 12-week period of such leave under such paragraph, except that nothing in this Act shall require an employer to provide paid sick leave or paid medical leave in any situation in which such employer would not normally provide any such paid leave.

(2) If an eligible employee is entitled to leave under subsection (a), if under paragraph (1) the employee elects to substitute or is required by the employee's employer to substitute paid leave for such leave, and if such paid leave is less than the 12 weeks leave under subsection (a), the employee's employer shall provide the employee such additional weeks of leave as may be necessary to attain such 12 weeks.

(e) FORESEEABLE LEAVE.—(1) In any case in which the necessity for leave under paragraph (1)(A) or (1)(B) of subsection (a) is foreseeable based on an expected birth or adoption, the eligible employee shall provide the employer with prior notice of such expected birth or adoption in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

(2) In any case in which the necessity for leave under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) of subsection (a) is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee—

(A) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employer, subject to the approval of the employee's health care provider or the health care provider of the employee's son, daughter, or parent; and

(B) shall provide the employer with prior notice of the treatment or supervision in a manner which is reasonable and practicable.

(f) SPOUSES EMPLOYED BY THE SAME EMPLOYER.—In any case in which a husband and wife entitled to leave under subsection (a) are employed by the same employer, the aggregate number of workweeks of leave to which both may be entitled may be limited to 12 workweeks during any 12-month period, if such leave is taken—

(1) under subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(1); or

(2) to care for a sick parent under subparagraph (C) of such subsection.

SEC. 203. CERTIFICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An employer may require that a claim for leave under section 202(a)(1)(C) or 202(a)(1)(D) be supported by certification issued by the health care provider of the eligible employee or of the employee's son, daughter, spouse, or parent, whichever is appropriate. The employee shall provide a copy of such certification to the employer.

(b) SUFFICIENT CERTIFICATION.—Such certification shall be sufficient if it states—

(1) the date on which the serious health condition commenced,

(2) the probable duration of the condition;

(3) the appropriate medical facts within the provider's knowledge regarding the condition; and

(4)(A) for purposes of leave under section 202(a)(1)(C), an estimate of the amount of time that the eligible employee is needed to care for the son, daughter, spouse, or parent; and

(B) for purposes of leave under section 202(a)(1)(D), a statement that the employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

(c) EXPLANATION OF INABILITY TO PERFORM JOB FUNCTIONS.—The employer may request that, for purposes of section 204(d), certification under subsection (a) that is issued in any case involving leave under section 202(a)(1)(D) include an explanation of the extent to which the eligible employee is unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

(d) SECOND OPINION.—(1) In any case in which the employer has reason to doubt the validity of the certification provided under subsection (a) for leave under paragraph (1)(C) or (1)(D) of section 202(a), the employer may require, at its own expense, that the eligible employee obtain the opinion of a second health care provider designated or approved by the employer concerning any information certified under subsection (a) for such leave.

(2) Any health care provider designated or approved under paragraph (1) may not be employed on a regular basis by the employer.

(e) RESOLUTION OF CONFLICTING OPINIONS.—In any case in which the second opinion described in subsection (d) differs from the original certification provided under subsection (a), the employer may require, at its own expense, that the employee obtain the opinion of a third health care provider designated or approved jointly by the employer and the employee concerning the information certified under subsection (a). The opinion of the third health care provider concerning the information certified under subsection (a) shall be considered to be final and shall be binding on the employer and the employee.

(f) SUBSEQUENT RECERTIFICATION.—The employer may require that the eligible employee obtain subsequent recertification on a reasonable basis.

SEC. 204. EMPLOYMENT AND BENEFITS PROTECTION.

(a) RESTORATION TO POSITION.—(1) Any eligible employee who takes leave under section 202 for its intended purpose shall be entitled, upon return from such leave—

(A) to be restored by the employer to the position of employment held by the employee when the leave commenced; or

(B) to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment.

(2) The taking of leave under section 202 shall not result in the loss of any employment benefit earned before the date on which the leave commenced.

(3) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to entitle any restored employee to—

(A) the accrual of any seniority or employment benefits during any period of leave; or

(B) any right, benefit, or position of employment other than any right, benefit, or position to which the employee would have been entitled had the employee not taken the leave.

(4) As a condition to restoration under paragraph (1), the employer may have a policy that requires each employee to receive certification from the employee's health care provider that the employee is able to resume work, except that nothing in this paragraph shall supersede a valid State or local law or a collective bargaining agreement that governs the return to work of employees taking leave under section 202(a)(1)(D).

(b) MAINTENANCE OF HEALTH BENEFITS.—During any period an eligible employee takes leave under section 202, the employer shall maintain coverage under any group health plan (as defined in section 162(i)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) for the duration of such leave at the level and under the conditions coverage would have been provided if the employee had continued in employment continuously from the date the employee commenced the leave until the date the employee is restored under subsection (a).

(c) NO BAR TO AGREEMENT CONCERNING ALTERNATIVE EMPLOYMENT.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to prohibit an employer and an eligible employee from mutually agreeing to alternative employment for the employee throughout the period during which the employee would be entitled to leave under section 202. Any such period of alternative employment shall not cause a reduction in the period of temporary leave to which the employee is entitled under section 202(a)(1)(D).

SEC. 205. PROHIBITED ACTS.

(a) INTERFERENCE WITH RIGHTS.—(1) It shall be unlawful for any employer to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of or the attempt to exercise, any right provided under this title.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any employer to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual for opposing any practice made unlawful by this title.

(b) INTERFERENCE WITH PROCEEDINGS OR INQUIRIES.—It shall be unlawful for any person to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual because such individual—

(1) has filed any charge, or has instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding, under or related to this title;

(2) has given, or is about to give, any information in connection with any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title; or

(3) has testified, or is about to testify in any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title.

SEC. 206. ADMINISTRATION.

In the administration of this title, the remedies and procedures under the Fair Employment Practices Resolution shall be applied. As used in this section, the term "Fair Employment Practices Resolution" means House Resolution 558, One Hundredth Congress, agreed to October 3, 1988, as continued in effect by House Resolution 15, One Hundred and First Congress, agreed to January 3, 1989.

Mr. GRANDY (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his motion to recommit.

□ 1240

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, this motion to recommit makes two contributions, I hope, to this debate, offers another alternative to the Weldon-Gordon substitute which this body just passed.

I ask for the following two provisions in this motion to recommit:

One, to establish a commission to conduct a comprehensive study on the effects of family and medical leave mandates for businesses with less than 50 employees. In other words, basically title III, Mr. Speaker, that is contained in the present legislation, but I ask that the commission comes before the implementation of the legislation in the private sector, and I ask that because my purpose in offering this commission today is to allow Members to have a data base on which to base their decision as to whether or not at some point we want to consider another kind of benefit mandate in the workplace. Today we consider unpaid benefits. Tomorrow we may be considering paid benefits. Why not put that study out there and see if we need to do both at once?

All I ask is that we do not ask the private sector to take that risk first before we have a study such as the one in the original legislation and in the substitute.

Second, Mr. Speaker, I would ask that, if we want a pilot project as to whether or not this legislation will work, and I would like to acknowledge the contribution of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. PARKER] whose idea it is that I am incorporating in this motion to recommit, and this would allow the House of Representatives to serve as a pilot program for the implementation of mandatory family and medical leave, a 2-year pilot program, roughly the length of the commission, to allow the congressional workplace to be the laboratory of experimentations since this type of mandate could have significant ramifications on all the small businesses across this country.

Why not for a change, Mr. Speaker, allow us to perform the experiment on ourselves as opposed to the American people? That is all I ask. In 2 years time we may return to this body with a broad-based consensus to vote for another kind of mandate entirely.

Mr. Speaker, I would just say that in today's New York Times, in an editorial that opposes the legislation that we just passed in committee, they acknowledge that over the last 25 years the proportion of women who worked before the birth of their first child has risen by 25 percent, but employers have responded, and the percentage of pregnant women——

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, just let me say before I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTLETT], my friend, that I am trying in this particular motion to recommit to offer suggestions and possible solutions proposed by my Democratic colleagues.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR] said, "Let's get a better data base," and I hope that this commission will provide that.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. PARKER] said, "Let's try it out on the House first."

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRANDY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, is the essence of the motion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] to apply this to Congress first to find out how it works before we apply it to the rest of the country?

Mr. GRANDY. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, crazy as it sounds, that is the idea. Make us the guinea pig for a change, conduct the study and then draw our conclusions 2 years hence.

Mr. Speaker, with that I offer this motion to recommit and hope that the House Members on both sides of the aisle who are uncomfortable with the substitute that we have just passed, but want to vote for something, will consider this alternative and consider the chance to go back to their constituents and say, "This time I will try it first and then tell you whether it works or not."

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. Does any Member seek recognition in opposition to the motion?

Mr. GORDON. Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] for 5 minutes in opposition to the motion to recommit.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRANDY] well knows, we have discussed this issue for 5 years, and we have debated it fully for the last 2 days. His motion is nothing more than an effort to gut the matter. The House has already spoken with overwhelming victory.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORDON. I yield the balance of my time to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA].

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, this simply guts the bill. The membership should know that there is a provision for a commission study in the bill already.

Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, "If you gut this bill, you're really saying, if you're pregnant, caring for a terminally ill child or a terminally ill parent, go find another job."

Mr. Speaker, that is not what this Congress wants to say to the American people today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WELDON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORDON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WELDON. Mr. Speaker, let us look at this for what it is. It is a motion to gut the entire process that we just went through, and what really upsets me the most is there were some legitimate concerns that were to be addressed by some amendments that were made in order that a number of people in this body would have supported. We were not given that opportunity to vote on those amendments. This is an attempt to give these Members a chance to impact this legislation. Let us look at this for what it is.

Mr. Speaker, this is simple a motion to undo what we have done. I resent it, and I hope my colleagues will vote against it.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 155, noes 264, not voting 14, as follows:

[Roll No. 106]

AYES—155

Archer	Gradison	Miller (OH)
Armey	Grandy	Moorhead
Baker	Grant	Myers
Ballenger	Gunderson	Nagle
Barnard	Hall (TX)	Neal (NC)
Bartlett	Hammerschmidt	Olin
Barton	Hancock	Oxley
Bateman	Hansen	Packard
Bereuter	Harris	Parker
Bevill	Hastert	Parris
Billirakis	Hayes (LA)	Pashayan
Bliley	Hefley	Paxon
Broomfield	Henry	Penny
Brown (CO)	Herger	Petri
Buechner	Hiler	Porter
Bunning	Holloway	Pursell
Callahan	Hopkins	Quillen
Carr	Houghton	Rhodes
Chandler	Hubbard	Ridge
Clarke	Huckaby	Ritter
Coble	Inhofe	Roberts
Coleman (MO)	Ireland	Rogers
Combest	James	Rohrabacher
Cooper	Jones (NC)	Roth
Courter	Kasich	Sarpalius
Cox	Kolbe	Saxton
Craig	Kyl	Schaefer
Crane	Lagomarsino	Schiff
Dannemeyer	Lancaster	Schuette
DeLay	Leach (IA)	Schulze
Derrick	Lent	Sensenbrenner
Dickinson	Lewis (FL)	Shaw
Dornan (CA)	Lightfoot	Shumway
Douglas	Livingston	Shuster
Dreier	Lloyd	Skeen
Duncan	Lowery (CA)	Slaughter (VA)
Edwards (OK)	Lukens, Donald	Smith, Denny (OR)
Fawell	Madigan	Smith, Robert (NH)
Fields	Marlenee	Smith, Robert (OR)
Frenzel	McCandless	Spence
Gallo	McCollum	Stallings
Gekas	McCrery	Stangeland
Gillmor	McEwen	Stearns
Gingrich	McMillan (NC)	Stump
Goodling	Meyers	Sundquist
Goss	Michel	Tallon
		Tanner
		Tauke
		Tauzin
		Taylor
		Thomas (CA)
		Thomas (WY)
		Upton
		Valentine
		Vander Jagt
		Vucanovich
		Walker
		Weber
		Whittaker
		Wolf
		Wylie
		Young (AK)
		Young (FL)

NOES—264

Ackerman	Gonzalez	Owens (UT)
Akaka	Gordon	Pallone
Alexander	Gray	Panetta
Anderson	Green	Patterson
Andrews	Guarini	Payne (NJ)
Annunzio	Hall (OH)	Payne (VA)
Anthony	Hamilton	Pease
Applegate	Hatcher	Pelosi
Aspin	Hawkins	Perkins
Atkins	Hayes (IL)	Pickett
AuCoin	Hefner	Pickle
Bates	Hertel	Poshard
Beilenson	Hoagland	Price
Bennett	Hochbrueckner	Rahall
Berman	Horton	Rangel
Bilbray	Hoyer	Ravenel
Boehlert	Hughes	Ray
Boggs	Hutto	Regula
Bonior	Hyde	Richardson
Borski	Jacobs	Rinaldo
Bosco	Jenkins	Roe
Boucher	Johnson (CT)	Ros-Lehtinen
Boxer	Johnson (SD)	Rose
Brennan	Johnston	Roukema
Brooks	Jones (GA)	Rowland (CT)
Browder	Jontz	Rowland (GA)
Bruce	Kanjorski	Roybal
Bryant	Kaptur	Russo
Bustamante	Kastenmeier	Sabo
Byron	Kennedy	Saiki
Campbell (CA)	Kennelly	Sangmeister
Campbell (CO)	Kildee	Savage
Cardin	Kleczka	Sawyer
Carper	Kolter	Scheuer
Chapman	Kostmayer	Schneider
Clay	LaFalce	Schroeder
Clement	Lantos	Schumer
Clinger	Leath (TX)	Serrano
Coleman (TX)	Lehman (CA)	Sharp
Collins	Lehman (FL)	Shays
Condit	Levin (MI)	Sikorski
Conte	Levine (CA)	Sisisky
Conyers	Lewis (GA)	Skaggs
Costello	Lipinski	Skelton
Coughlin	Long	Slattery
Coyne	Lowey (NY)	Slaughter (NY)
Crockett	Luken, Thomas	Smith (FL)
Darden	Machtley	Smith (IA)
Davis	Manton	Smith (NE)
de la Garza	Markey	Smith (NJ)
DeFazio	Martin (IL)	Smith (TX)
Dellums	Martin (NY)	Smith (VT)
DeWine	Martinez	Snowe
Dicks	Matsui	Solarz
Dingell	Mavroules	Spratt
Dixon	Mazzoli	Staggers
Donnelly	McCloskey	Stark
Dorgan (ND)	McCurdy	Stenholm
Downey	McDade	Stokes
Durbin	McDermott	Studds
Dwyer	McGrath	Swift
Dymally	McHugh	Synar
Dyson	McMillen (MD)	Thomas (GA)
Early	McNulty	Torres
Eckart	Mfume	Torricelli
Edwards (CA)	Miller (CA)	Towns
Engel	Miller (WA)	Traficant
English	Mineta	Traxler
Erdreich	Moakley	Udall
Espy	Molinari	Unsoeld
Evans	Mollohan	Vento
Fascell	Montgomery	Visclosky
Fazio	Moody	Volkmer
Feighan	Morella	Walgren
Fish	Morrison (CT)	Walsh
Flake	Morrison (WA)	Washington
Foglietta	Mrazek	Waxman
Ford (MI)	Murphy	Weiss
Ford (TN)	Murtha	Weldon
Frank	Natcher	Wheat
Frost	Neal (MA)	Whitten
Gaydos	Nielson	Williams
Gejdenson	Nowak	Wilson
Gephardt	Oakar	Wise
Geren	Oberstar	Wolpe
Gibbons	Obey	Wyden
Gilman	Ortiz	Yates
Glickman	Owens (NY)	Yatron

NOT VOTING—14

Bentley	Gallegly	Robinson
Brown (CA)	Hunter	Rostenkowski
Burton	Laughlin	Solomon
Emerson	Lewis (CA)	Watkins
Flippo	Nelson

□ 1307

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Lewis of California for, with Mr. Nelson of Florida against.

Mr. MADIGAN changed his vote from "no" to "aye."

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. GRANDY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 237, noes 187, not voting 9, as follows:

[Roll No. 107]

AYES—237

Ackerman	Durbin	Kennelly
Akaka	Dwyer	Kildee
Alexander	Dymally	Kleczka
Anderson	Dyson	Kolter
Andrews	Early	Kostmayer
Annunzio	Eckart	Lantos
Anthony	Edwards (CA)	Lehman (CA)
Applegate	Engel	Lehman (FL)
Atkins	English	Levin (MI)
AuCoin	Erdreich	Levine (CA)
Bates	Espy	Lewis (GA)
Beilenson	Evans	Lipinski
Bennett	Fascell	Long
Berman	Fazio	Lowey (NY)
Bilbray	Feighan	Luken, Thomas
Boehlert	Fish	Machtley
Boggs	Flake	Manton
Bonior	Foglietta	Markey
Borski	Ford (MI)	Martin (IL)
Bosco	Ford (TN)	Martin (NY)
Boucher	Frank	Martinez
Boxer	Frost	Matsui
Brennan	Gaydos	Mavroules
Brooks	Gejdenson	Mazzoli
Brown (CA)	Gephardt	McCloskey
Bruce	Gibbons	McCurdy
Bryant	Gillmor	McDade
Bustamante	Gilman	McDermott
Campbell (CA)	Gonzalez	McGrath
Cardin	Gordon	McHugh
Carper	Gray	McMillen (MD)
Chapman	Green	McNulty
Clay	Guarini	Mfume
Clement	Hall (OH)	Miller (CA)
Coleman (TX)	Hawkins	Miller (WA)
Collins	Hayes (IL)	Mineta
Condit	Hertel	Moakley
Conte	Hochbrueckner	Molinari
Conyers	Horton	Mollohan
Costello	Hoyer	Moody
Coughlin	Hughes	Morella
Coyne	Hyde	Morrison (CT)
Crockett	Jacobs	Morrison (WA)
Davis	Jenkins	Mrazek
de la Garza	Johnson (CT)	Murphy
DeFazio	Johnson (SD)	Murtha
Dellums	Johnston	Natcher
DeWine	Jones (NC)	Neal (MA)
Dicks	Jontz	Nowak
Dingell	Kanjorski	Oakar
Dixon	Kaptur	Oberstar
Dorgan (ND)	Kastenmeier	Obey
Downey	Kennedy	Ortiz

Owens (NY)	Savage	Synar
Owens (UT)	Sawyer	Torres
Pallone	Scheuer	Torricelli
Panetta	Schneider	Towns
Payne (NJ)	Schroeder	Traficant
Pease	Schumer	Traxler
Pelosi	Serrano	Udall
Perkins	Sharp	Unsoeld
Poshard	Shays	Vento
Price	Sikorski	Visclosky
Rahall	Skaggs	Volkmer
Rangel	Slaughter (NY)	Walgren
Ravenel	Smith (FL)	Washington
Regula	Smith (IA)	Waxman
Richardson	Smith (NE)	Weiss
Rinaldo	Smith (NJ)	Weldon
Roe	Smith (TX)	Wheat
Ros-Lehtinen	Smith (VT)	Whitten
Rose	Snowe	Williams
Roukema	Solarz	Wilson
Rowland (CT)	Solomon	Wise
Roybal	Staggers	Wolpe
Russo	Stark	Wyden
Sabo	Stokes	Yates
Saiki	Studds	Yatron
Sangmeister	Swift	Young (AK)

NOES—187

Archer	Hansen	Pickett
Armey	Harris	Pickle
Aspin	Hastert	Porter
Baker	Hatcher	Pursell
Ballenger	Hayes (LA)	Quillen
Barnard	Hefley	Ray
Bartlett	Hefner	Rhodes
Barton	Henry	Ridge
Bateman	Herger	Ritter
Bereuter	Hiler	Roberts
Bevill	Hoagland	Rogers
Bilirakis	Holloway	Rohrabacher
Billey	Hopkins	Roth
Broomfield	Houghton	Rowland (GA)
Browder	Hubbard	Sarpalius
Brown (CO)	Huckaby	Saxton
Buechner	Hunter	Schaefer
Bunning	Hutto	Schiff
Burton	Inhofe	Schuette
Byron	Ireland	Schulze
Callahan	James	Sensenbrenner
Campbell (CO)	Jones (GA)	Shaw
Carr	Kasich	Shumway
Chandler	Kolbe	Shuster
Clarke	Kyl	Sisisky
Clinger	LaFalce	Skeen
Coble	Lagomarsino	Skelton
Coleman (MO)	Lancaster	Slattery
Combest	Leach (IA)	Slaughter (VA)
Cooper	Leath (TX)	Smith, Denny (OR)
Courter	Lent
Cox	Lewis (FL)	Smith, Robert (NH)
Craig	Lightfoot
Crane	Livingston	Smith, Robert (OR)
Dannemeyer	Lloyd
Darden	Lowery (CA)	Spence
DeLay	Lukens, Donald	Spratt
Derrick	Madigan	Stallings
Dickinson	Marlenee	Stangeland
Donnelly	McCandless	Stearns
Dornan (CA)	McCollum	Stenholm
Douglas	McCrery	Stump
Dreier	McEwen	Sundquist
Duncan	McMillan (NC)	Tallon
Edwards (OK)	Meyers	Tanner
Fawell	Michel	Tauke
Fields	Miller (OH)	Tauzin
Frenzel	Montgomery	Taylor
Gallegly	Moorhead	Thomas (CA)
Gallo	Myers	Thomas (GA)
Gekas	Nagle	Thomas (WY)
Geren	Neal (NC)	Upton
Gingrich	Nielson	Valentine
Glickman	Olin	Vander Jagt
Goodling	Oxley	Vucanovich
Goss	Packard	Walker
Gradison	Parker	Walsh
Grandy	Parris	Weber
Grant	Pashayan	Whittaker
Gunderson	Patterson	Wolf
Hall (TX)	Paxon	Wylie
Hamilton	Payne (VA)	Young (FL)
Hammerschmidt	Penny
Hancock	Petri

NOT VOTING—9

Bentley	Laughlin	Robinson
Emerson	Lewis (CA)	Rostenkowski
Flippo	Nelson	Watkins

□ 1325

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Nelson of Florida for, with Mr. Lewis of California against.

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I was unable to be present today when the House voted on the Grandy motion to recommit H.R. 770 with instructions, (roll No. 106). Had I been here, I would have voted "yea" on the motion.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. MICHEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I have asked that I might proceed for the purpose of inquiring of the distinguished majority leader the program for the balance of this week and next week.

Mr. GEPHARDT. If the gentleman will yield, obviously our business is finished for today.

On Monday, May 14, the House will meet at noon. However, there will not be legislative business.

On Tuesday, May 15, the House will meet at noon. There will be seven bills under suspension, recorded votes on those suspensions to be postponed until after debate on all of the bills.

The bills are:

H.R. 4612, bankruptcy amendments regarding swap agreements and forward contracts;

H.R. 29, Interlocking Directorate Act of 1989;

House Resolution 381, relating to human rights abuses by the Government of Cuba;

House Resolution 384, expressing the sense of Congress regarding the urgent famine situation in Ethiopia;

House Concurrent Resolution 311, publication of the document "Our Flag";

H.R. 1028, Mount Rushmore Commemorative Coin Act; and

H.R. 2761, United Services Organization's 50th Anniversary Commemorative Coin Act.

On Wednesday, May 16 and Thursday, May 17 the House will meet at 10 a.m. On Thursday, May 17, the House will recess at 11 a.m. for a ceremony honoring the former Members of Congress, and will continue business following that ceremony.

Then we will take up H.R. 2273, Americans With Disabilities Act, subject to a rule.

H.R. 4636, Supplemental Assistance for Emerging Democracies Act of 1990 may be taken, subject to a rule. We are, as the leader knows, involved in meetings today and probably next week with the administration to try to work out the problems surrounding that bill. And of course, we have problems in the conference on the appropriation bill that are still being worked on.

Then we have H.R. 4151, the Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1990, subject to a rule.

On Friday, May 18, the House will not be in session.

Mr. MICHEL. Did I understand the distinguished gentleman to say that on Wednesday and Thursday we would come in at 10 a.m.?

Mr. GEPHARDT. That is correct.

Mr. MICHEL. And on the supplemental assistance, H.R. 4636, the President called me again this morning with another plea. That was the subject of our joint leadership meeting a day or two ago, and the President is reminding us all, of course, that he had submitted that request for those emerging democracies, particularly down in Central America, in March, thinking about April, and the first part of April the money would be forthcoming, particularly as Mrs. Chamorro took over the Presidency of Nicaragua.

Now here we are still foundering around with that, and this idea really of having it held hostage for some other considerations here, when that is a very, very urgent piece of legislation, can the gentleman give me any more assurance that we can get this thing wrapped up now next week since it is programmed for Thursday or Wednesday or whatever it is?

Mr. GEPHARDT. We understand the concern and we share the concern. That is why there is this meeting this afternoon that we hope will yield some possible results on ways to resolve the authorization.

As the gentleman knows, the Senate put 185 amendments, as I understand it, on the appropriations supplemental, and we are trying even now between the two committees in the conference to work our way through those amendments. If we can get the bill up next week, we will. It may be that we cannot do it until the next week, but we are going to do it as quickly as we can.

Mr. MICHEL. But that meeting this afternoon has to do with the authorization rather than the supplemental.

Mr. GEPHARDT. That is true. We are working on both the authorization and the appropriation. The problem we have with the appropriation is frankly more to do with the 180 extraneous, in our view, amendments that the Senate put on the bill. But we are working our way through those.

Mr. MICHEL. I would hope that we could exert every effort to get that done, because, as I indicated, it is very, very important to the President himself and to those of us who feel strongly about the two countries particularly involved, and obviously we know of all of the other add-ons and we are not so concerned about those.

□ 1330

Second question: This has to do with the Americans with Disabilities Act. I saw the distinguished gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER] on the floor. Is it my undrstanding that the bill that we are going to be considering will not be available until maybe Monday noon or something of that nature, recognizing there is a problem when you are putting together four different committees' work into one piece of legislation?

I should further give the gentleman the reason for my propounding the question: that Mr. MOAKLEY, I think, has circulated the membership with a notice that all amendments to be added ought to be in the record by 6 p.m., Monday.

Now if that is the case, we do not know what we are amending before noon and then have only until 6 to craft the amendment to that piece of legislation that we will only see for the first time. So I have to ask myself: Is it fair? Does it accommodate those Members who would feel strongly about amending the bill in any way?

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

Mr. HOYER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, we understand that problem. The way that problem will be solved—and we have discussed this with the Committee on Rules—is that if an amendment is drawn to H.R. 2273, as it is, or to the committee prints that were passed in each committee which are in the process of being put together in one bill, that they will be considered to be in order and the Committee on Rules will accommodate them to the new section numbers or new paragraphs so that there will be no amendment presented to the Committee on Rules prior to 6 p.m. that will be ruled out of order because it is to an incorrect section or to an incorrect paragraph and will be made by the Rules Committee compatible with the draft.

Now in further answer to the distinguished minority leader, we are hopeful that we will have a draft as early as tomorrow evening. We are working with the four committees. We have a tentative draft, but the four committees have just seen it, in order to make sure it is technically correct.

As you know, all we are doing is putting the four committee-passed versions together. We are hopeful we can have one as early as Friday night, if not first thing Monday.

But no amendment will be ruled out of order by the Committee on Rules because of the fact that it happens to be an incorrect section or paragraph. It will be fitted in properly in the place that it applies.

Mr. MICHEL. I thank the distinguished gentleman. So in other words, if the full thrust and effect is well known other than the technicalities of the section or paragraph, et cetera?

Mr. HOYER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MICHEL. I want to correct my own misstatement earlier in which I said the letter indicated that they ought to be in the record by 6 p.m. to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. HOYER. That is just to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. MICHEL. By 6 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. HOYER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MICHEL. Now may I come back to my distinguished friend, again, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], and ask him what he sees in the crystal ball for Clean Air?

Mr. GEHPARDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHEL. I yield to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. GEPHARDT. I thank the gentleman for yielding further.

Mr. Speaker, our hope is the bill will be on the floor the week after next. We have reserved, as the gentleman knows, Monday for possible votes because the bill can be a lengthy one. We want to get it done before the Memorial Day break.

So our hope is to start on it a week from Monday.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman and yield back the balance of my time.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, MAY 14, 1990

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at noon on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING THE SPEAKER TO DECLARE RECESSES ON THURSDAY, MAY 17, 1990

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order for the Speaker to declare recesses, subject to the call of the Chair, on Thursday, May 17, 1990, for the purpose of receiving in this Chamber former Members of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to make an announcement.

The Chair has examined the RECORD of yesterday with respect to the proceedings wherein the words of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] were ruled out of order and wherein on motion Mr. TORRICELLI was thereafter permitted by the House to proceed in order. It is customary under such circumstances consistent with clause 4, rule XIV for words which are ruled unparliamentary to be stricken from the RECORD by order of the House.

Without objection, the objectionable words will be stricken from the RECORD.

There was no objection.

MAKING MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS TO INDIAN LAWS

Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 1846) to make miscellaneous amendments to Indian law, and for other purposes and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, under my reservation I yield to the gentleman from Colorado and ask him if he can explain to the House briefly what is involved in this bill.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, with a few exceptions, S. 1846 makes several purely technical amendments to certain laws affecting Indian matters. Most of those that are not technical are clarifying or perfecting in nature and are not controversial. Certain provisions of the bill fall within the jurisdiction of the Education and Labor Committee and I am advised that they concur in the passage of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, the administration supports passage of the bill. I am aware of no opposition and urge passage of the bill.

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his explanation and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 1846

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. (a) Public Law 100-581 is amended—

(1) by striking out "shall take effect upon enactment of this Act" in section 203 and inserting in lieu thereof "shall take effect upon enactment of this Act if the plan has not taken effect before the enactment of this Act";

(2) by striking out "section 201" in subsections (a) and (c) of section 212 and inserting in lieu thereof "section 206";

(3) by striking out section 213;

(4) by striking out "section 3" in section 702(a) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 703";

(5) by striking out "section 602" in the last sentence of paragraph (1) of section 703(b) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 702"; and

(6) by striking out "section 602" in section 703(c) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 702".

(b) Subsection (c) of the first section of the Act of July 28, 1955 (69 Stat. 392; 25 U.S.C. 608(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Lands and interests in lands acquired by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (a)(1) and for the benefit of the Yakima Indian Nation pursuant to section 5 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 985; 25 U.S.C. 465) shall be held in trust by the United States for the benefit of the Yakima Indian Nation.".

SEC. 2. (a) The Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450, et seq.) is amended—

(1) by inserting a comma after "688)" in section 4(e) (25 U.S.C. 450b(e)),

(2) by striking out "the appropriate the Secretary" in section 4(j) and inserting in lieu thereof "the appropriate Secretary",

(3) by striking out "pursuant to this Act" each place it appears in section 4(j) and inserting in lieu thereof "under title I of this Act",

(4) by striking out "the Single Audit Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 2327, 31 U.S.C. 7501 et seq.)," in section 5(a)(2) (25 U.S.C. 450c(a)(2)) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code",

(5) by striking out "the Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act of 1977 (Public Law 95-224; 92 Stat. 3)" in section 9 (25 U.S.C. 450e-1) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 63 of title 31, United States Code",

(6) by striking out "an Indian appointed" in section 104(m) (25 U.S.C. 450i(m)) and inserting in lieu thereof "an Indian (as defined in section 19 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 988; 25 U.S.C. 479)) appointed (except temporary appointments)",

(7) by striking out "sub-contracts in such cases where the tribal contractor has subcontracted the activity" in section 105(a) (25 U.S.C. 450j(a)) and inserting in lieu thereof "subcontracts of such a construction contract",

(8) by striking out "the Single Agency Audit Act of 1984 (chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code)" in section 106(f) (25 U.S.C. 450j-1(f)) and inserting in lieu thereof "chapter 75 of title 31, United States Code",

(9) by striking out "agency personnel" in section 106(i) (25 U.S.C. 450j-1(i)) and inserting in lieu thereof "agency personnel (area personnel in the Navajo Area and in the case of Indian tribes not served by an agency)", and

(10) by striking out "providing notice and hearing" in section 109 (25 U.S.C. 450m) and inserting in lieu thereof "providing notice and a hearing".

(b) Subsection (b) of section 110 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450m-1(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) The Secretary shall not revise or amend a self-determination contract with a tribal organization without the tribal organization's consent.".

(c) Subparagraph (C) of section 3371(2) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out "section 4(m)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4".

SEC. 3. (a) Notwithstanding section 18 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 988; 25 U.S.C. 478), sections 2 and 17 of that Act (25 U.S.C. 462 and 477) shall apply to—

(1) all Indian tribes,

(2) all lands held in trust by the United States for Indians, and

(3) all lands owned by Indians that are subject to a restriction imposed by the United States on alienation of the rights of the Indians in the lands.

(b) The proviso of section 13 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 986; 25 U.S.C. 473) is amended by striking out "sections 2, 4," and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 4,".

(c) Section 17 of the Act of June 18, 1934 (25 U.S.C. 477), is amended—

(1) by striking out "by at least one-third of the adult Indians," and inserting in lieu thereof "by any tribe,";

(2) by striking out "at a special election by a majority vote of the adult Indians living on the reservation" and inserting in lieu thereof "by the governing body of such tribe";

(3) by striking out "ten years of any of the land" and inserting in lieu thereof "twenty-five years any trust or restricted lands".

SEC. 4. Subsection (c) of section 1 of Public Law 100-425 is amended by striking out "NE¼E½,NW¼" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "NE¼,E½NW¼".

SEC. 5. (a) Paragraph (5) of section 1139 of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2019) is amended by striking out "104(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "103(a)".

(b) Subsection (a) of section 5209 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2508) is amended by striking out "105" and inserting in lieu thereof "104".

(c) Subparagraph (C) of section 5314(e)(1) of the Indian Education Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2604(e)(1)(C)) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) No local educational agency may be held liable to the United States, or be otherwise penalized, by reason of the findings of any audit that relate to the date of completion, or the date of submission, of any forms used to establish, before April 28, 1988, a child's eligibility for entitlement under the Indian Elementary and Secondary School Assistance Act.".

(d)(1) Subsection (c) of section 1128 of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2008(c)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "0.133 percent" in paragraph (3)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "0.2 percent",

(B) by striking out "$4,000" in paragraph (3)(C)(i) and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,000",

(C) by striking out clause (ii) of paragraph (3)(C) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(ii) the lesser of—

"(I) $15,000, or

"(II) 1 percent of such allotted funds,".

(D) by striking out paragraph (2), and

(E) by redesignating paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) as paragraphs (2), (3), and (4), respectively.

(2) Section 5324(c)(4)(B) of the Indian Education Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2624(c)(4)(B)) is amended by striking out "section 1128(c)(4)(A)(i)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 1128(c)(3)(A)(i)".

(e)(1) Subsection (b) of section 5504 of Public Law 100-297 (25 U.S.C. 2001, note) is amended—

(A) by inserting "the Executive Director of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education and of" after "which shall consist of" in paragraph (1),

(B) by inserting "(but not the Executive Director of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education)" after "Task Force" in paragraph (3), and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) Sums appropriated under the authority of section 5508 shall not be used to pay the salaries of employees of the Department of the Interior or the Department of Education who are assigned as staff to the Task Force; but the salaries of such employees shall be paid out of funds appropriated to the employing Department under the authority of other provisions of law.".

(2) Subsection (a) of section 5506 of Public Law 100-297 is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (5),

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) the chairman of the National Advisory Council on Indian Education.".

(3) Section 5508 of Public Law 100-297 is amended by striking out "1988, 1989, and 1990" and inserting in lieu thereof "1990, 1991, and 1992".

(f) Subsection (d) of section 1128A of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2008a(d)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) In applying this section and section 106 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act with respect to an Indian tribe or tribal organization that—

"(A) receives funds under this section for administrative costs incurred in operating a contract school or a school operated under the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988, and

"(B) operates one or more other programs under a contract or grant provided under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, the Secretary shall ensure that the Indian tribe or tribal organization is provided with the full amount of the administrative costs, and of the indirect costs, that are associated with operating the contract school, a school operated under the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988, and all of such other programs, except that funds appropriated for implementation of this section shall be used only to supply the amount of the grant required to be provided by this section.".

(g)(1) Paragraph (2) of subsection 5205(a) of the Tribally controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2504(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) to the extent requested by such Indian tribe or tribal organization, the total amount of funds provided from operations and maintenance accounts and, notwithstanding section 105 of the Indian Self-Determination Act (25 U.S.C. 450j), or any other provision of law, other facilities accounts for such schools for such fiscal year (including but not limited to all those referenced under section 1126(d) of the Education Amendments of 1978, or any other law), and".

(2) Subsection (b) of section 5205 of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C.(b)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph:

"(4) Notwithstanding the provision of paragraph 5204(a)(2) of the Tribally Controlled Schools Act of 1988 (25 U.S.C. 2503(a)(21)), with respect to funds from facilities improvement and repair, alteration and renovation (major or minor), health and safety, or new construction accounts included in the grant under such paragraph (a)(2), the grantee shall maintain a separate account for such funds and shall, at the end of the period designated for the work covered by the funds received, render a separate accounting of the work done and the funds used to the Secretary. Funds received from these accounts may only be used for the purposes for which they were appropriated and for the work encompassed by the application or submission under which they were received. Where the appropriations measure or the application submission does not stipulate a period for the work covered by the funds so designated, the Secretary and the grantee shall consult and determine such a period prior to the transfer of funds: Provided, That such period may be extended upon mutual agreement.".

SEC. 6. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the term "class II gaming" includes, for purposes of applying Public Law 100-497 with respect to any Indian tribe located in the State of Wisconsin or the State of Montana, during the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, any gaming described in section 4(7)(B)(ii) of Public Law 100-497 that was legally operated on Indian lands on or before May 1, 1988, if the Indian tribe having jurisdiction over the lands on which such gaming was operated made a request, by no later than November 16, 1988, to the State in which such gaming is operated to negotiate a Tribal-State compact under section 11(d)(3) of Public Law 100-497.

SEC. 7. Section 9 of the Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians Act (25 U.S.C. 1300h-7) is amended—

(1) by striking out "Notwithstanding" and inserting in lieu thereof "(a) Notwithstanding", and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) The Secretary shall accept as voters eligible to vote on any amendments to the constitution of the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community—

"(1) all those persons who were deemed eligible by the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community to vote in the most recent election for the Tribal Council, and

"(2) any other person certified by the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community Tribal Council as—

"(A) a member of the Keweenaw Bay Indian Community, and

"(B) eligible to vote in any election for the Tribal Council.".

SEC. 8. Section 3(l) of the White Earth Reservation Land Settlement Act of 1985 (25 U.S.C. 331, note) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(not including laws relating to spousal allowance and maintenance payments)" immediately after "inheritance laws of Minnesota in effect on March 26, 1986", and

(2) by adding at the end of section 7 the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) After publication of the second list under subsection (c), the Secretary may, at any time, add allotments or interests to that second list if the Secretary determines that the additional allotment or interest falls within the provisions of section 5(c) or subsection (a) or (b) of section 4.

"(2) The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register notice of any additions made under paragraph (1) to the second list published under subsection (c).

"(3) Any determination made by the Secretary to add an allotment or interest under paragraph (1) to the second list published under subsection (c) may be judicially reviewed in accordance with chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, within 90 days after the date on which notice of such determination is published in the Federal Register under paragraph (2). Any legal action challenging such a determination that is not filed within such 90-day period shall be forever barred. Exclusive jurisdiction over any legal action challenging such a determination is vested in the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota.".

SEC. 9. The Hoopa-Yurok Settlement Act (25 U.S.C. 1300i, et seq.) is amended—

(1) by adding at the end of paragraph (2) of section (5)(a) the following new sentence: "Children under age 10 on the date they applied for the Settlement Roll who have lived all their lives on the Joint Reservation or the Hoopa Valley or Yurok Reservations, and who otherwise meet the requirements of this section except they lack 10 years of Reservation residence, shall be included on the Settlement Roll.",

(2) by adding at the end of subsection (d) of section 5 the following new paragraph:

"(4) For the sole purpose of preparing the Settlement Roll under this section, the Yurok Transition Team and the Hoopa Valley Business Council may review applications, make recommendations which the Secretary shall accept unless conflicting or erroneous, and may appeal the Secretary's decisions concerning the Settlement Roll. Full disclosure of relevant records shall be made to the Team and to the Council notwithstanding any other provision of law.".

(3) by striking out "counseling," in section (9)(a)(3) and inserting in lieu thereof "counseling and assistance, shall", and

(4) by adding at the end of subsection (a) of section 14 the following new sentence: "The Yurok Transition Team, or any individual thereon, shall not be named as a defendant or otherwise joined in any suit in which a claim is made arising out of this subsection.".

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to retain collections from the public in payment for goods and services provided by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Such collections shall be credited to the appropriation account against which obligations were incurred in providing such goods and services.

SEC. 11. There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Administration for Native Americans, $1,000,000 for the purpose of conducting a feasibility study for the establishment of a National Center for Native American Studies and Policy Development.

SEC. 12. (a) The following proviso in title I of the Act of June 24, 1967 (81 Stat. 59), under the heading "Office of the Solicitor", is repealed: "Provided, That hereafter hearing officers appointed for Indian probate work need not be appointed pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act (60 Stat. 237), as amended".

(b) Hearing officers heretofore appointed to preside over Indian probate proceedings pursuant to the proviso repealed by subsection (a), having met the qualifications required for appointment pursuant to section 3105 of title 5, United States Code, shall be deemed to have been appointed pursuant to that section.

(c) The first sentence of section 1 of the Act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 855; 25 U.S.C. 372), is amended by deleting "his decision thereon shall be final and conclusive" and inserting in lieu thereof "his decisions shall be subject to judicial review to the same extent as determinations rendered under section 2 of this Act".

SEC. 13. Notwithstanding the Act of March 7, 1928 (45 Stat. 210-211), and the Act of August 7, 1946 (60 Stat. 895-896), the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allocate not to exceed $2,000,000 from power revenues available to the San Carlos Irrigation Project to pay for the operation and maintenance charges associated with the delivery of 30,000 acre-feet of water from the Central Arizona Project to the San Carlos Irrigation Project.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my special order for today precede that of the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

Mr. Speaker, I have cleared this with the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

1992 NATIONAL ASSESSMENT OF CHAPTER 1 ACT

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 3910) to require the Secretary of Education to conduct a comprehensive national assessment of programs carried with assessment under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, and a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment and the House amendment to the Senate amendment as follows:

Senate amendment:

Page 8, after line 15, insert:

SEC. 3. IMPACT AID.

(a) AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS.—(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 3(d)(2) of Public Law 81-874 is amended to read as follows:

"(A)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), for any fiscal year after September 30, 1988, funds reserved to make payments under subparagraph (B) shall not exceed $25,000,000 from the funds appropriated for such fiscal year.

"(ii) In the event that the payments made under subparagraph (B) in any fiscal year are less than $25,000,000, such remaining funds as do not exceed $25,000,000 shall remain available until expended for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of subparagraph (B). Such remaining funds shall not be considered part of the funds reserved to make payments under subparagraph (B), but shall be expended if funds in excess of $25,000,000 are needed to carry out the provisions of subparagraph (B) in any fiscal year.

"(iii) If for any fiscal year the total amount of payments to be made under subparagraph (B) exceeds $25,000,000 and the funds described in clause (ii) are insufficient to make such payments, then the provisions of clause (i) shall not apply.".

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 2(b)(2) of Public Law 101-26 is hereby repealed, and Public Law 81-874 shall be applied and administered as if such subparagraph (B) (and the amendment made by such subparagraph) has not been enacted.

(b) ADJUSTEMENTS FOR DECREASES IN FEDERAL ACTIVITIES.—Section 3(e) of Public Law 81-874 is amended to read as follows:

"(e)(1) Whenever the Secretary of Education determines that—

"(A) for any fiscal year, the number of children determined with respect to any local educational agency under subsections (a) and (b) is less than 90 percent of the number of so determined with respect to such agency during the preceding fiscal year;

"(B) there has been a decrease or cessation of Federal activities within the State in which such agency is located; and

"(C) such decrease or cessation has resulted in a substantial decrease in the number of children determined under subsections (a) and (b) with respect to such agency for such fiscal year; the amount to which such agency is entitled for such fiscal year and for any of the 3 succeeding fiscal years shall not be less than 90 percent of the payment such agency received under subsections (a) and (b) for the preceding fiscal year.

"(2) There is authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such amount as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section, which remain available until expended.

"(3) Expenditures pursuant to paragraph (2) shall be reported by the Secretary to the Committees on Appropriations and Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Appropriations and Labor and Human Resources of the Senate within 30 days of expenditure.

"(4) The Secretary shall make available to the Congress in the Department of Education's annual budget submission, the amount of funds necessary to defray the costs associated with the provisions of this subsection during the fiscal year for which the submission is made.".

"(c) APPLICATION.—Section 5(a) of Public Law 81-874 (Impact Aid) (hereafter in this section referred to as "the Act") is amended to read as follows:

"(a) APPLICATIONS.—(1) Any local educational agency desiring to receive the payments to which it is entitled for any fiscal year under sections 2, 3, or 4 shall submit an application therefor to the Secretary and file a copy with the State educational agency. Each such application shall be submitted in such form, and containing such information, as the Secretary may reasonably require to determine whether such agency is entitled to a payment under any of such sections and the amount of any such payment.

"(2) The Secretary shall establish a deadline for the receipt of applications. For each fiscal year beginning with fiscal year 1991, the Secretary shall accept an approvable application received up to 60 days after the deadline, but shall reduce the payment based on such late application by 10 percent of the amount that would otherwise be paid. The Secretary shall not accept or approve any application submitted more than 60 days after the application deadline.

"(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, a State educational agency that had been accepted as an applicant for funds under section 3 for fiscal years 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988 shall be permitted to continue as an applicant under the same conditions by which it made application during such fiscal years only if such State educational agency distributes all funds received for the students for which application is being made by such State educational agency to the local educational agencies providing educational services to such students.".

"(d) ADJUSTMENTS.—Section 5(c)(2) of Public Law 81-874 is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) For the purpose of determining the category under subparagraph (A) that is applicable to the local educational agency providing free public education to secondary school students residing on Hanscom Air Force Base, Massachusetts, the Secretary shall count children in kindergarten through grade 8 who are residing on such base as if such students are receiving a free public education from such local educational agency.".

(e) SPECIAL RULE.—The Secretary of Education shall consider as timely filed, and shall process for payment, an application from a local educational agency that is eligible to receive the payments to which it is entitled in fiscal year 1990 under section 2 or 3 of the Act, if the Secretary receives the application by June 29, 1990, and the application is otherwise approvable.

(f) DEFINITION.—Section 403(6) of Public Law 81-874 is amended by inserting the following new sentences at the end thereof: "Such term does not include any agency or school authority that the Secretary determines, on a case-by-case basis—

"(A) was constituted or reconstituted primarily for the purpose of receiving assistance under this Act or increasing the amount of that assistance;

"(B) is not constituted or reconstituted for legitimate educational purposes; or

"(C) was previously part of a school district upon being constituted or reconstituted.

For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of section 3(a), such term includes any agency or school authority that has had an arrangement with a nonadjacent school district for the education of children of persons who reside or work on an installation of the Department of Defense for more than 25 years, but only if the Secretary determines that there is no single school district adjacent to the school district in which the installation is located that is capable of educating all such children.".

SEC. 4. BILINGUAL EDUCATION.

Awards made by the Secretary of Education to the Franklin-Northwest Supervisory Union of Vermont under the Bilingual Education Act (20 U.S.C. 3221 et seq.), in amounts of—

(1) $388,076.56 for the period of fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1986 (for programs of bilingual education, however characterized),

(2) $400,061.00 for the period of fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1986 (for programs of bilingual education, however characterized), and

(3) any expenditure of funds by the Franklin-Northwest Supervisory Union pursuant to the awards described in paragraphs (1) and (2).

shall be treated as if they were made in accordance with the provisions of the Bilingual Education Act for purposes of any claims for repayment asserted by the Secretary of Education.

SEC. 5. STUDENT LITERACY CORPS.

Section 146 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 146. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this part $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1991.".

SEC. 6. THE HEAD START ACT AND CHAPTER 1 OF TITLE I OF THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) one in every five children in America, some 12,600,000 youngsters under the age of 18, live in poverty;

(2) the Head Start program and programs under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 are proven early education programs that offer the best opportunity to break the cycle of poverty;

(3) since 1980, spending by the Federal Government for education has decreased by 4.7 percent in real terms;

(4) $1 invested in high-quality preschool programs like Head Start and chapter 1 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 saves $6 in lowered costs for special education, grade retention, public assistance, and crime;

(5) children who enroll in Head Start are more likely than other poor children to be literate, employed, and enrolled in postsecondary education;

(6) children who enroll in Head Start programs are less likely than other poor children to be high school dropouts, teen parents, dependent on welfare, or arrested for criminal or delinquent activity;

(7) children who enroll in programs under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 experience larger increases in standardized achievement scores than comparable students who did not enroll in such programs;

(8) low funding levels for the Head Start Act limit the participation in Head Start programs to less than 20 percent of the eligible population; and

(9) low funding levels for chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 limit participation in programs assisted under such Act to less than 50 percent of the eligible population.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that appropriations for the Head Start Act should be increased to fully serve the potential, eligible population under such Act by fiscal year 1994 and that appropriations for chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 should be increased to the authorization level of such Act by fiscal year 1994.

House amendment to Senate amendment:

Insert at the end the following section:

Section . Technical Amendment

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2 of Public Law 81-874 is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection (d):

"(d) The United States shall be deemed to own Federal property, for the purposes of this Act where—

"(1) prior to the transfer of Federal property, the United States owned Federal property meeting the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of subsection (a)(1); and

"(2) the United States transfers a portion of the property referred to in paragraph (1) to another non-taxable entity, and the United States—

"(A) restricts some or any construction on such property;

"(B) requires that the property be used in perpetuity for the public purposes for which it was conveyed;

"(C) requires the grantee of the property to report to the Federal government (or its agent) setting forth information on the use of the property;

"(D) prohibits the sale, lease assignment or other disposal of the property unless to another eligible government agency and with the approval of the Federal government (or its agent); and

"(E) reserves to the Federal government a right of reversion at any time the Federal government (or its agent) deems it necessary for the national Defense.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on October 1, 1989.

Mr. HAWKINS (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendment and the House amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I reserve the right to object in order to give the chairman of the committee an opportunity to explain the legislation.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLING. I yield to the gentleman from California, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, on February 27, the House passed H.R. 3910, a bill requiring a national assessment of the chapter 1 program. The Senate on Monday passed that same bill requiring such an assessment but added certain provisions dealing with various other education programs.

Mr. Speaker, today Mr. GOODLING and I are urging that the House accept the House-passed bill, as amended by the Senate. The primary reason for urging this action is that we cannot lose any more time in undertaking the national assessment of chapter 1.

Chapter 1 is the largest Federal aid program affecting over 5 million poor children. Twice in the past, we have required comprehensive national evaluations of that program prior to reauthorization. Both of those large-scale studies have proved very useful to the Congress in refashioning the laws. Therefore, we feel we must have the same type of study completed by 1993, when the Congress again reviews chapter 1 for amendments.

Let me emphasize on behalf of the committee that this assessment will only be useful to the Congress if it is done in a fair and evenhanded manner. For that reason, this bill requires that the Department consult with an outside group of experts before it finalizes its plans to conduct this assessment. That outside group must include former directors of the two prior national assessments.

This bill also requires that the Office of Educational Research and Improvement [OERI] must be involved on an equal basis with the Office of Planning in fashioning this study. Neither the Office of Educational Research and Improvement or the Office of Planning, Budget, and Evaluation [OPBE] within the Department of Education is to control the study to the disadvantage of the other. The study is to be done jointly by these two divisions. Our reason for this provision is to ensure objectivity and evenhandedness in approaching the study. Both divisions of the Department are composed of very competent people, but we have learned over the years that it helps to have a system of checks and balances to assure objectivity.

We know that the Department, through the Office of Planning, has begun preliminary work on this national assessment. It is our clear intent that all that work is to be reviewed by both the Office of Planning and OERI and the outside panel before it is finalized.

In the past, the Department of Education has been very useful in providing national evaluations and studies to the Congress. We rely on those studies for factual data and sound analysis. We expect the same type of information and analysis from this new national assessment.

Other amendments in the bill were included by the other body. These amendments resolve several problems in the impact aid program, forgive an audit determination faced by a school district in Vermont, restate an authorization for the student literacy corps, and include a sense of the Senate regarding funding of Head Start and chapter 1. We urge the adoption of all these amendments.

For the information of the Members, I am including at this point a short description of the impact aid amendments which are the most complicated technically of all the other amendments:

DESCRIPTION OF THE AMENDMENTS

Section (a) of the Senate amendments to Impact Aid raises the "cap" on payments to 3(d)(2)(B) districts from $20 million to $25 million; provides for a "reserve pool" of funds (to be built during years when payments to these districts are less than $25 million) for payments in years when payments to these districts exceed $25 million; removes the "cap" if $25 million and the reserve funds are insufficient to make payments to the 3(d)(2)(B) districts; and prohibits the Secretary of Education from prorating funds for these districts.

Section (b) of the Senate amendment modifies section 3(e) of P.L. 81-874 dealing with adjustment when Federal activities are declining. The section provides that the "hold harmless" in 3(e) applies to 90 percent of funds a district received in the previous fiscal year and eliminates a provision of section 3(e) that the U.S. Department of Education apparently has interpreted to mean that a district 3(e) entitlement is based only on the number of 3(b) children enrolled in the district. Thus, the 3(e) entitlement apparently would be based on both 3(a) and 3(b) payments.

Section (c) amends section 5(a) of P.L. 81-874 to provide more flexibility in deadlines for Impact Aid applications. The Secretary would be required to accept a district's application up to 60 days after the deadline he or she is directed to establish; however, the district's payments would be reduced by 10 percent. Section (c) also specifies that States receiving Impact Aid payments must distribute all funds to the local education agencies (LEAs) providing services. Section 403(6) of current law requires that States may apply for and receive Impact Aid funds only if they provide services directly to "federally connected" children. The provision in the Senate amendment apparently deals with a problem in Alaska, which had been receiving Impact Aid funds and retaining some funds at the State level. Apparently ED had denied State funding to Alaska after FY 1988 because the State was not providing direct services. This provision of section (c) apparently would permit Alaska to apply directly for Impact Aid funds, provided that the State distribute all funds to LEAs.

Section (d) makes special dispensation for determination of payments for children residing on Hanscom Air Force Base in Massachusetts. Apparently this section requires that even those students in kindergarten through grade 8 (who are educated on the base) be counted to determine Impact Aid payments to the LEA that provides education for secondary school students who reside on the base.

Section (e) extends the deadline for applications for section 2 and section 3 payments for FY 1990 to June 29, 1990. Apparently an unusually high number of LEAs have missed the application deadline this year.

Section (f) excludes from the definition of "local education agency" under the Act school district formed mainly to receive or to increase Impact Aid payments. Apparently some LEAs have been redistricted to attempt to qualify as 3(d)(2)(B) districts, which would greatly increase their Impact Aid payments. This provision would permit the Secretary to determine if a district had been formed for this purpose. Such districts would not qualify for any payments under the Act.

Mr. Speaker, both sides have agreed on the amendments, and I know of no opposition.

□ 1340

I think we can complete the business in just a few minutes.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3910, the 1992 National Assessment of Chapter 1 Act, a bill that I enjoyed the responsibility of coauthoring with my distinguished chairman, AUGUSTUS HAWKINS. This small but important bill will authorize the Secretary of Education to conduct a national assessment of the chapter 1 program. Chapter 1, the largest of the Federal elementary and secondary education programs, will expire in 1993. That may seem like a time in the distant future, but in terms of gathering and collating information, it is imperative that we begin the assessment of the program now. This assessment will help to give Members valuable information regarding the implementation of the program.

This bill passed the House of Representatives on February 27, 1990, and the Senate passed an amended version of the bill on Monday. We are now considering that amended bill. I am hopeful that we can pass the bill quickly. It is imperative that the Department be given sufficient time to conduct this study before the next reauthorization cycle.

Again, I rise in support of this bill and ask my colleagues to join me in voting in favor of its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER IN LOS ANGELES, CA

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 2300) to provide financial assistance to the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, CA, for the education programs of the Museum of Tolerance, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I take this opportunity, first of all to yield to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] to tell Members about the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the gentleman will yield on his objection, as the gentleman knows, S. 2300 is a bill which would authorize expenditure for the Simon Wiesenthal Center's education program in their new Museum of Tolerance. This is legislation that is identical with one exception, and I will explain that exception, to the bill which is sponsored by the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] and cosponsored by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], as well as the gentleman from California [Mr. HAWKINS].

The one exception and the difference in the Senate bill, which is now at our desk and has, of course, therefore, passed the Senate, and our bill, is that our bill that is, the bill of the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], provides $7.5 million in authorization for the emergency programs proposed at the Wiesenthal Center. The legislation at the desk would authorize $5 million, $2.5 million less, I understand, an appropriate and agreed-upon amount of money.

I encourage my colleagues to support our request.

Mr. Speaker, today we are considering S. 2300, a bill that would authorize $5 million for the Simon Wiesenthal Center's education programs at its new Museum of Tolerance.

This legislation passed the Senate last week. It is identical, with one exception, to legislation that is moving through the House Education and Labor Committee. That bill, H.R. 3210, provides a $7.5 million authorization for the education programs of the Wiesenthal Center. S. 2300 provides a $5 million authorization. The House bill has been reported, without opposition, from my Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education to the full Education and Labor Committee. Its principal sponsor is Congressman WAXMAN. It is cosponsored by, among others, Mr. HAWKINS, the chair of the Education and Labor Committee and Mr. GOODLING, that committee's ranking member.

I would urge my colleagues to support the Senate passed bill. This is a very worthy project. The programs that will be supported by it will serve as a major human rights and education resources for Americans from all walks of life. The programs will not only focus on the Holocaust, but on the forms of prejudice, intolerance, and discrimination. The education program to be conducted by the Center's Museum of Tolerance will include both print and electronic materials. It will include a full range of books, bibliographies, reports and study guides on prejudice, aggression, intolerance, discrimination, antisemitism and the Holocaust. These materials will be made available to public and private schools and colleges throughout the Nation. Videos and films on these subjects will be produced at the museum or under its auspices. Teacher training seminars on these subjects will be conducted. The museum's education programs will also include a major research component. With this intensive education program, the museum will make a major contribution to educating both present and future generations about intolerance and the Holocaust.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very good bill supporting a very worthwhile program. I urge my colleagues to give it their support.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, further reserving my right to object, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN].

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I want to congratulate the managers of this legislation for bringing it to the House floor. The project, that is, the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, is a very important project. The Museum of Tolerance will talk about not just the Holocaust that occurred during World War II and before that time but other examples of man's inhumanity to man.

It is important that we not forget the evil that people are capable of bringing upon others. This museum, which I think will be a resource for the whole country, will be of enormous benefit in reminding Members what has happened in the past, in making Americans more resolute to make sure we do not have these kinds of things occur in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Members' support for this legislation.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of this measure, Senate bill 2300, which is similar to H.R. 3210.

I want to commend the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, Mr. HAWKINS, and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], for bringing this measure to the floor.

I think providing assistance to the Museum of Tolerance at the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles is certainly a commendable and worthy objective. Simon Wiesenthal, as we all know, has been an outstanding fighter for human rights to remind the world of the history of the Holocaust, and remind scholars to tell Americans if we do not pay attention to history, we are bound to repeat the mistakes of the past.

The Wiesenthal Center and Museum of Tolerance certainly will be a lingering reminder of those horrors of World War II and of the Holocaust period. It is for that reason that I think this is a commendable effort. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. Speaker, I support taking the Senate bill, S. 2300 from the desk and passing it. This bill is the same as the House bill, H.R. 3210, with the exception of a lower authorization figure. I have consistently supported the concept of this legislation, and in fact joined Mr. WILLIAMS as an original cosponsor when the bill was introduced last year.

As ranking member on the Education and Labor Committee I recognize and appreciate the need we all have in this world to accept a wide diversity among people, to work with a broad spectrum of people, and to develop cooperation and understanding among all individuals, races, creeds, and ethnicities. Without this spirit of tolerance and understanding, we jeopardize our very existence and create unnecessary barriers to achieving our goals and full potential socially, personally, economically, and internationally. Education has a premier role to play in helping people gain greater understanding and respect for the rights and dignity of every human being.

This bill represents one example of how we can attempt to overcome prejudice and hatred in this world. Simon Wiesenthal is a survivor—a survivor of over 4 years in German concentration camps during the Second World War. Through his experience he pledged to be the voice of the victims and not allow such disregard of human rights and abuse of human dignity to occur again. The Museum of Tolerance examines the Holocaust in the context of prejudice and hatred in various societies, and in the context of who the victims and who the perpetrators were. The quality of the products of the center is clear—its media production of "Genocide" in 1982 received an Academy Award for best documentary feature.

With this bill we have the opportunity to provide support to the Wiesenthal Center and its work and education mission. It authorizes $5 million to fund 50 percent of the cost of designing and operating education programs concerning the Holocaust and the broader issues of racial, religious or ethnic tolerance. I appreciate my colleagues efforts to bring this bill before us, and I am pleased to be able to support legislation that encourages the development and maintenance of one of our more desirable traits in the hopes that through knowledge and education we will all treat each other with greater respect and dignity.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3210, a bill to provide financial assistance to the Museum of Tolerance at the Simon Weisenthal Center in Los Angeles, CA. The assistance will go towards operation of education programs concerning the Holocaust to be conducted by the museum.

The Holocaust—the genocide of six million Jews in World War II Nazi Germany—shook the conscience of our Nation and the peoples of the world.

The Wiesenthal Center was founded in 1977, in Los Angeles, CA as a nonsectarian tax exempt organization for educating all sectors of society, particularly school-age children, about the events surrounding pre-Nazi Germany and the Holocaust. The Wiesenthal Center, named in honor of the legendary Nazi hunter, is world renowned for its historical vision and educational endeavors. The center's programs do not however, end with the Holocaust: they seek to provide an understanding of civil rights, justice and morality in our society and in other countries as well.

The Simon Wiesenthal Center a nonprofit institution, contains books, films, videos and computers as resources for comprehending racism and human behavior in this country and abroad. In further fulfillment of its mission, the Wiesenthal Center is currently undergoing a significant expansion, which includes the construction in Los Angeles of the Beit Hashoah: Museum of Tolerance.

In light of recent acts in our country indicating a resurgence in racism, the Wiesenthal Center will counteract intolerance. In light of the revolutions of 1989, the Wiesenthal Center Museum will work to monitor and counter antisemitism that has unfortunately accompanied many of the populist uprisings in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

In addition to its exhibits and educational programs regarding the Holocaust, the Museum of Tolerance will chronicle the Nazi perseuction of other minorities during World War II and will contain exhibits addressing modern-day repression and the universal struggle for freedom—from our own civil rights movement to the fight for human dignity in other countries around the world.

The exhibits will also chart discrimination against Hispanics and Asians, and atrocities committed against native Americans. When completed, the Museum of Tolerance will serve as a major human rights and education resource center for Americans from all walks of life.

I was a strong supporter of Federal funding for a Holocaust museum in Washington, DC. Thanks to the efforts of many dedicated individuals on the Holocaust council, construction for this museum is now underway on the Mall.

I believe that the Washington museum will serve as a valuable tool for educating hundreds of thousands of visiting Americans, and local Washingtonians, about the horrors of the Holocaust and other stories of man's inhumanity to man. However, I also believe that there is equal merit in having a similarly valuable resource on the west coast.

The existence of the Wiesenthal Center's Museum of Tolerance will in no way diminish the effectiveness or impact of the Holocaust museum in Washington. For the millions of Americans that don't make it to Washington, there should be an opportunity to learn about the Holocaust in an impactful manner, through a visit to a Holocaust museum.

The funds authorized by H.R. 3210 will provide a one-time grant for Holocaust education programs at the Museum of Tolerance. This will comprise no more than 50 percent of the cost of the education programs—and no more than 20 percent of the cost of the entire museum. The total construction budget is $50 million, with over $38 million raised to date.

During my recent visit to the Wiesenthal Center, I was shown a model of the new museum. I was impressed by the museum's hands-on approach to exhibits that will challenge the public to examine prejudice and persecution.

Utilizing American history, the study of racism, and the evolution of our great democracy, the museum will confront human behavior. It will explore 20th century genocides, including the Cambodian massacres—and will address the Holocaust as man's ultimate violation of human rights and this century's watershed event. Visitors will be directly engaged with historical artifacts documents, newsreel films, photos and state-of-the-art multimedia technology, such as interactive computerized display and multimedia presentations.

I believe that my colleagues would be equally impressed by the Museum of Tolerance model. In fact, I know that some of you have been out to the Wiesenthal Center to see the exhibit for yourselves. I feel that the Museum of Tolerance will make a significant contribution toward educating Americans on extremely important and timely issues.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

The clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 2300

Bet it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. GENERAL AUTHORITY.

The Secretary of Education is authorized, subject to the availability of appropriations, to pay to the Museum of Tolerance of the Simon Wiesenthal Center, located in Los Angeles, California, the Federal share of the cost of designing and operating education programs concerning the holocaust.

SEC. 2. APPLICATION REQUIRED.

No financial assistance may be provided under this Act unless an application is submitted to the Secretary of Education at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary of Education may reasonably require. Each such application shall describe the type and kind of educational materials to be developed and the steps that will be taken to ensure that age appropriate products are available to school districts and institutions of higher education across the country.

SEC. 3. FEDERAL SHARE.

The Federal share of the cost of designing and conducting education programs under this Act shall be 50 percent. The portion of costs not paid by financial assistance provided pursuant to this Act must be paid from sources other than Federal, State, or local government.

SEC. 4. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000, to carry out the provisions of this Act. Funds appropriated pursuant to this Act shall remain available until expended.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include therein extraneous material on S. 2300, the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL DAY IN SUPPORT OF FREEDOM AND HUMAN RIGHTS IN CHINA AND TIBET

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 275) designating May 13, 1990, as the "National Day in Support of Freedom and Human Rights in China and Tibet," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. PELOSI], who is the chief sponsor of House Joint Resolution 556, designating May 13, 1990, as a "National Day in Support of Freedom and Human Rights in China and Tibet."

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, on May 13, 1989, students in Tiananmen Square decided to risk their lives for liberty. The world watched in awe as unarmed students took on one of the most repressive governments in the world.

At the same time in Tibet, monks and nuns struggled under the repressive yoke of martial law and 50 years of occupation.

In Beijing as it had in Lhasa, the regime chose to flex its muscle rather than to expand its thinking.

This weekend, students throughout the world, in Harvard Square, Red Square, Prague, Buenos Aires—and in my district of San Francisco will demonstrate in support of the freedoms denied their colleagues in China and Tibet.

I ask my colleagues in this House to demonstrate their support by voting for this resolution declaring May 13 a "National Day in Support of Freedom and Human Rights in China and Tibet." It celebrates the spirit of those young people who, echoing the words of Patrick Henry 200 years ago, said "give me liberty or give me death." It seeks to strengthen the spirit of those citizens of China and Tibet who continue to suffer in prisons and reeducation camps. And it sends a message to the Beijing regime, that we recognize the expression of courage shown in Tiananmen 1 year ago and deplore continued efforts to extinguish it.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution. Again, I thank my colleague for yielding to me, and I thank the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER] for his cooperation and his leadership on this issue.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, we all remember 1 year ago the excitement and hope as hundreds of thousands of Chinese peacefully demonstrated for democratic change in Beijing. Unfortunately, we also remember the horror as we watched the awful events of June 4 unfold on Tiananmen Square. To appropriately note the 1-year anniversary of those dramatic days, Mr. Speaker, House Joint Resolution 556 designates May 13, 1990 as "National Day in Support of Freedom and Human Rights in China and Tibet." This small but significant gesture will show our enduring concern for the cause of freedom in China, including the ancient land of Tibet. We do so in the spirit of self-determination and liberty for all peoples and all nations. We pay tribute to the awesome courage and determination of those who sought to bring change to China, especially to those who sacrificed their lives for this cause. We also do so in the fervent hope that in the not-too-distant future, the people of China will be able to enjoy the freedoms which we hold so dear.

The proud people of Tibet must also be included in any discussion of freedom and human rights in China. We call on the Government of China to respect the right of self-determination of Tibetans. Due to a lack of media coverage, most Americans are much less familiar with the struggle in Tibet than they are with the events in Tiananmen Square last June. Mr. Speaker, their cause is no less just and no less worthy of our attention. We must do what we can in Congress to keep this issue in front of the Nation, and indeed the world. House Joint Resolution 556 is one way in which we can manifest our hopes for the people of China and Tibet.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his kind words in support of this measure.

Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am pleased to rise in support of House Joint Resolution 556, which would designate May 13 as a "National Day in Support of Freedom and Human Rights in China and Tibet."

I commend the gentlelady from California [Ms. PELOSI] for her leadership in this issue. Her untiring support for the struggle of those living under the Communist tyranny centered in Beijing is inspiring to the American people and to her colleagues on both sides of the isle.

Report after report informs us that human rights conditions in Tibet and the People's Republic of China [PRC] have gone from bad to worse. In the People's Republic of China, the relentless round-ups, imprisonments, torture and executions began in June 1989, after the hunger strike by the students in Tiananmen Square was brutally smashed.

In occupied Tibet the Chinese Army escalated its suppression of Tibetans soon after the Dalai Lama finished his visit here to the Congress in September 1987.

The leaders of the democracy and freedom movements in Tibet and the People's Republic of China have continued to advocate nonviolence. This resolution is an appropriate way of supporting their exemplary efforts and I urge its adoption.

□ 1350

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. OWENS of Utah). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 275

Whereas the United States supports the legitimate and democractic aspirations for freedom of peoples throughout the world;

Whereas student and citizen groups throughout the world have taken great risks in pursuit of reform;

Whereas on May 13, 1989, Chinese students began a hunger strike in Tiananmen Square seeking nonviolent dialogue with the Chinese Government;

Whereas the Chinese Government responded to the Chinese students with violence, killing many;

Whereas the non-violent resistance of the people of Tibet to the Chinese Government has also been met with violence;

Whereas the Chinese students and the Tibetan people follow the tradition of the Dalai Lama's and Mahatma Gandhi's doctrine of non-violence, and have inspired the world;

Whereas student organizations throughout the United States and around the world have declared May 13, 1990, as an international day of fasting in support of democratic reforms in China and Tibet; and

Whereas this effort is being undertaken in the hope of bringing the current tragedies in China and Tibet to a peaceful end, and in the hope that productive dialogue will replace an atmosphere of suspicion and reprisal: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation designating May 13, 1990, as the "National Day in Support of Freedom and Human Rights in China and Tibet", and calling on the people of the United States to observe such a day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on Senate Joint Resolution 275, the Senate joint resolution just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

DEALING WITH GLOBAL WARMING THROUGH THE TAX CODE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. STARK] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, we are facing two serious long-term crises that we must begin to address—global warming and the budget deficit. The good news is that there is one solution to achieving the twin goals of reducing global warming and the budget deficit. It is market-oriented and it works. The solution is a carbon tax.

The problem of the budget deficit is well-known and unquestioned. Headlines are filled with talk of budget summits and the need to raise billions of dollars to avoid massive disruptions in Government services. The amount of money needed to stave off dire consequences mounts relentlessly. Virtually every number dealing with the predicted size of the deficit has been underestimated.

Let's turn to global warming. Virtually every serious climate scientist says we need to act immediately to reduce carbon dioxide emissions. The major conclusion from 300 scientists and policy makers from 46 countries and the United Nations at the World Conference, Toronto, Canada, June 1988 was "Humanity is conducting an unintended, uncontrolled, globally pervasive experiment whose ultimate consequences could be second only to a global nuclear war. Far-reaching impacts will be caused by global warming and sea-level rise, which are becoming increasingly evident as a result of continued growth in atmospheric concentrations of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases. It is imperative to act now."

Agreeing with this call to action is the Interparliamentary Conference on the Global Environment in their May 2, 1990, declaration. Representing 42 countries, they issued a series of declarations, including calling for reductions in greenhouse gas emissions by 50 percent from 1990 levels in the year 2010. November 7, 1989, President Bush announced that "the United States has agreed with other industrialized nations that stabilization of carbon dioxide emissions should be achieved as soon as possible." The Group of 7 Summit July 16, 1989, said, "We strongly advocate common efforts to limit emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases, which threaten to induce climate change, endangering the environment and ultimately the economy.

Mr. Speaker, heeding these calls to action, I am introducing a carbon tax. A carbon tax is an effective market-oriented tool that will benefit both the environment and the economy. My tax on chlorofluorocarbons [CFC's], which became law on January 1, 1990, has clearly led to a change in CFC use and has dramatically increased recycling of CFC's. In addition, it is contributing billions of dollars to the U.S. Treasury. A carbon tax could have the same positive effect on reducing carbon emissions while simultaneously reducing the deficit.

Advocates of a market-based approach are many. Professor of Economics at Yale University William Nordhaus said in the March/April issue of EPA Journal "Consumption of fossil fuels has many negative spillovers besides the greenhouse effect, such as local pollution, traffic congestion, and so forth. In addition to slowing global warming, carbon taxes would restrain the consumption of fossil fuels, encourage R&D on nonfossil fuels like methane, lower oil imports, reduce the trade and budget deficits, and raise the national saving rate." The Economic Report of the President, February 1990, says "a fee or a tradeable allowances scheme would lead firms and individuals to consider the social cost of greenhouse emissions in their private decisions. Because market-based approaches are flexible and provide incentives that affect decisions at all points along the production-consumption chain and across all industries, they automatically focus on those activities where emissions reductions can be achieved at the least cost."

Industry segments have expressed strong support for a carbon tax. Helen O. Petrauskas, vice president for environment and safety engineering at Ford Motor Co., appearing before a Senate subcommittee on April 4, 1990, testified "* * * Government should also consider a 'greenhouse' or carbon fee that might be applied to all fuels that emit carbon dioxide when burned * * * at whatever source." At the same hearing Dr. Marina Whitman, vice president at General Motors, said, "Wouldn't it make better sense to create incentives to induce all emitting sources to reduce their emissions rather than focus attention virtually exclusively on one particular activity in responding to the concern about global warming? Because CO_2 is a byproduct of all types of fossil fuel combustion, wouldn't a fee structure tied to the level of carbon content of various fossil fuels be the fairer approach, as well as more effective?"

President Bush, speaking before the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change on February 5, 1990, challenged "As we work to create policy and agreements on action, we want to encourage the most creative approaches. Wherever possible, we believe that market mechanisms should be applied—and that our policies must be consistent with economic growth and free market principles in all countries." The carbon tax meets the challenge of a free market approach. The burning of carbon currently does not pay its societal cost. The tax will ensure that it does.

Mr. Speaker, the carbon tax that I am introducing today is modest in its effort to address carbon dioxide emissions. The tax will bring about a substantial reduction in growth of U.S. carbon dioxide emissions over the next 10 years. The tax is the equivalent of putting a $25 a ton charge on carbon in fuels.

The carbon tax will be phased in over a 5-year period. The tax on coal will be $3 per ton starting in 1991, rising to $15 by 1995. The tax on petroleum will start at $.65 per barrel rising to $3.25. For natural gas, the tax starts at $.08 per MCF rising to $.40 when phased in.

The amount of money raised by the carbon tax is $6 billion in the first year. The carbon tax will rise by approximately $6 billion per year, contributing more than $30 billion per year to deficit reduction when fully implemented.

Mr. Speaker, as the global military threats fade, we must focus on the two things that threaten our national security—environmental destruction and the budget deficit. There is no doubt that a carbon tax can lead the charge in attacking the heart of both of those problems.

CONGRESSMAN ANNUNZIO SALUTES NATION'S POLICE OFFICERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to call to the attention of my colleagues in the House of Representatives that the week of May 13 through 19 will be observed as National Police Week, and I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to the law enforcement officers across our Nation who protect our children and our families and keep our cities and our country safe.

Once a year it is quite fitting for us to recognize these public servants who daily put their lives on the line to protect us from theft, murder, and drug-related crimes which have afflicted our Nation. Their efforts are often taken for granted and go unnoticed, and therefore the celebration of "National Police Week" gives our country a chance to say "thank you."

In 1984 when I became chairman of the House Administration Committee, one of my first actions was to move for swift passage of legislation to build the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial. This memorial, which is now being built solely with private contributions from about one-half million individuals and 200 corporations, is testimony to the respect and admiration our society has for our law enforcement officers, who are at the front line of protecting our homes and our families. This memorial, which is being constructed at Judiciary Square, is expected to be completed in the spring of 1991 and is a stirring tribute to the men and women who have made the ultimate sacrifice for our safety.

March 15 is also the 75th anniversary of Peace Officers Memorial Day. Signed into public law by President Kennedy on October 1, 1962, this legislation pays tribute to the Federal, State, and municipal officers who have been killed or disabled in the line of duty, and recognizes the tremendous service and sacrifice given by the brave men and women, who, night and day, stand vigilant guard to protect our society and enforce our laws.

Mr. Speaker, on the 27th occasion of National Police Week and Peace Officers Memorial Day, I am proud to salute the courageous men and women who risk their lives daily to protect the property, the physical well-being, and the lives of their fellow Americans. Their dedicated and selfless service is most appreciated and worthy of national recognition.

TRIBUTE TO REAR ADM. WILLIAM NARVA UPON HIS RETIREMENT AS ATTENDING PHYSICIAN FOR THE CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and include extraneous material, on the subject of this special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I will just make a few brief comments and then yield to some of my colleagues who are here to honor and recognize Rear Adm. William Narva. I will be brief, and then after my colleagues have spoken, I will make some further remarks.

I have taken this special order to pay tribute to my close friend—and he has many friends—Rear Adm. William Narva, who is stepping down as attending physician for the Congress. He steps down in July. He is leaving Capital Hill, and he is retiring from the U.S. Navy after 35 years of distinguished service.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I yield to the dean of the Congress, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTEN].

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend and colleague SONNY MONTGOMERY in yielding to me. I join with him in expressing my thanks and congratulations for a job well done by Adm. William Narva.

With 35 years of distinguished service in the Navy, his contributions as Capitol physician have meant much to the 435 Members of the House and the 100 Members of the Senate.

To keep the wheels turning, as he has, is a real tribute to his understanding, his professional skill, and his concern.

We join in wishing for Dr. Narva many happy and productive years in his retirement.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to thank the dean of the House of Representatives for taking this time and expressing his warm feelings about Dr. Narva.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. HAWKINS], chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride, respect and admiration that I join in the tribute today for Rear Adm. William Narva who is leaving his job as attending physician for the Congress in July of this year. As many of you know, we are here today to not only pay tribute to the outstanding work Bill Narva has performed for the Congress, but also for his 35 years of distinguished service in the U.S. Navy.

I have known Bill for over 20 years. His professional résumé is indeed impressive. It includes: Heading the Dermatology Service at Bethesda Naval Hospital; directing the Office of the Surgeon General of the Navy Department and serving as vice president of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences at Bethesda; residing as special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy from 1981–86 and consultant to the White House physician for 20 years; and serving as consultant to the attending physician of the Congress for 20 years before taking the job himself in 1986.

Retirement is a difficult crossroad to experience. I know because I will be joining Bill in retirement at the end of my current term. It is however a time to go on to a new level. A time to experience and enjoy different facets of life. A time to pursue new goals and reflect on past accomplishments. For Bill Narva, and his lovely wife Rose, there is much they may proudly pursue.

Being the attending physician to the Congress brings new meaning to the term bipartisan. I'm not sure if Bill is a Republican or a Democrat but I can attest that the quality of his service to both competing parties has been consistent and of the highest quality. Bill has really treated a diverse bunch of people. Think about it.—Democrats, Republicans, Gypsy Moths, Boll Weevils, Liberals, Moderates, Conservatives, Northerners and Southerners, Easterners and Westerners.

With that cast of characters you have to be a top professional. You also have to maintain a sense of humor. That is why Bill would appreciate the following medical anecdote:

A man, having hurt his forehead, was advised to rub it with brandy. Some days after, being asked if he had done so, he answered, "I have tried several times, but can never get the glass higher than my mouth."

I don't think Bill would ever prescribe rum in such cases. In fact, he would be more like the doctor in Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island who cut off one of his patients from drinking any rum. As you may recall, the character, Billy Bones, responds to this medical advice angrily by exclaiming that "doctors is all swabs". I think I speak for every Member in Congress in saying that we don't believe Billy Bones is accurate, especially when we reflect on the caring and compassionate medical service rendered by Dr. Narva.

I will always have special memories of Bill and his service to this institution. His modest and dedicated character remind me in many ways of my own personal view of public service:

The leadership belongs not to the loudest, not to those who beat the drums or blow the trumpets, but to those who day in and day out, in all seasons, work for the practical realization of a better world—those who have the stamina to persist and to remain dedicated. To those belong the leadership.

I wish Bill Narva and his wife Rose great happiness and joy upon embarking on a retirement richly deserved. It has been an honor and a privilege to know him during my tenure in Congress. We will all miss the gentle and caring spirit of this exceptional individual who is truly one of the nation's great Americans.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. HAWKINS] for his very fine remarks. Quite frankly, I do not know what party Bill Narva belongs to either. I just know that he likes the Congress, he loves the Congress, and he has been a great help to all of us.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I yield to another gentleman from California [Mr. MCCANDLESS].

Mr. MCCANDLESS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Mississippi for yielding, and I, too, would like to join in honoring Rear Adm. William Narva upon his retirement.

I do not know of any physician who could have 535 more difficult patients than the attending physician of Congress. Having spent some time in the Marine Corps and experienced military medicine, I came to Congress and learned that down below here we had a clinic attended by Navy doctors and corpsmen, and I thought, well, here we have got an instant repeat of my history.

So when innoculation time came along, I thought, well, this is like going back to boot camp and experiencing other types of vaccinations I had received from the Navy. Then a small personal matter developed and I thought, well, it will be one of these referral type arrangements. But I could not have been more wrong, after seeing the sensitivity with which Dr. Narva and their staff conducted their operation as a clinic on the first floor of the Capitol.

□ 1400

Mr. Speaker, I got to know Dr. Narva after repeated visits for major things, and he came to know me, and we were both interested in the same thing, and that is the 37th District in California. He has had a distinguished career, and his wife, Rose, in her own right has had a distinguished, and continues to have a distinguished career which brought Dr. Narva to the 37th district, and, more specifically, the Palm Springs area where her profession as a resort management type has proved fruitful, and she has now taken over the operation of the Gene Autry Motel-Hotel resort complex, which then will place Dr. Narva, if at all, if not a full-time resident, at least a part-time resident.

Mr. Speaker, with Dr. Narva retirement is just a word. In discussing with him what his plans are, he has a multitude of areas in which he is exploring and will certainly use the word "retirement" in name only, and I am very pleased to have had the opportunity to know him in his profession which has spanned 35 years at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, the Office of the Secretary of the Navy, the consultant to the White House physician and to 535 of probably the most difficult patients that one could find, the Senate and the House.

Mr. Speaker, I wish Dr. Narva and Rose the best in their next careers and look forward to having them as my constituents in the 37th Congressional District, and I thank the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] for taking out this special order.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. MCCANDLESS] for his comments. He had probably known Bill and Rose Narva more than any of us have, and I am proud to have known him for over 20 years.

I say to the gentleman from California, "I assume that when you were in the service, you were friends then."

Mr. MCCANDLESS. I did not have the pleasure of knowing him at the time. My acquaintanceship was after coming to Washington. I was relating to my previous experiences of military medicine which were not always favorable.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. MCCANDLESS] very much for taking the time, and I am privileged to yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY], for reserving this time for us to honor Rear Adm. William Narva who is leaving his post as attending physician for the Congress in July. We gather to pay tribute to a dedicated and committed individual who has done an outstanding job as attending physician of this institution over the past 4 years.

Many of us are familiar with Dr. Narva's distinguished record of service with the U.S. Navy, which spanned 35 years. He began his medical career at Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he interned. His other naval assignments include service on the medical staff of the Oakland and San Diego, CA Naval Hospitals; Chief of Dermatology Service at Bethesda Naval Hospital; Director of the Reserve Division, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Navy Department; and Director of the Office of the Surgeon General, Navy Department. Prior to his current Capitol Hill assignment, Dr. Narva served as Vice President of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences in Bethesda.

Adding to this list of accomplishments is Bill's collateral assignments as Staff Medical Officer, Chief of Medical Operations; Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Navy; Consultant to the White House Physician; and Chairman and Professor of Dermatology at the Uniformed Services University, School of Medicine.

Mr. Speaker, while Dr. Narva has been the House attending physician for only 4 years, he has been attending Members of Congress as a physician for many more years. I have known him for more than 20 years. He ranks among the best in his field and devotes many hours to personally overseeing the medical files of those under his care. More importantly, however, each of us have enjoyed a close friendship with Dr. Narva during his tenure on Capitol Hill. He is always cordial, quick to smile, and has a kind word for everyone. I have personally appreciated his counsel, support and warm friendship over the years.

Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from California [Mr. MCCANDLESS] said, almost invariably anytime one went in to talk to him they knew of the great pride and love he always expressed on behalf of his wife. He has always been so proud of her achievements in the hotel field, and invariably, when I would go in and talk with him, he would always wind up having some conservation about her latest accomplishments or achievements.

So, Mr. Speaker, all of us in this institution will very dearly miss Dr. Narva as he departs Capitol Hill. We want to take this opportunity this afternoon to extend our best wishes to him, to extend to him our appreciation for the friendship he has extended to so many of us over such a long period of years, and again I want to thank the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] for taking this time out and permitting all of us to have this opportunity to express our concerns and best wishes to Bill Narva.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to thank the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], who is also a close friend of Bill Narva's, for taking the time to express himself so well about Dr. Narva.

I would also like to follow up and maybe repeat some of the things that have been said by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] about Bill Narva, but I think they need to be said again.

Mr. Speaker, I have known Bill Narva for more than 20 years. We first met when he was head of the dermatology department at Naval Bethesda. His charming wife Rose had just become general manager of the Sheraton Carlton Hotel on 16th Street, and later she was general manager of the Hay Adams and also the Jefferson Hotel, both on 16th Street here in Washington. They have one son, David, who grew up in Washington and now lives in California. They are wonderful people and have been an asset to Washington as well as to the U.S. Navy.

Admiral Narva was educated at Hofstra College and got his medical degree from Yale University School of Medicine. He went on active duty in the Navy in July 1955. His career stops include work at the Navy hospitals in Oakland and San Diego and then he came to Bethesda Naval Hospital in 1965 to become chief of the dermatology service. He held that position until 1978, when he assumed the job of Director of the Reserve Division of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery with the Navy Department, a post he held for 2 years.

In 1982, he returned to Bethesda to become Vice President of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. He stayed there until becoming attending physician for the Congress in 1986.

When he was at the Navy Department and also at the University, Bill was very helpful in working with the Congress on legislation to more clearly define who should attend the University Medical School and on other issues related to military medicine. His efforts helped improve the quality of health care offered to military personnel and their families.

Ed Derwinski, Secretary of Veterans Affairs, has recently asked Dr. Narva to serve on a 15-member blue ribbon commission to analyze our 172 veterans hospitals, 234 outpatient clinics and nursing homes around the country, to see what changes can be made to improve the delivery of health care to our veterans.

□ 1410

So I want to congratulate the Secretary of Veterans Affairs for picking a person like Admiral Narva, who knows military medicine, who knows veterans' medicine, and he certainly will do an outstanding job working on this blue ribbon commission.

During his career, Bill has also served as Staff Medical Officer for the Chief of Naval Operations from 1970-1981; was Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Navy from 1981-1986; and still serves as Chairman and Professor of Dermatology for the Uniformed Services University School of Medicine. His professional honors include being named Diplomate of the American Board of Dermatology; a fellow of the American Academy of Dermatology and a fellow of the American College of Physicians.

His naval awards include the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal, Defense Superior Service Medal and the Navy Commendation Medal.

Mr. Speaker, I think he really deserves a medal for surviving 4 years as the attending physician here in the Congress of the United States.

I see my colleague, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. DICKINSON] coming in. If the gentleman has any comments, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, I am here on another mission, but I would like to join with my colleague, the gentleman from Mississippi in paying our highest respects and best regards to Dr. Narva. I knew him from the first day he came here, I guess. I had many opportunities to visit with him, to just chat, as well as in professional services.

He will be missed, and I hope that he will not be a stranger around here.

I want to commend the gentleman from Mississippi for taking this special order to commend an outstanding naval officer and gentleman.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Alabama making those remarks.

Further talking about Admiral Narva, from 1966 to 1986, Bill served as a consultant to the White House physician. He has treated Presidents Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, and is a very, very close friend of President Bush.

The attending physician's job in the Congress was also not new to Bill Narva. He had been a consultant to the House attending physician for over 20 years before taking the job himself; so he knew about the problems relating to dealing with this unusual group of people known as the U.S. Congress.

A reception will be held and sponsored by the American Dermatology Association and myself for Admiral Narva and Mrs. Narva. We will have that reception in June.

Let me close by saying, Bill and Rose Narva are great Americans. They have served us well and I am very proud to be here in the well today to honor these two.

There are other Members who would like to have been here today, but because of the adjournment of the House, they have had to get back home to their congressional districts. I have checked at the desk. There are many Members who have put their remarks at the desk that will be in the RECORD.

So thank you, Bill and Rose Narva, for a job well done. You are great Americans.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my distinguished colleague, Chairman SONNY MONTGOMERY of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, in paying tribute to Rear Adm. William Narva, M.D., the attending physician of the U.S. Congress, who is retiring from the Navy after 35 years of dedicated service.

Bill has served our country with distinction in the U.S. Navy. Furthermore, as attending physician of the Congress, he has discharged his professional responsibilities with a devotion and commitment which has earned him the admiration and respect of all of us in the House of Representatives who have had the privilege of knowing him as a friend, and who have depended on his advice, counsel, and judgment.

Before coming to the Congress, Bill Narva served as a consultant to the White House physician and consultant to the attending physician of Congress for 20 years. He had compiled an outstanding record of achievement as head of the dermatology service at Bethesda Naval Hospital, as Director of the Office of the Surgeon General of the Navy Department, and as Vice President of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences at Bethesda. He also served as Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Narva has been a compassionate and competent physician, who has provided exemplary professional service to the Members of Congress.

I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in congratulating Bill on his 35 years of outstanding service to our country, and in extending to him, and his wife, Rose, my best wishes for a healthy and happy retirement.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Rear Adm. William Narva who has announced his impending retirement from the Navy and from his position as attending physician for the Congress. I salute Rear Admiral Narva not only for the invaluable service he has provided Members of Congress these past 4 years but also for his successful and exemplary career in the U.S. Navy.

Bill's naval career spans 35 years, during which time he has held such distinguished assignments as consultant to the White House physician; Vice President of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences at Bethesda; and Director of the Department of Navy's Office of the Surgeon General. Bill's naval awards include a Navy Commendation Medal, a Navy Meritorious Service Medal, and a Legion of Merit, which reflect his hard work and dedication to both Navy and country.

Seldom does a man stand out like Bill, a shining example to those who have the character and ability to follow in his distinguished path. I salute Bill Narva for his achievements in the U.S. Navy and for his outstanding service to his country.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleagues in paying tribute to Rear Adm. William Narva, who is the attending physician for the Congress and will soon be retiring after an illustrious career in the Navy spanning 35 years. I know he will truly be missed.

Knowing that Bill has been on the job as attending physician for the past 4 years has been a great comfort to me, personally, as I know it has been to so many of my colleagues. I have sought Bill's advice and counsel on many occasions, and I can tell you his knowledge and expertise are without equal.

Mr. Speaker, I also have great admiration for Bill for all that he accomplished before becoming the attending physician in 1986. He was the head of the dermatology service at Bethesda Naval Hospital; he directed the Office of the Surgeon General of the Navy Department, and he served as Vice President of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences at Bethesda. He was also a special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy from 1981 to 1986, and served as a consultant to the attending physician of Congress for 20 years before taking the job himself in 1986.

I want to wish Rear Adm. William Narva my heartiest congratulations on an outstanding career of service to our Nation, and all my best in his retirement.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, today we pay tribute to a man who has had a long and distinguished military career. Rear Adm. William Narva, who has served as the attending physician of the Congress since 1986, and a former consultant to the attending physician of Congress for 20 years, is retiring from the Navy.

In his 35 years of service, Bill has proved himself to be an outstanding physician, as well as a good friend to many Members of Congress. He has served as Chief of the Dermatology Service at Bethesda Naval Hospital, Director of the Reserve Division of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, the Director of the Navy's Office of the Surgeon General, and vice president of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences at Bethesda.

His collateral assignments included staff medical officer, Chief of Naval Operations; special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy; consultant to the White House physician; and chairman and professor of dermatology at the Uniformed Services University School of Medicine.

The Navy has recognized his achievements over the years by awarding him the Defense Superior Medal, the Legion of Merit, the Navy Meritorious Service Medal, and the Navy Commendation Medal.

We will miss Bill and his wife, Rose. We have relied on his advice and counsel for years. I know I speak for the House membership when I say that we wish him the very best in the years to come.

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, one of our coworkers is going to be missing from action beginning next July.

Our affable and talented friend, Adm. William Narva is leaving us. He is also leaving us with fond memories.

We shall miss him and hope that he will not be a stranger in these quarters in the future.

We wish you Godspeed, Admiral Narva.

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my most heartfelt appreciation to Rear Adm. William Narva, who is retiring from the U.S. Navy after 35 years of service to his country. For the past 4 years, Dr. Narva has served as the attending physician for the Congress, and with his retirement there is no doubt that this institution is losing a compassionate and caring doctor and friend.

At one time or another, most Members, like myself, have had to rely on Dr. Narva for medical advice, counsel, and treatment here in Washington. Whether he was giving detailed medical advice on important matters, or dispensing medicines for colds and sore throats to help us make it through a day of meetings, hearings, debates, and speeches, Dr. Narva treated Members with the utmost of professionalism and personal concern for whatever was ailing them.

Although we will sorely miss Dr. Narva, we can join him in celebrating his retirement from Government service. After 35 years of hard work for the country—working his way up to the rank of rear admiral and serving the Congress first as consultant to the attending physician and then as attending physician—Dr. Narva has earned many times over the retirement he is embarking upon. I am certain that all Members of Congress join me in thanking Dr. Narva for his service and wishing him the best of luck and happiness during his retirement.

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, I would like to join the distinguished Member from Mississippi, SONNY MONTGOMERY, and my other House colleagues in honoring Rear Adm. William Narva, the attending physician for the Congress.

It has been a great pleasure for me to become acquainted with Rear Admiral Narva. His service to Members of Congress is much appreciated. I can certainly attest to the fine treatment he has provided this Member for some of the ailments that have occasionally afflicted me.

More importantly, I can attest to Rear Admiral Narva's gentle hand and positive and friendly attitude. Like some of my colleagues and fellow Americans, I have an uneasiness when it comes to visiting the doctor. But when I have visited the attending physician's office, Rear Admiral Narva immediately allays my uneasiness. He quickly and thoroughly assesses the medical condition and prescribes the necessary treatment or medication. All this he does in the friendliness of manner and with the high degree of professionalism common to an individual of his rank, experience, and ability.

I thank Rear Admiral Narva for the kindness he has extended to me over the last 2½ years and I wish him and his wife the very best on his retirement from the U.S. Navy.

Mrs. SAIKI. Mr. Speaker, aloha and congratulations to Dr. Narva upon his retirement from the U.S. Navy. Thirty-five years of dedicated service to our country is truly a momentous undertaking and deserving of this special recognition.

Many Members both past and present want to share in honoring Bill and his wife, Rose, today for Bill's 20 years as consultant to the attending physician of the Congress, as well as attending physician the last 4 years.

Bill began his tenure as the attending physician when I came to the Congress 4 years ago. He helped me initially when I was overcome with a rash, something described as "Democrat dermatitis." I have since developed some immunity to that. But seriously, I have enjoyed my years of friendship which has developed as a result of his professional care.

Bill, I hope you and Rose take the time in your retirement to do all of the things you have wanted to do for so long. We will truly miss you, your manner and expertise. And yes, we will be a little jealous of you on those nights when we burn the midnight oil. Think of us every now and then.

Aloha and may God bless you and yours.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute and to bid farewell to a man who has served as attending physician for Congress for 4 years, Adm. William Narva. His knowledge and expertise in the field of medicine are truly outstanding, and his work is to be commended.

Admiral Narva received his bachelor of arts degree from Hofstra College in 1952, and went on to receive his doctorate in medicine from Yale University in 1956. Admiral Narva did his internship at the naval hospital in Bethesda, MD, in 1956, his specialty residency in dermatology at the naval hospital in San Diego in 1957, and went on to do his postgraduate training at the USC School of Medicine in Los Angeles, CA.

Admiral Narva's naval assignments date back to 1955, when he began active duty. He would go on to serve on the medical staff in both Oakland and San Diego's naval hospitals. Additionally, he served as Chief of Dermatology Service at the naval hospital in Bethesda, MD, and as Director of both the Reserve Division of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery and the Office of the Surgeon General, Navy Department. From 1982 to 1986 he served as Vice President of the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences in Bethesda, MD, and he will close another segment of his distinguished career when he steps down as attending physician for the Congress of the United States in July 1990.

His many accomplishments and efforts have been rewarded through his receipt of the Defense Superior Service Medal, the Legion of Merit Award, the Navy Meritorious Service Medal, and the Navy Commendation Medal.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of all my colleagues and those who value a high quality of health service for our Nation, I pay honor to the tireless efforts of Adm. William M. Narva as he leaves his position as attending physician. I would like to personally thank him for his contributions to the field of medicine and wish him much success in his future endeavors.

Mr. GUARINI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has given his best to Congress during his 4 years as attending physician.

I have come to know Dr. William Narva well since he first came to us 4 years ago. He is a competent, dedicated professional who helped make things easier for all us here in Congress. He has been trusted with personal problems at the very highest levels, and performed throughout his career with a spirit of decency and compassion.

Dr. Narva has always struck me as a person who loves people. He never let his impressive achievements get in the way of his enjoyment of people and commitment to helping his fellow man. It is this dedication to serving others—combined with his vast medical understanding—that has made so many of us feel comfortable, confiding with him our most private concerns.

Unlike many successful academic professionals, Dr. Narva's life reaches beyond the ivory tower of our Nation's top educational institutions. He grew up on the streets of Brooklyn, where he learned to appreciate the feelings, motivations, and dreams of the common man. It is his intuitive understanding of people and genuine desire to help them that have made him such a good doctor, and such a good friend to so many of us.

I am sure that, during his 4 years serving Congress, Admiral Narva has learned more about Congress' aches and pains, and warts than any Capitol Hill reporter. It is a tribute to his abilities that he has managed to keep all of us—the tall and the short, the young and the old, the thin and the not-so-thin—healthy and able to go on with the business of the people.

I know that I speak for all of us when I say that Bill has become a fixture here in the Capitol and that he will be sorely missed. We have all gained comfort from his guidance. I wish him well in the new challenges that await him.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, it is with mixed feelings that I bid farewell and bon voyage to our great friend and physician, Adm. Bill Narva. On the one hand, I am very happy that a person who has contributed so much to his country can look forward to a well-earned retirement. But, on the other hand, I am going to miss his friendship and counsel very much.

Bill Narva is a Navy man in the classic sense. He is a patriot of the first order, and his service to America should be emulated by every young man and woman who aspires to a career in the U.S. Navy.

I am particularly indebted to Bill because, during a trying period in my life when I suffered from breathing problems, his advice and counsel helped me to understand the medical situation. Not only did he provide medical advice and assistance, but he spent time locating specialists who could assist me.

The job of the attending physician is very difficult, and it demands long hours away from family and friends. In short, it requires dedication and commitment. We are all very fortunate that Rear Adm. William Narva possesses these attributes, and I can certainly testify that he is a physician and friend without equal. I will follow his future endeavors with strong support and interest.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, along with several of my colleagues, I too rise today to recognize and thank Rear Adm. William Narva for 4 years of dedication and excellent service to the Congress throughout his tenure as attending physician.

Preceding his duty as attending physician, Dr. Narva had a celebrated career in the U.S. Navy which spanned across three decades. During that time, among other roles, he served as special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy from 1981 to 1986 and consultant to the White House physician.

At this time, I should like to wish Bill, and his wife Rose, all the best with their future endeavors.

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my colleagues in thanking and saying good-bye to Adm. William Narva. This remarkable American has devoted 35 years of his life to the service of our country. And, within the Congress, we have been fortunate indeed to call Admiral Narva our doctor for the past 4 years.

I consider Bill Narva my friend, even though he often ordered me away from the delicious New York foods that I love the most—those with the high cholesterol count.

Many times he made a personal sacrifice and separated me from a corned beef sandwich, which he would then eat himself in order to save me.

He also certainly has been a friend to this House. As consultant to the Attending Physician to the Congress from 1966 through the assumption of that position himself in 1986, Admiral Narva has offered wise counsel and advice to all of us.

Permit me for a moment, Mr. Speaker, to touch upon just a few of Bill's other accomplishments. He holds the Defense Superior Service Medal, the Legion of Merit, the Navy Meritorious Service Medal, and the Navy Commendation Medal.

The good Doctor headed the Dermatology Service at Bethesda Naval Hospital. He was the man in charge of the Surgeon General's Office at the Navy Department. The Admiral also has served as special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy and, for two decades, he was consultant to the White House Physician.

In short, Mr. Speaker, this great American has given a great deal of talent, energy, and creativity to all of us. And, he permitted us to answer the question, "Is there a Doctor in the House?"

Goodbye, Bill. Thank you. We all wish you good luck and good health. I will miss you.

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Speaker, it is both a joy and a sorrow to say goodbye to Adm. William Narva. A sorrow to see a good man leave, but a joy to wish him well as he begins a new path in life.

Bill Narva has a long and distinguished career in the Navy and the health care field. He has served in the House as long as I have, and I know we all will miss his care and counsel.

I wish only the very best for Bill and his wife Rose, who has her own brilliant career as an interior designer.

It is an honor to have known them and called both of them my friends.

IN MEMORY OF LT. ALGERNON POPE GORDON, JR.

(Mr. DICKINSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, I have a sad thing to do today. Tuesday, a fire on board the U.S.S. Conyngham resulted in the death of her operations officer, and injuries to 12 others of her crew. I am deeply saddened to note that this unfortunate mishap claimed the life of a constituent of mine, Lt. Algernon Pope Gordon, Jr., of Montgomery, AL.

Serving in the military, whether in time of peace or war, is potentially dangerous duty which is recognized by all the services. Pope joined the Navy knowing the risks involved, and served his country with unselfish dedication.

News reports today say Pope acted heroically during the Conyngham fire, by ignoring the flames to alert sleeping crewmembers of the danger. He died a hero after saving his roommate. Accordingly, the Navy will posthumously promote Pope to the rank of lieutenant commander.

Pope's 11-year naval career included service on the U.S.S. MacDonough, the U.S.S. Fidelity, the U.S.S. Fearless, and as of July 1989—the U.S.S. Conyngham. He also spent 2 years as a Navy recruiting officer in his hometown of Montgomery.

Today, my heart goes out to Pope's wife, Shirley and his three children in their time of grief. Pope is also survived by his parents, Jean and Pope, Sr., of Montgomery.

For those lucky enough to know him and serve with him, Lt. Pope Gordon was a true friend. For Alabamians and all Americans, he is a role model of character, compassion and heroism.

THE DEFICIT CRISIS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I was surprised, I was actually astounded this morning to hear a commentator on one of this morning's network news programs declare that he could not see any reason for a budget summit, since the deficit was coming down anyway.

Down, Mr. Speaker? Where have the media people been? The reason for the budget summit, in case they do not understand it, is that the announced deficit numbers are so far out of touch with reality that even the business-as-usual people here in the Congress cannot fudge these numbers any longer.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that no real progress, none whatsoever, has been made on the deficit over the last 7 years. In 1983, the United States owed about $1.4 trillion. By the end of this year, we will owe about $3.4 trillion, or an average additional borrowing of about $250 billion a year over this period of time. This is the place to look for the real deficit numbers, Mr. Speaker, and the view is not a pretty one at all.

The only reason the announced deficit numbers even appear to look better is that Congress is now counting the annual increase in the Social Security trust fund on the revenue side, $65 billion worth this year, so you can simply add back to the announced numbers at least $65 billion, because that is not really revenue. What it really is, is an accruing liability, an obligation of the Government to pay retirement benefits in the next century that has to be there if we are going to provide a retirement for the baby boomers, if we are going to have a Social Security system that works anything like the one we have today, and we have a very fine one today indeed. That money should not be counted on the side of reducing the deficit. It is an obligation of government and an ongoing obligation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, to tell you how bad the deficit situation really is, consider this: My colleague, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], proposed earlier this year a deficit reduction plan to bring the budget into balance over a 5-year period. The plan called for spending controls and new revenues of $500 billion over the next 5 years, one-half of a trillion dollars; but even under that plan, with its very heavy burdens, nevertheless he relied on the Social Security trust fund buildup of $350 to $400 billion additional in FICA taxes to make the numbers come out right.

So, Mr. Speaker, what is really needed to bring the deficit under control in the next 5 years is not one-half of a trillion dollars, it is closer to $1 trillion, whether it is in spending cuts or whether it is in new revenue.

That does not even include the amounts that are accruing for the S&L bailout, which is off-budget. Those are not even being counted in the figures.

If anyone out there, particularly people from the media who ought to know better, believe the deficit is coming down, Mr. Speaker, they are living in some make-believe world. The deficit problem is real.

We are making no progress. We are stealing the Social Security trust fund to make the numbers look better. Huge amounts are off-budget and not even being counted, though they add directly to the Government's huge borrowing requirements. We are heavily dependent on foreign capital to carry this enormous burden of ongoing debt and, incredibly, we blame foreign investors for our problems, when by consuming instead of savings, by running these enormous deficits, we have made it impossible to continue this consumption without their funds.

□ 1440

After fudging the numbers for 7 years, Mr. Speaker, each year increasingly diverging from reality, we have reached the point of crisis, unable to paper over the deficit any longer, Mr. Speaker, and some in the media cannot even see the problem. With this kind of perceptiveness, Mr. Speaker, it is no wonder we are where we are.

This is a serious problem for the United States of America. The people in the media have to understand it and have to tell the American people how bad it is. We have to get to grips with it and solve it, and we have to solve it soon.

FIFTY BILLION IN NO-YEAR DEFENSE MONEY: A RECIPE FOR ABUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. IRELAND] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a report on the "M" and "Merged Surplus" accounts of the Department of Defense [DOD]. Their accounts are made of no-year money. They are appropriations that have lost their "fiscal year identity" and are merged together in one big pot that remains available indefinitely or until spent.

At the present time, the balance in these two accounts is growing rapidly and now exceeds $50 billion. With no accountability, with no regular statement of accounts required, with no procedures in place for reviewing these accounts, and very little information on balances and transactions, we have created a situation ripe for abuse.

Mr. Speaker, I want to dispel one myth concerning these accounts right now. Those in the bureaucracy, who tap them, would like us to believe that this is not real money. True, there is not a big pile of cash stashed in a vault somewhere, but those accounts are drawn on to pay bills with considerable regularity. In fiscal year 1989, for example, $3,874,000,000 was paid out of the "M" account. That's a fair piece of change.

This is first of three reports I plan to present on the subject. It is the result of a 6-month study and provides a brief description of the two accounts, the underlying legal authority for their existence, growth in dollar balances in the accounts, and concerns about possible abuse.

My purpose today is to begin to shed some light on this very difficult and complex problem. Information is not readily available. What information is available is difficult to decipher and then is either misunderstood or not understood at all—even by Government financial officials responsible for such matters.

For starters, the terminology is confusing. DOD budget officials use technical terms like "lapsed budget authority" or "expired appropriations" or "surplus fund" and "merged' and "restorations" when discussing these accounts. Others call them "no-year" appropriations. Critics say it is nothing but a "slush fund." At this point, I am not sure what it is.

I hope to clear up some of the confusion.

Mr. Speaker, before I proceed with my report, I would like to make one point very clear.

The legal issues addressed in this report are drawn primarily from reports prepared by the DOD, General Accounting Office [GAO], DOD Inspector General [IG], and American Law Division of the Congressional Research Service. These conclusions are not definitive. For me, the legality of all the issues surrounding the "M" and "Merged Surplus" accounts remain open questions. Those portions of the law that need to be tightened up will be discussed in my final report.

NO-YEAR MONEY AND CONSTITUTION

Since coming to Congress in 1976, I have labored under a terrible misconception. I thought that when we appropriated money for DOD, or any other agency for that matter, it remained available for obligation for a specific period of time. I thought it had a specific life span.

Now I know better. For me, the newly found knowledge is disturbing though, since our laws seem to be at odds with our Constitution and each other.

Clearly, article I, section 8 of the Constitution places very strict limits on the availability of appropriations for the armies—Navy is not subject to limits. It states that "no appropriation of money shall be for a longer term than 2 years."

Given the strict limitations imposed by the Constitution, how is it that defense money can remain available for expenditures indefinitely or until spent or forever. No-year money is not consistent with the Constitution. Is Congress empowered to create it? Is it illegal?

ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS BILLS

Most of the confusion concerning the life span of Federal money flows from annual appropriations bills.

Annual appropriations acts do make appropriations available for specified periods of time. Take, for example, the fiscal year 1990 DOD Appropriations Act.

Under that legislation, appropriations for military personnel and operation and maintenance remain available for obligation until September 30, 1990, or for just 1 year. Other appropriations, such as moneys for procurement or research and development, remain available for longer periods of time—most until September 30, 1991-92 or for 2 to 3 years, and in the case of Navy shipbuilding, for 5 years or longer.

The periods of availability specified in annual appropriations bills do not mean what you think they mean. Yes, they do, in fact, establish a finite period in the life of those moneys, but not the whole life. It is only the beginning of a long life.

When the deadlines in annual appropriations bills are reached, those moneys do not cease to exist or be available for expenditure. They are not returned to the Treasury and wiped off the books. No indeed. They take on a life of their own.

ESTABLISHMENT OF "M" AND SURPLUS ACCOUNTS—1956

When the authority in annual appropriations bills expires, another body of law takes control and pumps new life into so-called expired appropriations. It makes them immortal, section 1552 of title 31, United States Code takes over.

Although section 1552 applies to all agencies, it was proposed and enacted into law to meet DOD's special needs. Because of the long lead times required to procure increasingly sophisticated equipment, and to allow for "price redetermination and escalation clauses in long-term contracts," DOD wanted and got "more flexibility in the accounting for funds" to adjust obligated balances to "liquidate delayed bills."

To address those concerns, section 1552 established two separate tracks for expired appropriations: one for obligated funds and one for unobligated funds.

UNOBLIGATED BALANCES—MERGED SURPLUS ACCOUNT

After expiring, unobligated appropriations are transferred to the Treasury where they are designated as surplus authority. They then enter a 2-year transitional phase. During those 2 years, they maintain their fiscal year identity. At the end of those 2 years, however, the unobligated balances lapse and become "merged surplus authority." They are merged together with other expired appropriations.

While these are forever identified with the appropriation account from which they were originally derived, for example, Air Force aircraft procurement, line-item detail and fiscal year identity are lost. In this way, they become no-year appropriations, remaining available indefinitely.

OBLIGATED BALANCES—"M" ACCOUNT

Obligated balances, which expire, are handled in a similar fashion but go to a different compartment. After the 2-year transitional phase, they are transferred to an "M" account. Like surplus authority, after passing through the 2-year transitional phase, they too lose their fiscal year identity.

PROCEDURES GOVERNING USE OF EXPIRED MONEY

The balances in both the merged surplus and "M" accounts remain at the disposal of an agency head until expended. There are essentially no restrictions as to when lapsed moneys drawn from those accounts can be spent, but the law—title 31—imposes strict limitations on when those funds can be obligated—section 1502—and the "documentary evidence" needed to validate contractual obligations—section 1501.

Lapsed moneys are supposed to be used to pay existing obligations or to cover adjustments to existing obligations that are chargeable against any appropriation from which the account is derived. However, use of these moneys to cover adjusted obligations does not authorize the agency to expand the scope of work for which the obligation was originally created.

CONFLICT WITH ANTIDEFICIENCY ACT

The prohibition against expanding the scope of work of old contracts is difficult to enforce with the "M" and "Merged Surplus" accounts lurking in the background. These funds are not subject to the same strict rules that limit obligations and expenditures. When appropriations expire and lose their fiscal year identity, existing legal controls become almost unenforceable.

The existence of the "M" and "Merged Surplus" accounts allows the military services to circumvent the Antideficiency Act.

The Antideficiency Act prohibits any person in Government from making or authorizing an expenditure or obligation that exceeds the amount available in an appropriation or fund from which the obligation is made or the expenditure is paid. This piece of legislation is a source of fear to those who handle Federal money, since a violation carries a criminal penalty, including a fine and/or jail sentence.

Once an appropriation balance reaches an "M" account and loses its fiscal year identity, it is no longer susceptible to violations of the Antideficiency Act. By law section 1551, an "M" account balance is available to pay any obligation attributable to any of the appropriations from which it is derived. Consequently, payments from an "M" account need not be related to specified balances of appropriations transferred to it.

LACK OF CONTROLS

Congress has little or no control over these funds. Nor does the Secretary of Defense or the Treasury. The military services decide how and when these resources are obligated and expended.

If the transaction is under $100,000, no authorization is required. A program manager can make that determination. For amounts in excess of $500,000, a comptroller must approve it. Amounts in excess of $4 million are subject to approval by the Secretary of Defense. Only transactions above $25 million are reported to Congress—a new requirement resulting from fiscal year 1990 legislation.

Since the legislation took effect, just one notification has been submitted to Congress. Dated January 24, 1990, it asks Congress to review that air force plan to take $418 million from the "M" account to fix the B-1B defensive avionics suite (ALQ-161A). The Senate Appropriations Committee balked, and now the Air Force is prepared to resubmit the request.

GROWING BALANCES

While the architects of section 1552 thought the legislation would help to reduce the carryover of unexpended balances in appropriations, it has had the opposite effect.

Initially, in the 1960's and 1970's the combined balances in these two accounts remained relatively low, but in the 1980's they experienced astronomical growth—rising from essentially nothing in the early 1970's to about $2 billion in 1979 to $17.9 billion in 1980 to $43.9 billion in 1989, according to figures for the Army, Navy, and Air Force provided by the GAO. When amounts held by the various Defense Agencies are included, DOD says the total on October 1, 1989 was $50.5 billion.

Rapid growth in the "M" and "Merged Surplus" accounts, according to the House Appropriations Committee, can be attributed to several factors, including: First, excessive obligations for contingent liabilities that never materialize; second, shift to long-term investments that obligate over a longer period; third, reluctance to eliminate invalid contractual obligations; and fourth, inclusion of retirement and severance pay for foreign national civilian employees.

I think there may be one additional reason for the rapid growth in these accounts in the 1980's. Congress appropriated more money than DOD could possibly spend. It's simple as that.

POTENTIAL ABUSES

In adopting section 1552, Congress insisted that restorations, or transactions in and out of these accounts be held to a minimum, and to preclude abuse of the authority, a proviso was added in 1956, requiring agencies to report each transaction to the Appropriations Committees, the Comptroller General, and Bureau of the Budget, but this reporting requirement was later repealed.

With $50 billion in no-year appropriations floating around coupled with an apparent laxity at the Pentagon in enforcing "scope of work" limitations, the potential for abuse exists—and abuses have occurred. The temptation is to use the funds for purposes not originally intended by Congress. We know of at least two instances of documented abuse, which I will discuss in my next report, and abuses may have occurred about which we know nothing.

Mr. Speaker, in my mind there is ample reason to be concerned about the management of these accounts. The GAO and DOD IG have issued a number of reports on the problems, which pinpoint areas where the greatest deficiencies exist. Both seem to have arrived at the same conclusion—a vast majority of sums in the "M" account are obligated against invalid contracts:

Poor accounting practices make it very difficult to reconcile records:

"M" accounts are inflated by invalid balances that should be deobligated;

"M" accounts include obligation for contracts that have been completed—items delivered—but have not been closed out due to a backlog of contract audits;

Failure to maintain detailed line item accounting in "M" accounts makes them susceptible to duplicate and erroneous payments.

Account management, procedures, and controls for the "M" and Merged Surplus Accounts are weak. They are atrocious. They are ripe for abuse. We have a responsibility to address these issues legislatively.

In addition, use of the "M" account as a retirement fund for foreign nationals is clearly an unacceptable practice. Payments to foreign nationals from the DOD continues to be a sensitive political issue. For that reason, those costs need greater visibility and scrutiny. A special fund should be established to budget and account for those expenses.

Mr. Speaker, I place at this point, a short report in the RECORD prepared at my request by the General Accounting Office. It is dated April 9, 1990. It provides an excellent overview of DOD's expired and lapsed budget authority balances.

The GAO report is a good starting point for discussion.

In the near future, I will present my next report. It will focus on several documented cases of abuse and possible circumvention of the Antideficiency Act. The final report will propose legislation to reinject some accountability and attempt to restore control over $50 billion in no-year money.

U.S. GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE,
NATIONAL SECURITY AND INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS DIVISION,
Washington, DC, April 9, 1990.

As you requested, this letter summarizes the information we discussed with you during our meeting on March 7, 1990, and in subsequent discussions concerning our review of the Department of Defense's use of expired and lapsed budget authority balances.

BACKGROUND

In 1956, Congress established the "M" and Merged Surplus Authority (MSA) accounts for the purpose of streamlining the method by which agencies pay obligations resulting from prior year activities. In our opinion, Congress did not expect these accounts to accumulate large balances. However, our historical analysis of these accounts has shown considerable growth since their creation. Further, the Congress has repeatedly expressed concern over the growth of the "M" and the MSA accounts and more recently over their possible misuse.

"M" accounts are accounts maintained by the agencies by appropriation into which unliquidated obligated balances are transferred. The balances in these accounts have lost fiscal year identity and are merged with other balances from appropriation accounts for the same general purposes e.g., Air Force aircraft procurement. "M" account balances are used for the payment of valid, previously incurred obligations. MSA accounts are Treasury accounts maintained by the agencies into which unobligated and deobligated balances have been withdrawn. The balances in these accounts also lose fiscal year identity and are merged with other amounts from appropriation accounts for the same general purpose. The MSA account balances can be restored to the "M" accounts for the payment of a valid upward adjustment to prior obligations which were previously incurred by an agency.

PERTINENT LEGISLATION

In 1956, Congress enacted Public Law 84-798, dated July 25, 1956. This law, among other things: created the "M" and what is now known as the MSA accounts; transferred the responsibility for the payment of unliquidated obligations from GAO to the agencies incurring the obligation; made the "M" accounts balances available for the payment of previously incurred obligations and made the MSA balances available for restoration to the "M" account; and allowed all appropriations to remain in an expired state for two fiscal years before lapsing into the "M" and MSA accounts.

In addition, the law states that once these appropriations expire, they are no longer available for new obligations. However, since 1984, legislation has followed shipbuilding to incur new obligations for final ship construction, engineering, tests and evaluations after expiration of the appropriation.

DOD'S "M" AND MSA BALANCES

The Army, Navy, and Air Force's "M" account balances totalled about $18 billion at the end of fiscal year 1989. At September 30, 1989 the services' MSA account totalled $25 billion. Figure 2 shows the various balances in DOD's "M" and MSA accounts between fiscal years 1980 and 1989. It is important to note that the balances in these accounts do not represent cash actually set aside by the Treasury. If an agency decides to use these accounts, the Treasury would then have to provide the means to finance the proposed action.

Figure 2: Army, Navy, and Air Force's Lapsed Authority From Fiscal Year Ending September 30, 1980 Through September 30, 1989:

[In thousands of dollars]

Fiscal year	M	MSA
1980	2,741,706	15,184,989
1981	3,367,883	15,278,549
1982	3,349,629	16,262,746
1983	4,205,433	18,422,910
1984	5,016,975	18,292,124
1985	6,744,759	19,817,631
1986	9,571,045	21,299,887
1987	12,366,323	22,797,271
1988	15,032,101	24,367,680
1989	18,498,882	25,394,462

RECENT LEGISLATION PERTAINING TO USE OF LAPSED AUTHORITY

As a result of the congressional interest generated by the Air Force's use of expired and lapsed authority, Congress has recently placed limitations on the services' ability to restore these funds. The National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal years 1990 and 1991, P.L. 101-189, dated November 29, 1989, requires the Secretary of Defense to approve a restoration from the MSA account which would cause the total amount of restorations for a program, project or activity to exceed $4 million within a fiscal year. Under the same conditions, a restoration causing the total amount of restoration to exceed $25 million in a fiscal year would require a 30-day advance notification to the Committees on Armed Services and Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives in writing, stating the intent to restore such funds, together with a description of the legal basis and policy reasons for the proposed action.

The information discussed above is being developed as part of our review of the Department of Defense's use of expired and lapsed authority. As you know, this review is being conducted at the request of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, Subcommittee on Defense. The objectives of the review are to determine (1) what legislation, regulations, policies, and procedures govern the use of expired and lapsed authority; (2) how the balances in the expired and lapsed authority accounts have grown; (3) how the expired and lapsed authority has been used; and (4) what the process is for approving/denying the use of expired and lapsed authority.

We plan to provide you with a copy of our report when it is released. Also, we will make every attempt to keep you informed of the results of our work as it progresses. We hope this information meets your current needs. If you have any questions, please contact me on 275-4262 or Pathelia Batchelor, Evaluator-in-Charge on 275-0224.

Sincerely,

STEVEN F. KUHTA,
Assistant Director, Air Force Issues.

□ 1440

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] is recognized for 60 minutes.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. MCCANDLESS) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. PETRI, for 60 minutes, on May 17.

Mr. GINGRICH, for 60 minutes each day, on May 14, 15, 16, and 17.

Mr. WOLF, for 30 minutes each day, on today and May 14.

Mr. PORTER, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. MCEWEN, for 60 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Ms. PELOSI) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. CARPER, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. STARK, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ANNUNZIO, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. GLICKMAN, for 60 minutes, on May 14.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, permission to revise and extend remarks was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. MCCANDLESS) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. BOEHLERT.
Mr. BEREUTER.
Mr. SCHUETTE.
Mr. DORNAN of California.
Mr. RINALDO.
Mr. MACHTLEY.
Mr. ARMEY.
Mr. PORTER.
Mr. MICHEL.

(The following Members (at the request of Ms. PELOSI) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. FASCELL in three instances.
Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA.
Mr. DONNELLY.
Mr. MATSUI.
Mr. NELSON of Florida.
Mr. KOSTMAYER.
Mr. MILLER of California.
Mr. LAFALCE.
Mr. WILLIAMS.
Mr. STARK in three instances.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION

A joint resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S.J. Res. 286. Joint resolution to designate the week beginning May 6, 1990, as "National Correctional Officers Week"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 40 minutes p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until Monday, May 14, 1990, at 12 noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

3157. A letter from the Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, transmitting a copy of the price availability report for the quarter ending 31 March 1990, pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2768; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

3158. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of State for Legislative Affairs, transmitting copies of the original reports of political contributions by Joseph Edward Lake, of Texas and William Bodde, Jr., of Maryland, ambassadors designate and members of their families, pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 3944(b)(2); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

3159. A letter from the Chairman, National Transportation Safety Board, transmitting the inspector general's audit of fiscal year 1989 personnel and payroll, time and attendance, and procurement activities, pursuant to Public Law 95-452, section 5(b) (102 Stat. 2526); to the Committee on Government Operations.

3160. A letter from the Attorney General, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to encourage innovation and productivity, stimulate trade, and promote the competitiveness and technological leadership of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3161. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to assess fees at fair market value to special beneficiaries of National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration data and information, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. GEJDENSON: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H.R. 4653. A bill to reauthorize the Export Administration Act of 1979, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. 101-482). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

REPORTED BILLS SEQUENTIALLY REFERRED

Under clause 5 of rule X, bills and reports were delivered to the Clerk for printing, and bills referred as follows:

Mr. ROE: Committee on Science, Space, and Technology. H.R. 4329. A bill to enhance the position of U.S. industry through application of the results of Federal research and development, and for other purposes; with an amendment; referred to the Committee on the Judiciary for a period ending not later than June 11, 1990, for consideration of such provisions of the bill and amendment as fall within the jurisdiction of that committee pursuant to clause 1(m), Rule X (Rept. 101-481, Pt. 1). Ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 5 of rule X and clause 4 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BEREUTER:

H.R. 4782. A bill to establish an environmental restoration program in the Department of Agriculture to provide for the cleanup of releases of hazardous substances, including groundwater contaminants, from facilities owned or formerly owned by the Department of Agriculture (including grain storage facilities), and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committee on Agriculture; Energy and Commerce; and Science, Space, and Technology.

By Mr. BEREUTER (for himself, Mr. HALL of Ohio, Mr. PENNY, and Mr. GILMAN):

H.R. 4783. A bill to amend the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 to authorize the P.L. 480 Food for Peace Program for fiscal years 1991 to 1995 in order to combat world hunger, promote economic development, expand international trade, develop and expand agricultural export markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, and foster private enterprise and democratic development in the world; jointly, to the Committee on Agriculture and Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of California:

H.R. 4784. A bill to ensure that the status of musicians as either employees or independent contractors under the National Labor Relations Act is determined under the same criteria as are applied to other workers; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. WAXMAN:

H.R. 4785. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish a program of grants to provide preventive health services with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. DEFAZIO:

H.R. 4786. A bill to amend section 5547 of title 5, United States Code, to include certain employees of the Department of Commerce within the definition of the term "forest firefighter"; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. DIXON:

H.R. 4787. A bill to correct the tariff classification of monoculars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DONNELLY (for himself, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. HERTEL, Mr. RUSSO, Mr. WOLPE, Mr. GEJDENSON, and Mrs. KENNELLY):

H.R. 4788. A bill to protect the status of certain nationals of Lithuania in the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ECKART (for himself and Mr. FEIGHAN):

H.R. 4789. A bill to provide authority to railroad police officers to cross jurisdictional boundaries for the protection of interstate commerce and the security of the U.S. railway system; jointly, to the Committees on Energy and Commerce and the Judiciary.

By Mr. WAXMAN (for himself, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. DINGELL, Mr. LENT, Mrs. SCHROEDER, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. MARKEY, Mr. WHITTAKER, Mr. WALGREN, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. NIELSON of Utah, Mr. SYNAR, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. ECKART, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. BRYANT, Mr. BATES, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. COOPER, Mr. BRUCE, Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia, Mr. MANTON, Mr. TOWNS, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Ms. OAKAR, Ms. SCHNEIDER, Ms. PELOSI, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mrs. SAIKI, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mrs. MORELLA, Mrs. BOGGS, Ms. LONG, Ms. KAPTUR, Mrs. KENNELLY, Mrs. MARTIN of Illinois, Mrs. PATTERSON, Mrs. BOXER, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas, Mr. YATES, Mr. STOKES, and Mr. ROE):

H.R. 4790. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish a program of grants for the prevention and control of breast and cervical cancer; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. FRENZEL:

H.R. 4791. A bill to reduce temporarily the duty on flurbiprofen; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HORTON (for himself, Mr. MINETA, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, Mrs. SAIKI, and Mr. DE LUGO):

H.R. 4792. A bill to amend Public Law 95-419 to make Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month an annually recurring commemoration; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. LAFALCE (for himself and Mr. SMITH of Iowa):

H.R. 4793. A bill to amend the Small Business Act and the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Small Business.

By Mr. MAVROULES (for himself and Mr. HOPKINS) (both by request):

H.R. 4794. A bill to amend various provisions of law that affect the operations and management of the Department of Defense, particularly in the areas of military personnel, acquisition reform, civilian personnel management, and for real property; jointly, to the Committees on Armed Services, Government Operations, Education and Labor, and Post Office and Civil Service.

By Mr. MILLER of California (for himself, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado, Mr. BEILENSON, Mr. BATES, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. PENNY, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. PANETTA, Mr. THOMAS A. LUKEN, Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. ATKINS, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. FAUNTROY, Mr. COYNE, Mr. FUSTER, Mr. JACOBS, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. STARK, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. WAXMAN, and Mr. RUSSO):

H.R. 4795. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code, to provide an additional sanction against certain Federal contractors committing Federal offenses in connection with those contracts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MINETA:

H.R. 4796. A bill to allow legal aliens to work as masters and pilots aboard commercial fishing vessels and to allow U.S. businesses owned by legal aliens to operate such vessels; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. MURPHY (for himself, Mr. BROOKS, and Mr. KASTENMEIER):

H.R. 4797. A bill to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to ensure compliance by the Social Security Administration with decisions by U.S. courts of appeals; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts:

H.R. 4798. A bill to authorize grants to assist mathematics and science teachers in secondary schools in repaying Federal guaranteed student loans; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. OWENS of New York:

H.R. 4799. A bill to amend the National Labor Relations Act to improve the procedure for appointing members to the National Labor Relations Board; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

H.R. 4800. A bill to amend the National Labor Relations Act to provide for fair and expeditious representation elections; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. PALLONE:

H.R. 4801. A bill to require the Secretary of Energy, in close consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency and the Director of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, to develop and implement a comprehensive study of the potential human health effects of electric and magnetic fields, to evaluate whether improved engineering designs of electricity delivery systems to residences and workplaces will reduce potential health risks posed by electric and magnetic fields, and to establish a comprehensive public information dissemination program on issues related to electric and magnetic fields; jointly, to the Committees on Energy and Commerce and Science, Space, and Technology.

By Mr. RAHALL:

H.R. 4802. A bill to establish the Shawnee Parkway as a unit of the National Park System within the State of West Virginia, and for other purposes; jointly, to the Committees on Public Works and Transportation and Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. ROE (by request):

H.R. 4803. A bill to amend title II of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 as amended, to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1991 and 1992; jointly, to the Committees on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and Science, Space, and Technology.

By Mrs. SAIKI (for herself and Mr. BLAZ):

H.R. 4804. A bill to provide for the establishment of a program to prevent the spread of, and ultimately eradicate, the brown tree snake from American Pacific islands; jointly, to the Committees on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and Interior and Insular Affairs.

By Mr. STARK:

H.R. 4805. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide by imposing a tax on certain fuels based on their carbon content; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILLIAMS (for himself and Mr. GOODLING):

H.R. 4806. A bill to amend the National Summit Conference on Education Act of 1984; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. DREIER of California (for himself, Mr. WILSON, and Mr. RITTER):

H. Con. Res. 326. Concurrent resolution to express the sense of the Congress that weapons and other military equipment removed from Europe should not be transferred to areas of armed conflict in the developing world; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GREEN:

H. Con. Res. 327. Concurrent resolution regarding the protection and promotion of basic human rights in Malawi; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. NIELSON of Utah (for himself, Mr. MADIGAN, Mr. HANSEN, Mr. BATEMAN, Mr. BARTON of Texas, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. DANNEMEYER, Mr. STALLINGS, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, and Mr. DORNAN of California, and Mr. DYMALLY):

H. Con. Res. 328. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that the music and music videotape industries should develop and use a uniform warning and disclosure system regarding violence and obscenity for the guidance of potential purchasers and parents; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota (for himself and Mr. RUSSO):

H. Res. 390. Resolution to establish the Select Committee on Waste, Fraud, and Abuse in Federal Agencies; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. STENHOLM (for himself, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. CARPER, Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH, and Mr. BARTON of Texas):

H. Res. 391. Resolution providing for the consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 268) proposing an amendment to the Constitution to provide for a balanced budget for the U.S. Government and for greater accountability in the enactment of tax legislation; to the Committee on Rules.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 4 of rule XXII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 44: Mr. LENT.

H.R. 446: Mr. BATES and Mr. MCCRERY.

H.R. 677: Mr. DARDEN, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. ROSE, Mr. BILBRAY, Mr. MCDERMOTT, and Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado.

H.R. 1003: Mr. SCHUETTE.

H.R. 1141: Mr. BUECHNER.

H.R. 1268: Mr. SERRANO, Mr. MARKEY, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. HUCKABY, Mr. MANTON, Mr. WALSH, Mr. BILBRAY, and Mr. LANCASTER.

H.R. 1565: Mr. HUNTER.

H.R. 1730: Mr. ANNUNZIO and Mr. WOLPE.

H.R. 2322: Mr. SCHUETTE.

H.R. 2353: Mr. LEACH of Iowa.

H.R. 2460: Mr. LEWIS of Florida and Mr. HUGHES.

H.R. 2900: Mr. PORTER.

H.R. 2926: Mr. GOSS, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. BEVILL, Mr. GORDON, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. THOMAS of Georgia, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. PORTER, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, and Mr. CROCKETT.

H.R. 3004: Mr. JAMES, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. LEVINE of California.

H.R. 3123: Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. SOLOMON, and Mr. HALL of Texas.

H.R. 3131: Mr. MORRISON of Washington, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, and Mr. CHANDLER.

H.R. 3243: Mr. SHAW, Mr. LEACH of Iowa, and Mr. FLAKE.

H.R. 3401: Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri, Mr. DEWINE, and Mr. PORTER.

H.R. 3440: Mr. DELAY.

H.R. 3500: Mr. PETRI and Mr. FISH.

H.R. 3643: Mr. DICKINSON.

H.R. 3677: Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MAZZOLI, Mrs. LLOYD, Mr. UDALL, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. RITTER, Mr. NEAL of North Carolina, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. STUDDS, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. SANGMEISTER, Mr. KANJORSKI, and Mr. PALLONE.

H.R. 3732: Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut, Mr. BORSKI, Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming, Mr. LIGHTFOOT, Ms. KAPTUR, and Mr. ECKART.

H.R. 3751: Mr. DIXON, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. TORRES, and Mr. BILIRAKIS.

H.R. 3800: Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas, Mr. HUTTO, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. BUECHNER, Mr. HUBBARD, Mr. KLECZKA, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. MATSUI, and Mr. CAMPBELL of California.

H.R. 3880: Mr. JAMES.

H.R. 3930: Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. MOLLOHAN, and Mr. DWYER of New Jersey.

H.R. 3970: Mr. CONTE, Mr. DAVIS, and Mr. EMERSON.

H.R. 3985: Mr. LEACH of Iowa.

H.R. 3986: Mr. GINGRICH, Mr. VOLKMER, Mr. MFUME, Mr. BUNNING, Mr. JACOBS, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MCCRERY, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. LEVINE of California, Mr. WISE, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. MANTON, Mrs. UNSOELD, and Mr. HANCOCK.

H.R. 4003: Mrs. BOXER.

H.R. 4026: Mr. BROOKS and Mr. BUSTAMANTE.

H.R. 4043: Mr. BLILEY and Mr. COUGHLIN.

H.R. 4110: Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. EDWARDS of California, Mrs. KENNELLY, Mr. CONTE, Mrs. SCHROEDER, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. BEVILL and Mr. TORRES.

H.R. 4118: Mr. DELLUMS and Mr. WOLPE.

H.R. 4242: Mr. HAYES of Illinois.

H.R. 4300: Mr. MANTON, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, and Mr. MAZZOLI.

H.R. 4334: Mr. OBEY and Mr. SMITH of Florida.

H.R. 4338: Mr. BONIOR.

H.R. 4427: Mr. CRAIG, Mr. DENNY SMITH, Mr. DE LA GARZA, Mr. HYDE, Mr. CAMPBELL of Colorado, Mr. HEFLEY and Mr. PACKARD.

H.R. 4460: Mr. HARRIS, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. FOGLIETTA, Mr. JACOBS, Mr. MOLLOHAN and Mr. WILLIAMS.

H.R. 4481: Mr. STAGGERS, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. AUCOIN, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. BEREUTER, Mr. BROWN of Colorado, Mr. PAYNE of Virginia, Mr. DERRICK, and Mr. BOUCHER.

H.R. 4483: Mr. AKAKA.

H.R. 4484: Mr. CONDIT.

H.R. 4485: Mr. KOLTER, Mr. SKEEN, Mr. SIKORSKI, and Mr. POSHARD.

H.R. 4488: Mr. BUSTAMANTE.

H.R. 4589: Mr. EMERSON.

H.R. 4592: Mr. LIGHTFOOT.

H.R. 4611: Mr. MINETA, Mr. CAMPBELL of California, Mr. FEIGHAN, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. HUGHES, Mrs. SCHROEDER, Mr. STAGGERS, and Mr. GLICKMAN.

H.R. 4612: Mr. FEIGHAN, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mr. STAGGERS, Mrs. SCHROEDER, and Mr. EDWARDS of California.

H.R. 4653: Mr. HAMILTON, Mr. MINETA, Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mr. GOSS, Mr. BOSCO, Mr. DYMALLY, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. WEISS, Mr. DONALD E. LUKENS, and Mr. ACKERMAN.

H.R. 4669: Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, Mr. EVANS, Mr. FUSTER, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. PARRIS, and Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey.

H.R. 4683: Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. HENRY, Mr. SKEEN, Mr. COMBEST, Mr. OXLEY, Mr. MCEWEN, Mr. BARTON of Texas, Mr. MILLER of Ohio, Mr. LEWIS of Florida, Mr. LENT, Mr. JAMES, Mr. SMITH of Texas, Mr. LIGHTFOOT, Mr. PETRI, Mr. HUCKABY, Mr. VANDER JAGT, Mr. ARCHER, Mr. STUMP, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. MONTGOMERY, Mr. BATEMAN, and Mr. BAKER.

H.R. 4716: Mr. RIDGE.

H.R. 4761: Mr. MARLENEE.

H.J. Res. 121: Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. LANTOS.

H.J. Res. 214: Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. MOODY, and Mr. STUDDS.

H.J. Res. 374: Mr. INHOFE, Mr. ROWLAND of Connecticut, Mr. DWYER of New Jersey, and Mr. HUGHES.

H.J. Res. 487: Mr. FAUNTROY and Mr. HAMILTON.

H.J. Res. 510: Mr. EMERSON, Mrs. BENTLEY, Mr. HUGHES, and Mr. BLILEY.

H.J. Res. 527: Mr. HUGHES.

H.J. Res. 533: Mr. TRAXLER, Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. QUILLEN, Mr. WAXMAN, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mr. WHEAT, Mr. ASPIN, Mr. ANNUNZIO, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BRENNAN, Mr. MCHUGH, Mr. SOLARZ, Mr.

BROWN of Colorado, Mr. CONDIT, Mr. RUSSO, Mr. MOODY, Mr. SABO, Mr. OBERSTAR, Mr. JONES of Georgia, Mr. VISCLOSKY, Mr. BRUCE, Mrs. KENNELLY, Mr. LEATH of Texas, Mr. GEPHARDT, Mr. SISISKY, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. HAYES of Louisiana, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. KOSTMAYER, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. SAVAGE, Mr. SPRATT, Mr. EVANS, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. CLINGER, Mr. STENHOLM, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. STANGELAND, Mr. BATEMAN, Mr. HYDE, Mr. DOUGLAS, Ms. MOLINARI, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. GREEN, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Mr. PAXON, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. WELDON, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. COBLE, and Mr. WOLF.

H.J. Res. 554: Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. TRAXLER, Mr. WEBER, Ms. PELOSI, and Mr. SLATTERY.

H.J. Res. 556: Mr. KASTENMEIER, Mr. DYSON, Mr. LIPINSKI, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. MOLLOHAN, Mr. OBERSTAR, Mr. POSHARD, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut, Mr. JACOBS, Mr. FASCELL, Mr. CRANE, Mr. ESPY, Mr. GRAY, Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. YATRON, Mr. CONTE, Mr. TAUZIN, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. SANGMEISTER, and Mr. PEASE.

H. Con. Res. 280: Mr. COUGHLIN, Mr. BENTLEY, Mrs. COLLINS, Mr. DARDEN, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. HASTERT, Mr. CLAY, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. HUTTO, Mr. KLECZKA, Mr. TANNER, Mr. GRANT, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. MRAZEK, Mr. CARR, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. WILLIAMS, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. OBEY, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. MURPHY, Mr. GAYDOS, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. MCGRATH, and Mr. ENGEL.

H. Con. Res. 287: Mr. HUGHES, Mr. MRAZEK, Mrs. KENNELLY, Ms. SLAUGHTER of New York, Mr. CAMPBELL of California, and Ms. SCHNEIDER.

H. Con. Res. 298: Mr. GORDON.

H. Con. Res. 304: Mr. PENNY, Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER, Ms. SCHNEIDER, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. STUDDS, Mr. SAXTON, Mr. SMITH of Florida, Mrs. PATTERSON, Mr. DYMALLY, Mr. POSHARD, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. HORTON, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. SABO, Mr. PEASE, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. PALLONE, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. EVANS, Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. JAMES, Mr. JONTZ, Mr. BRYANT, Mr. HARRIS, Mr. LANCASTER, Mr. BUSTAMANTE, Mr. GEJDENSON, and Ms. PELOSI.

H. Res. 240: Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. JAMES, Mr. KOLTER, Mr. SCHEUER, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. PORTER, Mr. SCHUETTE, and Mr. MRAZEK.

H. Res. 312: Mr. MOLLOHAN, Mr. RAVENEL, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. MCCLOSKEY, Mr. HEFNER, Mr. CHAPMAN, and Mr. COSTELLO.

H. Res. 380: Mr. STEARNS, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. PACKARD, and Mr. LANCASTER.

H. Res. 381: Mr. BATES, Mr. LANCASTER, and Mr. TORRICELLI.

H. Res. 387: Mr. MACHTLEY, Mr. IRELAND, Mrs. VUCANOVICH, Mr. RHODES, and Ms. LONG.

SENATE—Thursday, May 10, 1990

(Legislative day of Wednesday, April 18, 1990)

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m., and was called to order by the Honorable HARRY REID, a Senator from the State of Nevada.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

 * * Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts.*—Zechariah 4:6.

God our Father, within each of us there is the predisposition to believe we are unconquerable—invulnerable—and can solve any problem if we just know what it is. Even when we profess to believe in prayer we seldom take it seriously. We think of prayer at public functions as merely ceremonial. Thank Thee, Father in Heaven, that our Founding Fathers prayed because they knew they needed to pray.

You know the struggles through which the Senate has been these past several weeks and that which lies ahead, complicated by an impending election. May the wisdom of Zechariah be heard and heeded in this place: "* * * Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts," as we remember the word of Jesus: "Ye have not because ye ask not."

Gracious God, enable us in this pragmatic environment to take prayer seriously. "Lord teach us to pray."

In His name who prayed often in times of great need. Amen.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, May 10, 1990.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable HARRY REID, a Senator from the State of Nevada, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. REID thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the acting majority leader is recognized.

THE JOURNAL

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Journal of the proceedings be approved to date.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, this morning following the time for the two leaders there will be a period for morning business not to extend beyond 10 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each. At 10 o'clock this morning the Senate will then resume consideration of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform legislation.

Yesterday, with the cooperation of the Republican leader and both managers of the bill, we entered into a unanimous-consent agreement which provides that we will go to final passage of this legislation no later than 4 p.m. today.

There are 10 first-degree amendments remaining in order to the bill with the relevant second-degree amendments also in order. I advise Senators that the list of amendments is printed on page 2 of the Senate Legislative Calendar.

While the agreement provides no specific time limitation on the amendments, except, of course, if it gets to be 4 o'clock and there are no amendments remaining, those amendments, first and second degree, would then be subject to 10-minute time limitations equally divided.

It is conceivable that action on the remaining amendments could be concluded earlier than 4 o'clock this afternoon. Therefore, I want to alert all Members of the Senate and their staffs that we do expect a number, maybe even a series, of rollcall votes today, with the possibility of final passage of the Hatch Act reform which could occur before 4 p.m. this afternoon.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous-consent that the time for the majority leader and the Republican leader be reserved for their use later on today.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business, not to extend beyond the hour of 10 a.m. this day, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes.

Mr. GORE addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee.

THE PRESIDENT'S OPPOSITON TO AN INTERNATIONAL PLAN TO PROTECT THE STRATOSPHERIC OZONE LAYER

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I rise today to express my outrage at reports that the President has made the United States an environmental outcast in the world community. President Bush, under the advice of John Sununu and Richard Darman, has overridden the advice of his own EPA and State Department, and instructed our neighbors to oppose the attempts of the rest of the world to protect the stratospheric ozone layer.

The negotiators are putting final touches on a new agreement to strengthen the original international treaty to protect the ozone layer. The agreement calls for faster phaseouts of some ozone-destroying chemicals, and may add new chemicals to the list of chemicals to be controlled. The agreement also calls for the industrialized nations to collectively provide some critical assistance to developing nations that will allow them to comply with the treaty. It is on this last issue that President Bush has reportedly refused to cooperate with the world community, and in so doing, he threatens to undermine the single most important international agreement that we have to protect the world's environment.

What is the President doing? Of all the global environmental challenges that we face, this is the one which we must all agree requires the most urgent, serious action.

The reports from Geneva, where negotiations are underway, are that the United States has isolated itself on this issue from all the other nations. It is critical that President Bush turn this position around today. If this scenario is played to its conclusion, the United States will not be able to sign on to the new amendments to the Montreal protocol—the very amendments that have been negotiated to give further protection to the ozone layer, in light of the evidence that it will not be protected by the original treaty. President Bush must turn this around today.

This is a diplomatic debacle, brought to us by the "hats and sunglasses" gang in the administration. While the rest of the world is acting responsibly, the United States is put in the extraordinarily embarrassing position of being left behind. While we refuse to cooperate, other nations around the world will be working to protect the ozone layer, and helping the developing nations acquire technologies that will allow them to leapfrog the current generation of ozone-destroying chemicals and technologies, to new, nonozone destroying substitutes.

It is absolutely urgent that this be turned around today. Many who have examined the global environmental crisis know that one of the first actions we must take is to deal effectively with those manmade chemicals—chlorofluorocarbons and halons—which are known to not only destroy the ozone layer, but also to cause over 20 percent of the greenhouse effect.

The negotiations underway in Geneva are crucial to the massive international effort underway to reduce emissions of these chemicals—an effort that is in response to over a decade of scientific findings regarding their damaging effect on the world's environment. In the last decade, those findings have been highlighted by the sudden appearance of a continent-sized hole in the ozone layer over Antarctica, the discovery of similar destruction over the Arctic, and a spring 1988 finding that depletion over the entire Northern Hemisphere is already much more serious than ever predicted.

Mr. President, the warning signals of the global environmental crisis—and stratospheric ozone depletion is a key warning—all of the warning signals are compelling and clear. They are warnings of severe economic and environmental dislocation in the coming decade, in the 1990's, unless we move now to reverse the deterioration of the environment.

If someone was poisoning your children, you would not take the slow, one-small-step-at-a-time approach that President Bush is taking. Our "don't worry, be happy" President thinks that if he hides from this challenge, it will just go away. It will not go away. It demands action. President Bush is directly threatening the future of people, and especially the children all over the world by his neglect and refusal to act as a responsible world citizen.

And it is not as though there are not solutions, if President Bush would just provide the leadership. Already, many in the private sector have found alternatives to ozone-depleting chemicals, and reduced their emissions of these substances. Almost weekly now, we read the news of yet another company pledging to phaseout its use of ozone-destroying chemicals in the near future.

And these new technologies, in turn, will benefit not only the environment, but the U.S. trade balance as well. Obsolete, chlorofluorocarbon-based refrigerators are being purchased by Third World consumers at this very moment. In the capital-poor developing world, this equipment will not be replaced for decades, and will continue to require chlorofluorocarbons. Some of these countries, like China, are not parties to the Montreal protocol. The problem that President Bush has created in Geneva will just make this situation worse, because it threatens to cause the introduction of these CFC-based technologies to yet other areas of the world. The United States is in a position to develop alternatives, and to lead the world to post-CFC technologies. If our own President would just find the ability to rise to the challenge, our economy would benefit enormously.

Here in the Senate, we included provisions on ozone-destroying chemicals in the Clean Air Act. We called for faster phaseouts of ozone-destroying chemicals, we called on the Federal Government to develop a plan to promote the safest alternatives to these chemicals, and we called for the immediate prohibition of the export of technologies to produce ozone-depleting substances.

I call again for President Bush to reverse the debacle that he has created in the Geneva negotiations. It is crucial, and will impact nothing less than the future of life on this planet.

Mr. President, I express a deep concern and even outrage about the reports coming here from Geneva concerning the negotiations that are underway there to protect the stratospheric ozone layer.

There are many aspects to the global environmental crisis. The least controversial of all is the proposition that the protective ozone layer is being eroded by a family of chemicals first used in abundance after World War II.

The entire scientific community of the world is in total agreement on this question and, because of that fact, most nations of the world signed a document known as the Montreal protocol to quickly phase out the use of the chemicals destroying the ozone layer.

That document also included a section which contemplates minimal assistance from the wealthiest nations of the world to the poorest nations of the world, as they make a sharp change in the technologies they use for things like air- conditioning and industrial chilling, and other functions.

This latest negotiation comes about because of a widespread agreement that the original treaty is not strong enough. In fact, if the original treaty turns out to be the only action taken, the concentrations of these dangerous chemicals will triple from today's level, and at today's level they have already burned the seasonal hole in the ozone layer above Antarctica, and thinned the ozone layer above most parts of the world, including Washington, DC, by several percent, just in a few decades.

Why is that a problem? Well, as is well known to Members of this body, a thinner stratospheric ozone layer allows much larger concentrations of ultraviolet B radiation to reach the surface of our planet. That causes a number of harmful effects: Millions of additional cases of skin cancer, to name one; a suppression of the immune system for all 5.3 billion people on Earth; effects on other life forms, including some of the smaller life forms like plankton, which are apparently especially vulnerable to the increased doses of ultraviolet B radiation.

There are other effects, as well: soybean yields are harmed, as are the yields of many food crops; concentrations of smog in cities increase because the extra ultraviolet radiation interacts with hydrocarbon emissions above cities to increase the levels of smog. But the most dangerous effects are those that have an effect on the food chain or the "web of life," as some refer to it. So the stronger and stronger scientific consensus led nations around the world to these negotiations to strengthen the Montreal protocol.

The objectives at these talks in Geneva have been to add other chemicals to the list: methyl chloroform, for example; carbon tetrachloride; some of the HCFC's, a slightly less harmful form of CFC's, but still quite harmful. The other objective was to put flesh on the bones of the earlier commitment to provide minimal sums from the developed world to the developing world to help accomplish this phaseout of the chlorofluorocarbons.

Every nation in the world that is a signatory to the Montreal protocol was in agreement that this should be done. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency was in agreement that this should be done. The U.S. State Department was in agreement that this should be done.

Mr. President, even though the Environmental Protection Agency and the State Department here in our country and every other nation in the world agreed on the urgency of this matter, Mr. John Sununu in the White House and Mr. Richard Darman in the Office of Management and Budget decided it was not a good idea and President George Bush, who has the responsibility for making the decision, decided to reject the advice of the scientists, reject the advice of his own Environmental Protection Agency, reject the advice of his own State Department, ignore the consensus, indeed, unanimous opinion, of every other nation in the world, and instead adopt a "What, me worry?" environmental policy.

As a result, of course, the negotiations in Geneva are now in a complete uproar, nation after nation standing up attacking the United States of America for being the principal obstacle to efforts by this world to deal with an unprecedented environmental crisis.

Mr. President, our Nation should be leading the way. We should be providing bold, visionary, courageous leadership. There is no other nation in the world capable of doing it. The world will not follow Japan. Europe will be absorbed with its efforts to accomplish the integration of the European Community for at least the next decade. Who else will lead? The United States must lead or else this problem will not be solved.

Who within the United States can provide the impetus to the leadership necessary? Only the President. Why then would he take this curious view? Does Mr. Sununu have any scientific basis for the judgment he has urged upon the President? Does he own real estate on other planets? I find it very difficult to understand this decision.

So, Mr. President, I and 11 of my colleagues on this side and 12 of our colleagues on the Republican side, following the leadership of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHAFEE], 24 of us in all, have urged the President to change his policy and begin to provide leadership that we need to protect the global environment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SANFORD addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized for 5 minutes.

THE BUDGET SUMMIT

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. President, I thought it might be appropriate to comment on the so-called summit that is taking place in the White House between the President and the budget people from the White House and the leadership in the Senate and the House. This is an exercise that we have seen carried out now for virtually every year.

The President prepares his budget and sends it over. He sends it over with certain cuts to meet the goals of Gramm-Rudman. Then the Budget Committees try to conform to those general guidelines following the President's budget, generally readjusting his cuts to different cuts maybe, but nevertheless reaching the same goal of reduction.

Normally it has been very difficult to get out a budget resolution out of the Budget Committee because the Republican side generally, certainly since I have been here, have not voted to bring out the resolution or they have deliberately stood aside and let the Democrats struggle with getting a proper resolution out.

This year, under the very skillful and diligent leadership of Senator SASSER, we not only got out a resolution that met the goals that were submitted by the President, but exceeded the goals. For the first time, we dealt with hard savings, real savings, not smoke and mirrors, as the expression goes. It was voted out with 14 positive votes, all of the Democrats and one Republican.

So there is nothing really that put the President in a position to demand a summit. Here we have a resolution and we are ready to bring it to the floor. but, nonetheless, they called for a summit with a great deal of fanfare about everything was going to be on the table; that we are going to talk about everything; we have to figure out what to do about this. And well they might, because we have to borrow a great deal of additional money.

We borrowed a few billion dollars yesterday from the world, a great deal of it from Japan, but only about $10 billion out of a shortfall of $270 billion and we need to borrow another $90 billion right away. They are worried about the interest rates. They ought to be worried about the interest rates, because the interest rates can bring down the economy. If we have to run up the interest rates to hold down inflation, that is one matter. If we have to run up interest rates to attract enough money to fund our massive debt, that is far more serious.

So they ought to have called a summit. The trouble is they are talking about the wrong thing. I guarantee when you hear the news tonight and read it in the morning that this will have been nothing more than an exercise in deceit. I think what we have to insist on in this body is that, as we deal with the finances of this country, we get away from the deceit that has burdened us with the highest debt in the history of the world; not just the history of the United States, but the history of the world. We owe $3 trillion.

Anybody out there that is making house payments or automobile payments knows what it is to be in debt and knows what interest means and how interest mounts up and how interest compounds. And you can see what is happening to this country.

I heard a Member of the House, in a minority leadership position, spouting off yesterday about the great advances that have come with this kind of an economy, with Reaganomics, that we have continued to have prosperity—and we have, at the expense of tremendous borrowing.

Any individual, any business could do extremely well if they had unlimited access to credit. But that day of reckoning is going to come and the day of reckoning is slipping up on us as we race now—and I mean race—toward a $4 trillion debt. We will have a $4 trillion debt by the time we do two more budgets, and maybe by the time we do one.

And so certainly they ought to have a summit, but they ought to get the right objective on the table. And the objective can be expressed, Mr. President, in one word, and it is a good old American word and it is a word that we adhered to for many, many years and people still do in their own affairs and their own businesses, but we do not here. And the word that ought to be on the table at this summit is honesty.

We have not had an honest budget. We have concealed the true size of the deficit from the public. We have pretended to be reducing the deficit year by year when all the time, behind the clouds, behind the cover up, we have been increasing the deficit every single year for the last 9 years, and now it is moving toward $4 trillion.

That is what ought to be on the table: honesty; the true debt. Once we have this fact on the table, and we do not need any other facts on the table, we must look at this dishonest debt. We piled it up in secrecy. We are continuing to conceal the true magnitude of the climb toward the large debt.

Once we get that fact on the table, Mr. President, there is only one question, and that is to be directed to the President of the United States: Mr. President, what shall we do now?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin is recognized for 5 minutes.

NO NEW TAXES

Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, I rise today to say a few words about the forthcoming budget summit, taxes and the deficit.

First of all, before we entertain the idea of a tax increase, I think we have to ask ourselves one important question: Are the American people undertaxed?

By all objective measures, the answer is an unequivocal "No."

Fact No. 1: Tax Freedom Day—the day most Americans stop working to pay taxes and start working for themselves—is now May 5, the latest Tax Freedom Day ever in our history.

Fact No. 2: The Federal Government collects 19.6 percent of our national product in taxes—one of the highest tax burdens in postwar history.

Fact No. 3: Despite the Reagan tax cuts, total tax receipts doubled in the 1980's from $517.1 billion in 1980 to $1.073 trillion in 1990.

Fact No. 4: From 1955 to 1988, the Federal tax burden on middle-income families rose twice as fast as their income. In 1955, a median-income family of four paid Federal taxes at an average rate of 9 percent a year.

In 1970, it went up to 16 percent, and in 1988, it paid 24 percent per year.

Fact No. 5: Ordinary taxpayers face tax rates that are still too high, although lower than they were 10 years ago. Upper-middle income families earning $50,000 face marginal tax rates of 40 percent: 29 percent Federal, 7.5 percent for Social Security, and 5 percent for State income taxes.

If anything, Americans deserve a tax cut.

What about the Federal budget deficit? To be sure, we must bring the budget deficit down. What the Senator from North Carolina referred to as honesty is important but it is also important to recognize we have made progress in recent years.

Since 1983, the deficit as a percent of GNP has been cut in half from 6.3 percent of GNP to less than 3 percent. Even if we remove the mask of the Social Security tax surplus the 1991 baseline deficit would be just over 3 percent of GNP.

There is compelling economic evidence suggesting the deficit is becoming more and more manageable and that a tax increase is unnecessary. We need to emphasize that the concentration of our deficit-cutting efforts should focus on reducing the rate of growth of Federal Government spending, not on increasing taxes. Again, let us look at the facts:

Fact No. 1: In the 1980's, the overall governmental deficit—including Federal, State, and local budgets—as a percentage of GNP never reached the record level set in 1975—and in fact, has dropped to less than 2 percent of GNP in recent years.

Fact No. 2: The evidence of the last 40 years rejects the notion that deficits raise interest rates. In fact, a 1984 study completed by the Reagan-Bush Treasury Department concluded that there is little proven connection between budget deficits and high interest rates.

Fact No. 3: The supposed negative impact of high deficits on savings and investment is again unjustified by the empirical evidence. Canada and Italy have run large budget deficits for the last decades, and both have seen very strong increases in private savings.

In fact, during the 1980's when we have had huge budget deficits, the United States has experienced gross business investment rates of 10.9 percent, somewhat higher than the 10.2-percent average of the last 40 years.

Fact No. 4: The supposed relationship between budget and trade deficits is equally tenuous. The 1980's are the first time in postwar history that the twin deficits moved in the same direction. In the rest of the world, no such correlation exists. For example, England had a rising trade deficit and a rising budget surplus over the same period of time.

Mr. President, in highlighting these facts, I do not want to minimize the importance to reducing the deficit. Our efforts should focus on reducing the growth rate of Government spending. However, I do believe that it is important to look at the facts before rushing into shortsighted and counterproductive solutions like raising taxes.

As President George Bush said on September 13, 1988: "The surest way to kill the recovery is to raise taxes. That will stifle everything from investment and personal savings to consumer spending. It will clamp down on growth. It will invite recession."

That is not just political rhetoric. It is economic reality. Tax increases will reduce economic growth.

Finally, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the tax policy plank of the 1988 Republican platform. I do so, Mr. President, because I believe it is important for the American people to know where we stand on the issue of taxes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. KASTEN. It says, "We oppose any attempts to increase taxes."

I am confident that President Bush shares this view. Whether it's increases in gas taxes, the result will be the same: Bigger Government and less economic opportunity.

I urge the President's negotiators at the budget summit to read President Bush's lips again: No new taxes.

EXHIBIT 1

1988 REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

REDUCING THE BURDEN OF TAXES

The Republican Party restates the unequivocal promise we made in 1984: We oppose any attempts to increase taxes. Tax increases harm the economic expansion and reverse the trend to restoring control of the economy to individual Americans.

We reject calls for higher taxes from all quarters—including "bipartisan commissions." The decisions of our government should not be left to a body of unelected officials.

The American people deserve to know, before the election, where all candidates stand on the question of tax increases. Republicans unequivocally reiterate the no-tax pledge we have proudly taken. While we wouldn't believe the Democrats even if they took the pledge, they haven't taken it.

The crowning economic achievement of the Republican Party under Ronald Reagan and George Bush has been the dramatic reduction in personal income taxes. The Reagan-Bush Administration has cut the top marginal tax rate from 70 percent to 28 percent. We got government's heavy hand out of the wallets and purses of all our people. That single step has sparked the longest peacetime expansion in our history.

We not only lowered tax rates for all. We tied them to the cost of living so congressional Democrats couldn't secretly boost taxes by pushing people into higher brackets through inflation. We took millions of low-income families off the tax rolls, and we doubled the personal exemption for all.

As a result, by 1986 the income tax bill of a typical middle-income family had declined by one-quarter. If the Democrats had defeated our economic recovery program, that family would have paid nearly $6,000 more in taxes between 1982 and 1987. Meanwhile, average Americans and the working poor carry substantially less of the burden. Upper income Americans now pay a larger share of federal taxes than they did in 1980.

Our policies have become the model for much of the world. Through the power of capitalism, governments are rushing to reduce tax rates to save their stagnating economies. This is good for America, for their recovery will make them better trading partners for our own exuberant economy.

Many economists advising the Democrat Party have publicly called for a national sales tax or European-style Value-Added Tax (VAT) which would take billions of dollars out of the hands of American consumers. Such a tax has been imposed on many nations in Europe and has resulted in higher prices, fewer jobs, and higher levels of government spending. We reject the idea of putting a VAT on the backs of the American people.

Republicans know that sustaining the American economic miracle requires a growing pool of private savings. From bank accounts, small stock purchases, and piggy banks, the streams of thrift must flow together and form a mighty tide of capital. That rushing force pushes our society ahead, lifting everyone as it goes. To keep it going:

We support incentives for private savings, such as our deductibility for IRA contributions.

We oppose tax withholdings on savings.

To protect savings by ensuring the soundness of our financial system, the federal government must continue to play an active role through its regulatory responsibilities and supervisory duties. We demand stern punishment for those persons, whether in financial institutions or in Congress, whose wheeling and dealing have betrayed the public trust.

We will reduce to 15 percent the tax rates for long-term capital gains to promote investment in jobs and to raise revenue for the federal government by touching off another surge of economic expansion. In 1978, we cut the capital gains tax from 49.1 percent to 28 percent; in 1981, it was slashed again to 20 percent. The cuts injected a new vitality into the economy, with the results that revenues from this tax rose 184 percent from 1978 to 1985.

We call for a taxpayers' bill of rights to give everyone simple and inexpensive means to resolve disputes with government. Democrats, using the Massachusetts Revenue Department as a model, intend to squeeze more out of the public by making the IRS more intrusive. Republicans will not tolerate tax cheating by anyone, but we know most Americans responsibly pay their fair share. By restoring their confidence in frugal, limited government, we will enhance compliance with tax laws that are simple and fair.

CONTROLLING FEDERAL SPENDING

The Reagan-Bush policies of economic growth have finally turned around the deficit problem. Through Republican-initiated constraints on spending, the federal budget deficit dropped by over 25 percent last year. With the help of the Gramm-Rudman law and a flexible budget freeze, a balanced budget can be expected by 1993.

But the relentless spending of congressional Democrats can undo our best efforts. No president can cause deficits; Congress votes to spend money. The American people must prevent big-spending congressional Democrats from bringing back big budget deficits; we must return both the Senate and the House of Representatives to Republican control for the first time in 36 years.

In 1981, we inherited a federal spending machine that was out of control. During the Carter-Mondale years, spending grew by 13.6 percent annually. We cut that growth rate in half, but the cancer still expands, as it has in some States such as Massachusetts where the budget has increased more than twice as fast as the federal budget. We will not be content until government establishes a balanced budget and reduces its demands upon the productivity and earnings of the American people.

We categorically reject the notion that Congress knows how to spend money better than the American people do. Tax hikes are like addictive drugs. Every shot makes Congress want to spend more. Even with the Republican tax cuts of 1981, revenues have increased by about $50 billion every year. But congressional spending has increased even more! For every $1 Congress takes in in new taxes, it spends $1.25.

That's why congressional Democrats have sabotaged the Republican program to control the federal budget. They refuse to put any reasonable restraints on appropriations. They smuggle through pork barrel deals in huge "continuing resolutions" larded for the special interests. They opose the balanced budget amendment and all reforms in the bankrupt process. They mock the restraints legally mandated by our Gramm-Rudman budget plan.

Enough is enough. It's time to push through the Republican agenda for budget reform to teach the Congress the kind of financial responsibility that characterizes the American family:

We call for structural changes to control government waste, including a two-year budget cycle, a super-majority requirement for raising taxes, a legislatively enacted line-item veto, individual transmission of spending bills, greater rescission authority for the chief executive and other reforms.

We call for a flexible freeze on current government spending. We insist on the discipline to provide stable funding for important government programs, increasing spending only for true national priorities. We oppose any increase in taxes, so that the economy will continue to expand and so revenues from a growing tax base will reduce the deficit.

We believe the Grace Commission report to eliminate waste, inefficiency, and mismanagement in the federal government must be re-examined; its recommendations should be given a high profile by public officials.

We call for a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution. If congressional Democrats continue to block it, we urge the States to renew their calls for a constitutional convention limited to consideration of such an amendment.

We will use all constitutional authority to control congressional spending. This will include consideration of the inherent line-item veto power of the president.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SANFORD. I see no one else on the floor waiting to speak. I was inspired by my distinguished colleague from Wisconsin to make a couple of additional comments. I wonder if I might ask unanimous consent for 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 3 minutes.

NO NEW TAXES

Mr. SANFORD. I do, indeed, have a tremendous respect for the Senator from Wisconsin. I appreciate very much seeing put in the RECORD the recitation of our tax situation. Let me say right in the beginning I have been sitting in the Democratic caucus meeting and I have been sitting in the Democratic budget conferences and in the Budget Committee meetings. I think I can say unequivocally that we ought not to have any new taxes. We cannot be trusted with new taxes. We could simply take new taxes and stir it up in the mush, and any beneficial effect would be lost.

There is a far better way of going about dealing with this problem, it seems to me. Ultimately we will have to deal with it. We can talk about deficit as it relates to the gross national product. Certainly, the deficit as we now define it, concealing a big part of it, has seemed to be reduced. But the real deficit is essentially the total interest on the national debt. Almost dollar for dollar, for over 5 years, the interest on the national debt and the real deficit, which is by any bookkeeper's standard the increase in the national debt, not some covered-up figure that we have invented for purposes of making ourselves look a little better, but the true deficit is now going up at almost $300 billion a year.

That is the deficit we ultimately must contend with. That is the deficit that is accumulating. The accumulated deficit is the debt. Debt is the problem and that debt generates interest costs, forcing, interest rates higher. We have no cushion to protect us from economic slippage. Debt and the interest we pay on it is what puts us in a difficult bargaining position with Japan, for example, on trade policies, because we are dependent on them to buy our bonds now to cover our rising debt.

So the debt is the problem, and the true deficit is the increase in debt. I hate to say it, but just the interest is about 5 percent of GNP. So we have a problem, but the problem is not going to be managed by putting on some little tax to take care of this shadow deficit that we claim.

I have made a proposal, Mr. President, that is embodied in S. 101 that would go about this in a very honest, straightforward, commonsense manner. It would require an honest definition of deficit, the increase in debt, that would greatly enhance our reputation with the public.

S. 101 also requires a balanced operating budget.

Third, S. 101 separates all retirement funds, notably Social Security, from the operating budget. The White House is suggesting a multiyear budget solution, and this could be the most dangerous suggestion that we have heard.

I have heard the director of OMB explain his multiyear solution. I have considerable misgivings. He is saying that we are going to slide through like we have been, pretending to cut the deficit until we build up enough Social Security reserves for it to appear to be a zero deficit, which will be some years out, maybe 1995, because by that time, we will have enough cushion in Social Security to make it appear to be zero. And then, he says, we are going to buy down the public debt.

Buy down the public debt, I say to my colleagues, means that we are going to steal the Social Security funds and replace the debt to the public with those Social Security funds. By the year 2010, we will owe about $9 trillion. We will be in debt about $9 trillion. We will be paying interest on $9 trillion. And in paying that much interest and carrying that much debt, we are going to leave that problem for the President and the Congress in the year 2010 to figure out how they are going to pay off all the beneficiaries in Social Security.

So we cannot let come out of this summit a determination to rob Social Security. I am afraid that is the direction we are headed. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. KASTEN addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, I simply want to say to the Senator from North Carolina, he and I are both aware tax increases are not the answer. In fact, if you look at postwar history, for every dollar in tax increases, we have gotten $1.52 in spending increases. We are not going to solve the problem by increasing taxes. We have to solve the problem by reducing the rate of growth of Government spending.

I also concur with his analysis of the Social Security situation. It is wrong by masking the budget, just as it is wrong to mask the deficit by building up an airport trust fund or highway trust fund. To tax the American people either with payroll taxes, highway taxes or airport taxes and have those dollars, instead of being used for important infrastructure, have those dollars being used to mask the deficit is simply dishonest budgeting.

I hope we can work together on a bipartisan basis to correct those differences or difficulties in the budget process, but at the same time recognize—and if you look back at history when we increase taxes by $1, we increase spending by $1.52. I thank the Chair.

Mr. GRAHAM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. GRAHAM pertaining to the introduction of S. 2604 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

RHODE ISLAND'S BUSINESS COUPLE OF THE YEAR

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am very pleased to note in the context of our annual observance of Small Business Week that Rhode Island's entry in the Small Business Persons of the Year honor roll is not a small businessman or a small business woman but a small business couple.

Jason and Susan Dittleman epitomize the entrepreneurial spirit through their operation of a flourishing enterprise and their many contributions to their community. But they have distinguished themselves as a couple, who have managed very successfully to translate their marriage into a true partnership.

The Dittleman's business is a photography supply store, East Greenwich Photo, which they opened in 1976, and which has grown to be an enterprise employing 20 people, with its own film processing lab and custom frame shop. Jason is president and Susan is vice president of the firm.

While the business was expanding over the past 14 years, the Dittleman's family expanded as well. They raised two children, a feat for many of us is often a nearly full time occupation in itself.

But the Dittlemans managed to contribute unstintingly to the life of their community at the same time. Their company sponsors a little league team. They contribute their photographic services to the Rhode Island Special Olympics. They provide complimentary photo services for the East Greenwich Chamber of Commerce, of which Jason is a director.

In these days when it is more fashionable to celebrate individual achievement, the Dittlemans personify traditional American values of family cohesion translated into cooperative endeavor. That is often the basis for successful small business enterprises throughout the land. I salute the Dittlemans for reminding us that family life and business life can combine to yield such fruitful results.

TERRY ANDERSON

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, this is the 1,881st day that Terry Anderson has been captive in Lebanon. The grimness of his situation was recently illustrated by the riveting account Frank Reed gave of his captivity. I spoke briefly prior to his remarks and there have been reports that I encouraged Israel to release prisoners as a "good will" gesture to Iran. These reports are wrong. I made a statement concerning the illegality of hostage-taking under international law in which I stressed that this applies to all nations. It is a measure of how far we have drifted from the idea that international law is important in its own right that my remarks have been misinterpreted as simply calling for a good will gesture. That is most emphatically not my point. One such report from Jerusalem appeared in the New York Times, but I have been informed that the Times will correct this inaccurate statement.

By failing to place my remarks in the context of international law, these reports have repeatedly and erroneously stated that I support the "unconditional release" of "prisoners." I do not. I support the release of any and all hostages—persons who have not been charged with or convicted of any offense and who are held for the purpose of trading them for persons or other advantages.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, what is the business before the Senate?

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for morning business has expired. Morning business is now closed.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the resumption of Senate bill 135 which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 135) to amend title 5, United States Code, to restore to Federal civilian employees their right to participate voluntarily as private citizens, in the political processes of the Nation, to protect such employees from improper political solicitations, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

RECESS

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, on behalf of the majority leader, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess until the hour of 11 o'clock.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 10:21 a.m., recessed until 11 a.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. KOHL].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to proceed as in morning business for a brief time before my distinguished friend from Delaware returns to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE SEC'S RECORD AS OPTION'S MARKET REGULATOR AND ITS IMPACT ON THE EQUITIES-FUTURES CONTROVERSY

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, a little over a month ago, the securities subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee heard from the four members of the president's working group on financial markets. At that hearing, Under Secretary of the Treasury Robert Glauber and Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission Richard Breeden both called for unified regulation of stock index futures and the equities markets, and both decried stock index futures margins as being too low.

The implicit assumptions at work here are that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has not done an adequate job, and that turning over stock index futures jurisdiction to the SEC will result in better, more appropriate regulations.

Unfortunately, for the Treasury and the SEC, however, the facts do not support their analysis. The SEC's actions with respect to the stock derivative market that it oversees—the options market—demonstrates that the CFTC and the futures exchanges it regulates have done a good job, one that has protected investors and the integrity of our financial markets.

The SEC, through a delegation of authority from the Federal Reserve Board, oversees margins on stock options—in other words, SEC already has power over stock options margins—as set by the options clearing corporation. This is significant, because this is exactly the kind of unified oversight that the SEC believes the stock index futures market is missing.

It is true that neither the SEC nor the Federal Reserve Board regulates margins on futures exchanges. However, I think my colleagues should know that the level of margin on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange S&P 500 stock index futures and options contract is higher, Mr. President—I said higher—than the level of the comparable options contracts overseen by the SEC.

Did my fellow Senators hear me? Right now the futures market in Chicago has a higher level than comparable options contracts that are overseen by the SEC.

This is the case on both a risk-equivalent and a leverage-equivalent basis.

The current MERC S&P 500 contract initial speculative margin is roughly 12 percent of the value of the contract. The maintenance margin—also higher than comparable margins on options products overseen by the SEC—was also increased by the MERC. This was done, Mr. President, without Government prodding, and is "prudentially correct," just as the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board has stated margins ought to be.

The Chicago Merchantile Exchange instituted this margin level after evaluating the potential adverse impact that might result from a continued fall in prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. The MERC acted in order to keep margins at prudent levels, which is always a top priority.

Mr. President, the options market overseen by the SEC did not take the lead in increasing margins on its products. In fact, the options markets have not yet acted, and the SEC has not yet asked the options clearing corporation to act.

This situation, of course, proves two things: First, that prudential self-regulation works and, second, that SEC oversight of a stock derivative market proved to be no real advantage—the one regulator concept made no particular difference in this case.

A look back at the margin situation at the time of a recent stock market break makes the same point. Chairman Breeden, in his March 29 testimony, stated that:

> On October 13 and 16, what we saw, because the margins started about a half an inch from the edge of a cliff, about as close to zero as you could get, about 2.2 percent for most categories, they had to—when the market began to plunge—sharply and dramatically raise those margins. The result was about $1.3 billion in margin calls on Friday and Monday.

Now that sounds very dramatic, and like a textbook case of inadequate regulation. There is only one problem: It is absolutely wrong.

On October 13, 1989, the Chicago Merchantile Exchange did, in fact, institute a phased increase in margin requirements. However, that increase was nowhere near the magnitude that Chairman Breeden stated. The increase of $2,000 was spaced over 2 business days—$1,000 on Friday, October 13 and $1,000 on Monday, October 16—precisely to avoid any potential stress on the banking system. The change was implemented after consultation with officials of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. The actual increase in margins amounted to $224 million for October 13 and $327 million for October 16. This is a total increase of $551 million, substantially less than half of the $1.3 billion figure Chairman Breeden quoted.

Further, it is worth noting that these increases did not represent an unusual risk to the banking system. They did not force people out of the market. In fact, the S&P 500 futures contract open interest—one way of measuring the market—actually rose on October 16.

There is another, more important, question, however. Even though the SEC Chairman got the numbers wrong, was he right when he said that futures margins were too low? Unfortunately, for Chairman Breeden, the SEC-regulated options markets provide the answer to that question.

The simple fact is that, prior to October 13, the options markets maintained precisely the same margin levels, on both a risk-equivalent and a leverage-equivalent basis for their stock index products as did the Chicago Merchantile Exchange for the S&P 500 contract. During the October 13-16 period, the margin on stock index options products was raised by precisely the same amount as the margin on the S&P 500 contract. The only difference was that the increase was not phased in. It was implemented all at once on October 13. Since that time, margins on stock index options has generally followed margins on the S&P 500 futures contract. Margins on stock index futures contracts, therefore, cannot have been too low, because the SEC, through its oversight activities over stock index option products, implicitly approved those levels.

None of these facts, of course, appeared in Chairman Breeden's March testimony to the Securities Subcommittee. They do, however, illustrate the real dilemma facing the SEC: Either the agency admits that it was wrong—futures margins are not a problem, and stock index options margins under its oversight were set appropriately—or it admits that it is not doing a good job on overseeing the stock index options market, which undermines its case for taking over jurisdiction of stock index futures.

Chairman Breeden and the SEC cannot have it both ways. CFTC oversight of futures margins cannot be indicted without also indicting SEC oversight of options margins. And if the SEC has done a bad job overseeing options, how can it justify taking stock index futures jurisdiction from the CFTC?

The answer, of course, Mr. President, is that no good case has been made for transferring stock index futures to the SEC. Although the equities markets, the stock index options market, and the stock index futures market are all one market, it does not automatically follow that the one market demands one regulator, as the SEC's role in the options markets so clearly illustrates.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with consideration of the bill.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, in all the discussions about the specific provisions of S. 135, I am afraid that the paramount issue may have been obscured. This legislation to repeal the Hatch Act would accomplish a very fundamental change in the Federal Government itself.

The real issue is not whether an employee may or may not wear a button or hold a sign but whether Federal civil servants are to work for or against the American people. This bill would exhort and encourage civil servants to work against the interests of the public at large. It would create a new, rather powerful special interest to oppose the common good. The Hatch Act, in contrast, limits and controls government.

It often happens that when one is immersed in the details of an issue, one overlooks the obvious. One of the first people to comment on the central issue here was Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the party across the aisle. How times have changed. Jefferson observed that it violated the "spirit of the Constitution" for Federal employees to engage in "electioneering."

How could the author of the Declaration of Independence and the Virginia bill of rights believe that it violated, not vindicated but violated, the spirit of the Constitution for employees to take an active part in political management and political campaigns? The proponents of S. 135 claim that the purpose and effect of this bill is to allow employees to enjoy constitutional rights, yet Jefferson claims the very opposite. What was he telling us?

We have repeatedly made the argument that the freedom of employees to be pressured into political activity not of their choosing makes a mockery of the first amendment.

While Jefferson would concur in that point, I believe he meant something much more profound. The founding of our constitutional republic was undoubtedly fresh in his mind, and central to that was a notion that the freedom of the American people would best be preserved by a separation of powers and by limited government. A revolution had just been fought and won. That revolution was government was not to be the master of the people but rather its servant. The role of government was to carry out the will of the people.

Jefferson understood the fundamental contradiction, one that violated the spirit of the Constitution's goal of limited government, between a civil service that carried out the people's political agenda and a civil service that had a political agenda of its own.

That truth cannot be escaped. President Ford said he was no Lincoln, but he was in perfect harmony with Thomas Jefferson when he vetoed similar Hatch Act legislation because it would be bad for the American people. I am pleased to see that our distinguished President, George Bush, has joined this illustrious company in announcing that he will veto S. 135 if it reaches his desk.

This legislation would permit the Justice Department employees to have a PAC, the CIA employees to have a PAC, the defense employees, some 1 million strong, to have a PAC. What demands on the Federal budget will they make? What special interests will they serve? How many Senators in this Chamber are getting letters from the American people complaining that we do not have enough special interests? I for one have not received such a letter.

The thought that each department or agency may have its own PAC troubles me. The thought that all Federal employees might join one megaorganization and fund a giant PAC makes me shudder. We have talked a great deal about this bill. Now it is time to start thinking about it.

S. 135 is fundamentally flawed. It views government and government employees as separate and distinct. What Jefferson was telling us is that government can only act through its employees. If you want limited government, you must limit government employees. You cannot have it both ways.

This bill does more than give employees something to do on Saturday or Sunday. It is destructive, destructive of our republican form of government.

Let me point out that in fact the House bill, H.R. 20, completely repeals the Hatch Act. It repeals the ban on active participation in political management and in political campaigns by Federal employees. The Senate bill, S. 135, does not go that far. It would not allow the employee to run for partisan political office or, with some dubious exceptions, to solicit political contributions. The problem is that the Senate bill creates a Hatch 22 by trying to have it both ways. The bill suggests on the one hand that employees may engage in "political management," yet on the other hand prohibit them from doing what managers do.

A few days ago the chairman issued a provocative challenge: "Read the bill," he said. Well, we have read the bill and we find it entirely confusing. I am not talking about trivialities, nor am I nitpicking. Rather, I suggest that the Senate bill is fundamentally flawed.

If one reads the bill, it will be seen that the term "political contribution" is a carefully defined term. Rather perceptively, the definition equates money with the services money can buy.

On pages 3 and 4 of the bill, the term "political contribution" includes: First, money; second, pledges of money; third, indirect contributions or payments for personal services; and fourth, the provision of personal services themselves.

Then on page 4, line 10, the bill prohibits the employee from soliciting or receiving a "political contribution." Thus, the employee cannot request another, with an exception irrelevant here, to provide money or services.

So how does the Federal employee hold office in a political party? Can you imagine an officer in a party, whether it be Republican or Democrat, who cannot ask for money and, moreover, cannot ask another to provide services, that is, to do some work? That officer is not going to last very long in that role.

The bill is flawed. It tries to create a square circle. It creates new rights but makes them impossible to exercise. It will indeed take a lot more than a hotline to the special counsel's office to clarify this mess.

The problem goes beyond the right to hold office in a political party. If my colleagues will turn to page 25 of Senate Report 101-165, there is a list of additional activities, six additional activities that Federal employees could perform under S. 135. The first is "hold office in a political party." The third is "organize" phone banks. The fourth is "organize political meetings."

I ask my colleagues, how can one organize a phone bank or a political meeting without receiving a political contribution in the form of money or services?

It is impossible. Make no mistake about that. Of the six activities that would be presumably permitted under this legislation, three fall victim to Hatch 22.

Mr. President, no matter which side of the bill one is on, it is evident that this bill is in trouble. It does not work.

I would encourage the proponents to read this bill. Then I would suggest that they request that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Government Affairs. And I would indeed not object to such a request.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we return to morning business for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

KEEP THE PLEDGE

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, we once again are facing the annual budget crisis. Congress again has failed to meet the budget deadlines, or to take real steps to control Federal spending growth. Indeed, it is obvious that the main budgetary activity of Congress is to find ways to increase Federal spending, not restrain it. Over the years, through many different sets of economic, social, and political factors, only one constant in budget policy is visible: the insatiable congressional desire to spend as much taxpayer money as possible.

It may seem mysterious that after all the billions raised in tax bills, and all the budget summits to reduce the budget deficit, that Federal spending continues to increase and the deficit remains in the $150 to $180 billion range. Actually, the explanation is quite simple. As Nobel Prize winning economist Milton Friedman has pointed out, congressional spending is constrained only by the level of revenues and the maximum politically acceptable deficit. Tax increases are quickly spent, and progress on deficit reduction then seems as distant as ever.

One could suggest a natural law of budget deficits—regardless of anything else going on in policy and the economy, the natural level of the budget deficit is currently around $150 billion. This is considered tolerable by the political system. In other words, the deficit level drives policy, rather than the other way around. Policy actions revolve around this deficit level and budget results conform to it.

Thus trying to tax our way to deficit reduction resembles nothing so much as a cat chasing its own tail. Yet the groundwork is now being laid for yet another budget summit replete with large tax increases and probably unenforceable spending limits. Let us not misunderstand what is happening: Once the participants enter the budget summit, they all will have an interest in producing a package, even if it reflects bad policy.

So I would encourage President Bush to stand by his pledge of no new taxes. Furthermore, I would take this opportunity to mention the duck test devised by OMB Director Darman. Essentially, the duck test states that if the average person considers something to be a tax, it is a tax. This seems like a pretty good way to gauge tax policy, and I hope the administration applies it to policy options under review during the budget summit negotiations.

I have a message for the President: Read my lips, keep the campaign pledge. Make no mistake, Congress will use higher taxes for higher spending. Frankly, current discussions of the Federal budget, the deficit and to tax or not to tax reminds me of a new season of baseball: The players change, the positions change, but the game remains the same. There are those making the pitch that it is possible to slide a tax increase by the taxpayers. To that I yell, "Foul ball."

If I have said it once, I have said it a thousand times, tough choices and cuts in spending are what are needed to reduce the Federal budget deficit. The American people are already overtaxed. One clear illustration of this fact is the marking of Tax Freedom Day on May 5. This is the first day of the year that the American taxpayer has worked enough to cover Federal, State, and local taxes, and can start enjoying his or her earnings. May 5 is the latest Tax Freedom Day ever, reflecting the 34 percent of income the average American family will fork over in taxes during 1990. Despite these sad facts, Congress is pushing for another tax increase without demonstrating its ability to bring the budget under control with the last four.

I do not need to remind anyone that thanks to Congress, we had a tax increase in 1982.

We had a tax increase in 1983.

We had a tax increase in 1984.

And we had a tax increase in 1985.

For 4 years Congress raised taxes—4 straight years. And for 4 years the deficit climbed to its peak of $221 billion in fiscal year 1986. Frankly, I am scared to death about what another tax increase will do—trying to bring down the deficit by raising taxes is like giving a drunk another drink to sober him up. Doing it to stimulate the economy is like giving him the keys to your car.

The fundamental issue, here, is that Americans are not undertaxed. All across America we see the birth of a tax revolution. In Massachusetts. In California. In Illinois, Oklahoma, and Michigan. In Oregon and Nevada, and even my own State of Delaware. Americans see two things growing bigger together—their taxes and the deficit. It is not right, and one need only ask King George how hardworking folk respond to tax abuse. Everywhere, people seem to be saying: "No more taxes until Government can demonstrate that it spends the funds wisely."

Ironically, a wealth of experience demonstrates that tax increases kill the economy. Tax relief stimulates it. We witnessed this basic economic truth in the twenties, again with Kennedy in the sixties, and finally with Roth-Kemp in the eighties. Unfortunately, Washington discards this wealth of experience. But then again, the wealth of experience is one wealth Congress has not figured out how to tax. At least not yet. Not only are their calls for new taxes being heard in our Nation's Capital, many are also calling for the use of projected defense budget savings for increased spending. The latest Democratic gimmick is to call the bankrupt Treasury to finance congressional political campaigns.

Instead, I believe we should return this peace dividend to the people who paid it in the first place—the taxpayers. In fact, I have introduced legislation—the Roth defense rebate which would do just that by reducing tax rates for lower and middle income Americans. Specifically, my legislation would cut the 15 percent bottom tax bracket by 20 percent. It would also trim the 28-percent rate by 10.7 percent. This much needed tax relief would be phased in over a 5-year period, as the defense savings are realized.

America's leaders have been given a wonderful opportunity to follow through on their swing. Using the peace dividend for more spending and increasing taxes to reduce the deficit would not be a double play—it would be the third out in the ninth inning for a losing team. Returning defense savings to the taxpayers and taking the pitch to reduce spending and make budget cuts—now that would be a home run.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Kansas.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the considerations of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1596

(Purpose: To provide limitations on the political activities of certain employees of the Federal Election Commission and for other purposes)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE] proposes an amendment numbered 1596.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, insert between lines 21 and 22 the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) An employee of the Federal Election Commission (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may not request or receive from, or give to, an employee, a Member of Congress, or an officer of a uniformed service a political contribution.

"(2) No employee of the Federal Election Commisssion (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may take an active part in political management or political campaigns.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'active part in political management or in a political campaign' means those acts of political management or political campaigning which were prohibited for employees of the competitive service before July 19, 1940, by determinations of the Civil Service Commission under the rules prescribed by the President.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment is not complicated. It effects 240 Federal employees out of 3 million. It is part of a larger amendment I offered the other day to make certain we did not politicize every agency of Government, including the Federal Election Commission. This would except the Federal Elections Commission from this liberalized Hatch Act that is being pushed through the Congress.

Here is what the Federal Election Commission does. If you want to politicize it, why, I would leave that to the judgment of the majority party.

They audit for cause any congressional senatorial campaign committee; administers the public funding program for Presidential candidates; receives, reviews and discloses all Federal political campaign finance reports; exclusive civil jurisdiction to enforce limits and prohibitions on campaign committees; they have subpoena power over any individual who works for a campaign to investigate campaign violations; the ability to sue treasurers and candidates and committees for violations of the FECA. Constantly, through the Information Service Division and Public Records Office anonymous requests are received for information and advice on all candidates. In fact, a lot of people write anonymous letters complaining about one of us, whoever, in Federal office or about campaign finance or anything else.

So all this amendment does is prohibit the employees of the Federal Election Commission from giving a political contribution to another employee, a Member of Congress, or an officer of a uniformed service. It also prohibits those FEC employees from requesting and receiving political contributions from any such persons. In addition, it prohibits employees of the FEC from taking an active part in political management or in political campaigns.

So the basic effect of the amendment is to exclude employees who work for the FEC from the relaxed standards on partisan political activities contained in S. 135, and to impose standards which are the same as such employees are currently required to abide by. In other words, what this does is maintain current law with respect to these special Federal workers.

If there is ever a case to be made where we should not start politicizing Government workers, it ought to be the FEC, and it ought to be the FBI and the IRS, and it ought to be the CIA, and it ought to be the DIA, and it ought to be some others we are going to offer amendments on, such as NSA, National Security Agency. We offered one amendment to include all those and lost narrowly by four or five votes.

We are talking about only a fraction, a minor fraction of the total number of Federal employees, covered by this act—in this case, if you can believe it, only 240 employees. But if the majority insists that everybody be covered regardless of the sensitivity of their jobs, in my view, there ought to be a record made. So I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry: Is there an amendment pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is amendment No. 1596, offered by the Republican leader.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I have confirmed with a representative of the Republican leader, who offered the amendment, that he would have no objection to the unanimous consent that I will propound.

I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be temporarily laid aside so that the Senator from New Mexico can offer one of the amendments which has heretofore been declared in order by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1609

(Purpose: To provide limitations on the political activities of certain employees of intelligence and law enforcement agencies, and for other purposes)

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment on behalf of myself, Senator D'AMATO from New York, Senator MURKOWSKI from Alaska, and Senator LOTT from Mississippi, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], for himself, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. MURKOWSKI, and Mr. LOTT, proposes an amendment numbered 1609.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, line 4, strike out "An employee" and insert in lieu thereof "(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b), an employee".

On page 4, line 11, strike out all beginning with the comma through "organization" on line 19.

On page 4, insert between lines 21 and 22 the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) An employee of any department or agency described under paragraph (3) (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may not request or receive from, or give to, an employee, a Member of Congress, or an officer of a uniformed service a thing of value for political purposes.

"(2) No employee of any department or agency described under paragraph (3) (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may take an active part in political management or political campaigns.

"(3) The departments and agencies to which the provisions of this subsection apply are:

"(A) Department of Justice
"(B) Central Intelligence Agency
"(C) Internal Revenue Service
"(D) Federal Election Commission
"(E) National Security Council
"(F) National Security Agency/Central Security Service
"(G) Merit Systems Protection Board
"(H) Office of Special Counsel
"(I) Customs Service
"(J) Bureau of Tobacco, Alcohol and Fire Arms
"(K) Secret Service
"(L) Defense Intelligence Agency; and

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'active part in political management or in a political campaign' means those acts of political management or political campaigning which were prohibited for employees of the competitive service before July 19, 1940, by determinations of the Civil Service Commission under the rules prescribed by the President.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, the reason I read the names of the four cosponsors of the Domenici amendment is because I think it is noteworthy that these four Senators, including the Senator form New Mexico, have established a voting record here on this bill that probably indicates that the five of us support some reform to the Hatch Act.

I think it is significant to note that those Senators serving on the Committee of Jurisdiction are most interested in getting a bill. They have worked the longest and the hardest to get this bill. At least, I gather that this has not been an exercise that anybody wants to go through just for the purpose of having a debate. It has been a good debate, but ultimately the sponsors want the bill not only to pass the Senate, but to become law. That means the sponsors want a bill that will be signed by the President, or, if he vetoes it, that would be overridden.

That is why, it seems to this Senator, that four Senators—and I commit nothing for any of them—support the amendment that identifies just a couple of very serious problems with the bill.

From my standpoint, as the Senator from New Mexico, the time has come to alter and modify the Hatch Act to permit Federal employees to participate in significantly more "ordinary citizen" activity with reference to the electoral process. Although I do believe the Hatch Act has served a very, very significant purpose, I believe it is a fairly good, debatable item as to whether or not it ought to be substantially modified. But I am on the side of expanding the citizen rights, so to speak, of those who work for the Federal Government.

I do believe there are a couple of things that we should be seriously concerned about. I have done my best, on behalf of myself and these three other Senators, to encapsulate two major deficiencies with the bill before us.

I have just received word that a fifth Senator, who has been generally supportive of the bill, Senator MCCAIN, from Arizona, desires to be a cosponsor.

That is nothing more than a statement that five Senators, who seem to have been pretty much on the side of "let us move ahead with some type of appropriate reform," have joined in this amendment.

Let me get back to two flaws that I believe are not necessary for prudent reform in the pending legislation and that, in fact, should not be part of the reform provisions for the Hatch Act.

First, the bill is too broad in its inclusion of all Federal agencies. This amendment has, as one part, removing certain critical agencies of this Nation's Government from coverage under the bill. These agencies need to be beyond political involvement. They must not have any taint or suspicion about political activity, not even the suspicion of coercion or partisan activities. There are some agencies that should not be in this bill.

The Senate has come close on a previous Dole amendment to exclude certain sensitive agencies. But close is not enough. My amendment includes a few more than did that of the distinguished minority leader, Senator DOLE. I want to quickly tick them off. They fit what I think is common sense, what I think cries out for an amendment. I think those employees working for those agencies would overwhelmingly desire, to be left out.

Again, I am not here suggesting a referendum, although it is an interesting idea. We really do not know where the majority of the Federal employees stand on this issue. But I have no doubt the Department of Justice of the United States does not belong in this reform movement. Everyone understands what the Department of Justice is. Do we want those who work in the U.S. attorneys' offices across this land getting political as part of this reform movement? I think not.

The Central Intelligence Agency. Do we really want that operation, with its employees and its mission for the Nation, to be under more suspicion? To have more implied or real political pressures? I think not.

The Internal Revenue Service. It seems to this Senator they have enough problems with American citizens, interpreting and enforcing the very complex laws of this land. While our tax collection system is built on paying voluntarily, it is obvious, as the Presiding Officer knows, that there is already a great contention between those in the IRS who enforce the laws and the citizens. We need not add any suspicion of political or partisan activity to their already cumbersome caseload and difficult job.

The Federal Election Commission—small. Nevertheless, it should not be included within any expanded partisan activity. Is it asking too much for these employees who were exempt by Executive order from some of the privileges of the Hatch Act, that to understand they have a slightly lesser partisan political role in this country? I do not think so. Since they are currently restricted, they know they do not have these privileges they don't expect these privileges, and I think most of them would say it goes with the job.

The National Security Council, the National Security Agency, and the Central Security Service. It seems obvious to me they should be exempt.

The Merit System Protection Board. In a nutshell, that is the board that determines rights, privileges, and appeals under the merit system. Clearly, we do not need to expand their opportunity to be involved in partisan politics, and we would be doing no injustice by exempting them from the reform movement. It seems to me they would not want to be politically active. And the same can be said for Office of Special Counsel, which is directly tied to the Hatch Act.

The Secret Service, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. We know what they are; they are enforcement officers. They have limited privileges now. They have even been excluded from some political activities under Executive order because of the fragile nature of their work. There is a lot of undercover work, a lot of difficult, onerous work. I do not think they want to be under S. 135. I do not think they ought to be. So they would be exempt under my amendment.

The civilians within the Defense Intelligence Agency, a not very large agency. We do not hear as much about them as we do the CIA, but they do many of the same things. Is it not logical that those who work there could be asked by their country to have a slightly less partisan involvement as a condition and part of their employment? If they were asked, they would say "aye" in a minute. Why do we not just go ahead and exclude them on the basis that they should not be there under any approach to protect their jobs, protect their merit, protect them from aspersions, from pressures implicit or real.

So it seems to this Senator that those parts of the Government ought to be exempt from an expanded role in partisan politics as a condition of their employment.

I repeat, there really can be no doubt that some of these agencies we have talked about before—it has been on this floor before and voted on—should not be in this act. As the Senator from New Mexico, I do not have any absolute certainty which agencies have the qualities that I have described here this morning, but I tried my best to find those that surely fit.

That is one thing that is offensive about this bill. That is one thing I remind the Senate: Five Senators who have been supporting reform, included the distinguished Senator from New York, who is on the floor, join me in saying let us fix this.

Then, Mr. President, this is one other very, very important part to this amendment. That part is: Let us have some common sense on which agencies are, by their very quality and character of work, more apt to suffer than to gain. There are certain agencies that are more apt to be respected less and to be less impartial if put under the reform than if left alone.

The other part does something very, very simple. I tie them together here. It says, while our Federal employees may, indeed, be asking us for an expanded participatory role in our political processes, incidentally, we have no official reliable or scientific poll saying a majority of Federal employees do or a minority do, or whether a large majority does not want the expanded rights. We are acting on the premise that they deserve expanded rights. But there is one thing very clear: Federal employees are not clamoring to be solicited in an organized way for political contributions as one of their expanded privileges.

Has anyone had a group of Federal employees meet with them and heard them stand up and say, "Senator, we want our civil rights extended; we want organizations to be able to officially solicit money from us as Federal employees or that we as Federal employees want to solicit political contributions"? I have not heard any. Perhaps a few Senators have heard from organization leaders but we sure don't hear it from the rank and file. Federal employees currently are permitted to contribute, but they do so voluntarily and no one has the right, nor no organization can create itself and have the right to solicit contributions from Federal employees on a Federal employee to Federal employee basis.

So all this amendment does is say all expanded solicitation rights under this reform package—and I do not even know on this count whether we ought to call it reform—but all solicitation changes from the old law are wiped out and we return to the old law as far as soliciting contributions from Federal employees. We do not do away with contributions. We just say retain the old law, which is predicated upon essentially voluntary contributions with no right to openly solicit Federal employees by other Federal employees.

I believe common sense, Mr. President, says that liberalizing campaign contribution solicitation and turning Federal employees into a fundraising work force is not going in the right direction. It is not an improvement to say to Federal employees, "We want to expand your civil rights, your right to participate, but we also want to give coworkers in organizations"—whatever that means, I say to my friend from New York—"we want to give you the right to go into an agency and determine who is going to be asked to give and then know who has and who has not."

Such knowledge can be a very significant pressure on those who are making decisions about the public service, merit pay increases and the like. If the pressure and potential for abuse is not real, it certainly has the potential for mischief, and misinterpretation. Instead of making the workplace for our Federal employees better, it has the opportunity to make it more offensive, more difficult, more onerous. It could politicalize the Civil Service work force.

So let me repeat. On behalf of five Senators who have been supporting this reform measure and who support this amendment by saying, "Look, there are two things that do not sound like prudent, worthwhile reform. We are saying that is improper to include departments like the FBI and the IRS." And we support current law regarding the making and solicitating of contributions from employees. We support voluntary political contributions. We object to active solicitation of Federal employees by "an organization," so long as they belong to it. Such a change would transform a voluntary contribution system into a defacto involuntary contribution system. Regardless of any possible merit, no Federal employee has asked me to change the political contribution or solicitation rules.

I am trying my best knowing full well that it looks like this bill is going to pass. Members on the other side seem to be voting in lock step as if it is a foregone conclusion that this is a perfect bill as is. And there are some on this side of the aisle who truly want reform and have been trying to keep the bill intact.

What I am trying to say is that at some point, we have to be reasonable about those provisions that just do not seem right. Even if we do not want to ask the Federal employees whether they want this law or not, it seems to this Senator that the presumption—is that they do not want to be further solicited; they do not want anyone's right to solicit contributions from them expanded. And they do not want to become fundraisers themselves.

Does anyone want to take that poll? Does anyone want to ask Federal employees, as part of their expanded rights do they want to give coworkers and members of organizations they belong to the right to openly solicit from them as compared with their voluntarily contributing?

Mr. D'AMATO. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DOMENICI. I will be pleased to yield.

Mr. D'AMATO. I would like to read from page 2 of the amendment, subsection (20)(3):

> No employee of any department or agency described under paragraph (3) (except one appointed by the President, by and with the consent of the Senate), may take an active part in political management or political campaigns.

Then the departments that are listed are the Department of Justice, Central Intelligence, Internal Revenue Service, Federal Elections Commission, National Security Council, National Security Agency Central Security Service, Merit Systems Protection Board, Office of Special Counsel, Customs Service, Bureau of Tobacco, Alcohol and Firearms, Secret Service, Defense Intelligence Agency.

Let me ask my colleague what this amendment would do. Would it be to say that if you are an IRS agent, an FBI agent, you would not be able to take an active participatory role in a running of a campaign or political campaigns?

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is absolutely right.

Mr. D'AMATO. And if we did not have this amendment, then I say, in other words, under the proposed bill that is here, FBI agents, Internal Revenue Service agents, Justice Department officials can and would be permitted to take part in active political campaigns?

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. D'AMATO. What about as it relates to the raising of moneys? Without this amendment and the provision that addresses that, would, for example, an agent be permitted, or any of the employees under these categories, to go out and actively solicit political funds without the Senator's amendment?

Mr. DOMENICI. Yes.

Mr. D'AMATO. So that what we are saying is that whether CIA, FBI, Justice Department——

Mr. DOMENICI. The answer is, yes, within if both the Federal worker asking for the political contribution and the Federal worker being asked to make a political contribution are members of the same association or union or to use the language of the bill in the same organizations.

Mr. D'AMATO. Within their organizations.

Mr. GLENN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. D'AMATO. Certainly.

Mr. GLENN. That is correct; they can only solicit under S. 135 within their own organization. They cannot go outside and solicit publicly. They could not go to different organizations. It keeps that. It does not open that up.

Mr. DOMENICI. I might say to the Senator, the evolution of what an organization is might change in the future. So it may be that there is an organization that is broad enough that it has 16 agencies in it and then there could be direct solicitation of all employees of the 16 agencies within the organization, association or union.

So the answer is, yes, as I qualified it, an organization could include employees from a multiplicity of agencies, and then there would be solicitation within the organization which could be a union or other type of organization such as an association. Currently the decision to make a political contribution is voluntary.

Mr. GLENN. Will the Senator yield further? There is a major difference between S. 135 and the House bill, H.R. 20. They pretty much take all restrictions off. You can have Civil Service people going out and raising money from the general public, as I understand their bill. We prohibit that. You can only solicit within your own organization, within your own PAC and your own membership. You cannot go outside; you cannot go to the public, different organizations or different unions.

Mr. D'AMATO. I am pleased the Senator from Ohio has addressed that and raised the specter of what is in the House bill, which we have to go to conference on. That seems to me to be a total disaster. I am talking about the House bill which would actually permit—can you imagine: "Hello, Mr. Jones, my name is so and so. I am, on behalf of"—he can even wear a little button saying he is with the IRS.

Now I am being a bit facetious, but I have to tell you it is a frightening kind of situation. I have supported the bill because I do want people to be in the political process, and that is why I join my good friend from New Mexico, Senator DOMENICI, in sponsoring this amendment. I believe we are embarked upon a very precipitous and dangerous course of action when we open up political participation to those who work in very, very sensitive areas, and these are—the law enforcement area as it relates to our justice system, the intelligence agencies, the Federal Election Commission itself, which I think we want to encourage, with the exception of the political representatives who do come through the process and are confirmed by the Senate at the highest echelons. I believe it is open to abuse. I believe that it will eventually be abused.

While I would like to see us go forward and I am supportive of the general provisions that would permit, for example, those in the Postal Service and others to have the benefit of full political participation, I do think we have a right to expect that when people take certain positions they take them with the knowledge beforehand that, yes, they will be circumscribed from that kind of political activity they would be permitted to do otherwise. I think we do that for their own protection.

Is one of the reasons the Senator propounded the amendment so that those within the various services will be free from political pressures as it relates to making political contributions?

Mr. DOMENICI. Absolutely. Let me say to my friend, he has worked hard in the area of trying to get us involved in the war on drugs. How does the Senator think that an undercover agent, who is listed as a member of an employee organization, is going to take to open solicitation by any member of his organization? Does the Senator think he is going to like it?

Mr. D'AMATO. I do not think he is going to like it. I do not believe he is seeking it. I have not found that from this class. And these are areas in which I have spent a great deal of time, with the Customs agents, with the Bureau people, with the Justice Department people, with all of these various agencies, and I would believe that if this is supposed to be off-the-job-site kind of solicitation, how do they do it? In other words, is there solicitation permitted under S. 135 on the job site? Maybe the Senator from Ohio could answer.

Mr. DOMENICI. How you are going to enforce it, I do not know, but I do not think you can under the bill before us.

Mr. D'AMATO. I have been given to understand, I say to the Senator from Ohio, there is supposed to be no solicitation on the job site.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. I would be pleased to yield for a question of the floor manager.

Mr. GLENN. I thank the Chair. That is correct. The biggest problem with the Hatch Act has been, as the Senators know—my colleagues are into it; they have a lot of civil service people in their area. They are very concerned about this, and have been thinking about this, and are not just voting automatically. I appreciate that very much.

But what the bill does, it takes a very confusing situation where all these interpretations under the Hatch Act have been there for many years, have left the ridiculous situation we even have to have a hotline now so people can call to find out what they are and are not going to violate, if they can figure out what to call about, we simplify this now and make the Hatch Act more workable. That was the purpose of S. 135. It was not to repeal anything. It was not to change the Hatch Act and repeal it. It is to make it workable so people will understand it, so there will not be these misconceptions, so there will not be the chance of violations in the workplace, or deliberate violations.

So what we did is exactly what the Senator from New York said a moment ago. We say that in the workplace you cannot do anything; you cannot even wear a campaign button that you are permitted to wear right now. So in effect we are tightening up in that respect. You can wear it right now. Right now you can go in and wear a campaign button. Under S. 135 you cannot do that in the workplace; it is prohibited. Off the workplace we have a couple of prohibitions. You cannot run for public elective office yourself, and you cannot go out and ask for contributions from the public. You are restricted to keeping your solicitation for contributions for a PAC within the membership of that group and that is it. We keep those restrictions.

Outside of that, should people be able to participate in local politics and have an interest in their political system? This provides that but with those very specific protections.

In direct answer to the Senator's question, in the workplace, nothing. There is no political activity in the workplace and the penalties are stiffened. With the Robb amendment, the penalties are up to 3 years in jail and $5,000, so that we say if there is coercion, if there is anything that violates it, you can get that penalty. Those are the basics of what we provide.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman from Ohio.

Let me clarify for my good friend from New York, whose friendship I greatly respect and whose support I am thankful for, essentially we should not be confused with rhetoric about the law being very mixed up and the need to straighten it out. That is another issue that really has nothing to do with this amendment. There are 13 dos and 16 don'ts. They are all in the two pages of regulations.

But we both have been supporting major reform in spite of some misgivings. This issue is simply whether we should expand the right of Federal employees to solicit and be solicited for campaign contributions or should we leave it like it is. I submit that no Federal employee that I am aware of, unless he is currently the head of an organization that spends political money, is asking to solicit or be solicited by any organization. I say no one wants that right, and that is not a good thing to impose on our Federal employees. Leave the solicitation and contribution rules just like they are. Political contributions are essentially voluntary. How do you think a subordinate is going to feel getting called at home by a superior who is soliciting a contribution? That is prohibited today. I do not believe we ought to have that or any expansion of the right to solicit. There are numerous examples that we could sit here and think of that do the Federal service no justice and are not needed for healthy, solid reform.

I yield the floor.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I do believe that we are headed on a proper course by opening up the process, and that is why I have been supportive and continue to be supportive of the legislative endeavors that have been put forth by my distinguished friend from Ohio.

However, I have to concur with my colleague from New Mexico, and that is why I joined him in this amendment. I think we can be creating a great deal of mischief as it relates to open the process to political participation to those who work in the enumerated areas basically covering national security, the Justice Department, FBI, Secret Service. In addition, the question of whether or not a superior can call someone off the premises to raise funds even as it relates to a particular PAC can be chilling.

I suggest that the Senator has raised a very valid point. It may be that it is only one of perception, for that perception unfortunately all too often takes on an aura of reality, whether we like it or not. That is why I have agreed to be supportive of this amendment. I believe that the legislation, with these two amendments, will serve the interests of 90 percent of those who have said we want to be involved in the political process. And because I work for one of the services that is not in an enforcement area, particularly we should not be precluded. I am talking particularly about the postal worker executives, and the hundreds of thousands, tens of thousands that seek this opportunity.

I believe we can extend that benefit and privilege to them, and that right. I think they have a right without bringing upon the perception and opening the process to the kinds of abuses that my colleague from New Mexico has shared a concern about.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator how he thinks this would work. We will just use street language. The boss calls you on Saturday night at home soliciting a campaign contribution. On Monday he does your performance evaluation. Does the Senator think that this is conducive to good healthy work conditions, and appropriate merit raises will the Federal service be better off with the potential for this type of subtle coersion and abuse than the way it is today?

Mr. D'AMATO. I think the Senator very vividly pointed out the kind of scenario that all too often may take place. Even if it takes place once, twice, or three times, the fact is there will be a perception of this taking place. It becomes chilling both to the public and to the employee.

Those employees who are turned down as it relates to a performance evaluation, whether it be for cause or not for cause, will always be able to raise the specter that the reason they were turned down—I have seen this take place personally—because they did not participate as it related to that request.

I believe the Senator from Ohio has put forth a very constructive bill because we are addressing a basic inequity. It seems to me that with these amendments, or with this amendment that the Senator from New Mexico has advanced, we make a good bill a better bill and one which I think we have an opportunity of having passed overwhelmingly, that we can insist on at the conference, and that the President indeed may sign. If he does not sign, it will still be able to come into law.

So if we want this to be more than just an exercise in futility, if we want to strike a proper balance, I commend this amendment that I believe enhances the legislation which my good friend from Ohio has advanced.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. I only have one last statement. Let me say to my friend from New York, he used the word "chilling." That begins with a "C." I say it is a double "C." It is chilling but it could also be costly because a chilling effect is attitudinal. But if you are denied a merit pay increase, it costs money. Frankly, I just believe direct solicitation within departments by organizations has the potential for a chilling effect and a costly effect on Federal employees. I think it should remain voluntary as it is in the law.

I thank the Senator for his support.

Mr. GLENN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from from Ohio [Mr. GLENN].

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, if I might address the Senator from New Mexico for a moment before he leaves the floor. I want to congratulate him and the Senator from New York for bringing this up because I think the Senator from New York put his finger on one other word there a while ago that I think is absolutely the right word to use; that is, it is a matter of "perception."

There are some perceptions out there about how the American public, how all of us here, view the FBI and the CIA, in particular those two. FEC we can add on to that.

We had some, in trying to work out some of these things, language that I might be able to compromise on if we work together on it. If the Senator is willing to stick around for a few minutes, I would like to sit down and talk about this language, then come back and see if we cannot work out a compromise on this that I think will be acceptable on both sides. I propose to do that right now if the Senator is agreeable to doing that, put in a quorum call, and talk about it for a few minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, let me respond to the distinguished chairman. At some point, obviously, I am not on any urgent timeframe, I would seek disposition of my amendment either by rollcall or otherwise. But as I understand it now, if I were to yield the floor, we could have a quorum call, and we can talk about it. But we also have the pending Dole amendment that has some similar aspects to it in terms of the exclusions from coverage. I am willing to do that. I say to my friend I cannot do it immediately, but I will return in about 10 minutes and be at his disposal.

Mr. GLENN. We will do that. I will reserve any further comment until we have a chance to talk about this a little bit. Unless there is an objection, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COHEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine is recognized.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed as if in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

BATH IRON WORKS

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I take the floor today to call to the attention of my colleagues a situation that I think is certainly inconsistent with the best traditions of Congress. There is an item of controversy that surrounds a very important constituent in my State, Bath Iron Works, a major shipbuilding company, and one of the most prestigious certainly in this country.

There is a continuing controversey surrounding Bath Iron Works by virtue of a GAO investigation into some of its accounting procedures.

Let me say at this point, for the record, there is certainly no firm, there is no company, there is no outfit that is above question or reproach or, scrutiny or, indeed, investigation. Bath Iron Works is a company whose reputation needs no defense but, nonetheless, I come to its defense by virtue of a problem that has developed in recent weeks.

The General Accounting Office, the GAO, is supposed to be an independent arm of Congress. It was never intended to be used as an inquisitional tool by individual Members who wish to strong-arm specific firms into submission. The characterization of Bath Iron Works by Chairman JOHN DINGELL or his staff in recent days, in my judgment, has been ill-timed and ill-tempered.

Bath Iron Works has made a request to the GAO that the information that it turns over to the General Accounting Office be withheld from Congress until such time as the agency has completed its investigation.

The reason Bath made this request is because of past experience. In the past, they have turned over volumes of information, much of it proprietary in nature, much of it confidential, only to find that the information—once turned over to the GAO and then to the investigating subcommittee—has ended up on the front pages of some newspapers to the detriment of Bath Iron Works.

Unfortunately, we have a situation in which a diatribe is being waged against Bath Iron Works. I consider it to be a case of industrial character assassination being practiced on a piecemeal basis.

And the fact that someone who has been identified as a Dingell staff member—who turns out, Mr. President, to be, in fact, a GAO employee doing either internship work or designated as an employee of Chairman DINGELL's staff—has called up the Brunswick Times Record to find out the level of press attention that the latest accusation in this particular matter.

Mr. President, I hope the General Accounting Office—and I am sending a letter to GAO today—will respond to many of the questions I have about the procedures and about the level of cooperation received from Bath Iron Works. But I do hope that GAO will take note of the fact that at least I am, and I know other Members are, concerned about the use of the GAO not as an independent tool for investigation but as an inquisitional tool by individual Members or their staffs to achieve a particular end.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of an article written by James McCarthy and printed in the Brunswick Times Record be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Brunswick Times Record, May 8, 1990]

BIW ACCUSER PLAYS HIDE-AND-SEEK WITH PRESS

(By James McCarthy)

Michigan Congressman John Dingell is fast becoming a household name around here as one of Bath Iron Works' most outspoken critics. But he's never available to field questions from Maine reporters wanting to ask follow-up questions regarding his allegations.

And his staffer, a voice at the end of a phone line who answers to "Tim Morrison," never wants to be quoted by name on anything. He doesn't even want to be referred to as an unnamed spokesman for Dingell's office.

"Just attribute it to 'congressional sources close to the investigation,'" Morrison said late Monday morning after rebutting comments by BIW Chairman William E. Haggett concerning Dingell's latest accusations. His quotes were not printed.

Morrison called The Times Record's Bath bureau wanting to know what BIW's reaction was to the latest accusations made by his boss.

During a 10-minute phone conversation, Morrison never mentioned his comments were "off-the-record." Only a quick disclaimer at the end, "I don't want my name used."

Why not?

Robert C. Shepherd of Brunswick, who was press secretary for former Maine Sen. Edmund S. Muskie from 1964–71, says the phrase "congressional sources" implies a broader scope of interest in the accusation against BIW than just Dingell's office. The other is that if the accusations prove untrue, Morrison won't have to suffer the embarrassment of eating his words.

And don't expect Dingell to make any retractions, Shepherd says.

"He can make these charges, but he bears no responsibility for substantiating any of them," Shepherd says."He knows you can use figures and the process to reach any conclusion you want."

Shepherd likened Dingell to a baseball pitcher who throws from behind a wall and doesn't worry if he hits the batter because he knows he's protected—in this case, by never being available for follow-up questions.

"It's kind of unsportsmanlike, but it's done all the time in Washington," he said. "Dingell's smart. He knows how to manipulate the press."

Meanwhile, BIW and its workers now have to defend themselves in public against Dingell's most recent charges in a May 2 letter to Defense Secretary Richard B. Cheney.

Rep. Joseph Brennan, D-Maine, a member of the House seapowers subcommittee, says the timing of this latest accusation fits Dingell's pattern of attacking BIW on the eve of a major event in the Arleigh Burke program, since Cheney is expected to decide within a week or two whether the destroyer is as vital to the nation's defense as the Navy says.

Taken at face value, the unsubstaniated allegations of the "Navy's unusual bailout of Bath," that "70 percent" of BIW's time card charges were wrong and others, Dingell's letter certainly could color Cheney's opinion about BIW and the destroyer program.

But Brennan says the Navy and congressional leaders he's talked to remain supportive of BIW and the destroyer program.

"A lot of them place very little credibility in what he has to say," he said.

BIW Chairman William E. Haggett acknowledged Sunday he was becoming increasingly frustrated over seeing "pieces of evidence" taken out of context and splashed across the front pages of major and local newspapers, which had been leaked by Dingell's office before the investigation even determined whether the evidence was true. In some cases, he said, it involved confidential information about the company's financial records that could give BIW's competitors an unfair advantage in future bidding battles.

"This premature release of that information has harmed the company," Haggett said. "I'm fearful it could cost us business."

He also feared the company's reputation as one of the country's best shipyards may already be badly tarnished by Dingell's repeated attacks.

"Who wants to work for a company where its management is accused of being criminal?" he asked.

He noted Dingell has never visited the shipyard or personally talked to him or BIW President Duane D. Fitzgerald. Instead, the congressman sent a staff member for a brief visit to the shipyard last summer.

Nevertheless, Haggett spent more than an hour rebutting Dingell or explaining the context of accusations that were partially true.

Yes, Haggett said, it's true BIW production workers have their time cards filled out by supervisors—which Dingell alleges is contrary to accepted practice with defense contractors. But it's done with the Navy's OK and it's a practice followed at other shipyards building Navy ships, he said.

"We believe it makes the charging of time more accurate, not less," Haggett said.

Yes, Haggett said, in a shipyard with 11,500 employees and several different types of contracts, some time has been mischarged to the wrong accounts.

"There is no dispute of that," he said. "Charging errors are made in every shipyard in the United States every day . . . We have a system designed to correct those errors, a suspense account (by which payments to the shipyard are suspended until the error is corrected).

But he flatly denied those instances were intentional, saying, "If BIW has committed criminal misconduct and I've directed it, they will probably send me to jail—and they should."

Haggett spoke entirely on the record.

Shepherd says there's so much "peer courtesy" in Washington among lawmakers, he sees only one reason why Dingell would attack BIW without conferring with Maine Sen. George Mitchell, the Senate Majority leader, or Rep. Joseph Brennan.

"It has nothing to do with BIW," he said. "It's Mitchell and the Clean Air Act . . . Dingell has served his purpose. He's muddied up the waters for Mitchell."

Then again, Shepherd said, it may be that Dingell has political debts to pay to lawmakers with shipyards in their districts that compete against BIW. Or, he said, it may be a simpler motive.

"Money isn't always the glue that holds things together in Washington," he said. "It's power."

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I want to call my colleagues' attention to a matter which I believe is of great importance. That has to do with some key judgments that have been recently filed with the Senate Intelligence Committee as a result of an investigation conducted by the Defense Intelligence Agency. Last year, during the markup of the intelligence authorization portion of the Defense bill, I included an amendment which required DIA to conduct an analysis of the security programs that are currently in place for several of our DOD research, development, testing, and evaluation centers in this country.

The DIA has done an outstanding job, and I want to take this opportunity to commend DIA for its objective and very thorough analysis of some of the problems connected with the security of those facilities.

We have a report which is partially classified concerning the numerous deficiencies that surround the development and testing of classified weapons systems. However, the summary contained in that report is not classified. I simply quote very briefly from the DIA's statement:

The entire U.S. Department of Defense research, development, testing, and evaluation security process needs to be reviewed thoroughly and improved accordingly. • • •

Unless these shortcomings are addressed, temporary fixes to encryption and physical security at selected installations will not solve the long-term security needs of DoD RDT&E programs.

I will take only a moment to outline some of the specific deficiencies identified by DIA: Communications and data transmissions are not adequately protected; security awareness among personnel at the ranges and among outside contractors is poor; personnel at critical space launch facilities are poorly trained in basic security procedures; security is not adequately considered in structuring weapons acquisition programs—for example, security requirements are not even initially written into contracts; and physical security at U.S. weapons testing and space launch facilities is often inadequate. The ranges also lack suitable defensive surveillance systems.

We are not engaged in a number of treaty negotiations with the Soviet Union. We may soon see vast numbers of people come from the Soviet Union to engage in treaty verification procedures. We will have Eastern European trade associations coming to our country. The fact is that we have to become much, much more security-conscious as far as protecting those classified programs for which the taxpayers are spending billions of dollars in the defense of this country's security.

I hope that this initial report calling for thorough and full-scale security review across the entire defense spectrum will be heeded, and I want to take this opportunity to call this report to the attention of my colleagues.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the Key Judgments from the DIA report on test range security be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the Key Judgments from the report were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

KEY JUDGMENTS

(U) The following conclusions are based on a survey of the test sites at Vandenberg Air Force Base, California, Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, Florida, and White Sands Missile Range, New Mexico, and discussions with personnel responsible for implementation of the Secretary of Defense (SECDEF) Memorandum of 1984 on Protection of Weapons System Design and Test Data. Based on this study, it is apparent that improving the security situation at the test ranges is only a part of the problem. The entire U.S. Department of Defense (DoD) research, development, testing, and evaluation (RDT&E) security process needs to be reviewed thoroughly and improved accordingly.

(U) The Military Services, recognizing the security needs of sensitive testing activities and the requirements of the 1984 SECDEF Memorandum, have expended considerable effort to identify security problems at the test ranges and develop implementation plans to correct them. Some security upgrades have been funded under these implementation plans and others have been provided by range users. Major resources still need to be programmed to implement upgrades to enhance test range security.

(U) That these needs have been known for some time, but not universally addressed, is the result of a number of systemic problems. The system by which security is administered and funded within the Military Services has shortcomings which have contributed to ineffective implementation of the SECDEF Memorandum specifically, and to security in general. Unless these shortcomings are addressed, temporary fixes to encryption and physical security at selected installations will not solve the long-term security needs of DoD RDT&E programs. These shortcomings are as follows:

DoD RDT&E security policy implementation is fragmented and not consistent from range to range.

DoD security policies are not addressed in the basic acquisition directives.

Security requirements are not initially written into contracts.

Security guidelines for individual programs are the responsibility of the program manager, resulting in inconsistency between programs regarding the security of similar data.

No DoD forum for the integrated resolution of problems belonging to the test ranges exists.

Most security upgrades on the ranges are done on a program-by-program basis. As a result, program managers who desire security enhancements like extensive encryption are faced with no systematic way to attain the level of security protection required, without huge program costs. Important testing often has to accept lower levels of security than program managers desire.

Security should be second only to safety on the test ranges; however, it often seems to fall behind other priorities when products are being developed and tested.

Top priority for the test range commander is safety and satisfactory support to the programs of his range.

Program managers emphasize development of the product, on time and on budget.

Operations security (OPSEC) at the test ranges, and at the commands to which they are subordinate, is directed at a lower staff level of authority by a small security staff perceived to have only an advisory role. OPSEC policy at the ranges is not considered directive in nature.

Security upgrades on the ranges have to complete for limited budget dollars with other improvements and modernization, or operations and maintenance projects. If funding for security projects is provided, it does not guarantee the funds will be expended for that purpose, as funding can be redirected toward another project. When this happens, security upgrade projects are not completed and security continues to lag behind what is required.

Security awareness among personnel at the ranges and among the contracting community in general is poor. There is a limited understanding of the connection between unclassified test range data collected by hostile intelligence services and resulting improvements in military technology made by nations hostile to the United States. Program managers are often poorly trained in basic security procedures and the hostile threat to U.S. test ranges.

Program manager course materials do not include adequate security indoctrination.

Security investment vice loss of RDT&E dollars due to program compromise (tactical and strategic) is not well understood and documented at any echelon of command.

Communications and data transmissions are not adequately protected, and unclassifed documents routinely receive no protection. The full range of support functions to the RDT&E process generates unclassified data that, collectively, reveal critical and/or classified data.

Although they generally adhere to current regulation, physical security programs at the ranges are often inadequate to protect critical space launch facilities.

Personnel reliability certification programs for access to critical space launch facilities are inadequate.

The ranges lack a suitable wide area surveillance system.

The ranges lack the capaibility to respond to airborne intruders.

The ranges lack the capability to monitor their ocean boundaries.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quoum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may be able to proceed as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CFC'S

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, as many of our colleagues are aware, the United States signed the Montreal protocol in 1987. That international agreement set a goal of reducing the consumption of chlorofluorocarbons and halons, the two then most serious ozone depleting chemicals, by some 50 percent by the year 2000. Chlorofluorocarbons and halons are chemicals used in everyday products that science has determined are primarily responsible for the alarming deterioration of the Earth's protective ozone layer.

This week the nations of the world are meeting in Geneva to build upon the Montreal protocol. They are looking to achieve some preliminary agreements for the June Ministerial, which will be held under the auspices of the United Nations Environmental Program. The major goal of this week's meeting and the June Ministerial is to adopt policies to enable every nation to phase out and eliminate any ozone-depleting chemical that we know about, and this week's meeting in particular is to enable and attract the developing nations, including China and India, to participate in the CFC reduction and elimination effort.

Since these industrializing nations lack sufficient resources to meet human needs and to do their part for the global environment, the primary incentive to their participation is new lending authority through international development banks. The United States is refusing to agree to provide any new lending authority or funds. It is this Senator's position that this is a serious mistake, and I would like to take a few moments of our colleagues' time to explain why.

As near as I can determine, Mr. President, the administration's retreat and decision to overrule EPA Administrator Bill Reilly has been driven by fears that establishing an earmarked account to encourage CFC compliance by the poorer nations would set a precedent for a similar separate account to combat other environmental threats such as global warming. In my view, such concerns are misplaced and in this instance grossly misplaced.

No one that I know of questions the impact of CFC's on the ozone layer. Nobody on the White House staff even questions that impact. The science is for once clear, the mechanisms established, the threat real, and the need to act, urgent.

The administration should not allow the concerns about a different set of environmental issues, one where there may be some differences on the science or on the threats, both among industrialized nations and developing nations, to dissuade the administration from taking the right steps for CFC elimination now.

Mr. President, as I understand the other reason for the administration's overruling the President's own EPA chief's recommendations, the White House is saying that the United States' share of the international fund is inconsistent with reducing the budget deficit and, instead, the way we ought to address the problem is that the World Bank should be the source, using its existing funds as a means of addressing this problem.

Mr. President, I suggest we need to face some facts and so does the Bush White House. Fact No. 1 is that of all the environmental issues facing the world, the threat of CFC's and other ozone-depleting chemicals is the one issue on which the scientists in every nation, including ours, agree, not only on the scientific mechanisms involved but on the serious threat posed to planetary biology and human health. This simply means that the need to eliminate CFC's and other ozone-depleting chemicals is clear, it is compelling, and it is urgent.

When you are a passenger in a vehicle where the driver has lost control, you do not worry about the precedent. You grab the wheel and try to save the car from going over the cliff. The Bush administration has to grab the wheel and help get us all to safety.

Fact No. 2 is that there is a unique source of revenues that are directly related to the chlorofluorocarbon problem and its reduction, namely the excise taxes that have been imposed on U.S. producers of chlorofluorocarbons. Over the next 5 years, the U.S. Government is going to take in some $5 billion in excise taxes on CFC's. These are, of course, being collected for the very purpose of assisting in phasing CFC's down and out. The use of a fraction, a very small fraction, of the revenues to achieve the intended purpose of the Montreal protocol, scarcely sets a precedent that is dangerous or inconsistent. To the contrary, to not use any of these funds to achieve the very purpose that gives rise to them is what is illogical, dangerous, and inconsistent.

As to the budget impact, let us focus on that issue for a moment. The U.S. share of the fund to help lesser developed countries make a transition to a CFC-free economy would be a total of $25 million over 3 years. Mr. President, when we do a budget here, we use an asterisk to denote anything that is less than $50 million in 1 year. The cost to the U.S. Government represents, therefore, a commitment of about $8 million a year over 3 years, it represents less than one-half of 1 percent of the moneys we are going to receive from the CFC excise tax.

We want to be inclusive and effective in dealing with the one worldwide environmental threat upon which everybody agrees. The cost of not meeting this commitment is to undercut and perhaps wreck the agreement that Americans and others need in order to eliminate CFC's and the worldwide health threat that they represent.

I might add, Mr. President, the idea that we somehow cannot find $8 million, with a lower priority, somewhere in a $2.24 trillion budget, is nothing short of ludicrous. We are a nation that continues to spend billions of dollars a year, not millions but billions, and even tens of billions of dollars a year on our national security. We spend billions more, tens of billions more, defending the security of other nations in Europe, in the Far East, in the Middle East. We are spending billions on a bomber, the B–2 bomber, that does not even have a credible mission.

What does it say about our priorities if we are unwilling to commit the comparatively tiny sum of $8 million per year to a known threat to human health that is already causing thousands of skin cancer and deaths because of our earlier ignorance and inaction and neglect?

Some may say, as the administration has: But why not use the World Bank? Is this not a good purpose to which to direct the bank?

Mr. President, I am not here to say it is not a good purpose with which to direct the bank, but this particular idea for the particular negotiation that we are involved in simply comes to the table too late. The agreement that we need on the Montreal protocol is supposed to be reached at the June Ministerial. That is in just one month's time. That scarcely is time to reorient the policy of another international organization that has never played a role in this issue, at least to my knowledge, of any kind whatsoever.

The fact is that nobody has done the homework necessary on this idea. The World Bank has no mandate to fund such a program now. To suggest that the policy of another international organization be changed overnight as a precondition to prompt agreement on an urgent worldwide phaseout and ban of CFC's is to hold our planetary environment hostage for an indefinite and dangerous length of time.

Mr. President, let me conclude by noting that in this Senator's view, the Montreal protocol was an epochal event marking both the severe threats posed to the planet by man's activities and the urgent need for international cooperative action to address those threats.

As Americans, we can and we should be very proud, indeed, of the leadership role played by the United States in crafting and securing international support for that agreement. But with this week's decision overruling the recommendation of the President's own EPA chief, the Bush White House has undercut the chances of reaching a critical and important agreement, squandered America's credibility and called, I am sorry to say, the President's own commitment to the environment into question.

I urge the President to reverse this decision. I hope he will do so and do so quickly and stand and direct our negotiators to support the creation of new lending authority for CFC compliance.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS OF 1989

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may speak as if in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

Mr. PRYOR. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. PRYOR pertaining to the introduction of S. 2605 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I thank the Chair for recognizing me. I apologize to the Chair for probably speaking over my limit of time. I would not have done that if other Senators had been on the floor seeking recognition.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE HATCH ACT REFORM BILL

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to state my position on final passage of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill presently before this body.

SUPPORT MEANINGFUL REFORM

Mr. President, I do this reluctantly because I am very sensitive to and supportive of the need for reform of the existing Hatch Act. Furthermore, Alaska has one of the highest number of Federal employees per capita in the United States. This Senator has heard many of the complaints of Federal employees having their political rights unreasonably restricted.

When this bill came to the floor of the Senate, I indicated my intention of supporting meaningful reform legislation by casting four votes against amendments that would have unrealistically restricted responsible reform.

While I agree that reform of current law is necessary, unfortunately the bill presently under consideration goes too far. There's a difference between surgery with a scalpel and an ax. This bill attempts to reform the Hatch Act with a meat ax. While the Hatch Act must be tuned to address legitimate concerns that many of us share, the bill in its present form guts a law that has been protecting Federal employees for five decades.

HATCH ACT PROTECTIONS

Mr. President, many of the concerns addressed by the Hatch Act in 1939 are still of concern today. Employees of the Federal Government need protection from political coercion and this Nation needs to maintain the political neutrality of the Federal decisionmaking process. No one in this body wants to return to the days when Federal employees were the political hostages of their supervisors and the spoils system determined how the Federal tax dollar was spent.

Unfortunately, over the past 50 years many of the well-meaning restrictions of the Hatch Act have gone too far. In many cases, the present system imposes needless layers of complicated and unrealistic regulations. It casts such a broad net that many employees are prevented from engaging in perfectly legitimate and appropriate activities that are considered basic rights by nongovernment employees. By maintaining senseless restrictions, I know many of the people working in the civil service have become disgruntled with the entire system.

PARTISAN POLITICS—NO COMPROMISE

Unfortunately, Mr. President, during the course of this body's consideration of S. 135 it has become apparent that meaningful reform is no longer the goal of some who support this legislation. Perhaps believing that no compromise was necessary, many on the other side of the aisle have refused to consider even the most limited of amendments to this legislation.

While this Senator agrees that many of the Hatch Act's current restrictions can be loosened with regard to the majority of Federal employees, some restrictions must remain for employees that work in particularly sensitive agencies. For example, my colleague, the distinguished minority leader, offered an amendment which would have exempted employees of the IRS, FEC, Justice Department, and the intelligence agencies from inclusion in the reform bill. The Senator from Kansas correctly pointed out that work in these agencies is just too sensitive to permit employees to participate in political activities—the conduct of employees from these agencies must be completely above reproach.

For example, employees of CIA and NSA have access to highly sensitive national security information. They should not be put into a situation where there could be any temptation to reveal that information in the heat of a political campaign. When an individual joins the CIA or NSA he or she agrees to accept some appropriate restraints on their activities in return for access to national secrets. The Hatch Act is one such restraint.

By retaining Hatch Act controls over intelligence community employees, there will be less temptation for any administration to place political appointees in management positions at CIA or other similar agencies. In addition, the investigative capabilities of the FBI and IRS could conceivably be used as a weapon in a political campaign to discredit or coerce a political opponent. It is crucial that any temptation of this kind be avoided by strictly maintaining the nonpolitical character of the work force of these agencies.

Mr. President, this Senator strongly supported the Dole amendment along with several other necessary amendments to bring responsible reform—all of which were voted down on partisan votes. I believe that adoption of these and other amendments would have gone a long way toward addressing this Senator's objections to the bill. Unfortunately, the proponents of S. 135 have objected to even the most reasonable of limitations.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, let me restate to my colleague that this Senator supports meaningful reform to the Hatch Act. This Senator voted for cloture when it was invoked last week because it is important that Congress address this important issue. But this Senator will not vote for a bad bill just because it contains some useful provisions. Until the proponents of S. 135 show some willingness to address the real concerns that many of us share, this Senator is compelled to oppose the bill.

It is my hope that the President will veto this bill and that the Senate will sustain his veto so that we can come back anew, with responsible Hatch Act reform that this Senator can support.

I thank the Chair. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, we have been debating S. 135 for several days and, hopefully, we are nearing the time when we will be voting the legislation up or down.

In preparation for these final votes, I think it would be well to summarize why some of us feel that it is improper, undesirable, and not in the interest of either the American public or the Federal employee to repeal the Hatch Act. As I have emphasized time and again, S. 135 is not a mere reform, but it is, indeed, an actual repeal of the Hatch Act which for 50 years has served this Nation so well.

The chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee has really only given three reasons as to why this legislation should be amended.

He has pointed out the cases where certain union leaders who were on leave from Federal employment were prosecuted. The courts found, in fact, that these union leaders had not violated the Hatch Act.

The second reason was the claimed confusion of Hatch Act regulations, and as we have pointed out time and again there are not over 3,000 rules and regulations. To the contrary, there are only 29. They are pretty clear and pretty well understood. But if you do not understand them or have a question, there is a hotline for a Federal employee to get an answer.

The third reason was the inability of Federal employees to vote in a caucus under the Hatch Act.

Mr. President, I have offered an amendment to cure each and every one of these reasons, but the majority does not want those reasons addressed. So as I have said in the past, it is not so much the reasons given for the legislation that are important but the things that are not being said on the Senate floor that are compelling the advocates to seek the enactment of S. 135.

As I said yesterday, when I offered my amendment to strike any reference to PAC's, it was obvious the real reason for this proposed legislation is what it does to PAC's and how it would enable a national political interest group to be formed.

Mr. President, I think it can be said fairly that if this bill is enacted into law, there will be several undesirable consequences. As I have just suggested, a new political interest group will be formed, a special interest group working at cross-purposes with the duty of Federal employees to serve the public. Federal employees, in fact, would not become equal political players if S. 135 is enacted but preferred—preferred—political players because others in the private sector, if they exercise their rights politically in the rough-and-tumble games of politics, can exercise their rights against them. But this bill would allow Federal employees to have it both ways: they have the right to engage in politics but are protected by a law against retribution. No one else in this land enjoys this preferential treatment.

The serious problem is that the public will lose confidence in the neutral administration of Government programs. I think most people on both sides of the political aisle would agree that confidence in Government is not high among the American people, and I fear that with the enactment of the legislation we have under discussion it would only go lower.

As I have pointed out, the Hatch Act has enjoyed widespread support for 50 years. A law enacted initially in a Democratic administration of President Roosevelt and with a Democratic Congress, it struck a fair balance between the rights of the individual Federal employee to vote and the rights of the American people to enjoy the administration of the Federal laws in a neutral, nonpartisan way.

The employee, if this legislation is enacted, will in many cases lose his freedom not to participate in political campaigns. What is permitted will too often become what is expected. Federal employees will know that if they want to succeed, it will be in their interest to do whatever their supervisers think is politically desirable. There does not have to be any spoken coercion. It will be a known fact, as a new administration, what those in the civil service are expected to do if they want to move ahead. It would be a long, long step back, unfortunately, to the spoils system. As I have also pointed out, tremendous confusion will result from S. 135.

It has been claimed by the advocates that the current law is not clear; it could be improved upon, and we offered an amendment to do just that. But in all candor, the substitution of S. 135 for the Hatch Act will not bring about clearness, will not bring about clarification. It will bring about what I have called "Hatch-22."

Under S. 135, we are saying on the one hand, "Oh, yes, Mr. or Ms. Federal employee, you can become a campaign manager, you can be involved in political campaigns—not only can you be involved but we encourage you to do so."

But at the same time in another section they say you cannot solicit volunteer services, even though it is impossible to be a campaign manager and not direct the operations of volunteers such as in a telephone bank.

So that we would be substituting for a balance that is well understood, has worked well, a whole new concept that would only mean confusion, difficulties and, unfortunately, a loss of confidence on the part of the American people in the fair administration of their laws.

Mr. President, I have a series of editorials which I ask unanimous consent to have printed at the end of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRYAN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I would like to briefly sum up the arguments against this legislation.

First, current law under the Hatch Act is designed to protect Federal employees from political coercion. S. 135 deeply erodes this protection by making Federal employees vulnerable to indirect, subtle pressures.

Let there be no doubt that if this bill becomes law, Federal employees will feel obligated to engage in certain activities to further their career, even in the absence of explicit coercion.

Second, let me be clear, both supporters of current law and S. 135 want to protect against political coercion. Current law is a proven, effective method of doing so, while this legislation fails to acknowledge the notion that coercion is often done in subtle ways.

Third, this legislation will permit a Federal work force with sensitive responsibilities such as law enforcement, tax collection, Federal election oversight, and the awarding of Government contracts to become identified with certain political parties or causes. Public identification of Federal employees with partisan politics would erode public trust in the Government.

Fourth, this legislation will present an unprecedented opportunity for Federal employees to solicit contributions from other Federal employees who belong to the same employee union. This will breed subtle pressures within the work force to contribute to certain political actions.

Fifth, political coercion at the State level, where protections similar to those at the Federal level are not in law, has resulted in numerous prosecutions. The Office of Special Counsel has recently prosecuted cases of coercion in Akron, OH, and Niagara Falls, NY. The Department of Justice has investigated cases of political corruption in Clark County, IN, and Chicago, IL.

Sixth, opponents of this legislation include Common Cause, the American Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association, the National Academy of Public Administration, the National Taxpayers Union, and the Chamber of Commerce. Proponents are only the Federal and Postal employee unions and the ACLU.

Seventh, surveys indicate that Federal employees do not support Hatch Act reform. More than 35 percent of Federal personnel specialists surveyed believe Hatch Act reform would have a negative effect on the work environment, while only 11 percent said it would have a positive effect, and the remainder said it would have no effect or had no response.

In 1987, the Senior Executives Association published a survey of their members. More than 70 percent of the members who responded to the surveyed favored the current law. But what is even more revealing is some of the comments made by respondents:

The additional "freedom" in exercising rights of citizens would quickly turn into political favoritism, with different sets of Senior Executives careerists and GS careerists "in" or "out" of favor depending on election results.

And:

The bill could be very harmful for professionals in the career service. Incoming appointees would be under great pressure to award those who worked the hardest for the party that won.

For anyone who doubts a return to the spoils system, I urge them to listen to these Federal employees. The Hatch Act protects them now. The Hatch Act reflects the historical and continuing necessity to balance the rights of Federal employees as citizens with the overwhelming public interest in an impartial, politically neutral, and independent civil service. The changes being proposed harm that balance. I urge that my colleagues vote against S. 135.

EXHIBIT 1

[From the Wall Street Journal, Nov. 10, 1987]

POLITICS UN-HATCHED

Watching any number of bad old ideas resurface in Washington these days, we've sometimes had to stop and recall what decade this is. The latest corpse to rise from the 1970s is an attempt to revise the Hatch Act so that employees of the federal government would be able to engage in partisan politics. President Ford vetoed a similar bill in 1976, but this year the powerful public-employee unions have made sure it's back on the agenda and sprinting through Congress.

A House Committee has already whooped the bill through on a "fast track," with the Democratic leadership all behind it. The Reagan administration is opposing the bill, but a public-union spokesman claims it's already "veto-proof" in the House and gaining support in the Senate. Before this bill is bulldozed into law, both sides might want to stop and ask if Americans really want the three million people who deliver their mail or audit their taxes to be able to hit them up for campaign contributions too.

The bill's supporters claim, of course, that it would simply "restore" to federal workers the constitutional rights that all Americans have, say, to pass out campaign leaflets or run for office. (They can already vote as they choose, of course.) This has a nice civil-libertarian ring to it, but anyone who knows how the civil service works understands that the opposite is more nearly true. The only way to protect civil servants from harassment is to shield them from partisan politics altogether. Only a total ban give employees a plausible excuse for not participating in politics; without such a ban, an employee will always feel pressure, even if only subtle, to favor the boss's, or the union's, cause.

Hatch Act opponents respond that their bill has a provision to protect employees against pressure, but in fact this is a boon mainly to lawyers. It offers no more effective protection than current law. Moreover, any employee reprimanded or not promoted, for whatever reason, will be encouraged to sue on grounds of political bias; lawyers will have a field day, but government managers only another headache.

Merits aside, what's really going on here is a display of power politics by the public-employee unions, which understand that Hatch restrictions limit their political clout. Indeed, the presidents of three major unions were suspended from federal employment for 60 days under the Hatch Act for blantantly supporting the Mondale campaign in 1984. It's doubtful, in any case, that union leaders even speak for federal workers on this issue. Rep. Frank Wolf, a former civil servant whose Virginia district probably contains more federal workers than any other, is opposing this bill because he says most of his constituents like the Hatch protections.

We ourselves must admit to some nostalgia for the old "spoils system" that predated the civil service. At least voters could decide to throw the rascals out every four years. As long as the U.S. has a permanent civil service with virtually lifetime tenure, however, Americans need to be confident that it can't become anyone's partisan army.

[From the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Apr. 8, 1988]

DON'T GUT THE HATCH ACT

Twice now in 10 years the House of Representatives has approved legislation to gut the Hatch Act by removing restrictions on political activity by federal employees. Like the previous attempt that then-President Carter managed to deflect, the latest measure passed by the House purports to "reform" the law.

The Hatch Act could stand some fine tuning; in the nearly five decades of its existence the case rulings on which enforcement is based have produced a crazy-quilt pattern. But the heart of the act—the protection of government workers from political intimidation and abuse—remains as true and strong today as when the act was signed into law in 1939. To argue, as labor union leaders do, that workers don't require that protection under the Hatch Act is nonsense. Remove it and you expose government employees to coercive behavior by politically driven supervisors.

People don't lose the right to vote, the ability to contribute to political candidates or to express an opinion when they accept a federal job. But to keep that job, they must not run for most local, state and federal offices, solicit campaign funds, or be active in political campaigns. Repeal those restrictions, as the House has agreed to do, and government will be less efficient and more corrupt.

[From the Cincinnati Post, Oct. 8, 1987]

KEEP THE HATCH ACT

For nearly five decades the Hatch Act has protected both federal employees and the public from pressures to politicize the civil service. But a bill to gut its safeguards has attracted surprisingly widespread support in the House of Representatives.

A bill sponsored by Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., would allow federal workers for the first time since the 1930s to engage in partisan political activism: running for office, electioneering for candidates and donating money to campaigns. Those who would rather stay out of politics would be pressured by unions and special interests to jump in.

Congress passed the Hatch Act in 1939, partly in reponse to a Pulitzer Prize-winning series of articles by Scripps Howard reporter Thomas Stokes on corruption in the newly created Works Progress Administration. Stokes described how WPA foremen in Kentucky raised an army of conscripts for the re-election campaign of Sen. Alben Barkley, "instructing their workers that they must vote for the senator and in numerous cases making support of him a prerequisite for jobs." He called the affair "a grand political racket in which the taxpayer is the victim."

Lots of things have changed since the 1930s, of course: mainly that the federal government has grown even bigger, and more powerful. Also, federal workers are more likely to be members of labor unions. Coercion by a union can be even harder for an employee to resist than coercion by a supervisor. And just imagine, for example, an army of mailmen descending on your neighborhood to pass out political literature for a candidate who has pledged bigger subsidies for the Postal Service.

With Washington spending about one-fourth of our gross national product, the tradition of a nonpartisan civil service is more precious than ever. The Hatch Act is an essential part of that tradition; it should not be weakened.

[From the Portland Oregonian, Nov. 19, 1987]

DON'T SPOIL THE HATCH ACT

Rep. William D. Clay, D-Mo. and his friends in the civil service unions deserve this year's hour-glass award for conspicuous efforts to turn back the clock.

The object of Clay's reactionary attentions is the Hatch Act, which bars federal employees from such partisan political activities as seeking public office, working in campaigns, soliciting funds and votes for candidates and holding office in polticial parties. Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Hatch Act into law in 1939, but the Republican Roosevelt, cousin Theodore, had first established such restrictions in civil service regulations in 1901. So, Clay would turn back the clock on a century of bipartisan civil service reform.

This is not the first effort to "un-Hatch" federal workers, but each year the Hatch Act becomes a greater potential victim of its own success. Each year the corruption and politicization of the federal work force that accompanied the New Deal's expansion of government programs and led to the law recedes further into history.

But the Hatch Act's limits on partisan political activity were sound then and sounder still today for both the federal worker and the federal government. Although the law imposes some narrow restrictions in exchange for a job that election results will not threaten, the government employee retains many basic political rights: the right to vote, to join and contribute money to a political party, to engage in non-partisan political activity.

The Hatch Act's restrictions shield civil servants from subtle and not so subtle forms of pressure and intimidation, reward and reprisal, that political management could visit on them in a system opened to partisan politics. Jobs might not be gained or lost in any new un-Hatched spoils system, but job promotions or demotions might be. Anyone who thinks sufficent safeguards could be imposed should recall the troubles that have befallen government workers who have blown the whistle on waste, fraud and abuse.

Besides the possible disruptions across the executive branch, the repeal of the Hatch Act restrictions could skew legislative decision-making on spending. For example, large blocks of Un-Hatched federal workers would be free to campaign for candidates who promise salary and benefits increases and the expansion of federal programs.

Rolling back the Hatch Act would clearly enhance the political clout of civil service unions, but at a cost to the civil servant and the people and programs they serve.

[From the Waterbury (CT) Republican, Nov. 22, 1987]

NO TO HATCH ACT REPEAL

Taxpayers had better put heavy duty locks on their pocketbooks. The House of Representatives wants to make it possible for three million civilian government employees to put the bite on them in political campaigns with the under-the-table implied threat that no cooperation could mean less than reasonable service from the government.

It's all being done in the guise of a guarantee of free speech for those who work for the government. They would be permitted to run for public office, to solicit campaign funds and to be campaign managers in elections.

Obviously the federal employees would be prohibited from partisan politics during working hours. But what about lunch breaks or coffee breaks? What about the private citizen who deals with a bureaucrat at 4:30 p.m. and at 5:10 p.m. is asked for a campaign contribution by that same government worker?

Is it reasonable for the private citizen to interpret the request for a contribution to mean there would be better service in his dealings with the government worker?

The Hatch Act was passed in 1939 to protect government workers from being coerced into participating in politics to keep their jobs. While there are union protections for the government employees today that didn't exist then, the union doesn't protect the public.

The House approved the elimination of the law by close to a three-to-one margin. The only protection left for the public is to appeal to the Senate to reject that action, or if the senators refuse to do so, to plead with President Reagan for a veto.

Government employees are not prohibited from participating in the election process. They can attend rallies; they can make campaign contributions; they can vote. But in return for government jobs, which must be impartial and equitable to all, they can't run for office, manage campaigns or solicit funds.

That's a small trade-off for a job with a guaranteed future: one that will exist virtually without regard for the status of the economy; one that provides pension and other fringe benefits far better than in most private enterprises.

If the Hatch Act is eliminated, government employees can count on a never-ending series of complaints by the public of unfair treatment by those who engage in partisan politics. There will always be the suspicion of favoritism.

Government in this country is successful because of the general perception of fairness. Letting federal employees become involved in partisan politics, letting them solicit campaign funds could destroy that perception.

Congress has to protect the public first, not government employees who already have so many protections against punishment for wrongdoing that it boggles the mind.

The Senate has to save the Hatch Act for the sake of the people and the integrity of the federal government.

[From the Arkansas Democrat, Dec. 4, 1987]

KEEP THE HATCH ACT

Should the federal bureaucracy be politicized? Of course, it shouldn't. But politicization may be on the way.

The House has overwhelmingly passed, and the Senate will soon consider, a bill that would kill the Hatch Act, which bars bipartisan politicking by the country's 3 million federal employees.

The cry is that banning partisan political activity denies federal civil servants their First Amendment rights.

The Supreme Court has twice upheld the Hatch Act on the ground that "it is in the best interest of the country that federal service should depend on meritorious performance rather than political service."

That doesn't quite cover what repeal would bring. Political self-service would be a better term for the mouth-and-money partisan politicking that would go on within the federal establishment.

On-the-job politicking would indeed be banned, but a unionized bureaucracy could easily handle that, and it's the powers that repeal would give the employee unions that should scare Americans.

Both the bosses and the rank-and-file members could run for and hold political office, solicit political donations and administer political action committees, the so-called PACs.

The Hatch Act now bans these activities. Federal employees are allowed to attend partisan fund-raisers and political meetings and give money to political organizations but they can't solicit donations or campaign politically except for or against non-partisan ballot measures.

Repeal would see civil servants holding political office, carrying on intensive partisan fund raising and campaigning for partisan ends at the very center of the federal government.

Opponents of repeal say that federal employees want these powers so that they can use unionization to gain control of the $76 billion federal payroll and then of government itself.

Armies of unionized civil servants, they say, would, under union bosses, use their new fund-raising power to influence the shape of legislation through contributions to susceptible lawmakers.

Does that sound overstated? It doesn't to us. Political power never goes unused, and the Hatch Act has more than once tripped up union heads who have exerted it illegally.

Repeal of the Hatch Act could in sober truth establish a politicized Fourth Branch unanswerable to the people and concerned solely with its own political (and mostly liberal) ends.

The argument for the First Amendment right to politick freely is a strong one indeed, but not in the context of organized partisan activity within government itself. The very idea is abhorrent to representative government, which is a product of individual political preferences.

Federal civil servants are now hired on condition that they remain politically neutral so that those outside government can exert control. The Supreme Court has upheld the Hatch Act on that ground.

If the Senate repeals the act, President Reagan should veto the repeal. If he is overridden, repeal should be challenged, and the high court should again reject the blatant argument that the Federal Amendment demands politicization of the federal civil service.

[From the Buffalo News, Nov. 21, 1987]

HATCH ACT STILL NEEDED

For 48 years, the Hatch Act has, by limiting federal employees' political activities, protected them from political coercion by their superiors. The act has also prevented the federal bureaucracy from becoming a vast political machine operated by the party in power.

Thus, the extensive revisions now being sought would be a deplorable step backward.

The House recently approved changes that would virtually gut the Hatch Act by allowing the nation's civilian federal employees to run for office, manage political campaigns and solicit political contributions.

The measure was unfortunately rushed through the House with only limited debate as its enthusiastic bipartisan backers seemed to lose all recollection of the political threats to the integrity of the Civil Service system that prompted the legislation in the first place.

The federal bureaucracy has grown steadily since the Hatch Act was passed in 1939, and there are now some 3 million civilian federal employees. There are over 357,000 federal employees in the Washington metropolitan area alone.

Government employee unions and some civil liberty groups support the overhaul of the Hatch Act on the grounds that federal employees should have the same rights as other citizens. But the Reagan administration, business interests and Common Cause, the citizens lobby, joined in warning against the threat of politicizing the Civil Service.

Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., who led the opposition in the House, deployed the hasty passage of the bill, saying: "We will be investigating political corruption for years to come."

Under the proposed changes, the chairman of the Federal Election Commission could keep his job while running for office himself. Of this, Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said: "This is madness, to have the people who regulate the game being full-scale players in the game."

The House measure does not repeal the Hatch Act completely. It would still prohibit political activity on the job and seek to prevent political coercion by superiors. Nevertheless, it would be likely to open the door to such politicization.

While after nearly half a century, some revision of the act might be warranted, there is no reason for the wholesale changes now approved by the House.

A similar measure was approved by both Houses in 1976 but was vetoed by President Gerald Ford. Two years later, the House passed another bill, but it died in the Senate.

The big 305-112 House majority for the latest measure would be sufficient to override a veto by President Reagan. Thus, the responsibility will lie with the Senate, when it examines the issues early next year, to soften the worst features of the House measure or reject it altogether.

[From the Portland Evening Express, Nov. 21, 1987]

POLITICS—DANGEROUS CHANGE

It's a rare day when the Reagan administration, business interests and Common Cause find themselves political allies. But all three have been united against attempts to rewrite the Hatch Act, the law which isolates federal employees from partisan politics.

Unfortunately, the coalition proved unsuccessful earlier this week when the House of Representatives voted overwhelmingly to repeal Hatch Act provisions. The measure, which was rushed through the House under parliamentary rules that limited debate and allowed no amendments, is a dangerous departure from a law which has served to protect federal employees from political exploitation for nearly a half century.

If the change in the law is actually made—it still faces Senate action and a possible presidential veto—the government's 3 million classified employees will be free to run for partisan political office, manage election campaigns, serve as volunteer workers for candidates and solicit political contributions.

The Hatch Act was passed back in the 1930s to rescue the Civil Service System from rampant political corruption. Under its provisions, federal workers were relieved of pressure to raise campaign contributions or otherwise work for the election of particular candidates as a condition of retaining their government jobs.

There's absolutely no reason to believe the same abuses won't result if the Hatch Act is repealed. Indeed, the chief opponent of repeal in the House, Rep. Frank R. Wolf, R-Va., may have been close to the truth when he predicted last week that "we will be investigating political corruption for years to come" if the measure passes.

Let's hope the Senate shows more sense than the House and kills this dangerous and regressive proposal.

[From the Washington Times, Nov. 10, 1987]

PRESERVE THE HATCH ACT

The White House, through now typical inactivity, soon could lose an important fight over legislation to abolish key Hatch Act provisos which protect federal employees from being coerced into unwelcome political activities. Backed by a veto-proof 292 members, including such heavyweight Democrats as House Post Office and Civil Service Committee Chairman William Ford and Republicans like House Minority Leader Bob Michel, the bill in question (HR 3400) zipped through the Post Office and Civil Service Committee last month by a 22-0 vote, and could reach the House floor any day.

The bill would allow roughly 3 million executive branch employees to engage in political activities—which would include managing political campaigns, running for elective office and campaign fund-raising. (Although the bill wouldn't change the status of District government employees, who are currently "Hatched," Walter Fauntroy, congressional delegate from the District of Columbia, has introduced a companion measure which would lift restrictions on their political activities.) Reforming the law is necessary, Rep. William Clay of Missouri argues, because "the Hatch Act is an infringement on the constitutional right of freedom of speech."

This libertarian line has a lot of appeal with some House Republicans, who've been using it to hammer the Reagan administration into a dubious "compromise" on the issue. The administration has thus far refused, and rightly so, because Hatch Act critics are touting a very myopic form of libertarianism. For one thing, while it's true that the Hatch Act prohibits federal employees from engaging in some kinds of political activities, those kinds of political activities threaten to violate the separation of powers that makes our system of government distinctive. Furthermore, the present "ban" is quite permissive.

According to a Merit Systems Protection Board publication entitled "Political Activity and the Federal Employee," workers may "assist in voter registration drives, participate . . . in campaigns where none of the candidates represent a political party, may contribute money to political organizations or attend political fundraising functions." They may also "attend political rallies and meetings, join political clubs or parties" and "campaign for or against referendum questions, constitutional amendments, municipal ordinances." But there are even more compelling philosophical reasons to favor a strong Hatch Act.

"Although its opponents argue that the act restricts the political freedom of federal employees, they fail to recognize the important First Amendment values supporting restraints on the partisan activities of such employees." Washington attorney John Bolton wrote in "The Hatch Act: A Civil Libertarian Defense," a superb 1976 monograph that remains every bit as valid today. Government workers, Mr. Bolton noted, "have a right to be free from political coercion—particularly from any systematic solicitation by either their superiors or their coworkers. Since the power to coerce derives in substantial a mount from power vested in government, the Hatch Act is, in effect, a case of the government restraining itself." In fact, he continued, "it is clear that some government regulation to protect its own employees from political association enforced against their will is . . . not only consistent with the First Amendment, but virtually required by it."

This is not to argue that the Hatch Act has been thoughtfully applied in all instances, or that any and all curbs on federal employee free speech are valid. Our point is that the debate has been distorted by a narrow view of the law that doesn't take account of the ways in which it enhances individual freedom—something largely ignored by members of both parties eager to enlist the federal bureaucracy's help in advancing their own partisan political goals.

Mr. GLENN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio, Mr. GLENN, is recognized.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I know we are getting down to about an hour and a half when the final vote on the bill will occur. I think before we get a few more people on the floor toward the end of this debate period, I will make my remarks at the present time.

Mr. President, rarely have I heard so many false intentions and provisions attributed to a particular piece of legislation. My distinguished colleague from Delaware spoke on the floor this morning and said that this legislation would accomplish a fundamental change in the Federal Government itself.

Mr. President, it just does not do that. We have to extrapolate all sorts of things not provided in this legislation to make that kind of a claim. The question was whether you are going to be for or against the American people. The bill would "exhort and encourage civil servants to work against the interests of the public at large," to quote his words.

It would create a new, powerful special interest to oppose the common good. Where on Earth in the bill that is provided I do not know, or how it can even be implied in any way that there are loopholes like that in the bill, or that we deliberately set out to provide that in the bill. That just flat is not true.

He commented about Thomas Jefferson and how Thomas Jefferson would be surprised at this and the spirit of the Constitution. I would also say I think Thomas Jefferson would express great concern about restrictions on the American people, including governmental employees, and that their freedoms not be restricted unless it was necessary in some way for the overall good of the Nation.

That is basically what this bill addresses.

He said this morning that employees would be pressured into political activity. We clarified that in this bill. I tell you, they are not going to be on the job because we prohibit that. Even things permitted now on the job are no longer permitted when S. 135 passes and becomes law, and I hope it does.

So it does not open up any of these avenues of difficulty. I say once again what I said on the floor yesterday, never have I seen so many strawmen set up to be knocked down when there was no reason for setting them up to begin with.

The Hatch Act reform amendments—I say this: If we were renaming this bill and starting over again, I would not say "reform," I would say "improvement" amendments because that is what it intends to do. That is what it does.

It would amend the 1939 statute that prohibits most Federal civilian and postal employees from being politically active.

We proposed changes with S. 135 that would allow these civil servants to participate voluntarily as private citizens in the Nation's political process. I think it is a very modest proposal.

One thing I think we finally have straightened out with the debate on the floor here over the last 2 weeks is what this bill is not. It is not the House of Representatives bill. It is not the bill that came over here from the House that said, yes, you could solicit contributions from the general public if you are a government employee, whether a member of an organization or not. We do not change that. We say exactly the opposite in this bill. We say you specifically cannot do that, anywhere, certainly not on the job, and we prohibit that off the job, also.

The House bill also does another thing. It says, yes, you can run for partisan political office if you are a government employee. We think there are some advantages that employee would have that do not make that a good idea. So we keep the prohibition against running for political office—not just a political organization now, but for public elective office. The House permits that. So we have straightened that out as to what this bill is and what it is not.

It is a modest proposal developed by the Governmental Affairs Committee members on a bipartisan basis that would eliminate many of the complicated and restrictive regulations that presently govern the political activities of Federal civilian and postal employees.

I have stated this before on the floor here, but I will state it one more time. As a result of our 2 days of hearings in February 1988 and July 1989, we found that much of the testimony focused on the fact that, under current law, some of the hangover things that come from old Civil Service rules and interpretations, when the Hatch Act was first passed in 1939, I do not know the total right now, but there were some 3,000 interpretations. They have not been cleared up, because many of them are still on the books. In this debate, it has been pointed out by the other side of the aisle that we are down to whatever it is, 13 or 29 total interpretations now. Those myriad other interpretations still leave people unsure about what they can do and what they cannot do. My colleague pointed out yesterday that they have even had to establish a hotline for Government employees to call in so they can say, "If I want to hold a poster, am I wrong? If I want to put up a yard sign, is that right or wrong? And how much can I contribute, and can I stuff envelopes, and can I do these things?" The law is so unclear, and so many different interpretations have been made through the years that people do not know for the life of them what they can do and what they cannot do.

Does having a law like that on the books and refusing to clarify it, which is all S. 135 does, seem sensible? Well, I am not one that wants to repeal the Hatch Act. Far from it. What I want to do, and what we do with S. 135 is we try to improve it, make it workable; we try and clarify what can be done where, so we will not need all these hotlines for people to call in to Washington to find out if they are going to break the law or not if they put up a yard sign or whatever.

Let me say this: When we first started considering the Hatch Act, I was not really a ball of fire for reconsidering the Hatch Act. I was not all that sure that it was needed. The Hatch Act has worked well since it was put into effect in 1939, and did we really honestly need to change this? Well, after we had our hearings, I became a major advocate for these improvement changes—and I repeat, improvement changes, not repeal, but these are improvement changes—because we heard so many ludicrous examples of what can be done and what cannot be done, that it just did not make sense.

If you are "Hatched," you are a Government employee now, you can give a $1,000 check to a candidate of your choice, but you cannot stuff envelopes for that same person; you cannot put letters together that are going to be mailed out in a campaign; you cannot donate any of your time at all in that situation. Is that right? I do not think it is.

Why should we restrict somebody in a situation like that? If you wanted to, you could take that $1,000 and instead, since you cannot stuff envelopes, you could use some of that money to get a professional company to come stuff the envelopes for you, but you could not do it yourself. Do restrictions like that really make that such sense? I do not think so. Yet, that is the current law.

For instance, you can go to a political rally, but you cannot participate in it. That has been interpreted to mean that if I go to a political rally, and I am a Government employee, I cannot hold a sign at that rally. I can attend, I can be there, but I cannot participate. I can hold a sign. If someone asks me to hold their sign while I go out to feed the parking meter, and I hold that, then somebody can claim I am in violation. That has been interpreted now. That is the way the Hatch Act is interpreted right now.

These are not fictitious ideas, but that same poster that I might hold that is illegal for me to hold at the rally, I can plaster them all over my automobile, drive all over town, and I can put up these signs on my front yard at home and it is all legal. How many Federal employees do you think have all these little niceties firmly in mind so they know they are not going to be in violation of the law?

I am not making these up. These are interpretations that are there right now. That is why people have to use a hotline to call in and find out what can I do and what can I not do? Can I wave a sign? No, you cannot. Can I have one in my yard? Yes. What size? There is even a size hooked up with that.

If Hatched, you can express your opinion about a candidate publicly. What is publicly? If I have one person in front of me, is that publicly, or is that just a conversation? How many people does it take when I am just speaking publicly? The interpretation says you cannot make a speech or campaign for or against a candidate. When does this become a speech? When I have two or three or six or seven people out in front of me? I do not know. All this does is try to clarify that.

This became a very serious issue in the State of Washington, and we addressed this several times. During the last election navy shipyard workers were notified they were not permitted to go to the Presidential caucuses in their State. It is a caucus State; you have to be there to vote. You cannot send it in. You have to be there in a caucus State, be present. Because of the Hatch Act, the workers were informed they could not go. That was a wrong interpretation. They were wrongly advised, and that is how confusing the whole act is.

Another one. This was corrected about a year ago, but it indicates what people have been living with through these years. You can write five letters to one newspaper or one letter to five newspapers. If you happen to write six letters to one newspaper, you are in violation, and you can be punished for that. Does that make any sense? I do not think it does. I do not see the problem in letting something like that happen. We can go on with examples.

What we did with this is say we are going to improve it, try to improve it; we are going to try and make it workable. How do you do that? Not by going through all those 3,000 interpretations and taking them up one at a time, because probably somebody at some agency someplace is probably writing those interpretations faster than we can pass legislation here against the individual ones. So we take it on a different way. We spell out very clearly what you can do in the workplace and what you can do or not do off the job.

One of the interpretations I left out here a moment ago was, if you are a Government worker right now, you can wear a campaign button to work. My good friend, the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, a couple of days ago here on the floor brought up the example. He said, how would you like to be a Republican, and you are coming up before the IRS agent for an audit and you sit down across the table, and that agent has a great big Dukakis button on? Good question. We can reverse the characters on that and make it a Democrat and Republican or whichever way you want to make it.

Would you want to see that? No. That is permitted right now. Well, in this S. 135, to help clarify this, we say there can be no political indication, there can be no political activity on the job; none, period; no solicitation, no public statement, no nothing on the job of a political nature. And that includes wearing a button. You cannot intimidate anybody with a button. So we correct that. In other words, we tighten up in the workplace on what can be done and what cannot be done. We make the Hatch Act stronger. We take away all this misconception, all the misconception, all these misinterpretations that have been put on the books through the years.

Following along with the wishes of the Founding Fathers that we preserve as much freedom as we possibly can unless it is necessary to restrict it, we say that off the job, there should be some restrictions, but otherwise we will let the process open itself up and let people participate.

What do we say off the job cannot be done? Off the job we say you cannot raise any money, you cannot go out as a Government employee and solicit the public in any way, shape, or form for money. The House bill permits that. We do not, in S. 135. We also say that off the job Government employees cannot run for partisan political office, elective office, cannot do that. Those are two big restrictions. Those are two major differences between S. 135 and the House bill.

We are following the principle that we do not want to violate the rights of our people. We do not want to unnecessarily restrict their political activities unless it is necessary. We feel that those prohibitions we put in are still necessary.

In other words, we shall only restrict to the extent necessary to prevent more profound violations from occurring. What is the history, what led to the Hatch Act to begin with? As was pointed out several times here on the floor, there were some very real and serious concerns about what was going on in civil service back in those days, in the midthirties.

When it was passed, the development of a professional civil service was being undermined by patronage appointments. More than 60 new Federal agencies had been created by the end of 1934. Only five of those agencies had been placed under the jurisdiction and under the protections of the Civil Service Commission.

Were the majority of these agencies being staffed on the basis of political patronage rather than merit competition? I do not think there is any doubt about that. I think that is exactly what was going on, and that is what led to the Hatch Act. That rapid growth of patronage jobs, more than 300,000 patronage positions, created congressional concern that some civil servants might be working for a partisan rather than national interest. I do not have the least doubt they were doing exactly that.

In 1939, a special Senate investigation disclosed that political appointees in WPA—the Works Progress Administration—had coerced relief workers into making political contributions in return for their jobs. It was blatant, outstanding, and ought to be prohibited, and it was with the Hatch Act.

The Hatch Act was very quickly passed without much consideration, and it had to be corrected later with some additional action. But it passed so fast, as a matter of fact, that it included the President, Vice President, and Members of Congress who were "Hatched" and could not campaign for their own reelection. So that had to be corrected.

In passing the Hatch Act, the Congress attempted to guard the civil service from undue political influence by prohibiting Federal workers from engaging in partisan political activities altogether.

Now, 50 years later, we have a dramatically different situation. We have an established professional civil service, hired on a competitive, merit basis. We have a system of checks and balances to guard against political abuses.

I believe a compelling case has been made for revamping restrictions on the political liberty of today's work force. But I am certainly acutely aware of public concern that too dramatic a change in the Hatch Act might serve to repoliticize the civil service and expose workers to coercion. I am concerned about that. I do not want that to happen at all.

So what we face in proposing reform of the Hatch Act, improvement of the Hatch Act, is a balancing act. We must balance the need to protect the integrity of the civil service with our duty to protect the constitutional rights of all citizens to participate in the Nation's political processes to the greatest permissible extent.

As I have said, under the bill, "Hatched" employees would enjoy more freedoms after hours by being allowed to work voluntarily—underline that word, voluntarily—as private citizens for the candidates and the causes of their choice.

They could carry a poster to political rallies, stuff envelopes, or participate in sending out campaign material off the job. They could not do any of that on the job. And all of it is voluntarily. They could not be forced or coerced into doing that for anybody.

With the amendment that was made to S. 135 a couple days ago here, we increase the penalties with the Robb amendment, increase the penalties for violations to up to 3 years in jail and a $5,000 fine.

The restrictions that would remain I have already talked about as to what could be done on the job, which is nothing, and for off the job.

Mr. President, there have been accusations that our intention to prevent abuses could be ineffective in achieving that goal, as a practical matter, because of the difficulties inherent in proving the most blatant abuses.

Where did it come from? It came from the Department of Justice. The Department of Justice was concerned that provisions of S. 135 intended to prevent abuse will be ineffective in achieving that goal as a practical matter because of the difficulties inherent in proving even the most blatant abuses.

That is a little astounding coming from the Department of Justice, to me, because what they are saying, in effect, is if it is difficult to prove a violation of the law, we should take the law of the books. That is not the way I view this. I think it is incredible that officials at the Department of Justice, having the primary responsibility for upholding the laws of our country, would maintain that criminal statutes are ineffective because of difficulties in proving the charges.

I am sure Justice would not advocate repealing statutes involved in cases just because it is difficult to prove that case.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to give Federal workers the right to participate more fully in the political process. S. 135 does not open this up. It does not open the floodgates of political activity for Federal workers. Quite the opposite, it tightens them up and makes them understandable on the job. You will not have to have a hotline to call Washington anymore to find out what you can and cannot do.

Off the job, we still keep those two very tight restrictions on no fundraising, none whatsoever, not in the public, none. We also say you cannot run for partisan political office where you might use some inside Government information improperly.

So, Mr. President, that is basically the case for S. 135. I have been amazed, as I said starting out, that this was one of the things tossed up against S. 135. It does not do anything except improve the Hatch Act, make it administratively more usable, more effective. I think it will enhance the public trust in our federal system because the public itself will know what is legal and illegal, if they are concerned about it at all, or Government employees.

As to the list of organizations that support or oppose this bill, we have a long list on both sides of the aisle. But this bill was designed, it was intended to be a clarification of the present Hatch Act and of its restrictions, and that was all it was supposed to be.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support the bill.

Mr. President, might we clarify the parliamentary situation here? The pending business is the Domenici amendment; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GLENN. That became the pending business by unanimous consent to set aside the Dole amendment; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. GLENN. The order in which we would take these up, if the current situation prevails and no changes were asked for, would be to consider the Domenici amendment first and then the Dole amendment; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN] is recognized.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the amendment proposed by my distinguished colleague from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] and to say with all respect that I think it chases dragons that are not there, and it unfairly deprives the employees of the 12 enumerated agencies of the Federal Government of even the lessened amount of political rights that they would be given under this bill, S. 135.

Mr. President, I said earlier when I spoke on this bill, and I want to repeat it briefly, I believe there is a basic principle of American constitutional jurisprudence, and I hope of American congressional action, when it comes to constitutional rights. We are dealing with a fundamental right. What is more fundamental to what it means to be an American than to be involved in the political system and to have the right to express our political views, not just by voting but by being more actively involved? That is at the heart of the first amendment.

It seems to me it should be a basic principle of law and jurisprudence and lawmaking that, if we are going to limit anyone's political rights, to put it in lay language, we ought to have a real good case for doing so. To put it in legal language, we ought to really put the burden of proof on anyone who would limit the political freedom of any of our fellow Americans.

In other words, they ought to be able to make a case based on evidence that there is a danger here that is so serious that it warrants the deprivation of full political freedom for any American citizen.

In my opinion, the Hatch Act is a great overreaching. It limits political freedom so severely, even though the acts that we are worried about, any of the threats to public integrity or independence of people who work for the Federal Government, are limited by particular statutes. But that is not what we are here to debate.

The bill before us makes some modest reforms in the Hatch Act. It still leaves the great mass of Federal employees as second-class citizens. Let us make no mistake about it, S. 135, if it should pass as it is before the Senate today, would moderately expand, as the chairman has so eloquently and clearly said, the political rights of public employees, Federal Government employees. But it still limits those rights. They still have lesser rights than you and I and the rest of us who are privileged to be American citizens. They remain American citizens.

This amendment, offered by the Senator from New Mexico, makes the employees of the enumerated 12 agencies not just second-class citizens, it makes them third-class citizens. It gives them even less political freedom than the rest of their fellow Federal employees.

I say it does so without a case being made that that limitation on political freedom is at all warranted. In my opinion, the basis of this amendment deals with perceptions; the fear there would be a perception, if an employee of the FBI or the CIA were involved in political activities, limited involvement in political activities as allowed in S. 135, then someone might think there was a problem.

I do not think it is consistent with the best principles of our Government that, based on perception alone, we should limit the rights of our fellow citizens.

Senator DOMENICI and his cosponsors have dealt here with some agencies of Government that are involved in security. They are sensitive agencies. Frankly, the only agency that I think probably should be treated somewhat differently is the Federal Election Commission, the FEC, because its job is to regulate elections and is to pursue integrity in elections. It is probably going to be difficult for any employee of the FEC to be involved in political activity and maintain absolute dispassion and the full appearance of dispassion in the functioning of his office. But the truth is, and this, in fact, is a model for what can happen in other agencies, the FEC itself has issued regulations that dramatically limit what its employees can do in the way of political activity, just for the reason I have stated.

In every other case, of the agencies listed here, there seems to be no rational justification for limiting their rights.

Why should an agent of the FBI, who serves in New Haven, CT, and perhaps lives in New Haven or one of the suburbs of New Haven, not have the right to be involved in a local political committee? Why should he be deprived of that right? And, frankly, why should the political life of the communities in the greater New Haven area be deprived of the involvement and contribution of somebody who has a lot to give?

Mr. President, every real act that they worry about, that motivates the concern and perception that leads to this amendment, is already prohibited under law. The fact is, even if Senate bill 135 passes, most of the horribles that have been described in support of this amendment are specially prohibited still under S. 135.

There are laws, civil and criminal, that are in place now to deal with all of the concerns expressed about coercion and misuse of confidential information.

Let me cite, for example, the Internal Revenue Service. This was one of the examples given by one of the proponents of the bill. "Would it not be horrible if, under S. 135, if it passed, an auditor for the IRS could call up somebody he was auditing and ask them to make a political contribution or ask them to come to a political meeting?" Mr. President, that is illegal, unacceptable now, and would continue to be if S. 135 were passed. In that sense, this amendment again is absolutely unnecessary.

I want to go through this in some detail. I want to do it with regard to the employees of the Internal Revenue Service.

What about misuse of official influence or authority, which is one of the fears that has been expressed in support of this amendment? The reality is that section 7323 of S. 135, which is before us, prohibits an employee specifically from using his or her official influence or authority for political purposes. So the call that was described by a IRS employee to a citizens is illegal. It is not only prohibited under the bill, it is prohibited under the United States Code, 18 U.S.C. 594, 595, 600, 601, and 606, that provides not civil but criminal penalties for the specific situation described, I believe either by the Senator from New York or the Senator from New Mexico.

Let us go beyond that. The Internal Revenue Service has a series of statutory provisions that relate just to it: 26 U.S.C. 7214 says that the use of an Internal Revenue Service position to "directly or indirectly extort or willfully oppress, or help a taxpayer defraud the Government, or receive anything of value for the compromise, adjustment, or settlement of a charge"—any of those activities will subject that employee of the IRS to dismissal—losing his job—fine of up to $10,000 and/or imprisonment of not more than 5 years. So any misuse of official influence or authority by an IRS employee is going to be severely punished under the law, and this amendment is not necessary.

Second, conflicts of interest. All Federal employees—again under 7323 of S. 135—would be prohibited from soliciting a political contribution from anyone other than a member of the same Federal employee organization. So no employee of the IRS or any of the other agencies cited in this amendment under S. 135 could legally ask for a contribution or anything else of value from anyone other than a fellow employee. And even then this goes back to one of the other horribles that were cited by one of the proponents of this amendment.

The situation was conjured up where the agency employee's boss calls the employee on a Saturday night and asks him either to make a contribution or go to a political event with the boss. And then the following Monday that boss does a performance evaluation and personnel report on that employee. Would not one influence the other? It would if it was legal. But for a boss to call an employee of any of the agencies of the Federal Government under S. 135 is illegal. It is unacceptable. The only person that a Federal employee can solicit for a contribution under this bill is another Federal employee in his own agency and one who is not subordinate to him, one he does not supervise. There are other criminal penalties.

Returning to the Internal Revenue Service, the IRS has rules of conduct, and one specifically, rule 0.735-30 that says an employee must avoid any action, whether or not specifically prohibited, which might result in or create the appearance of: Using public office for private gain; giving preferential treatment to any person; losing complete independence or impartiality; or affecting adversely the confidence of the public and the integrity of the Government.

What is the response to that if an employee of the IRS should indulge in any of those actions, many of which are broader than the ones suggested by the Senator from New York? That employee may be discharged from his job for violating those rules.

Finally, a third category of abuse that is worried about by those who would take these sensitive Federal agencies and subject their employees to this lower level of political freedom is misuse of confidential information, presumably for political purposes. That is prohibited, punished by criminal and civil penalty under 18 U.S.C. 1905, 2071, and 5 U.S.C. 552a. Specifically, again regarding the Internal Revenue Service, 26 U.S.C. 6103 specifically prohibits the disclosure of tax return information, and penalties include discharge from employment, loss of job and private right of action by the aggrieved person against the employee.

So all of the concerns that are expressed in support of this amendment are already taken care of in existing law. I ask again, is it fair to deprive employees of the FBI, the CIA, the IRS, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the Customs Service and all the others listed in the amendment, of the opportunity to participate in the political system as we do, or at least some measure of the freedom that we have, just because we worry that it might look bad in some circumstance when every specific action that would be bad is prohibited by law.

Perception is not enough to justify the limitation of freedom in America. We have 41 States that have liberalized their little Hatch Acts, their baby Hatch Acts in the last several years. No evidence has been forthcoming that employees who work at the State level in sensitive positions, comparable at the State level to the agencies enumerated in this amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico, have in any way abused their authority or have been guilty of conflicts of interest, or politicizing their sacred public office.

I am talking about State tax auditors. Their responsibilities are similar to employees of the Federal Internal Revenue Service. No one can cite me a case—I have not heard it; I have not seen it; I did not hear it cited by the attorneys general of several States where these laws have been liberalized, who reported to the House committee a couple years ago that there is no indication of any abuse of authority by those State tax department authorities.

The same is true for those who work in State law enforcement who can now more fully participate in State political activities. There was no evidence submitted that they have abused their authority as a result of a small measure of additional political freedom that they have been given.

So, again, without evidence, can we fairly deprive our fellow citizens, who happen to work for these 12 valued Federal agencies, of the full measure of their political freedoms?

Mr. President, let me cite a final inequity in this amendment. This amendment does not distinguish between categories of employees of the enumerated 12 agencies. Obviously, I have said that I am opposed to granting third-class American citizenship to people who happen to work for any of these agencies. I presume that those who put the amendment forward are worried about employees of the agencies who have sensitive responsibilities for the CIA, for the FBI and the IRS. But, what about employees of those agencies who do not have sensitive responsibilities? What about the cafeteria workers at the CIA or the custodians or the messengers at the FBI, our filekeepers at the IRS, or secretaries, or receptionists? Why should they be deprived of full political freedom when people in comparable positions—custodians, janitors, cafeteria workers, et cetera—working throughout other agencies of the Federal Government do not have those limitations on their political freedom? It is an inequity piled on an inequity.

While I know there may be Members of the Senate who are concerned about the employees of these agencies and this problem of perception, I really ask everyone to look at the reality. No case has been made. This amendment is propounded based on worries about perception, and in America it is just not fair to deprive people of the full measure of their political freedom on the basis of perception. We need to have a case in fact, and it needs to be a compelling case, not just a casual case.

Respectfully, no one has offered such a case in support of this amendment. That is why I hope Members of the Senate will defeat this amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KERREY). The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Parliamentary inquiry. What is the pending business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the Domenici amendment.

Mr. DOMENICI. I say to the distinguished manager that I am prepared to vote on my amendment.

Mr. GLENN. At the appropriate time, I will move to table. I do not want to cut off debate.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I do not want to make any extensive remarks. I just want to make sure everyone knows what my amendment does and why I offered it. Five Senators are cosponsoring this amendment from our side, all of whom have been supportive of this reform measure. I think it evidences some basic concern. Beyond that, what do the five cosponsors mean? I do not know. But I think this bill, for those who worked so hard and want to get it passed, it seems to me there are two things that we could do that could leave a very good reform package and create some significant additional support. I do not know that; I do not pledge that. They are very simple.

There are certain agencies of the Federal Government—and there is nothing technical about it. They just look, sound, smell and act like they do not need any additional partisan participation privileges. They probably do not want them and clearly there are some negatives to including them in S. 135. They are simply: The Department of Justice, Central Intelligence Agency, the IRS, the Federal Elections Commission, National Security Council, National Security Agents/Central Security Service, the Merit Systems Protection Board, which enforces the Hatch Act, and the Office of the Special Counsel, which is the lawyer, Secret Service, Defense Intelligence, Customs, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. I think they have a certain quality about them and it would be better to leave them where they are and not enhance or increase significantly their partisan participation. That is one.

The other has to do with the solicitation of funds from Federal employees. Without attempting to be specific, all this Domenici amendment says is, keep whatever is in the law today on solicitation, it is predominantly voluntary. We ought to leave it alone. There ought not be any increased opportunity to solicit. Whatever increased solicitation is provided in this bill, it permits direct solicitation of Federal employees, albeit under what is alleged to be restrictive situations.

I do not believe the Federal employees are clamoring to be solicited for contributions. I do not think they need it; I do not think they want it. I do not think we can dream up all of the negative scenarios that are apt to occur under direct solicitation.

So it is very simple: Take some agencies out of this new broadened partisan participation activity.

I listed them. Leave the solicitation provisions of the law as they are, which basically do not change the right to give but change the right to solicit or to be solicited. I think that is better law. I think it is fair and I think with the other reforms it makes for a much better bill. It might even be more acceptable from the standpoint of ultimately becoming law.

Having said that, I have been one who has supported the measure before us. I think the time is probably right to broaden partisan participation and political participation of our Federal employees.

I believe these two amendments are good ones. They leave the new partisan participation series of rights relatively intact. Plain and simple. Some very specific agencies that we can almost all just in reading their names sense should not be involved in further and broader partisan activities and then, second, do not make it easier to solicit money from Federal employees for campaigns. Leave it like it is.

Whatever the examples that have been given, perhaps some would say that the examples given this morning are not exactly right, but if I had enough time I could dream up one that would be just as applicable, that would be just as offensive as the ones that were given this morning. Only the minds of man, the attitudes of men and women are going to control this. And one can figure out how to use the notion that some give and some do not—the real and the perception.

I just believe voluntary contributions are much better than giving anyone the right to solicit from Federal employees. that is the essence of the amendment, and when the time comes I would like to have a vote on it so I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second. There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I thought perhaps we could work out some compromise language on this. That has proven not to be the case.

As I understand it, the main concern of my distinguished colleague from New Mexico has been that we do not want employees soliciting employees in any shape or form anywhere. This amendment would extend to the members of a political action committee within a union, who could not even ask anyone within their same organization for a contribution. This does not involve outside. It does not involve going to the public. That is still prohibited. This would still be within the union.

Basically, we addressed that problem when we had the vote on the employee-to-employee solicitation. We defeated that proposal yesterday.

What this in effect says is that you can have a political action committee but you cannot have anyone within that committee that is raising any money for the committee. You have a PAC without any money in the PAC, theoretically.

We have had much attention on this legislation the last few days, and what we are trying to do, I say once again, is to discontinue to sow confusion and fear among Federal workers as to what their political rights are under the Hatch Act. That is all this legislation does.

The Federal employees do not want to jeopardize their careers by engaging in illegal behavior. I agree with the distinguished Senator from New Mexico. They do not want to feel that they are being dunned. They do not want to feel that they are being pushed. But to say that they cannot even be asked to contribute to a PAC of which they are a voluntary member carries the whole thing too far.

So I rise in opposition to this amendment. Those are the basic points against it. These people do not want illegal behavior. They do not want to have violations brought against them, nor should they have. All we do is try to clarify this.

The distinguished Senator from New Mexico has listed some dozen agencies he would exempt. Those agencies now have people working within them who, under S. 135, could not take part in any political activity on the job. Off the job, we very carefully monitor and prevent activity, anything to do with fundraising or running for political office themselves.

Mr. President, I believe we have already addressed this amendment and this will be basically, as I see it, a vote on the same issue that came up yesterday in a different package.

Mr. President, if there is no further debate, I move to table the amendment by the distinguished Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. ROTH. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the motion to table the amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND] and the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] would vote "no."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 58, nays 39, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 87 Leg.]

YEAS—58

Adams	Fowler	Mikulski
Baucus	Glenn	Mitchell
Bentsen	Gore	Moynihan
Biden	Graham	Nunn
Bingaman	Harkin	Packwood
Boren	Hatfield	Pell
Bradley	Heflin	Pryor
Breaux	Hollings	Reid
Bryan	Inouye	Riegle
Bumpers	Jeffords	Robb
Burdick	Johnston	Rockefeller
Byrd	Kennedy	Sanford
Conrad	Kerrey	Sarbanes
Cranston	Kerry	Sasser
Daschle	Kohl	Shelby
DeConcini	Lautenberg	Simon
Dixon	Leahy	Stevens
Dodd	Levin	Wirth
Exon	Lieberman
Ford	Metzenbaum

NAYS—39

Armstrong	Gorton	McClure
Boschwitz	Gramm	McConnell
Burns	Grassley	Murkowski
Chafee	Hatch	Nickles
Coats	Heinz	Pressler
Cochran	Helms	Roth
Cohen	Humphrey	Rudman
D'Amato	Kassebaum	Simpson
Danforth	Kasten	Specter
Dole	Lott	Symms
Domenici	Lugar	Thurmond
Durenberger	Mack	Wallop
Garn	McCain	Warner

NOT VOTING—2

Bond Wilson

So the motion to lay on the table the amendment (No. 1609) was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. FORD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

VOTE ON AMENDMENT NO. 1596

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is amendment No. 1596 proposed by the Senator from Kansas, the Republican leader.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND] and the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 97, nays 0, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 88 Leg.]

YEAS—97

Adams	Garn	McConnell
Armstrong	Glenn	Metzenbaum
Baucus	Gore	Mikulski
Bentsen	Gorton	Mitchell
Biden	Graham	Moynihan
Bingaman	Gramm	Murkowski
Boren	Grassley	Nickles
Boschwitz	Harkin	Nunn
Bradley	Hatch	Packwood
Breaux	Hatfield	Pell
Bryan	Heflin	Pressler
Bumpers	Heinz	Pryor
Burdick	Helms	Reid
Burns	Hollings	Riegle
Byrd	Humphrey	Robb
Chafee	Inouye	Rockefeller
Coats	Jeffords	Roth
Cochran	Johnston	Rudman
Cohen	Kassebaum	Sanford
Conrad	Kasten	Sarbanes
Cranston	Kennedy	Sasser
D'Amato	Kerrey	Shelby
Danforth	Kerry	Simon
Daschle	Kohl	Simpson
DeConcini	Lautenberg	Specter
Dixon	Leahy	Stevens
Dodd	Levin	Symms
Dole	Lieberman	Thurmond
Domenici	Lott	Wallop
Durenberger	Lugar	Warner
Exon	Mack	Wirth
Ford	McCain
Fowler	McClure

NAYS—0

NOT VOTING—2

Bond Wilson

So the amendment (No. 1596) was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. ROTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I believe we have an amendment by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming.

AMENDMENT NO. 1610

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows,

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON] proposes an amendment numbered 1610.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, line 19, strike out "Federal employee organization" and insert in lieu thereof:

"Federal labor organization as defined under section 7103(4) of this title or a Federal employee organization which as of the date of enactment of the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1990 had a multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(g)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4)).".

On page 4, line 13, strike out all beginning with the word "Federal" through "organization" on line 14 and insert in lieu thereof:

"Federal labor organization as defined under section 7103(4) of this title or a Federal employee organization which as of the date of the enactment of the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1990 had a multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441(a)(4).".

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, the eventual fate of this bill, S. 135, on which we have expended so much effort in these last few days, remains unknown to us. I believe that it will pass the Senate, and that it will shortly be on the President's desk. What happens after that is anyone's guess. There may well be sufficient votes in this body to override a Presidential veto, and then again there may not. So not a one of us knows right now.

Therefore, I believe we have to proceed on that basis—we must assume—both proponents and opponents of this legislation—that it will become law, and do everything we can to make it the best law possible. As I have repeatedly said, I take my colleague from Ohio at his world when he says that there is no intention here to "unlock the floodgates" of politicization of our Federal agencies. I know that the detrimental effects which I fear may result from the passage of this legislation are exactly what he has said he does not want—"everybody dunning everybody else within a particular union or employee organization for money." I should say also that I believe that there are some people out there who want precisely that, however.

In sum, I believe that once this legislation—or any legislation—is passed, many of the good intentions of its sponsors will go right out the window, and that there will always be someone out there bending with a magnifying glass over the bill, looking for loopholes, or imprecise language. Not everyone, but someone. There will always be someone. So I hope that if this bill does pass, we will have tightened up its provisions to the point where it stands the best chance of achieving its stated objectives. Some pretty good bills, and some that seemed exquisitely clear to the legislatures that passed them, have been twisted beyond recognition in their application.

That is the problem at which my amendment is aimed. This language in the bill concerning "Federal employee organizations" concerns me. It is my understanding that the intention here is for members of an employee union to be able to be designated as "solicitors" for the union PAC—and should only be permitted to solicit from other members of the union, and only off-duty at that. I have expressed my concerns about that already. I do not think we should be expanding that type of partisan politicking in the Federal work force. But my amendment accepts that intent and clarifies it by making a technical change to the language so that it will be more consistent with existing law. It would change the term "Federal employee organization" to "Federal employee labor organization, as defined by section 7103(4) of this title"—in this case, title 5 of the United States Code.

I understand that Senator GLENN did not invent that lovely phrase—"Federal employee organization." On Monday we heard that OPM had invented it. However, the OPM has informed me that there is no clear definition in the law for the term "Federal employee organization" which would properly define the scope of this bill. That is what concerns me. We all know around here how the law works. Without such an amendment, a challenge to this law could someday be brought before a judge here in Washington or out in Alaska somewhere. That judge might decide that "Federal employee organization" means something else entirely—that it applies to the entire Federal agency, or the employee credit union, or the office softball team. Sometimes a law has a funny way of taking on a life of its own in this country. To a lot of people, what we intended does not matter—only what they can get away with under the wording of the law matters. I believe that our chances of achieving the intentions of this bill will be maximized if we employ the statutory language of the section of the United States Code which covers labor-management relations. This is the same section of the law which Senator GLENN cited extensively yesterday morning during the debate concerning the amendment of Senator MCCONNELL. If we clarify our intent under section 7323 of this bill, I expect that we will avoid a lot of tomfoolery.

My amendment utilizes the term "Federal labor organization" which is clearly defined under existing law. However, I have found that there are some Federal employee organizations which do not have as their purposes "dealing with an agency concerning grievances and conditions of employment * * *" as defined under 5 U.S.C. 7103(4). These groups, such as the Postal Supervisors and the Federal Managers Association, do however have PAC's. Therefore I am also including in my amendment a grandfather clause which will permit these groups to conduct the type of political activity authorized under this section. This will apply only to such groups that have PAC's in existence at the time of the enactment of these Hatch Act reform amendments. That should cover all of the bases nicely, and still prevent any tentacles of this statute from reaching areas where they are not intended to be.

Mr. President, I stress that my amendment is purely in the nature of a clarification and does not attempt to alter the substance of the bill. I hope that it can be adopted by unanimous consent.

In summary, this amendment utilizes the term "Federal labor organization," which is clearly defined under existing law. I found there are some Federal employee organizations which do not have as their purpose "dealing with an agency concerning grievances and conditions of employment." I have presented this amendment with a grandfather clause which will permit any groups that are not in that to conduct the type of political activity which they do now. This will apply to only such groups that have PAC's in existence at the time of the enactment of these Hatch Act reform amendments.

I have visited with Senator GLENN about this and I think it is acceptable, and with Senator ROTH.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator from Ohio.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am prepared to accept this. I think Senator SIMPSON has pointed out a good point here. We are glad to accept this. The amendment clarifies what is meant by a Federal employee organization for purposes of determining when a Federal employee may solicit for a multicandidate PAC. I think it is good to clarify that. If there is no further debate, I will be prepared to accept it and to vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming.

The amendment (No. 1610) was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. ROTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further amendments to be proposed? The Senator from Delaware.

AMENDMENT NO. 1611

(Purpose: To provide limitations on the political activities of certain employees of the Internal Revenue Service and for other purposes)

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, I send a technical amendment to the desk which has been seen by the distinguished chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MIKULSKI). The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH] proposes an amendment numbered 1611.

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, line 4, strike out "An employee" and insert in lieu thereof "(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b), an employee".

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, I said this is a technical amendment. A few minutes ago we agreed to except the employees of the Federal Elections Commission from the general provision of the act. This technical amendment would only be consistent with that decision.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, that is correct. We understand just the wording changes the introduction of this. That is all that is involved with this. It is a technical amendment. I am happy to accept it so there is no confusion with the bill. We urge the adoption of the amendment, if there is no further debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1611) was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROTH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1612

(Purpose: To limit the permissible solicitation for participation in political activities by Federal employees, and for other purposes)

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN] proposes an amendment numbered 1612.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, line 21, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon and "or" and the following:

"(4) knowingly solicit or discourage the participation in any political activity of any person who—

"(A) has an application for any compensation, grant, contract, ruling, license, permit, or certificate pending before the employing office of such employee; or

"(B) is the subject of or a participant in an ongoing audit, investigation, or enforcement action being carried out by the employing office of such employee.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, we want to have an abundance of caution to satisfy those who remain concerned about any perception of what the penalties are; whether there would be coercion, what can be done, whether you can openly engage in political activities.

The language has been spelled out, and I believe we just cannot misunderstand it. We say you cannot knowingly solicit or discourage participation in any political activity of any person who has an application for compensation, for grant, contract, or other types of Federal benefits pending before the employing office of a Federal employee, or be the subject of or participant in an ongoing audit investigation or enforcement action being carried out by the employing office of the Federal employee.

That is very clear. It spells out once again what our intent is in this act: We are going to take tough action, which is provided by other provisions of the bill, if there is any violation of this.

Madam President, if there is further debate on this, that is fine. I believe it is understood on both sides of the aisle. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, I just say that there is no objection on my part to this amendment. It is very limited in effect in view of the bill's current provisions. What it specifically provides is that Federal employees, or possibly others who are members of an employee organization, could not, under the circumstances listed within the amendment, be solicited for "political contributions," as that term is defined.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, that is correct. I agree with my distinguished colleague from Delaware. If there is no further debate, I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND] and the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 97, nays 0, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 89 Leg.]

YEAS—97

Adams	Breaux	Cohen
Armstrong	Bryan	Conrad
Baucus	Bumpers	Cranston
Bentsen	Burdick	D'Amato
Biden	Burns	Danforth
Bingaman	Byrd	Daschle
Boren	Chafee	DeConcini
Boschwitz	Coats	Dixon
Bradley	Cochran	Dodd
Dole	Kassebaum	Pell
Domenici	Kasten	Pressler
Durenberger	Kennedy	Pryor
Exon	Kerrey	Reid
Ford	Kerry	Riegle
Fowler	Kohl	Robb
Garn	Lautenberg	Rockefeller
Glenn	Leahy	Roth
Gore	Levin	Rudman
Gorton	Lieberman	Sanford
Graham	Lott	Sarbanes
Gramm	Lugar	Sasser
Grassley	Mack	Shelby
Harkin	McCain	Simon
Hatch	McClure	Simpson
Hatfield	McConnell	Specter
Heflin	Metzenbaum	Stevens
Heinz	Mikulski	Symms
Helms	Mitchell	Thurmond
Hollings	Moynihan	Wallop
Humphrey	Murkowski	Warner
Inouye	Nickles	Wirth
Jeffords	Nunn
Johnston	Packwood

NAYS—0

NOT VOTING—2

Bond Wilson

So the amendment (No. 1612) was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. INOUYE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader.

Mr. DOLE. I wonder if I might have consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, many have asked me why I am not offering the other amendments—IRS, FBI, CIA, VA, and others. I think they should be offered. Those employees should not be included in this bill. I can read the vote results.

I think the other side has made up their mind. There are no exceptions. I regret that. But I will not offer the amendments. Hopefully we can sustain the veto, and revisit this later.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I will not use 10 seconds. We agreed with the FEC coming out from under one agency of Government—strictly political. The others are covered by the amendment that we just passed here on the unanimous vote. I think it is very strong language.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD letters of support that were not submitted yesterday.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES, AFL-CIO,
Washington, DC, May 4, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN GLENN: On behalf of the 700,000 Federal employees AFGE represents, I am writing to thank you for your introduction of S. 135, the bill to reform the Hatch Act. The opponents' claims boil down to a fear that the expansion of political freedoms for federal employees will produce an uncontrollable politicization of the federal service. However well-intentioned they may be, such fears are without foundation. AFGE is confident that S. 135 succeeds in striking a good balance between the demands of promoting and protecting the individual liberties of federal workers, and the important goal of maintaining strict political neutrality in the federal workplace.

The goal of Hatch Act reform is to expand the political freedom of federal employees by permitting them to engage in partisan political activities on their own time. Today, the rights of federal employees are severely restricted by the Hatch Act; its confusing prohibitions altogether. With the enactment of S. 135, federal employees, like all literature, work a phone bank, participate as a delegate in a political caucus, solicit PAC contributions from members of their own federal employee organizations, and hold office within a political party. These activities would be permitted only when they are away from the worksite and during off-duty hours.

The Hatch Act, passed in 1939, is a political anachronism. It was enacted in an era when almost 40 percent of federal employees were exempted from the protections of the civil service rules embodied in the Pendleton Act of 1883. Today, federal employees are protected from the types of political coercion or patronage abuse feared by Hatch Act reform opponents by the merit principles set forth in the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, the Federal Election Campaign Act, and several relevant civil and criminal statutes. S. 135 in no way affects these laws, which are aimed at protecting federal employment from politically motivated actions. Indeed, AFGE would be the first to oppose any effort to undermine legal protections to federal employees.

It is a compelling irony that as nations of Eastern Europe look to the American ideal as a beacon in their struggle toward political democracy, the freedom of our own federal employees continues to be so severely circumscribed. Hatch Act reform is neither a Democratic nor a Republican issue. It is an issue of political democracy and individual freedom. I therefore urge support of S. 135 by all those committed to freedom and democracy. In addition, I urge your opposition to any weakening amendments.

Sincerely,

JOHN N. STURDIVANT,
National President.

AMERICAN POSTAL WORKERS UNION,
AFL-CIO,
Washington, DC, May 4, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Chairman, Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN GLENN: On behalf of the 365,000 members of the American Postal Workers Union representating postal workers in all fifty states, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands and Guam. I am taking this opportunity to again advise you and your Senate colleagues of our support for approval as soon as possible of the "Hatch Act Reform" legislation S. 135 now pending before the U.S. Senate. We request final passage of this important measure with no amendments other than those agreed to by yourself as Chairman.

More than 3,500 delegates attending national conventions of our Union for at least the past 16 years and representing our 365,000 members in all states and Local Unions, large and small have repeatedly and unanimously voted approval of "Hatch Act Reform" as a Paramount Legislative issue of the American Postal Workers Union.

Enactment of S. 135 is not and should not be considered a partisan issue by Members of the U.S. Congress but rather a bipartisan action to guarantee postal and federal employees their "political civil rights" after 50 years in bondage since the so-called Hatch Act became law in the dark ages of the late 1930's.

In fact, S. 135 is a modest effort to free Government employees to participate freely, in the political life of our Nation without coercion, reprisal or punitive actions. This legislative measure in fact, strengthens statutory protections for postal and federal workers against such arbitrary or capricious activities even more than provided in current Hatch Act law.

S. 135 would permit employees to only participate in limited partisan political activities "off" the clock "off" the workplace and never in uniform or federal dress including the following:

(1) Distribute nominating petitions and partisan literature, and

(2) Participate in voter registration programs within provisions of the Act, and

(3) Place political signs supporting candidates of any size on their cars, homes and their property, and

(4) Solicit political contributions (only) from their membership, and

(5) Equally important, would eliminate more than 3,000 often highly controversial rules and regulations decisions which currently serve as an addendum to the original 1939 Act, most of which cannot be understood or accepted by federal employees or intelligently interpreted or implemented by the administering bureaucracy.

These modest proposed changes in S. 135 certainly cannot be considered radical or in any way compromising the duties and obligations of the postal/federal work force to the detriment of the Government or the citizens of this great Nation.

When I appeared before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee at its "Hatch Act Reform" hearings last summer I stated:

"The members of the American Postal Workers Union believe that after 50 years of sometimes arbitrary prohibitions against political action and involvement by postal and federal workers in this country, that such employees have proven themselves mature and intelligent enough to have this unconscionable act removed from the books and from the backs of affected employees. Postal workers are ready, willing and able to participate fully in all aspects of American political life.

"The Hatch Act, more than any other piece of legislation touching the lives of postal and federal workers contains numerous restrictive provisions which have no good side and no substantive arguments in their behalf. These unnecessary restrictions are almost universally condemned.

"The Hatch Act constitutes a classic example of legislative overkill. To correct some evils, many of the most fundamental constitutional rights of the American people are being denied postal and federal employees. There is simply no good reason to deny an employee of the postal or federal service the right other citizens have to participate in the political process."

Mister Chairman, it is our hope and prayer that the U.S. Senate will approve S. 135 as expeditiously as possible and the U.S. Congress will approve a final "Hatch Act Reform" measure and that the President will sign the legislation into law. Anything less, after 50 years of laboring for the Government as "Second Class Citizens" would indeed compound the unconscionable denial of "political civil rights" for over 3 million loyal, hard working and productive postal and federal employees of the United States of America.

Sincerely,

MOE BILLER,
President.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF LETTER CARRIERS,
Washington, DC, May 2, 1990.

Senator JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: On behalf of the 315,000 members of the National Association of Letter Carriers, I want you to know that we support S. 135, Hatch Act reform. With all the changes in the United States since 1939 and the current irreversable movement toward democracy elsewhere, the time for this bill is now.

Thank you for your leadership on this issue.

Sincerely,

VINCENT R. SOMBROTTO,
President.

THE NATIONAL TREASURY
EMPLOYEES UNION,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Chairman,
Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: On behalf of the 140,000 federal employees represented by NTEU, I want to express strong support for S. 135, the Hatch Act Reform Bill. Federal employees want and deserve the same right to participate in the political process as other U.S. citizens. S. 135 would go a long way toward providing that opportunity while continuing to protect federal employees from coercion.

We feel S. 135 strikes a good balance by allowing federal employees to participate in many political activities off-duty and off-site, with no political activity on-duty or on site.

The right to participate in the political process is fundamental to our democratic system. Restrictions on that right should only be tolerated to the extent necessary to satisfy compelling interests. We strongly believe that it is time to lift many of the onerous restrictions of the Hatch Act.

Thank you for your leadership on this important issue.

Sincerely,

ROBERT M. TOBIAS,
National President.

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Committee on Governmental Affairs, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: On behalf of the National Federation of Federal Employees, which represents over 150,000 Federal workers, I deeply appreciate your efforts on behalf of S. 135, Hatch Act reform legislation.

At a time when democracy is advancing throughout the world, we applaud your efforts to revise the Hatch Act, which restores to Federal employees their right to voluntarily participate in the political process. We firmly believe that restrictions imposed by the Hatch Act are no longer needed due to more effective measures that have been enacted by Congress. Measures which adequately protect Federal employees from coercion and intimidation.

Hatch Act reform is of paramount importance to Federal workers across the country and we are particularly encouraged by the May 1, 1990 cloture vote of 70–28 on the motion to proceed to the bill. As the Senate continues consideration of S. 135, please know that you have the full support of the National Federation of Federal Employees in your efforts to effect necessary changes to the Hatch Act. If NFFE can provide any assistance to you in your efforts, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Sincerely,

JAMES M. PEIRCE,
President.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: The National Association of Government Employees is an affiliate of the Service Employees International Union, AFL–CIO. We represent approximately 100,000 federal employees nationwide.

For over a decade our members have vigorously supported efforts to reform the Hatch Act and restore first amendment rights to participate in political activity to federal employees. Our union strongly supports S. 135 which clarifies the confusing, contradictory and voluminous restrictions on the political activities of federal employees. Under this legislation federal workers would be accorded the same fundamental freedom as other citizens enjoy and would be permitted to participate in political campaigns on their own time. In this time where democracy stands victorious through the world, it is only fair that these basic freedoms be accorded to federal civil servants.

We applaud you Mr. Chairman for your leadership on this important issue, and urge all members of the Senate to support this bill without amendment.

Sincerely,

KENNETH T. LYONS,
National President.

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FIRE FIGHTERS,
Washington, DC, May 4, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: On behalf of the 180,000 members of the International Association of Fire Fighters, I wish to inform you of our enthusiastic support for S. 135, legislation to reform the Hatch Act.

The federal Hatch Act is in dire need of reform. Enacted in 1939, it was originally intended to protect employees from improper political pressure from government officials and to ensure the integrity of the federal government. However, over the years it has been improperly used to restrict legitimate political activity during off-duty hours.

S. 135 expands the permissible activities of federal employees by allowing greater participation in partisan campaigns during off-duty hours, but retains the current legal prohibition against running for partisan federal office. The bill also retains the current legal sanctions against intimidation and coercion of federal employees. Finally, the bill prohibits all partisan activity during working hours.

The IAFF remains committed to meaningful Hatch Act reform, and the IAFF strongly supports S. 135 without any weakening amendments.

Sincerely,

ALFRED K. WHITEHEAD,
President.

NATIONAL LEAGUE OF POSTMASTERS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Alexandria, VA, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: I want you to know that the Nation's 27,000 Postmasters appreciate your efforts to have S. 135, a bill to amend the Hatch Act, enacted in the 101st Congress.

The League has long held that the 1939 law is both antiquated and fundamentally unconstitutional. It infringes on Postmasters' First Amendment rights of free speech and association.

The League also believes that voluntary political participation by postal and federal employees can only strengthen the political system and add greatly to public debate on crucial National issues.

At a time when Americans are turning away from the polls by the millions, it would seem that the Congress, and the Administration, would want to create stronger desires among the citizenry for political participation.

On behalf of our membership, I again salute and support your efforts.

Sincerely,

RON SWISHER,
President,
National League of Postmasters.

NATIONAL POSTAL MAIL HANDLERS UNION,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: Our union represents over 50,000 Mail Handlers in the United States Postal Service and more than 450,000 federal associate members. I am writing you to again ask for your support of S. 135, a bill to reform the Hatch Act.

Postal and federal workers have been denied their rights as American citizens far too long.

The last 60 years of the Hatch Act's oppression are a contradiction in our democracy.

Our Union appreciates your efforts to join your colleagues in the House and pass this critical legislation.

Fraternally,

GLENN BERRIEN,
National President.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF POSTAL SUPERVISORS,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: This is in reference to the ongoing debate over S. 135, a bill to reform—not repeal the Hatch Act. Speaking on behalf of 43,000 active and 4,000 retired postal supervisors, I want to reiterate our support for this legislation.

This bill is a most reasonable solution to a 40-year old problem—the denial of basic constitutional rights for postal and federal employees. Today 41 states, and many countries behind what we used to call the Iron Curtain, allow broader political freedoms for state and local public employees. Isn't it time we did the same for postal and federal employees?

Thank you for your support of this legislation and keep fighting for the constitutional rights of postal supervisors.

Sincerely yours,

RUBIN HANDELMAN,
President.

FEDERAL MANAGERS ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, May 4, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: I am writing to advise you of the full support of the Federal Managers Association for S. 135, Hatch Act Reform Amendments. We commend your efforts to amend the archaic Hatch Act restrictions.

The Federal Managers Association is the largest and oldest professional association of supervisors and managers employed throughout the Federal Government. Our membership of nearly 20,000 members is broad and diverse, ranging from first-line supervisors to career members in the Senior Executive Service. Yet despite this diversity, there is agreement that the time to restore Federal employees' constitutional rights is now.

In a period of growing individual freedom in Eastern Europe, it is ironic that our nation does not allow Federal and postal employees to engage in partisan political activity—away from the workplace.

On behalf of the FMA, I want to thank you and offer our support for S. 135.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL B. STYLES,
National President.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF STATE, COUNTY AND MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES, AFL–CIO,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On behalf of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), which represents more than 1.2 million federal, state and local government and non-profit agency employees across the nation, I want to express our strong support for S. 135 and our hope for enactment of Hatch Act Reform legislation in the 101st Congress.

Our union has a unique perspective on the issue of political restrictions on government employees. Given our large membership and the broad range of governments for whom our members work, we have a great deal of experience in protecting the rights and representing the interests of public employees in jurisdictions that strictly restrict the political activities of their employees and those that allow virtually complete political freedom.

Our experience in these different states leads us to support S. 135. This important legislation would remove most restrictions on political activities of federal employees while providing them with greater protection against coercion.

In our view, the entire nation is best served by permitting government employees to participate fully in the political process. We come to this conclusion even though we believe one of the major roles of our union is to protect our members from political coercion and to help create an atmosphere in which public employees can perform their jobs in a neutral, non-political and efficient manner.

We are convinced that these goals are best achieved by strong civil service statutes that provide for due process in the disciplining of public employees and strict merit systems for promotion. Equally important are anti-coercion statutes that severely penalize public officials who interfere with the free exercise of the political rights of their employees or use the powers of their office for unfair partisan purpose.

Restricting the political rights of public employees does not prevent political coercion or establish the neutral administration of government. Too often, these political restrictions are selectively enforced and arbitrarily used to harass public employees.

The First Amendment right of expressing one's point of view and organizing with others on behalf of an idea are fundamental to our form of self governance. Without these guarantees, our democracy would be an empty shell. Given the importance of these rights, they should be infringed upon only for compelling reasons, and any such infringement should be narrowly drawn.

In 1939, when only 32 percent of the Federal workforce was under a classified merit system, there may have been a reason to have broadly limited the First Amendment rights of Federal employees. In 1990, with nearly 80 percent of Federal employees covered by a strict merit system, there is simply no reason to continue these restrictions.

We urge the Senate to remove these restrictions and to permit Federal employees to fully enjoy their First Amendment rights and participate to the extent of their choosing in our democratic process. By so doing, they can join in molding the future course of our nation as full citizens.

We urge the Senate to expeditiously approve S. 135.

Sincerely,

JERRY D. KLEPNER,
Director of Legislation.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF POSTMASTERS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Alexandria, VA, May 7, 1990.

Senator JOHN GLENN,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: The National Association of Postmasters of the United States, representing 43,000 active and retired postmasters, urge your continued efforts in passing S. 135, Hatch Act Reform.

We have been following the debate very closely and there are three areas of concern. First, Senator Roth's focus on Letter Carrier contributions. Although we do not have a large PAC, 21% of the PAC distributions of this organization went to Republican candidates. We believe it is unfair for the Senator to focus on a particular organization in trying to make his case.

Secondly, it is our position that this is a First Amendment right. We believe that if the Supreme Court can allow desecration of the American flag, which we bitterly oppose, certainly postal and federal employees should have the right to participate in the political process.

Finally, we do not believe the survey conducted by Congressman Wolf and the Federal Employees Newsletter are a reflection of the views of postal and federal employees. The focal point of these surveys are in Northern Virginia where many of the respondents are former managers and political appointees.

We appreciate your strong support on much needed reform in the political process as it affects postal and federal employees.

Sincerely,

DAVID E. HYDE.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF POSTMASTERS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Alexandria, VA, March 14, 1990.

Senator ALAN SIMPSON,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: It was a pleasure having you address our Chapter Officers Conference in February. As always, your remarks were candid and forthright and we of the National Association for Postmasters appreciate your candor and views on the issues.

S. 135, Hatch Act Reform, has been introduced in the Senate and currently has over 60 co-sponsors. We would very much appreciate your support to assure passage of this legislation.

We will be as candid with you as you have always been with us. We see Hatch Act Reform as a First Amendment right. Postmasters, as you may know, are very patriotic and we have disagreed with the Supreme Court decision with regard to "flag burning." It is our position that if the High Court can approve the desecration of our flag, certainly, Postal and Federal employees should be given the freedom of expression. Albeit, in terms of S. 135, those rights would be limited.

In addition, Senator, we further believe that if legislation such as Hatch Act were to be proposed in 1990 in lieu of 1939, such legislation would never be passed in the Congress. We ask respectfully that you consider supporting S. 135.

Sincerely,

TED VALLIERE.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, April 10, 1990.

TED VALLIERE,
Director of Government Relations, National Association of Postmasters, Alexandria, VA

DEAR TED: I appreciated your nice letter of March 14. You have been thoughtful and candid with me, so now let me share with you some further views with regard to the Hatch Act.

I do not see it as a "First Amendment" right at all. In fact, I think that the First Amendment has been distorted beyond belief. It was put in this Constitution to protect some nut in a basement in Philadelphia who was cranking out seditious literature. It had nothing to do with child pornography cases, or with whether a guy could spend his own money into oblivion to get elected to public office, or with many other "distortions" of it.

But, I hear you, and I will look at the language and try to be constructive in amending the bill. I assure you that if you had seen the abuses in 1939, you would know exactly why the Hatch Act was passed. Those are abuses we do not want to see again. Having the friendly IRS agent walk in your door with a Dukakis button—or a Bush button—on is not my idea of "good government."

Thanks for writing, Ted. I very much enjoyed hearing from you.

With kind regards,

Most sincerely,

ALAN K. SIMPSON,
U.S. Senator.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, Dirksen Senate Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: On behalf of the half million members of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees (NARFE), let me extend to you both our thanks and support for S. 135, the Hatch Act Reform Amendment of 1990. Just as we now are witnessing political cultural change in central Europe and the Soviet Union, so have we seen the political culture of our own country change over the years. Reform of the Hatch Act is now overdue.

NARFE primarily represents former employees of the government, but also has current workers among its members. On behalf of the entire membership we endorse Hatch Act reform to allow government employees greater participation in our nation's political process.

Sincerely,

H.T. STEVE MORRISSEY,
President.

FEDERALLY EMPLOYED WOMEN,
Washington, DC. May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: I want to take this opportunity to commend your efforts to justly provide over three million federal employees with political rights by enacting "The Federal Employees Political Activities Act of 1989" (S. 135).

We believe that the Hatch Act, which for over 50 years has deprived the federal workforce of their Constitutional rights to participate in the political process, is outdated. S. 135 would allow federal employees on their own time to engage in the full range of political activities open to other citizens. FEW is confident that this legislation provides employees with ample protections against coercion and also assures that political activities are not brought into the workplace.

On behalf of over 900,000 women employed by the federal government, I once again applaud your efforts. We have all worked hard advocating changes in this policy and we hope to see those efforts result in the passage of sound Hatch Act reform soon.

Respectfully,

DOROTHY I. SPINKS,
President.

PUBLIC EMPLOYEE DEPARTMENT, AFL-CIO,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN GLENN: The thirty-three unions that make up the Public Employee Department (PED) of the AFL-CIO, representing nearly 4.5 million public employees at every level of government throughout the country, are in full support of S. 135—the Hatch Act Reform Amendments.

The importance of Hatch Act reform to our membership is clearly demonstrated by the fact that each PED convention since the early 1970s has unanimously approved policy resolutions in support of such reform. We, therefore, take this opportunity to thank you for your introduction of S. 135 and for your persistent efforts to move this legislation toward final enactment.

Sincerely,

AL BILIK,
President.
JOHN F. LEYDEN,
Secretary-Treasurer.

PUBLIC EMPLOYEE DEPARTMENT, AFL-CIO,
WASHINGTON, D.C.

The Public Employee Department is composed of 33 AFL-CIO unions representing 4.5 million public sector workers on the federal, state, and local levels. They are:

Amalgamated Transit Union.
American Federation of Government Employees.
American Federation of School Administrators.
American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.
American Federation of Teachers.
American Postal Workers Union.
Communications Workers of America.
Graphic Communications International Union.
Hotel Employees & Restaurant Employees International Union.
International Association of Fire Fighters.
International Association of Machinists & Aerospace Workers.
International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.
International Brotherhood of Firemen & Oilers.
International Brotherhood of Painters & Allied Trades of the U.S. and Canada.
International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America.
International Chemical Workers Union.
International Federation of Professional & Technical Engineers.
International Organization of Masters, Mates & Pilots, ILA.
International Plate Printers, Die Stampers & Engravers.
International Union of Operating Engineers.
International Union of Police Associations.
International Union, United Automobile, Aerospace & Agricultural Implement Workers of America.
Laborers' International Union of North America.
National Association of Letter Carriers.
Office & Professional Employees International Union.
Professional Airways Systems Specialists, MEBA/NMU.
Seafarers International Union of North America.
Service Employees International Union.
Sheet Metal Workers International Association.
United Association of Journeymen & Apprentices of the Plumbing & Pipe Fitting Industry of the U.S.
United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners of America.
United Steelworkers of America.
Utility Workers Union of America.

Mr. ADAMS. Madam President, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate my colleagues on the passage of S. 135, the Hatch Act reform bill. As I previously indicated, I am proud to have been a cosponsor of this historic measure. As a former Federal prosecutor, and a Senator whose constituents have been adversely affected by the current restrictions, I am well aware of the history and controversy involved with the enactment of the Hatch Act and its implementation. The question we had to decide is whether or not the Hatch Act should be reformed. I believe the answer to that question is a most emphatic "yes."

As my colleagues know, the Hatch Act was enacted in 1939 after investigations revealed that political appointees at the Works Progress Administration coerced Federal employees into political contributions in return for jobs. Back then only 32 percent of the Federal work force was under the classified merit system and Federal jobs were being increasingly awarded on a patronage basis. Today, close to 80 percent are covered and protected by that system. Today, both employees and the public are insulated from political influence and coercion by a system based on merit.

Madam President, it is apparent that times have changed and that Federal employees should be given many of the political freedoms currently denied by a hastily enacted and now badly outdated measure.

This body has already heard some of the confusing and illogical rules that currently govern political activities of Federal employees resulting from the Hatch Act and these rules have directly affected the first amendment rights of my constituents. In 1988, Federal employees at the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard were astonished to learn that the Hatch Act prohibited them from addressing the caucus in support of, or in opposition to a particular partisan candidate once the caucus began its deliberations. In other words, the employees are required by law to remain passive observers during one of the most important and purposeful parts of the caucus. As expected, many Federal employees were confused as to exactly what they could or could not do. Such uncertainty breeds frustration and hesitating and reduces involvement even in allowed activities. Indeed, having been warned of the substantial penalties associated with this exercise of free speech, many shipyard workers did not attend their caucuses and many leaders of both parties believe this skewed the outcome of the Presidential caucuses in Washington State. Under the current Hatch Act, Federal employees who chose to speak their minds run the risk of losing their careers.

The bill we adopted addresses the problem I just described. It provides for a Federal employee's full expression during political caucuses, rallies, and running for party office such as delegate or chairman and for other off-time political events. At the same time, it keeps the restrictions prohibiting the solicitation of campaign contributions from the general public, and running for partisan political office. It also increases the range of penalties for coercion and intimidation.

Madam President, at a time when the Iron Curtain is lifting from Eastern Europe resulting in greater political freedoms in that part of the world, it is ironic that an archaic curtain of silence still hangs over American Federal employees, barring them from participating in legitimate and reasonable acts of political expression. Civil service should not carry with it a vow of silence when the subject is politics. Government and postal workers are decent, thoughtful, and patriotic individuals who deserve our respect. Our Federal and Postal employees have put up with this unfair law for over 50 years. It is time to make the reforms necessary to bring these several million citizens back into the mainstream of American life. For these reasons, I look forward to final enactment of this important legislation.

Mr. COHEN. Madam President, last week I expressed the basis for my opposition to the legislation that the Senate is now considering, S. 135, the Hatch Act reform amendments. I want to take this opportunity to reiterate my reasons for opposing passage of S. 135.

My major concern with this legislation is that I believe it is unwise for the Senate to take this step toward politicizing the Federal work force at a time when public confidence in the Federal Government is alarmingly low. Over the past few years, the Pentagon has been rocked by allegations that its officials have engaged in favortism in awarding Government contracts. The public and the Congress are outraged by the revelations of political favoritism and deals that were seemingly rampant throughout the housing and urban development programs during the past administration. The Iran-Contra affair, the savings and loan scandal, and the Wedtech scandal are all still fresh in the minds of the public, leading them to question whether scandal and conflicts of interest have become routine, and just the way the Federal Government does business.

These stories take a great toll on the public's level of confidence in its Government, by signaling to the person in the street that his or her Government's decisions are clouded by conflicts of interest or partisan political goals, and that the system can be manipulated to further the goals of either personal, financial gains, or even political gains.

It seems ironic to me that so soon after the Congress has called for tighter ethics laws for all three branches of Government, and almost on the eve of the Senate's debate of campaign finance reforms, we are ready to undermine the Hatch Act, a law that has, for decades, been accepted as a major symbol of Government integrity. Even beyond irony, I believe that it is very dangerous for the Congress to further erode public confidence in the Federal Government by allowing partisan political activities to become widespread within the Federal civil service.

I am not persuaded that the current law enslaves Federal workers and that the legislation before us is necessary to liberate them from their chains. Instead, it is the Hatch Act itself, in its current form, that protects Federal workers from the subtle coercions and the pressures in the workplace to become involved in partisan politics. In short, the Hatch Act gives the Federal workers the right to "just say no" to the subtle pressures of their superiors who may want them to participate in, or support, partisan politics. It is a system that has worked well, and one that should be retained.

I do not agree with those who argue that other provisions of law provide adequate protections for Federal employees from coercion. Other provisions of law do not adequately prevent the many subtle ways that superiors could retaliate against subordinates for participating, or even refusing to participate, in political activity. Promotions, job assignments, and job evaluations can all be used as means of subtle coercion and retaliation. The current Hatch Act was enacted to prevent such subtle pressures, that usually occur well outside the sight of any witness and which is very difficult to prove, but very easy for the Federal employee to feel.

If this legislation is passed by the Senate, I believe that the legislation should, at a minimum, ensure that certain Federal employees working in sensitive positions or agencies in the Government, would continue to be subject to the current, stronger, Hatch Act prohibitions against political activity. During the Government Affairs Committee's consideration of S. 135, I offered an amendment to retain the current Hatch Act restrictions for intelligence agency personnel, which was, unfortunately, rejected by the committee. I hope that before finishing debate on this bill my colleagues will see fit to adopt an amendment to keep intelligence agency employees and employees of other sensitive agencies, such as the IRS and the Department of Justice, subject to the current Hatch Act.

I do believe that there is merit to the claim that the current regulations and opinions issued under the Hatch Act are confusing, and that such confusion may even prevent Federal employees from engaging in political activities that are permissible under the act. The proper response to this argument, however, is to clarify and simplify the guidance that is given to Federal employees on what is acceptable and unacceptable under the existing law, and that is why I supported amendments offered during the course of this debate to make direct such clarifications and improved training on the Hatch Act rules and regulations.

To discard the entire Hatch Act simply because its interpretation and implementation needs to be improved would be a gross overreaction and would, in the long-run, severely harm the public's trust in, and perception of, its Government.

Finally, Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that editorials of newspapers from my State of Maine, namely, the Portland Press Herald, the Evening Express, and the Lewiston Sun-Journal, be printed in the RECORD at this point. These editorials eloquently point out the folly of relaxing the Hatch Act, which has for so long served the Government well.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Portland Press Herald, May 10, 1990]

HATCH: POLITICS AND PROTECTION

There's a good reason for the federal Hatch Act, the law prohibiting government employees from becoming active in political parties: It protects both the public and federal workers from excessive political patronage and partisan pressure.

Now Senate Democrats are moving to dismantle the half-century-old law and, under the guise of reform, substantially increase the amount of political activity allowable by the nation's 2.9 million federal workers. It could lead to the politicization of federal employment.

Under existing law, federal civil service and postal employees can't run for public office, hold an office in a political party, actively work for candidates (say, stuffing envelopes or manning phone banks) or solicit campaign donations. Democrats would remove most of those restrictions, save for running for office, and would permit federal employees to solicit campaign donations from their co-workers.

That kind of law would be a move back to the bad old days when federal employees were dependent upon the party in power for their jobs, a time when supervisors pressured their workers for money, campaign aid and votes. A retreat now would inevitably dampen confidence in the integrity of federal employment.

For the past 50 years the nation has been the beneficiary of a non-partisan civil service. It ought to be kept that way.

[From the Evening Express, Feb. 26, 1990]

HATCH: DANGEROUS "RIGHTS"

Fifty years ago, Congress passed the Hatch Act, a law prohibiting government workers from becoming actively involved in party politics. It was a good move, aimed at isolating civil servants from partisan pressures and the patronage system.

Today there's a move afoot to strip federal and postal employees of the protections of the Hatch Act in the name of restoring their "basic constitutional rights."

The proposal to rewrite the law has come up several times in recent years. The House of Representatives repeatedly has approved the change. The Senate—which is scheduled to take up the proposal again in early March—has just as regularly voted against it. Senators will be wise to continue that course.

Surely nobody wants to go back to the bad old days of the patronage system, under which federal jobs were handed on primarily on the basis of which party was in control of the government.

Congress established the civil service system to ensure that most government jobs are awarded on the basis of merit rather than political pull. It augmented this with the Hatch Act to prevent federal employees from being coerced into making campaign contributions or compelled to engage in other partisan activities in order to retain their jobs.

The system has worked remarkably well for a half century. Why should we change it now?

Back in the mid-1970s, Congress actually did approve revisions in the Hatch Act, but the bill was successfully vetoed by then-President Gerald R. Ford. In his veto message Ford said, "The fundamental objection of this bill is that politicizing the civil service is intolerable."

That's still a valid objection.

[From the Lewiston Sun-Journal, May 9, 1990]

It's almost become an annual rite of spring in the U.S. Congress. Efforts to soften or repeal the Hatch Act have been launched every year since its passage in 1939. But the basic framework of the law has withstood the test of time as well as a challenge in the Supreme Court.

The law protects government workers from political pressures and ensures that other laws and programs are applied evenly regardless of political beliefs. Opponents charge that it relegates government workers to second-class citizen status because of limitations placed on them. Not so.

The Hatch Act prohibits federal employees from using their positions to influence the outcome of elections or coercing the political action of others and from taking an active part in partisan political campaigns. The arguments against it focus on an unconstitutional infringement on individual rights.

However, the Hatch Act is necessary to protect government workers as well as other citizens from potential coercion. Federal employees' advancement or careers should not depend on espousing superiors' views. And political activity should not inhibit the relationships between political appointees and other civil servants. At the same time, the public is protected from intimidation by a partisan bureaucracy carrying out government programs.

The law does not prevent government workers from voicing their opinions, voting or donating money to political causes. So where does the opposition come from? Unions, representing federal and postal employees team up with the American Civil Liberties Union to object to restrictions on political activities. Their arguments fail to mention the many times these workers are protected by the law. It helps to strike a balance in situations that would otherwise work against them.

The current Democratic effort to chip away at the law would lift some restrictions so that federal employees could hold party offices and solicit campaign funds from coworkers, but not from the general public. Republicans charge that this latest effort is simply targeted at fattening federal employee union PACs, of which 88 percent goes to the Democratic Party.

Regardless of the motivations, a civil service must maintain political neutrality in order to be effective. Without it, federal workers could exercise disproportionate influence over the course of government.

Mr. BENTSEN. Madam President, I am pleased to support this legislation to reform the Hatch Act. It is long overdue. This bill would restore to millions of Federal civilian employees and postal workers some of the basic rights every other United States citizen takes for granted. Reform of the decades-old Hatch Act is needed because that statute has been subject to so many confused and confusing interpretations. By some estimates, the Hatch Act has spawned some 3,000 regulatory rulings and decisions, many of which conflict with each other and leave employees with little certainty about what they can and cannot do. It is time Congress took the guesswork and contradiction out of the law and spoke with clarity about what some 3 million U.S. citizens who happen to work for the Federal Government can and cannot do when it comes to political involvement.

This bill is a clear improvement over the legislation Congress considered 15 years ago. There are two significant differences in this bill and the bill the Senate considered then. First, the 1976 bill allowed Federal workers to run for partisan political office; the Hatch Act reform bill does not. Second, the 1976 bill allowed Federal workers to solicit contributions from the general public; this bill prohibits solicitation from the general public.

Much has been said about the need to exempt certain employees from the protections of the Hatch Act reform legislation we consider today. I have listened to these arguments carefully. Wholesale exemption of agencies and departments from this legislation is unnecessary. It is a solution in search of a problem. What evidence is there to suggest that we have to worry about breaches of confidence if a Federal worker is allowed to stuff envelopes and answer telephones in a campaign, or participate in get-out-the-vote efforts on election day? I have not heard any. With the bar on running for partisan political office, the ban on soliciting contributions from the public, and the mandate that no political activity occur at the job site or during work hours, I am comfortable in my belief that we can trust these workers to continue to deserve the trust we place in them every day.

Make no mistake. I, too, do not want to see Federal employees who hold sensitive positions to betray the trust our Government places in them. Thankfully, there exist other safeguards to protect the public from inappropriate political influence. In addition to the bill's safety valves, other Federal agencies have acted to curb impropriety or the appearance of impropriety on the part of its employees, and this legislation does nothing to undermine their authority.

Take, for instance, the Justice Department. The Justice Department today imposes more severe restrictions on certain of its employees than does current law. Those regulations have not been held invalid. Likewise, other agencies, such as the Federal Election Commission, could undoubtedly prevent certain of its employees from engaging in certain political activities based on conflict of interest. In fact, employees of the FEC are precluded by law from publicly supporting a candidate subject to its jurisdiction. The IRS, for example, has established rules of conduct for its employees; and IRS employees are subject to criminal penalties for disclosing confidential tax return information.

Moreover, substantial criminal penalties exist for Federal workers involved in coercion. Revisions to the Hatch Act do not repeal long established privacy and conflict of interest rules, regulations, and statutes either. In short, the suggestion that entire segments of employees should be exempt from the reforms contemplated by this bill falsely presumes that there are no other protections embodied in the law. The Hatch Act does not and cannot repeal those criminal statutes.

The propose of the present bill is to allow Federal workers to behave politically like all other citizens, but with some restrictions. A clerk-typist at the Department of Agriculture, for example, is no threat to our electoral process or the quality of our civil service if she wants to get involved in political activity. Yet, depending on what interpretive ruling she reads, an unreformed Hatch Act might will keep her from wearing a botton for the candidate of her choice when she is not at work or placing a sign in her own yard for local dog catcher.

That is not the American way. The Hatch Act needs reforming. I support the steps we take with this bill to do just that.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I rise today to support passage of S.135, the Hatch Act reform bill. This bill will give clarity and sensibility to an act which was crafted 50 years ago for a completely different civil service, a civil service based on patronage. Today, our civil service is embedded in the merit system, and the situation warrants change. S. 135 strikes the right balance between guaranteeing the rights of Federal employees and protecting the integrity of the civil service.

The current Hatch Act is governed by a set of over 3,000 bewildering, often contradictory rulings. So bewildering, in fact, that a hotline has been set up for Federal employees who are confused. However, even those who run the hotline often cannot draw the line between what is permissible and what is forbidden.

Madam President, voter participation in the United States is on a downswing. In my own State, I am sorry to report, a meager 39 percent turned out at the polls in 1988. A look at this statistic tells me that we should be encouraging people to participate in the political process. The Hatch Act, as it currently exists, discourages 3 million employees. Furthermore, as Congress and the administration try to improve the efficiency of government, Federal employees are precisely the people who should speak out regarding the management of government.

S. 135 will restore the rights of Federal employees to participate in basic political activities. This act will allow these employees to exercise rights that are afforded other citizens, such as the right to participate in voter registration drives, the right to circulate nominating petitions for candidates, the right to hold office within a political party or club, and the right to work in a political campaign. Under current Hatch Act rules, a Federal employee cannot participate actively in party caucuses. This restriction effectively takes away the right of those employees to vote in the early stages of an election. S. 135 will restore that right.

S. 135 maintains the integrity of the civil service by strictly prohibiting Federal employees from participating in political activities while on duty, running for partisan political office at any level, or soliciting or receiving political contributions from the general public.

This legislation increases penalties for violations of the Hatch Act, thereby sending a clear signal that infractions will not be tolerated. A first-time violator of the coercion provisions can receive a fine of up to $5,000 and/or 3 years in prison. A second-time violator will be permanently suspended from Federal employment.

The opponents of this bill have suggested that the legislation is driven by partisan politics, by a desire to unleash a monolithic political force. This flimsy argument insults the Federal workforce—a diverse group composed of diverse political views. Upon enactment of S. 135, the letter carrier in Walhalla, SC, is not necessarily going to adopt the political views of one in New York City, or vice versa.

The opponents of this bill also argue that enactment of S. 135 suddenly will cause Federal employees to wheel and deal political favors. My stomach churns when I hear rhetoric attacking the honest Federal employee, while political appointees have been robbing HUD blind. Let's not divert attention from the real problem.

S. 135 retains and strengthens the Hatch Act's protection of Federal employees and the general public. At the same time, the Hatch Act reform bill restores to Federal and Postal employees their political rights. I supported the Hatch Act reform legislation that was vetoed by President Ford in 1976, and I am pleased that Congress once again has the opportunity to simplify and clarify the outdated Hatch Act.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Madam President, I rise today in support of S. 135, the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1989.

I support this legislation because I believe that Federal and Postal employees should be free to participate in our country's democratic process. At the same time that we protect Federal and Postal employees from undue political pressure, we should not prohibit them from getting involved in our political process along with other citizens of our country.

The Hatch Act is intended to enhance Civil Service. But it is far from a perfect law. It is intended to protect our Federal and Postal workers from coercion; to protect the integrity of the Federal Governmnent; and to protect the public from a partisan civil service. But—it does all this at the cost of the political freedoms of our Federal and Postal employees. That is not only too high a price, it is an unnecessarily high price. The legislation we are now considering would fulfill the intent of the Hatch Act, without costing workers their political freedom.

For too long, Congress has treated the Hatch Act as a sacred cow. During debate on this measure we have heard that the Supreme Court on two occasions upheld the validity of the Hatch Act. But what we have not heard is that on both occasions the Supreme Court left the door wide open for Congress to reform the act. It did this explicitly in the 1973 case, National Association of Letter Carriers versus United States Civil Service Commission when the court stated that Congress was free to strike a different balance than it has in weighing the need for protections for the Government and its employees and the need to protect the individual freedoms of Postal and Federal workers. That is exactly what this legislation does: It strikes a new—and I believe better—balance between the need to protect our Government workers from coercion and the need to protect their political rights.

The Hatch Act reform we are considering is good for the employee, good for the Government and good for the public. It is good for the Federal and Postal employees because it allows them an equal voice in politics. It is good for the Government, because it removes restrictions on political rights that keep many of our best and brightest people out of civil service. And it is good for the public because we as a nation are best served by having not just a neutral civil service, but also by allowing those in a unique position to know the strengths and weaknesses of government to fully voice their opinions on government and politics.

Madam President, I have joined 53 of my colleagues—from both sides of the aisle—in cosponsoring this legislation because the time has come to give back to Federal employees and Postal workers in New Jersey and around the Nation, their basic political freedoms. Our Federal and Postal employees work very hard for us. We owe it to them to work very hard to pass this reform and restore their voice in the democratic process.

Mr. SIMON. Madam President, for the past several days we have been debating the merits of reforming the Hatch Act. While I have always been and will continue to be a strong supporter of discussion of any issue, I find the current debate almost unnecessary. In my eyes, the need to change the Hatch Act is so evident, it is difficult for me to understand the concerns of those against reform.

For far too long, Federal employees have been treated as second-class citizens. The original Hatch Act was so confusing that many Federal employees even gave up voting because they feared this activity would violate the rules. In a democracy, we cannot allow any obstacles to stand in the way of people who wish to be part of the political process.

S. 135 represents a commonsense approach to the difficult problem of allowing Federal employees the right to be politically involved while at the same time preventing politics from entering the civil service. Although S. 135 expands the allowable activities Federal employees may engage in, it still prohibits them from: First, soliciting campaign contributions from the public; second, running for partisan public office; and third, engaging in any political activity of any kind on the job. In addition, the penalties have been increased for any individual found violating these rules.

We need to act to reform the Hatch Act: It is fair; it is just; it needs to be done now. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting in favor of S. 135.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Madam President, I rise today in support of S. 135 the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1989, and urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join me in voting for this compromise bill on final passage. I believe this bill balances the rights of workers to take part in political activities without turning the Federal workplace into a partisan battleground.

While S. 135 would loosen many restrictions on the political activities of Federal Government workers, it keeps several important prohibitions in place. Federal employees would continue to be barred from soliciting campaign contributions from the general public. The bill would not change current prohibitions against Federal workers running for partisan political office. But, S. 135 would change the law and allow Federal employees to participate in a Presidential caucus, or serve as a delegate to a political convention.

While allowing Federal workers greater freedom of political expression outside of the workplace, S. 135 would prohibit all political activity on the job. In my view, S. 135 thus allows Federal workers to exercise their constitutional rights while remaining faithful to the original intent of the Hatch Act—to ensure a nonpartisan public service free from political coercion and manipulation.

The Hatch Act was born in 1939 during an era of pervasive political corruption. President Franklin D. Roosevelt's programs were rapidly expanding the size and scope of Federal Government activities and memories of Tammany Hall, the Teapot Dome scandal and the prohibition fiasco were still fresh in the minds of Americans. In that era, Americans wanted, needed, and received assurances that the Federal Government would not take partisan advantage of its newfound influence on everyday life. Happily, much has changed since the 1930's. While we certainly have far to go, these are very different times, calling for new standards. Administrative tinkering with the act is not sufficient Congress should act to set out clearly what the political rights of Federal employees should be.

I have heard from numerous Federal employees in Minnesota who resent restrictions on their political activities. These citizens serve the Nation everyday in jobs from postal workers to border guards to park rangers. They display unusually high civic pride and have chosen to dedicate their careers to bettering our country. I believe that it's time to stop treating these public employees like second class citizens where participation in the democratic process is concerned.

These Hatch Act reforms will allow Federal employees into the mainstream of American politics. As we continue to witness widespread voter apathy and dropping rates of voter turnout, we need to encourage more groups of citizens to get involved in the democratic process. S. 135 will infuse new enthusiasm and energy into American politics, and that is good for Federal employees, the general public and the democratic system.

HISTORY OF THE HATCH ACT

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, as we consider these amendments, I would like to provide my colleagues with a look at the history of the Hatch Act and outline the reasons why the Hatch Act was enacted in the first place. A historical look at the Hatch Act will provide a sense of where the civil service was prior to enactment of the act, and the movement toward a system based solely on merit and not political influence.

Throughout our history, the Federal Government has attempted to address the need for a nonpartisan, merit-based civil service. In constrast to the spoils system which proliferated during the 19th century, the protections provided by the Hatch Act during the past 50 years have helped to provide for a nonpartisan civil service. The question of how involved Government employees should be in the political management and activities of partisan campaigns has arisen from the very beginning of our Nation.

A key factor in the evolution of laws concerning Federal employee participation in the political process has been the tension between the accountability of a spoils system and the neutral competence of a merit system. The merit system, initially implemented in the Federal civil service with the passage of the Pendletion Act in 1883, led to the beginning of a career civil service based on merit. Prior to 1883, the Federal Government was plagued by a political spoils system which was criticized by many of our greatest leaders.

Beginning with the First Congress, attempts were made to create a nonpartisan Government work force. An amendment modeled after British law was debated in the House of Representatives which would "prevent Inspectors, or any officers under them, from interfering, either directly or indirectly, in elections, further than giving their own votes, on penalty of forfeiting their office." This provision was defeated.

President George Washington, in his Farewell Address in 1796, expressed that partisanship "serves always to distract the public councils and enfeeble the public administration." As early as the first President of the United States there was desire to protect individuals from coercive government.

In 1801, President Thomas Jefferson expressed his dissatisfaction with the political activity of Government officials. He issued a Presidential declaration articulating the principle of political neutrality for Federal employees:

> The right of any officer to give his vote at elections as a qualified citizen is not meant to be restrained, nor, however, given, shall it have any effect to his prejudice; but it is expected that he will not attempt to influence the votes of others nor take any part in the business of electioneering, that being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the Constitution and his duties to it.

Jefferson's order was insufficient and he was forced to remove a number of employees from office for engaging in political activity, particularly activity against his administration.

In 1832, U.S. Senator Henry Clay spoke against the spoils system which existed in the Federal Government at that time:

> It is a detestable system, drawn from the worst period of the Roman Republic. And if it were to be perpetuated—if the offices, honors, and dignities of the people were put up to public scramble, to be decided by the result of every presidential election—our government and institutions, becoming intolerable, would finally end in a despotism as inexorable as that at Constantinople.

The late 1830's marked another significant period of concern for the political activities of Federal employees. In 1837, Whig Congressman, John Bell of Tennessee, introduced a bill that limited the contributions, activities, and official privileges of Federal employees concerning the election of Federal, State, and local officials. This bill was also the first to indicate that violation of this Act would constitute a "high misdemeanor" punishable by a maximum fine of $1,000. However, no action was taken by the 24th Congress on this legislation.

The first extensive statement of Presidential policy on the boundaries of Federal civil service political activity occurred in 1841. Secretary of State Daniel Webster issued a circular to all Cabinet members for President John Tyler stating:

> It is not intended that any officer shall be restrained in the free and proper expression and maintenance of his opinions respecting public measures, or in the exercise to the fullest degree of the constitutional right of sufferage. But persons employed under the Government and paid for their services out of the public Treasury are not expected to take an active or officious part in attempts to influence the minds or votes of others, such conduct being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the Constitution and the duties of public agents acting under it; and the President is resolved, so far as depends upon him, that while the exercise of the elective franchise by the people shall be free from undue influence of official station and authority, opinion shall also be free among the officers and agents of the Government.

Despite this order, the spoils system continued. George W. Curtis, an early leader for civil service reform, described the situation in 1860, as follows:

> Every 4 years, the whole machinery of Government is pulled to pieces. The country presents a most ridiculous, revolting, and disheartening spectacle. The business of the Nation and the legislation of Congress are subordinated to the distribution of plunder among eager partisans.

After the Civil War, a reform movement with the goal of ending patronage developed. Led by the National Civil Service Reform League, the reform movement blamed lack of a merit system for an ineffectual civil service.

On the local level, the reform movement tried to break big city political machines. On the national level, the reform movement advocated a merit civil service system, free of patronage and insulated from the political process. General Grant, in 1868, ran for President on a platform to curtail the patronage system, and in 1870, asked the Congress for a law "to govern * * * the manner of making appointments."

The earliest action taken by Congress to give the President authority to issue regulations governing Federal employee conduct occurred in 1871, in an appropriations act. Section 9 of this act stated:

> That the President of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations for the admission of persons into the civil service of the United States as will best promote the efficiency thereof, and ascertain the fitness of each candidate * * * and for this purpose the President is authorized to employ suitable persons to conduct said inquiries, to prescribe their duties, and to establish regulations for the conduct of persons who may receive appointments in the civil service.

This act also enabled President Grant to establish the Civil Service Commission. After evaluating current Federal policies, the Commission issued a report containing recommendations for civil service regulations in late 1871. President Grant declared these regulations effective on January 1, 1872. The most significant of these recommendations with regard to the political activity of Federal employees states:

> No head of a Department nor any subordinate officer of the Government shall, as such officer, authorize or permit or assist in levying any assessment of money for political purposes, under the form of voluntary contributions or otherwise, upon any person employed under his control, nor shall any such person pay any money so assessed.

These regulations also allowed for President Grant to appoint partisan and politically active persons to the higher advisory and administrative positions of the Federal Government. However, the President acknowledged the necessity of placing reasonable limits on the political activities of Cabinet officials. The Secretary of State issued an Executive order under the direction of President Grant in April 1872, stating:

> The utmost fidelity and diligence will be expected of all officers in every branch of the public service. Political assessments, as they are called, have been forbidden with the various Departments, and while the right of all persons in an official position to take part in politics is acknowledged and the elective franchise is recognized as a trust to be discharged by all entitled to its exercise whether in the employment of the government or in private life, honest and efficiency, not political activity, will determine the tenure of office.

Following the assassination of President James A. Garfield by Charles Guiteau, a New York insurance salesman and evangelist who thought himself entitled to be named consul to Paris, Congress embraced the civil service reform agenda. The Pendleton Act, setting merit selection as the paradigm for the civil service, passed in 1883. This was the first time that the concept of an institutionalized civil service merit system specified fines and prison terms for employees convicted for coercion of other Federal employees for contributions of money or service to political efforts. The act did not, however, stipulate to what extent a Federal worker could voluntarily participate in a campaign or if the employee, himself, could run for an elected office. Sections 11 through 15 of the act covered political assessments, solicitations, subscriptions by and from employees.

Congress authorized the President to promulgate rules that no Government officer should "use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body." Little by little, merit system employees felt a sense of security in their employment.

The evil against which the prohibition was directed was coercive activity, but no attempt was made to limit voluntary political activity. Restrictions against voluntary political activity was first imposed by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1907, who earlier served as a Commissioner of the Civil Service Commission. In a 1894 report of the Commission, then-Commissioner Roosevelt suggested what the policy ought to be:

> A man in the classified service has an entire right to vote as he pleases, and to express privately his opinions on all political subjects; but he should not take any active part in political management or political campaigns.

When Roosevelt became President, he issued civil service rule I, which prohibited all persons in the classified service from taking "an active part in political management or political campaigns." Later, in 1907, he issued an Executive order amending rule I to provide:

> No person in the Executive civil service shall use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or affecting the result thereof. Persons who by the provisions of these rules are in the competitive classified service, while retaining the right to vote as they please and to express privately their opinions on all political subjects, shall take no part in political management or political campaigns.

By the end of 1907, executive and congressional action regarding political activity of Federal employees took on two major areas of concentration. The first area dealt with "the protection by civil service laws and regulations of Federal employees from internal or external coercion for involuntarty contributions of money and/or services for political ends," while the second area encompassed "the encouragement of a politically neutral bureaucracy through the prohibition of voluntary political activity related to political campaigning as well as actual candidacy for political office."

The first exceptions to the civil service rule I occurred under President William H. Taft in 1909. President Taft issued two Executive orders lifting the restriction of participation of civil service employees in local government as elected officials.

Subsequent additions were made to the Civil Service Act by Presidents Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover. They each issued Executive orders dealing with geographic exceptions to the stipulations placed on local political activity. However, these permissible activities were not to involve "general partisan political activity."

The 1930's saw the next significant activity by Congress to protect the Federal employee from political coercion. During this era, New Deal relief programs had expanded the Federal work force considerably. Many individuals on the Federal payrolls were not in classified positions and, therefore, were not subject to the regulations governing partisan political activities administered by the Civil Service Commission.

Criticism directed toward the alleged use of funds for political purpose in the emergency relief program brought forth a directive from the program's director in 1936, that "persons who are candidates for or hold elective office shall not be employed on administrative staffs on the Works Progress Administration." In June 1936, when the program's appropriation bill was before Congress, an amendment was added that essentially incorporated this directive. This became a practice in WPA appropriation bills.

In 1938, a special Senate committee was appointed to investigate charges that Federal public assistance moneys were being used to influence Federal and local elections. Supervisors in the Works Progress Administration had coerced Federal employees and relief workers to contribute to the reelection campaign of Senator Alben Barkley in 1938, in return for continued WPA employment, salary increases, and favorable job assignments. The special Senate committee substantiated these abuses.

The findings of the special Senate committee related to coercion and the improper use of official authority. As a result of these abuses, Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico, tried to amend the emergency relief appropriations bill of 1938, to prevent any employee of the Federal Government, employed in an administrative capacity, from using "his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering or influencing a convention, a primary, or other election, or affecting the results thereof." This amendment retained the right of the individual to vote, but restricted activity in political management or a political campaign. This amendment was rejected by the Senate in June 1938.

Also in June 1938, Senator Tydings of Maryland introduced a resolution asking for an investigation of the use/misuse of work relief funds for political purposes by the Special Senatorial Campaign Expenditures and Use of Government Funds Committee. The special panel of this committee was chaired by Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas.

In its investigation, this commission documented many cases of political coercion by the WPA in 10 States. It found that favorable work assignments and promotions depended upon the purchase of tickets to fundraising events or direct contributions to local political party organizations. This investigation, along with the Commission's recommendations, helped to garner congressional support for legislation which would protect Federal employees from political coercion.

After examining the Sheppard Commission's findings, President Roosevelt made the following statement to Congress on January 1939, when discussing WPA appropriations, "It is my belief that improper political practices can be eliminated only by the imposition of rigid statutory regulations and penalties by the Congress."

In 1939, Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico introduced legislation based on the special Senate Committee's recommendations which prohibited any involvement in the affairs of a political organization by Federal employees working in nonpolicymaking positions.

The Hatch Act contained various criminal provisions which were enacted and codified in title 18, United States Code. The Senate bill also prohibited Federal administrative or supervisory employees from using their official authority to influence an election or from taking an active part in political campaigns. The bill also provided that an employee retained the right to vote and the right to privately express opinions on political subjects.

While there was not much comment on the bill when it reached the Senate floor where it passed by unanimous consent, the legislation was subject to vigorous debate in the House. Most of the discussion was over a section prohibiting Federal employees from taking an active part in political management or in political campaigns.

While most of the rest of the bill restated prohibitions which had existed since the Pendleton Act, the legislation also codified civil service rule I and the Civil Service Commission issued rulings under it. The Hatch Act passed the House August 2, 1939.

The Supreme Court has twice upheld the constitutionality of the Hatch Act. The first challenge was in 1947, in United Public Workers of America versus Mitchell. The Court, in a 4-to-3 decision, rejected the claim of unconstitutionality brought against the Hatch Act. The case centered around George Poole, a skilled laborer at the Mint, who had served as a ward official of the Democratic Party and was politically active on election day as a worker at the polls. As required by the act, Poole was removed from his position by the Civil Service Commission for having taken an active part in political management.

In upholding the act, the Court reasoned that Congress' purpose in passing the Hatch Act was "to promote efficiency and integrity in the discharge of official duties, and to maintain proper discipline in the public service," and that the act was a legitimate means to such an end. The Court, noting that the act infringed upon freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution, applied a balancing test, weighing the intrusion on constitutional rights against a "congressional enactment to protect a democratic society against the supposed evil of political partisanship by classified employees of the Government."

The Court based its reasoning on the notion that "principle of required political neutrality for classified public servants as a sound element for efficiency." The Court did, however, leave the door open for reform, stating, "another Congress may determine that on the whole, limitations on active political management by Federal personnel are unwise."

In October 1966, the Congress established an independent, bipartisan commission to investigate and study the Hatch Act. The final report of the Commission stated:

> In the opinion of this Commission, the best protection that the Government can provide for its personnel is to prohibit those activities that tend to corrode a career system based on merit. This requires strong sanctions against coercion. It also requires some limits on the role of Government employees in politics. It was the unanimous view of Commission members, however, that these limits should be clearly and specifically expressed, and that beyond those limits polticial participation should be permitted as fully as for all other citizens.

A second constitutional challenge to the Hatch Act reached the Supreme Court in 1972, with U.S. Civil Service Commission versus National Association of Letter Carriers. Six Federal employees, a union, and certain Democratic and Republican political committees challenged the Hatch Act as a violation of the first amendment.

The Supreme Court voted 6 to 3 to uphold the constitutionality of the Hatch Act. The Supreme Court held that:

> Neither the right to associate nor the right to participate in political activities is absolute in any event. Nor are the management financing, and conduct of political campaigns wholly free from governmental regulation. We agree with the basic holding of Mitchell that plainly identifiable acts of political management and political campaigning on the part of federal employees may constitutionally be prohibited.

In 1976, both Houses of Congress passed, but President Ford vetoed, legislation repealing many of the prohibitions contained in the Hatch Act. President Ford vetoed the measure contending it would politicize the civil service. The veto was sustained when the House failed to override by 26 votes.

In his veto message President Ford said that if legislation like this became law,

> Pressure could be brought to bear on Federal employees in extremely subtle ways beyond the reach of any anti-coercion statute so that they would inevitably feel compelled to engage in partisan political activity.

That statement sums up this debate. I do not believe that proponents are able to refute President Ford's conclusion. Some suggests that the merit system protects the Federal employee so well that the Hatch Act is no longer necessary. That suggestion is much like the notion that because we are entering a period of relative peace throughout the world, we no longer need a strong defense. Both suggestions reverse cause and effect. Just as it is a strong defense that fosters peace, so too it is the Hatch Act that maintains the merit system. Its purpose and function for 50 years has been to ensure that civil service is based solely on merit and not on politics.

S. 135 REPEALS HATCH ACT

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, the issue before us is whether or not to repeal the Hatch Act which has been the law governing the right of Federal workers to engage in partisan political activity for 51 years. It has been a good 51 years, and I regret that we are considering legislation such as S. 135 which opens the floodgates for partisan political activity to flow into the Federal workplace.

The distinguished Senator from Ohio has argued with great force and vigor that this bill is a modest reform package that only clarifies the Hatch Act. Such arguments only serve to hide the real impact and real consequences that S. 135 would have on Federal workers, Federal programs, and the American people.

EXPANSION OF PERMITTED PARTISAN ACTIVITIES

If S. 135 becomes a law, Federal workers would be allowed to engage in a number of political activities that are currently prohibited under the Hatch Act. If S. 135 becomes law, such workers would suddenly be able to:

Hold office in a political party;

Distribute campaign literature and solicit votes;

Organize and participate in phone banks;

Organize and participate in political meetings;

Publicly endorse candidates and urge others to support them; and

Solicit contributions to the PAC of a Federal employee organization to which both the employee and the donor belong

Madam President, I firmly believe that the foregoing political activities—which are only a few of the many political activities that S. 135 would permit—will inevitably lead to the politicization of Government.

Such politicization will undermine the principles of a merit based civil service. Such politicization will undermine the fair and impartial administration of Federal laws and Federal programs. And even the appearance of such politicization will undermine public confidence in Government institutions. In short, Madam President, this bill is destructive to both the image and operation of good government.

S. 135 BENEFITS EMPLOYEE UNION PAC'S

During the extensive debate which has taken place during the past week, the question has repeatedly surfaced as to who really benefits from this bill?

I ask, Madam President, does this bill benefit the Federal Government, the employees who are part of that Government or the American people who are served by that Government? I think not.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HURT BY S. 135

The proponents of this legislation have not pointed to a single benefit that the Federal Government will enjoy as a result of this bill. Indeed, what good can flow to the Government by enacting legislation which at a minimum increases the possibility that political influence may creep into the back offices where program decisions are made and employee promotions are announced?

The administration has unequivocally stated its strong opposition to this bill.

In addition, numerous Federal agencies have written to me and other Senators stating that they oppose S. 135 and that S. 135 will impair their respective agencies' ability to operate effectively.

FEDERAL WORKERS ARE HURT BY S. 135

The proponents of this bill have tried to argue that the real purpose of this bill is for Federal workers, yet these arguments remain unconvincing.

Surveys of Federal workers, including separate surveys of the senior executive service, indicate that there is no support among such workers for S. 135. They prefer current law.

I offered an amendment—what I call the all-American amendment—yesterday afternoon which would have permitted the workers of each agency or department to decide for themselves whether they wanted the Hatch Act or S. 135 to be applied to them.

This amendment was defeated by the same individuals who have been arguing for the past week that Federal workers want S. 135.

If the proponents of this legislation are sincere in their belief that Federal workers want this bill, I wonder why they are afraid to submit S. 135 to the Federal work force and let the employees judge the merits for themselves?

AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE HURT BY S. 135

The third strike against this bill—and I wish I were the umpire here for I say three strikes and you are out—is that it hurts the American people.

It opens up everything that the Federal Government does to doubt that perhaps partisan political gain was a factor in the decisions made with respect to the enforcement of a law or the implementation of a Federal program or even the disbursement of Federal funds. Indeed, even if there are no improper objectives underlying the administration of the Government, it would still be legitimate to raise the question since S. 135 puts the welcome mat out to partisan political activity.

Nothing could be more deleterious to public confidence in fair Government.

EMPLOYEE UNION PAC'S

Madam President, the real winners under this bill are the employee union PAC's. One of the worst features of this bill is that it permits Federal employees of the same union to solicit contributions from one another for the PAC. Currently, such conduct is illegal and for good reason.

If S. 135 becomes law, the green light will flash for such unions and their employee members to hit the gas on their campaign solicitation efforts.

It seems ironic to me that the proponents of this bill have defended this particular part of S. 135 from any amendment which would strengthen the protections afforded Federal workers against improper solicitation and yet shortly we will be considering campaign finance reform legislation which would ban PAC's. I sincerely hope we are able to ban PAC's as part of such reform legislation for then there will be one less provision of this bill to worry about.

CONCLUSION: THIS IS A VOTE ON MORE THAN THE HATCH ACT

In conclusion, Madam President, this is not only a vote on the Hatch Act, this is a vote on preserving the notion that advancement within the civil service should be based exclusively on merit and not on what party hat you wear. This is also a vote on preserving the integrity of our Federal programs to ensure their fair and unbiased implementation. Finally, and perhaps most important, this is a vote on maintaining public confidence in the administration of government. These are matters that should not be taken lightly.

If S.135 is enacted, we are ignoring the wisdom of Thomas Jefferson who declared in 1801 that—

> The rights of any officer to give his vote at elections as a qualified citizen is not meant to be restrained, nor, however given, shall it have any effect to his prejudice; but it is expected that he will not attempt to influence the votes of others, nor take any part in the business of electioneering, that being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the Constitution and his duties to it.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, the debate on this Hatch Act reform measure has time and again focused on concerns that Federal employees will coerce fellow employees and/or members of the public into engaging in political activities or not engaging in political activities against their will. As I have said before, this bill does not repeal the Hatch Act's prohibitions against a Federal employee's using his or her influence or authority for political purposes. Specifically, section 7323 of S. 135 would prohibit an employee from:

Using his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with or affecting the result of an election;

Knowingly soliciting, accepting, or receiving a political contribution except in very narrowly defined circumstances; and

Running for the nomination or as a candidate for election to a partisan political office.

In addition, S. 135 also includes the Robb amendment, which makes it a crime to coerce, intimidate, or pressure any employee in any way to participate or not participate in political activity. The Robb amendment added a new criminal section 610 to title 18 of the United States Code.

However, I understand that there are lingering concerns about the public's reaction to certain government employees openly engaging in political activities. The fear seems to be that the Federal employee can subtly coerce the participation of a private citizen because the employee is perceived to be in a position of power over the individual. For example, that employee may have access to confidential information about the individual which he or she does not want revealed. Or the employee may be in the process of making decisions about the individual's business, or investigating the individual for possible criminal conduct. To the public, these may be "life and death" decisions.

Out of an abundance of caution to satisfy those who remain concerned about this perception problem, I am willing to impose an additional prohibition on activity by all Federal employees when they deal with members of the public who are truly in vulnerable positions. My language would prohibit all Federal employees from:

Knowingly soliciting or discouraging the participation in any political activity of any person who:

First, has an application for any compensation, grant, contract, or other types of Federal benefits pending before the employing office of the Federal employee; or Second, is the subject of or a participant in an ongoing audit, investigation, or enforcement action being carried out by the employing office of the Federal employee.

For example, this language is intended to prohibit certain FCC employees who are in the loop on the decision to grant or deny a license application from encouraging or discouraging political activity on the part of the license applicant. It is intended to prohibit certain Veterans Department employees who are in the chain of command on the decision to grant or deny service-related compensation from soliciting or discouraging political activity on the part of the veteran applicant. It is intended to prohibit the IRS auditor conducting a taxpayer return audit, or a Secret Service agent conducting a counterfeiting investigation from soliciting or discouraging political activity on the part of the target of the audit or investigation. It is also intended to extend to the supervisors of those front-line employees who are working a pending case or matter. It is not intended to bring under its umbrella every single employee of the agency which may have some pending business with a member of the public.

In my view, this language—which would be added to the other prohibitions on activity already in the bill's section 7323—goes to the heart of the perception problem. It strictly prohibits soliciting or discouraging political activity of those who may feel that if they refuse the employee's request, their relations with the Government agency may be jeopardized or compromised. Such individuals generally fall into two important categories: First, those who are seeking a Federal benefit; and second, those who are the targets of a Federal inquiry of some sort of an enforcement action.

Remember, this new prohibition in S. 135 does not stand alone. Other Federal statutes provide criminal and civil penalties for misusing one's official authority or influence, and for disclosing confidential Government information. However, my proposed language would ensure that S. 135 stands squarely for the principle that such conduct will not be accepted or tolerated. I believe my language is fair and clear, and will not add to the confusion and illogic that has plagued the current law on the subject of prohibited activities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the clerk will report the bill for the third time.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read for the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Governmental Affairs Committee is discharged from further consideration of a House companion bill, H.R. 20, which the clerk will now report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 20) to amend title 5, United States Code, to restore Federal civilian employees their right to particiapte voluntarily as private citizens, in the political processes of the Nation to protect such employees from improper political solicitations, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, all after the enacting clause is stricken, and the text of S. 135, as amended, is inserted in lieu thereof, and the bill is deemed read the third time.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. GLENN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND] and the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON] would vote "no."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 67, nays 30, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 90 Leg.]

YEAS—67

Adams	Bumpers	Dodd
Baucus	Burdick	Domenici
Bentsen	Byrd	Durenberger
Biden	Conrad	Exon
Bingaman	Cranston	Ford
Boren	D'Amato	Fowler
Bradley	Daschle	Glenn
Breaux	DeConcini	Gore
Bryan	Dixon	Graham
Harkin	Leahy	Riegle
Hatfield	Levin	Robb
Heflin	Lieberman	Rockefeller
Heinz	Lott	Sanford
Hollings	McCain	Sarbanes
Inouye	Metzenbaum	Sasser
Jeffords	Mikulski	Shelby
Johnston	Mitchell	Simon
Kasten	Moynihan	Specter
Kennedy	Nunn	Stevens
Kerrey	Packwood	Warner
Kerry	Pell	Wirth
Kohl	Pryor
Lautenberg	Reid

NAYS—30

Armstrong	Gorton	McConnell
Boschwitz	Gramm	Murkowski
Burns	Grassley	Nickles
Chafee	Hatch	Pressler
Coats	Helms	Roth
Cochran	Humphrey	Rudman
Cohen	Kassebaum	Simpson
Danforth	Lugar	Symms
Dole	Mack	Thurmond
Garn	McClure	Wallop

NOT VOTING—2

Bond	Wilson

So the bill (H.R. 20), as amended, was passed, as follows:

Resolved, That the bill from the House of Representatives (H.R. 20) entitled "An act to amend title 5, United States Code, to restore to Federal civilian employees their right to participate voluntarily, as private citizens, in the political processes of the Nation, to protect such employees from improper political solicitations, and for other purposes," do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this Act may be cited as the "Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1990".

SEC. 2. POLITICAL ACTIVITIES.

(a) Subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"SUBCHAPTER III—POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

"§ 7321. Political participation

"It is the policy of the Congress that employees should be encouraged to exercise fully, freely, and without fear of penalty or reprisal, and to the extent not expressly prohibited by law, their right to participate or to refrain from participating in the political processes of the Nation.

"§ 7322. Definitions

"For the purpose of this subchapter—

"(1) 'employee' means any individual, other than the President and the Vice President, employed or holding office in—

"(A) an Executive agency other than the General Accounting Office; or

"(B) a position within the competitive service which is not in an Executive agency; but does not include a member of the uniformed services;

"(2) 'partisan political office' means any office for which any candidate is nominated or elected as representing a party any of whose candidates for Presidential elected received votes in the last preceding election at which Presidential elector were selected, but shall exclude any office of position within a political party or affiliated organization; and

"(3) 'political contribution'—

"(A) means any gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value, made for any political purpose;

"(B) includes any contract, promise, or agreement, express or implied, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution for any political purpose;

"(C) includes any payment by any person, other than a candidate or a political party or affiliated organization, of compensation for the personal services of another person which are rendered to any candidate or political party or affiliated organization without charge for any political purpose; and

"(D) includes the provision of personal services for any political purpose.

"§ 7323. Political activity authorized; prohibitions

"(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b), an employee may take an active part in political management or in political campaigns, except an employee may not—

"(1) use his official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with or affecting the result of an election;

"(2) knowingly solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution from any person, unless such person is—

"(A) a member of the same Federal labor organization as defined under section 7103(4) of this title or a Federal employee organization which as of the date of enactment of the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1990 had a multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4));

"(B) not a subordinate employee; and

"(C) the solicitation is for a contribution to the multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4))) of such Federal labor organization as defined under section 7103(4) of this title or a Federal employee organization which as of the date of the enactment of the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1990 had a multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(4)); or

"(3) run form the nomination or as a candidate for election to a partisan political office; or

"(4) knowingly solicit or discourage the participation in any political activity of any person who—

"(A) has an application for any compensation, grant, contract, ruling, license, permit, or certificate pending before the employing office of such employee; or

"(B) is the subject of or a participant in an ongoing audit, investigation, or enforcement action being carried out by the employing office of such employee.

"(b)(1) An employee of the Federal Election Commission (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may not request or receive from, or give to, an employee, a Member of Congress, or an officer of a uniformed service a political contribution.

"(2) No employee of the Federal Election Commission (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may take an active part in political management or political campaigns.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'active part in political management or in a political campaign' means those acts of political management or political campaigning which prohibited for employees of the competitive service before July 19, 1940, by determinations of the Civil Service Commission under the rules prescribed by the President.

"§ 7324. Political activities on duty; prohibition

"(a) An employee may not engage in political activity—

"(1) while the employee is on duty;

"(2) in any room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties by an individual employed or holding office in the Government of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof;

"(3) while wearing a uniform or official insignia identifying the office or position of the employee; or

"(4) using any vehicle owned or leased by the Government of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof.

"(b)(1) An employee described in paragraph (2) of this subsection may engage in political activity otherwise prohibited by subsection (a) if the costs associated with that political activity are not paid for by money derived from the Treasury of the United States.

"(2) Paragraph (1) applies to an employee—

"(A) the duties and responsibilities of whose position continue outside normal duty hours and while away from the normal duty post; and

"(B) who is—

"(i) an employee paid from an appropriation for the Executive Office of the President; or

"(ii) an employee appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, whose position is located within the United States, who determines policies to be pursued by the United States in relations with foreign powers or in the nationwide administration of Federal laws.

"§ 7325. Political activity permitted; employees residing in certain municipalities

"The Office of Personnel Management may prescribe regulations permitting employees, without regard to the prohibitions in paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 7323 of this title, to take an active part in political management and political campaigns involving the municipality or other political subdivision in which they reside, to the extent the Office considers it to be in their domestic interest, when—

"(1) the municipality or political subdivision is in Maryland or Virginia and in the immediate vicinity of the District of Columbia, or is a municipality in which the majority of voters are employed by the Government of the United States; and

"(2) the Office determines that because of special or unusual circumstances which exist in the municipality or political subdivision it is in the domestic interest of the employees and individuals to permit that political participation.

"§ 7326. Penalties

"Any employee who has been determined by the Merit Systems Protection Board to have violated on two occasions any provision of section 7323 or 7324 of this title, shall upon such second determination by the Merit Systems Protection Board be removed from such employee's position, in which event that employee may not thereafter hold any position (other than an elected position) as an employee (as defined in section 7322(1) of this title). Such removal shall not be effective until all available appeals are final.".

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 3302(2) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out "7203, 7321, and 7322" and inserting in lieu thereof "and 7203".

(2) The table of sections of subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"SUBCHAPTER III—POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

"7321. Political participation.
"7322. Definitions.
"7323. Political activity authorized; prohibitions.
"7324. Political activities on duty; prohibitions.
"7325. Political activity permitted; employees residing in certain municipalities.
"7326. Penalties.".

SEC. 3. AMENDMENT TO CHAPTER 12 of TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE.

Section 1216(c) of title 5, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) If the Special Counsel receives an allegation concerning any matter under paragraph (1), (3), (4), or (5) of subsection (a), the Special Counsel may investigate and seek corrective action under section 1214 and disciplinary action under section 1215 in the same way as if a prohibited personnel practice were involved.".

SEC. 4. AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 18.

Section 602 of title 18, United States Code, relating to solicitation of political contributions, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" before "It";

(2) in paragraph (4) by striking out all that follows "Treasury of the United States" and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "to knowingly solicit any contribution within the meaning of section 301(8) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 from any other such officer, employee, or person. Any person who violates this section shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both."; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) The prohibition in subsection (a) shall not apply to any activity of an employee (as defined in section 7322(1) of title 5) or any individual employed in or under the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission, unless that activity is prohibited by section 7323 or 7324 of such title.".

(b) Section 603 of title 18, United States Code, relating to making political contributions, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) The prohibition in subsection (a) shall not apply to any activity of an employee (as defined in section 7322(1) of title 5) or any individual employed in or under the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission, unless that activity is prohibited by section 7323 or 7324 of such title.".

(c) Chapter 29 of Title 18, United States Code (18 U.S.C. 592 et seq.), relating to elections and political activities is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 610. COERCION OF POLITICAL ACTIVITY.

It shall be unlawful for any person to intimidate, threaten, command, or coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, command, or coerce, any employee of the federal government as defined in 5 U.S.C. 7322(1), as amended, to engage in, or not to engage in, any political activity, including, but not limited to, voting or refusing to vote for any candidate or measure in any election, making or refusing to make any political contribution, or working or refusing to work on behalf of any candidate. Any person who violates this section shall be fined not more than $5000 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.".

SEC. 5. AMENDMENTS TO THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT OF 1965.

Section 6 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973d) is amended by striking out "the provisions of section 9 of the Act of August 2, 1939, as amended (5 U.S.C. 118i), prohibiting partisan political activity" and by inserting in lieu thereof "the provisions of subchapter III of chapter 73 of title 5, United States Code, relating to political activities".

SEC. 6. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO APPLICATION OF CHAPTER 15 OF TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) Section 1501(1) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting ", the District of Columbia," after "State".

(b) Section 675(e) of the Community Services Block Grant Act (42 U.S.C. 9904(e)) is repealed.

SEC. 7. APPLICABILITY TO POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

The amendments made by this Act, and any regulations thereunder, shall apply with respect to employees of the United States Postal Service and the Postal Rate Commission, pursuant to sections 410(b) and 3604(e) of title 39, United States Code.

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) The amendments made by this Act shall take effect 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, except that the authority to prescribe regulations granted under section 7325 of title 5, United States Code (as added by section 2 of this Act), shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Any repeal or amendment made by this Act of any provision of law shall not release or extinguish any penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred under that provision, and that provision shall be treated as remaining in force for the purpose of sustaining any property proceeding or action for the enforcement of that penalty, forfeiture, or liability.

(c) No provision of this Act shall affect any proceedings with respect to which the charges were filed on or before the effective date of the amendments made by this Act. Orders shall be issued in such proceedings and appeals shall be taken therefrom as if this Act had not been enacted.

Mr. GLENN. I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and request a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses and that the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. GLENN, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. KOHL, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. ROTH, Mr. STEVENS, and Mr. RUDMAN conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that S. 135 be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I thank everybody who worked on this bill. It has been a long and tedious task back and forth. Although we disagree across the aisle, we still conduct our business with a feeling of comity. Although we disagree on things, we work together on them, and I look forward to working in the future with my distinguished colleague on the committee, Senator ROTH of Delaware. It has been a pleasure to work with him on this bill.

Mr. ROTH. Madam President, let me return the compliment. It has been a pleasure to work with the Senator. I cannot say I am happy at the results, but there will be another day. We look forward to working with the Senator and his staff in the future.

Mr. GLENN. I thank the Senator.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DR. ELISSA P. BENEDEK, PRESIDENT-ELECT AMERICAN PSYCHIATRIC ASSOCIATION

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, it is with a great deal of pride that I note that the American Psychiatric Association will install its second woman president when Elissa P. Benedek, M.D., director of research and training at the Center for Forensic Psychiatry in Ann Arbor, MI takes the oath of office during the 140th APA annual meeting on May 17. The American Psychiatric Association is a society of over 36,000 medical specialists brought together by a common commitment to patients, the search for more effective application of psychiatric knowledge to combat mental illness, and the promotion of mental health for all citizens.

Elissa Benedek is a graduate of Central High School in Detroit, MI; received her undergraduate degree from the University of Michigan; and her medical degree from the University of Michigan Medical School. She interned at Sinai Hospital in Detroit and received further training from the Neuropsychiatric Institute and the Children's Psychiatric Hospital at the University of Michigan Medical Center.

Elissa Benedek has been a leader of American Psychiatry for many years. She is a former vice president, secretary, and trustee of the American Psychiatric Association and has been active in the American Academy for Child Psychiatry, the Group For Advancement Of Psychiatry, and the American College of Psychiatry.

Elissa Benedek has been interested in children's mental health and has written and lectured about the provision of mental health services to emotionally impaired and disturbed children. She is a frequent presenter at academic and clinical conferences and has written over 100 papers and coedited three books. She is also the author of three books on emotionally impaired and disturbed children. She currently serves on the editorial boards of several medical journals and on the editorial board of the American Psychiatric Press.

Elissa Benedek has attained the highest office in her professional society and recognition of her achievement in her field by her peers. The Nation and the world have been richly blessed by her contributions.

CONTINUED OPPRESSION IN ROMANIA

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, hundreds of anti-Communist demonstrators on April 21 entered University Square in the center of Bucharest, Romania. They came to protest the dictatorial, neo-Communist control of Romania by the so-called National Salvation Front. Since April 21, the number has grown at times to thousands, camped out in the square demanding true democracy.

Madam President, many of those in the square today are witnesses and survivors of the December 21, 1989, revolution against the Communist regime of Nicolae Ceausescu. They risked their lives for freedom and they are willing to do it again.

The provisional government, under the control of the National Salvation Front, has pursued a neo-Bolshevik strategy of manipulation and violence. The police were ordered to break up the peaceful demonstration by attacking them with clubs. When the chief of police refused to order the attack, he was fired. The leader of the National Salvation Front, President Ion Iliescu, speaking in the Parliament, reviled the demonstrating students, workers and intellectuals, calling them "ruffians" and "hooligans". Since then, more and more Romanians have joined the ranks of the protestors.

These demonstrators, as well as demonstrators in many other Romanian cities, have three primary demands: First, the removal of top activists from the government; second, free access to the media; third, and postponement of the elections scheduled for May 20.

Madam President, the first demand is extremely important. On March 11, 15 anti-Communist societies met in Timisoara to formulate the Proclamation of Timisoara. The point on which all the demonstrators agree is point eight calling for a ban on former Communist Party activists and Securitate members from political life for the first three terms of the new legislature.

These are the same Communist Party activists and secret police who have unleased a campaign of manipulation, harassment and violence against the people of Romania. They have hijacked the December revolution. Since the beginning of the current election campaign, the opposition parties have endured numerous threats, beatings, and even the vandalization of their offices.

Last week both Radu Campeanu, the Liberal Party candidate for President, and Ion Ratiu, the Peasant Party candidate, were brutally attacked by trained thugs in the pay of the National Salvation Front. Many of them are believed to be members of the Securitate or secret police. As a result of these assaults, an aide to Campeanu was hospitalized with a skull fracture. Mr. Ratiu's wife was also hospitalized.

The National Salvation Front—or "The Front", as it is called—is composed largely of long-time members of the Communist nomenklatura. For example, President Iliescu began his career as the leader of the Communist Youth Union and later held the high ranking position of party secretary in charge of ideology. Although he fell out of favor with Ceausescu, he never made public disavowal of the Communist regime or its leaders.

The man believed to be behind the front's campaign of manipulation is Silviu Brucan, a Communist Party veteran and former editor of the Communist Party's official daily. The Foreign Minister, Sergui Celac, was until 1978, Ceausescu's personal interpreter for Russian and English; since that time he has kept close personal ties with high ranking Communist officials. The Prime Minister, Petre Roman, is the son of a Comintern veteran of the Spanish Civil War. Both he and Celac graduated from the elite Russian high school in Bucharest. Although Roman has had a nonpolitical career he has no history of dissent with the Communist regime.

Madam President, the list goes on and on. It is no wonder that the demonstrators are protesting the continued control of the Government by high ranking Communist officials.

Madam President, the second demand of the demonstrators is for free and independent television and radio media. Former Communist dictator Ceausescu issued a decree in 1975 that the electronic media would be subordinate to the President of Romania. The National Salvation Front has not rescinded this decree; in fact, it has used it to control the television and radio stations.

This past Monday, the demonstrators sent a delegation to meet with President Iliescu for talks on their grievances but the talks broke down after Iliescu refused to allow television cameras to tape the negotiations. It is apparent that Mr. Iliescu has no intention of allowing a free media. What does he want to hide?

Finally, Madam President, the demonstrators call for the postponement of the elections currently scheduled for May 20. The Romanian people, like any people yearning for freedom, demand free and fair elections. They have long endured the exploitations of communism and fraudulent elections. But the people demand an election free of threats and scare tactics, free of media control, with free access to the publishing houses and distribution centers. There has been no climate of freedom for campaigning.

Not only does the Government control the electronic media but it also controls the amount of paper alloted to each party for their party newspapers. Opposition party papers are not even distributed to cities outside of Bucharest because the trucks are controlled by the Government.

The people demand a fair election without the neo-Communist Government's control of union funds to manipulate the workers. They want total dismantlement of the secret police and Communist Party apparatus that have been used against the people. Under these circumstances it should be obvious to all that until a climate of freedom exists, the elections should be postponed.

Madam President, Secretary of State Baker stated during his brief stopover in Romania in February that "there can be no backsliding on the road to democracy." Secretary Baker warned the provisional government that additional aid—including a waiver of trade restrictions or most-favored-nation trade status to Romania, and American support for Romanian membership in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the International Monetary Fund—would be conditioned on the completion of "free and fair" elections and on the observance of human rights.

Secretary Baker is right. The United States should stand firm against backsliding and refrain from extending most-favored-nation trade status. The United States, as the standard-bearer of freedom, should support the brave Romanian people who fought and shed their blood for real freedom and true democracy.

Mr. GLENN. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Kalbaugh, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS

A message from the President of the United States announced that he had approved and signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

On February 12, 1990:

S.J. Res. 217. Joint resolution to designate the period commencing February 4, 1990, and ending February 10, 1990, and the period commencing February 3, 1991, and ending February 9, 1991, as "National Burn Awareness Week."

On February 14, 1990:

S.J. Res. 103. Joint resolution to designate the period commencing February 18, 1990, and ending February 24, 1990, as "National Visiting Nurses Associations Week";

S.J. Res. 130. Joint resolution to designating February 11 through February 17, 1990, as "Vocational-Technical Education Week."

On February 27, 1990:

S.J. Res. 186. Joint resolution to designating the week of March 1 through March 7, 1990, as "National Quarter Horse Week."

On March 13, 1990:

S.J. Res. 227. Joint resolution to designate March 11 through March 17, 1990, as "Deaf Awareness Week"; and

S.J. Res. 257. Joint resolution to designate March 10, 1990, as "Harriet Tubman Day."

On March 14, 1990:

S 1016. An act to change the name of "Marion Lake," located northwest of Marion, KS, to "Marion Reservoir."

On March 20, 1990:

S.J. Res. 243. Joint resolution to designate March 25, 1990, as "Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy."

On March 27, 1990:

S.J. Res. 237. Joint resolution providing for the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dwight David Eisenhower.

On March 30, 1990:

S. 1091. An act to provide for the striking of medals in commemoration of the bicentennial of the U.S. Coast Guard; and

S.J. Res. 229. Joint resolution to designate April 1990 as "National Prevent-a-Litter Month."

On March 31, 1990:

S. 2231. An act to amend the Energy Policy and Conservation Act to extend the authority for titles I and II.

On April 4, 1990:

S. 1521. An act to provide for an increase in the maximum rates of basic pay for the police force of the National Zoological Park;

S.J. Res. 250. Joint resolution to designating April 1990 as "National Recycling Month"; and

S.J. Res. 266. Joint resolution designating March 1990, as "United States Naval Reserve Month."

On April 5, 1990:

S.J. Res. 190. Joint resolution designating April 9, 1990, as "National Former Prisoners of War Recognition Day."

On April 9, 1990:

S. 2151. An act to permit the transfer of the obsolete submarine U.S.S. Requin to the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, PA, before the expiration of the 60-day waiting period that would otherwise be applicable to the transfer.

On April 11, 1990:

S. 388. An act to provide for 5-year, staggered terms for members of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and for other purposes.

April 18, 1990:

S. 1813. An act to ensure that funds provided under section 4213 of the Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1986 may be used to acquire land for emergency shelters; and

S. 1949. An act to amend the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947 to permit parties engaged in collective bargaining to bargain over the establishment and administration of trust funds to provide financial assistance for employee housing.

April 25, 1990:

S.J. Res. 242. Joint resolution designating the week of April 22 through April 28, 1990, as "National Crime Victims' Rights Week."

April 30, 1990:

S. 1096. An act to provide for the use and distribution of funds awarded the Seminole Indians in dockets 73, 151, and 73-A of the Indian Claims Commission.

May 1, 1990:

S.J. Res. 258. Joint resolution authorizing the President to proclaim the last Friday of April 1990 as "National Arbor Day."

May 4, 1990:

S. 2533. An act to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to extend the civil penalty assessment demonstration program, and for other purposes.

May 8, 1990:

S.J. Res. 236. Joint resolution designating May 6 through 12, 1990, as "Be Kind to Animals and National Pet Week."

May 9, 1990:

S.J. Res. 153. Joint resolution designating the third week in May 1990 as "National Tourism Week"; and

S.J. Res. 230. Joint resolution to designate the period commencing on May 6, 1990, and ending on May 12, 1990, as "National Drinking Water Week."

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 11:56 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Goetz, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2364) to amend the Rail Passenger Service Act to authorize appropriations for the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 7) to amend the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act to improve the provision of services under such act and to extend the authorities contained in such act through the fiscal year 1995, and for other purposes; it agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. MILLER of California, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. WILLIAMS, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mrs. LOWERY of New York, Mr. POSHARD, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. GOODLING, Mr. FAWELL, Mr. GRANDY, Mr. SMITH of Vermont, Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. GUNDERSON, Mr. PETRI, Mrs. ROUKEMA, and Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri as managers of the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3) to authorize appropriations to expand Head Start programs and programs carried out under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to include child care services, and for other purposes; it agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints the following as managers on the part of the House:

From the Committee on Education and Labor, for consideration of the House bill—except titles III and VI, and the Senate amendment—except titles II and III, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. HAWKINS, Mr. FORD of Michigan, Mr. CLAY, Mr. MILLER of California, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. WILLIAMS, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. OWENS of New York, Mr. HAYES of Illinois, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. SAWYER, Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey, Mrs. LOWEY of New York, Mrs. UNSOELD, Mr. WASHINGTON, Mr. JONTZ , Mr. GOODLING, Mr. PETRI, Mr. GUNDERSON, Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. TAUKE, Mr. HENRY, Mr. GRANDY, Mr. BALLENGER, and Mr. FAWELL.

From the Committee on Ways and Means, for consideration of titles III and VI of the House bill, and title II of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, Mr. DOWNEY, Mr. FORD of Tennessee, Mr. PEASE, Mr. MATSUI, Mrs. KENNELLY, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. ARCHER, Mr. VANDER JAGT, Mr. CRANE, and Mr. SHAW.

From the Committee on Ways and Means, for consideration of title I—except section 125—of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, Mr. DOWNEY, and Mr. ARCHER.

From the Committee on Ways and Means, for consideration of title III of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, Mr. JACOBS, and Mr. BROWN of Colorado.

From the Committee on Energy and Commerce, for consideration of section 124 of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. DINGELL, Mr. WALGREN, and Mr. LENT.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 3656. An act to amend the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to improve the clearance and settlement of transactions in securities and related instruments, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bills:

S. 993. An act to implement the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and Their Destruction, by prohibiting certain conduct relating to biological weapons, and for other purposes; and

S. 1853. An act to reward a congressional gold medal to Laurence Spelman Rockefeller.

The enrolled bills were subsequently signed by the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bill was read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

H.R. 3656. An act to amend the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to improve the clearance and settlement of transactions in securities and related instruments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, May 10, 1990, he had presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 993. An act to implement the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and Their Destruction, by prohibiting certain conduct relating to biological weapons, and for other purposes; and

S. 1853. An act to award a congressional gold medal to Laurence Spelman Rockefeller.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. SASSER, from the Committee on the Budget, without amendment:

S. Con. Res. 129. An original concurrent resolution setting forth the congressional budget for the United States Government for fiscal years 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995 (Rept. No. 101-283).

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following executive reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. WARNER, from the Committee on Armed Services:

The following-named officer for appointment to the grade of rear admiral in accordance with article II, section 2, clause 2, of the Constitution:

To be rear admiral

Capt. Robert C.J. Krasner, MC, U.S. Navy, [redacted]

By Mr. BIDEN, from the Committee on the Judiciary.

Stanley F. Birch, Jr., of Georgia, to be U.S. circuit judge for the Eleventh Circuit;

John D. Rainey, of Texas, to be U.S. district judge for the Southern District of Texas;

James K. Singleton, Jr., of Alaska, to be U.S. district judge for the District of Alaska;

William M. Nickerson, of Maryland, to be U.S. district judge for the district of Maryland;

Stephen M. McNamee, of Arizona, to be U.S. district judge for the District of Arizona;

Jack D. Shanstrom, of Montana, to be U.S. District Judge for the District of Montana;

Samual Grayson Wilson, of Virginia, to be U.S. district judge for the Western District of Virginia;

Richard W. Vollmer, Jr., of Alabama, to be U.S. district judge for the Southern District of Alabama;

Arthur F. Van Court, of California, to be U.S. Marshal for the Eastern District of California for the term of 4 years; and Daniel J. Horgan, of Florida, to be U.S. Marshal for the Southern District of Florida for the term of 4 years.

By Mr. BIDEN, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

Morris Lee Thompson, of Kansas, to be U.S. attorney for the District of Kansas for the term of 4 years.

(The above nomination was reported with the recommendation that it be confirmed, subject to the nominee's commitment to respond to requests to appear and testify before any duly constituted committee of the Senate.)

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. ADAMS, and Mr. INOUYE):

S. 2604. A bill to facilitate the use of pesticides that are registered for agricultural minor uses, to establish the Inter-Regional Research Project Number 4 (IR-4 Program), and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

By Mr. PRYOR (for himself, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. EXON, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. KOHL):

S. 2605. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to provide mechanisms to control Medicaid drug prices while assuring that beneficiaries receive quality medical care, physicians' prerogative to prescribe is protected and the role of pharmacists is enhanced; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. BURNS (for himself and Mr. BAUCUS):

S. 2606. A bill for the relief of Conwell F. Robinson and Gerald R. Robinson; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

By Mr. CRANSTON (for himself, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. KERRY, and Mr. SANFORD):

S. 2607. A bill to amend the International Claims Settlement Act of 1949 to provide for the payment of claims of nationals of the United States against Vietnam; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. GLENN (for himself, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. KOHL, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. METZENBAUM, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. SASSER, Mr. COHEN, Mr. NUNN, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. HARKIN, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 2608. A bill to amend the Inspector General Act of 1978 to clarify the authority of Inspectors General to conduct audits and investigations; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

By Ms. MIKULSKI:

S. 2609. A bill to establish a national advanced technician training program, utilizing the resources of the Nation's 2-year associate-degree-granting colleges to expand the pool of skilled technicians in strategic advanced technology fields, to increases the productivity of the Nation's industries, and to improve the competitiveness of the United States in international trade, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

By Mrs. KASSEBAUM:

S. 2610. A bill to protect the free flow of commerce on the Missouri River; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. KENNEDY:

S. Res. 282. Resolution expressing the sense of the Senate regarding United States military assistance for the Republic of Liberia and human rights abuses in Liberia; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. SASSER from the Committee on the Budget:

S. Con. Res. 129. Original concurrent resolution setting forth the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for fiscal years 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995; placed on the calender.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. ADAMS, and Mr. INOUYE):

S. 2604. A bill to facilitate the use of pesticides that are registered for agricultural minor uses, to establish the Inter-regional Research Project Number 4 (IR-4 Program), and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

MINOR USE PESTICIDES ACT

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, today I am introducing, on behalf of myself, Senator INOUYE, and Senator ADAMS, a bill to amend Federal pesticide law. Our bill will ease the bureaucratic and economic restrictions that hamper the development and use of safe pesticides for fruits, vegetables, and specialty crops.

Our aim is to help keep important and safe chemicals available for minor-crop growers, and at the same time, encourage USDA to develop alternative pest control measures through integrated pest management and research. In many ways, we are creating an orphan-drug program for agricultural chemicals.

Because of the costs of reregistering an existing chemical with EPA, or because of the costs of developing a new chemical, many pesticide companies have had to cancel their registrations for small volume crops.

In other words, when weighing the costs of reregistering a pesticide for use on celery, the manufacturer must decide whether the volume of sales justifies the expense of the required tests and fees. In many cases, the decision will be against pursuing the registration for crops, like celery, that are not widely grown.

The impact on minor crop producers—who grow crops that range from apples to zucchinis—has been a shrinking pool of solutions to their pest problems. The end result will be at the grocer's produce counter—costlier, and perhaps fewer, fruits, vegetables.

The bill we are introducing today addresses specific problems in the registration process for minor-use growers. For example, we ask EPA to let affected grower groups know when a chemical they need is going to be removed from the market. That gives the growers the opportunity to take over the registration of the pesticide and continue to use it.

While we are concerned about the needs of the growers, our bill does not affect EPA's ability to remove suspect or dangerous chemicals from use. Our goal is to keep viable and safe pesticides from being discontinued purely for economic reasons—not to keep hazardous pesticides on the market.

Minor-use crops are grown in almost every one of our States. New Jersey blueberries, Masssachusetts cranberries, Washington apples, Florida oranges, California avocados, all considered minor-use, and all more popular than ever with the health conscious American consumer.

But because of their nonprogram status, few of our research and development efforts are geared toward these specialty crop needs. Therefore, we are asking USDA to conduct more research on the pest control needs of minor crops, and to increase their emphasis on integrated pest management for minor crops.

Our bill also increases the authorization for the Inter-Regional, or IR-4, program. The most valuable research program for minor crops, the IR-4 program tests the safety of commercially nonviable minor-use pesticides. Underfunded and over burdened with work, the IR-4 program needs a boost in support from Congress.

The men and women who produce America's fruits, vegetables, and specialty crops are independent, hard-working, and proud of the way they make their living. We want, through our bill, to give them the tools they need to improve their farming practices, and to ensure that Americans will have access to an abundance of safe, delicious produce.

Before closing, I want to make special note of the work that Senator Matsunaga and his staff put into this bill. Senator Matsunaga was keenly aware of the problems his home-State producers faced and worked diligently to craft the legislation before us.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill appear immediately following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2604

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Minor Use Pesticides Act of 1990".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.

TITLE I—REGISTRATION OF PESTICIDES FOR AGRICULTURAL MINOR USES

Sec. 101. Data in support of registration.
Sec. 102. Waivers of liability for pesticides registered for minor agricultural uses.
Sec. 103. Reduction or waiver of fees for pesticides registered for minor agricultural uses.
Sec. 104. Voluntary cancellation.
Sec. 105. Pest control.
Sec. 106. Conforming amendments to table of contents.

TITLE II—INTER-REGIONAL RESEARCH PROJECT NUMBER 4 (IR-4 PROGRAM)

Sec. 201. Findings.
Sec. 202. Inter-Regional Research Project Number 4 (IR-4 Program).
Sec. 203. Conforming amendments.

TITLE I—REGISTRATION OF PESTICIDES FOR AGRICULTURAL MINOR USES

SEC. 101. DATA IN SUPPORT OF REGISTRATION.

Section 3(c)(2)(A) of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136a(c)(2)(A)) is amended by inserting after the third sentence the following new sentence: "The Administrator shall not require a person to submit, under this Act, any data related to residues of a pesticide registered for a minor agricultural use in a geographic area where the use of the pesticide is not likely, as determined by the Administrator.".

SEC. 102. WAIVERS OF LIABILITY FOR PESTICIDES REGISTERED FOR MINOR AGRICULTURAL USES.

Section 3(f) of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136a(f)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) WAIVERS OF LIABILITY FOR PESTICIDE REGISTERED FOR MINOR AGRICULTURAL USES.—In the case of a pesticide that is registered for a minor agricultural use, an agricultural producer may enter into a written agreement with the registrant of the pesticide to waive any liability of the registrant to the producer incurred with respect to the use.".

SEC. 103. REDUCTION OR WAIVER OF FEES FOR PESTICIDES REGISTERED FOR MINOR AGRICULTURAL USES.

Section 4(i)(4) of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136a-1(i)(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, in the case of a pesticide that is registered for a minor agricultural use, the Administrator may reduce or waive the payment of a fee for the registration or registration of the pesticide for the use if the Administrator determines that the fee would significantly reduce the availability of the pesticide for the use.".

SEC. 104. VOLUNTARY CANCELLATION.

Section 6(f) of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136d(f)) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following new paragraph:

"(1) VOLUNTARY CANCELLATION.—

"(A) A registrant may, at any time, request that a pesticide registration of the registrant be canceled or amended to terminate one or more pesticide uses.

"(B) Before acting on the request, the Administrator shall publish in the Federal Register a notice of the receipt of the request.

"(C) In the case of a pesticide that is registered for a minor agricultural use, if the Administrator determines that the cancellation or amendment of the registration of the pesticide for the use would adversely affect the availability of the pesticide for the use, the Administrator—

"(i) shall publish in the Federal Register a notice of the receipt of the request and take such other actions as are necessary to inform persons who so use the pesticide of the request; and

"(ii) may not approve or reject the request until the termination of the 90-day period beginning on the date of publication of the notice in the Federal Register, and

"(iii) the Administrator may waive the 90-day period if the Administrator determines that the continued use of the pesticide would pose an unreasonable adverse effect on the environment.

"(D) Subject to paragraph (3)(B), after complying with this paragraph, the Administrator may approve or deny the request."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) TRANSFER OF REGISTRATION OF PESTICIDES REGISTERED FOR MINOR AGRICULTURAL USES.—In the case of a pesticide that is registered for a minor agricultural use:

"(A) During the 90-day period referred to in paragraph (1)(C)(ii), the registrant of the pesticide may notify the Administrator of an agreement between the registrant and persons who so use the pesticide (or an agreement between the registrant and a third party registrant, as defined by the Administrator) to transfer the registration of the pesticide, in lieu of canceling or amending the registration to terminate the use.

"(B) The Administrator shall approve the transfer of the registration of the pesticide unless the Administrator determines that the continued use of the pesticide would pose an unreasonable adverse effect on the environment.

"(C) If the Administrator approves the transfer and the registrant transfers the registration of the pesticide, the Administrator shall not cancel or amend the registration, or rescind the transfer of the registration, during the 180-day period beginning on the date of the approval of the transfer.

"(D) The new registrant of the pesticide shall assume the outstanding data and other requirements for the pesticide that are pending at the time of the transfer.".

SEC. 105. PEST CONTROL.

Section 28 of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136w-3) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 28. PEST CONTROL.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) PESTS.—The Administrator, in cooperation with the Secretary of Agriculture, shall identify—

"(A) pests affecting minor-use crops that must be brought under control; and

"(B) chemical control measures available to control the pests described in subparagraph (A) and biological and other alternative control measures available to control the pests.

"(2) REPORT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall, not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section and annually thereafter, prepare a report and send the report to the Administrator. The report shall—

"(A) describe in detail the pests and measures of pest control described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1);

"(B) identify areas of pest control at risk of losing effectiveness due to—

"(i) an insufficient number of registered pesticides; or

"(ii) resistance by a pest to pest control measures; and

"(C) describe in detail research efforts, including agricultural extension programs, to develop effective pest control to address the areas of pest control described in subparagraph (B).

"(b) INTEGRATED PEST MANAGEMENT.—The Administrator, in cooperation with the Secretary of Agriculture, shall develop approaches to the control of pests based on integrated pest management that respond to the needs of producers who use pesticides for minor agricultural uses.".

SEC. 106. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO TABLE OF CONTENTS.

The table of contents in section 1(b) of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. prec. 121) is amended—

(1) by adding at the end of the items relating to section 3(f) the following new item:

"(4) Waivers of liability for pesticide registered for minor agricultural uses.";

(2) by adding at the end of the items relating to section 6(f) the following new item:

"(3) Transfer of registration of pesticides registered for minor agricultural uses.";

and

(3) by striking the items relating to section 28 and inserting the following new items:

"Sec. 28. Pest control.

"(a) In general.

"(1) In general.

"(2) Report by Secretary.

"(b) Integrated pest management.".

TITLE II—INTER-REGIONAL RESEARCH PROJECT NUMBER 4 (IR-4 PROGRAM)

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the Inter-Regional Research Project Number 4 (IR-4 program) is a national research program intended to facilitate the registration of pesticides for minor agricultural uses where use volume does not justify commercial development;

(2) the main beneficiaries of the IR-4 project are agricultural producers who use the pesticides to produce crops that are eaten daily (such as vegetables, fruits, and nuts) and crops that that enrich the environment (such as ornamental plants, floral crops, trees, and turfgrass);

(3) as the result of insufficient funding, the IR-4 program has a backlog of 1,200 requests for new uses;

(4) section 4 of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136a-1) requires the reregistration of over 4,000 currently labeled uses;

(5) about 1,000 priority minor use needs will not be supported for reregistration by industry;

(6) the IR-4 program is in a funding crisis; and

(7) without additional funds to meet the needs generated by reregistration requirements imposed by section 4 of such Act, and new environmental management methods, the IR-4 program will be unable to fulfill its important tasks.

SEC. 202. INTER-REGIONAL RESEARCH PROJECT NUMBER 4 (IR-4 PROGRAM).

Section 2 of the Act entitled "An Act to facilitate the work of the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes", approved August 4, 1965 (7 U.S.C. 450i), is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (e) through (i) as subsections (f) through (j), respectively;

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(d)(1) The Secretary of Agriculture shall establish an Inter-Regional Research Project Number 4 (hereinafter referred to in this section as the 'IR-4 Program') to assist in the collection of residue and efficacy data in support of—

"(A) the registration or reregistration of minor use pesticides under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136 et seq.); and

"(B) tolerances for residues of minor use chemicals in or on raw agricultural commodities under section 408 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 346a).

"(2) The Secretary shall carry out the IR-4 program in cooperation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, State agricultural experiment stations, colleges and universities, extension services, private industry, and other interested parties.

"(3) As part of carrying out the IR-4 program, the Secretary shall—

"(A) develop analytical techniques applicable to residues of pesticides registered for minor agricultural use, including automation techniques and validation of analytical methods; and

"(B) participate in research activities aimed at reducing residues of pesticides registered for minor agricultural use.

"(4) There are authorized to be appropriated $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums are necessary for subsequent fiscal years, to carry out this section."; and

(3) in subsection (h) (as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this section), by striking "subsection (b)" and inserting "subsections (b) and (d)".

SEC. 203. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) Section 1449 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3241) is amended by striking "sections 2(e), 2(f), and 2(h)" and inserting "sections 2(f), 2(g), and 2(i)".

(b) Section 1469(1) of such Act (7 U.S.C. 3315(1)) is amended by striking "sections 2(e), 2(f), and 2(h)" and inserting "sections 2(f), 2(g), and 2(i)".

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I rise today in support of this important legislation designed to manage the use of pesticides on minor agricultural crops. I am pleased to join my colleagues, Senators GRAHAM and ADAMS, as an original sponsor of this initiative.

Mr. President, the Federal Government registers chemical pesticides and regulates their use on major crops such as cotton, wheat, corn, and soybeans. There is a sufficient demand for these pesticides. However, when it is a minor agricultural crop, pesticide regulations are more problematic. Due to the costly and lengthy registration process, I believe that special attention must be devoted to the development and registration of safe and effective chemical pesticides for these crops.

All of Hawaii's agricultural industries are considered minor crops. Even sugar—our largest crop in terms of acreage and value—is considered a minor crop. In an effort to diversify our agricultural base, Hawaii's farmers have taken bold steps and experimented with new crops. Coffee, cocoa, and vanilla crops have been planted in Hawaii. These ventures hold great promise for Hawaii's agricultural community for, if successful, will be the only crops of its kind in the Nation. Additionally, we are proud of our ongoing pineapple, papaya, macadamia nut, guava, and array of tropical flower industries. All of these crops, and numerous others, are considered minor. Many of these industries are involved in pesticide registration for use on their crops. It is not uncommon for such a process to span over a period of 3 to 5 years. What concerns me is what these farmers do in the interim while they await approval. Many of them are small family farmers that rely on the sale of their crops to survive. Mr. President, they need our assistance.

Chemical pesticides are one means of controlling pests. Other techniques involving biological control and management practices to break the life cycle of pests are also essential. These strategies, referred to as integrated pest management, are the long-term approaches to pest control.

Many of Hawaii's farmers already practice many integrated pest management strategies in addition to utilizing chemical pesticides. Through proper regulation, we can insure that chemical application on minor crops continues to maintain standards that are environmentally sound while insuring effective pest control and producing hardy and safe agricultural products. Mr. President, I believe that the measure we are introducing today will accomplish this important objective.

In closing, I would like to acknowledge the major role that my late colleague, Senator Spark Matsunaga played in the drafting of this legislation.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this important measure.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I rise as an original sponsor of the Minor Use Pesticide Act of 1990. This legislation, consisting mainly of technical amendments to the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act [FIFRA], attempts to address a crisis we face today in the area of minor crop and minor use pesticides.

The term "minor crops" and "minor uses" refer to limited acreage crops or sepcific pesticide uses on crops where the market potential for a crop protection chemical is very small. Minor crops are not minor in any other sense of the term. In my State, where agriculture is our largest industry, the Washington State Department of Agriculture estimates more than 90 percent of our crops fall into this category.

In 1988, Congress, responding to concerns that many older registrations needed scientific reevaluation, passed FIFRA amendments requiring EPA to reregister all existing registrations for pesticide use. The impact of reregistration on registrations of minor use pesticides is expected to be severe. This process will be very expensive. Many chemical manufacturers are expected to choose simply not to renew their minor use registrations, because the market for the product is not worth the expense.

The problem we face is not that some older products may now be judged unsafe and pulled from the market. That is what the reregistration process is for. If a chemical cannot meet our safety standards it should not be used. What concerns me are situations where safe products become unavailable for our farmers, often without notice or the chance to develop alternatives.

The intent of this bill, therefore, is to make sure those most immediately affected by reregistration—America's minor crop farmers—are given notice that chemical products they use may be affected by this process, and given an opportunity to see that the pesticide goes through the reregistration process. I believe this bill does this in ways consistent with FIFRA's overall public safety goals.

First, current law says chemical manufacturers can decide not to reregister through what is called voluntary cancellation, with no notice to affected farmers. The bill would require EPA to determine if any voluntary cancellation request would affect minor crop farmers. If so, EPA would have to notify affected growers, and could not approve the request for 90 days.

Second, in a case where a qualified grower group arranges with a chemical manufacturer to become a third-party registrant, and assume responsibility for the registration, the bill requires EPA to approve the transfer unless EPA determines that continued use of the pesticide would pose an unreasonable adverse effect on the environment. If the transfer is approved, EPA cannot cancel or amend it for 180 days. To further facilitate such transfers, the bill permits growers to enter into voluntary agreements with chemical manufacturers to waive liability for crop damage. This provision is not intended to affect any other type of liability.

This provision gives a grower group the opportunity to take a pesticide through the reregistration process when the chemical manufacturer decides not to do so. The bill provides that the new registrant for a pesticide remains responsibile for pending data requirements existing at the time of the transfer.

Next, the bill clarifies that EPA cannot require residue data on pesticides registered for minor use in geographic areas where EPA feels use of the pesticide is not likely. The bill also extends EPA's existing discretionary authority to waive fees for any reregistration exclusively dealing with minor uses. EPA would now waive fees for the minor use portion of a registration even if that registration included major uses as well.

The bill also addresses the Inter-Regional Research Project No. 4, the IR-4 Program. This program, annually funded as a special grant, is designed to support registrations of pesticides for minor crops through the generation of required data. In the Pacific Northwest, IR-4 work is done at Oregon State University, at the ARS lab in Yakima, and hopefully soon at the new Food and Environmental Quality Lab I have proposed for Richland, WA.

IR-4 is an excellent program, but it does not have the resources to meet the demand for minor crop pesticide data created by the reregistration process. I understand the administration is considering increasing its inadequate funding request, and I certainly encourage that effort. This bill is designed to make permanemt IR-4's existence as a Federal program. The bill establishes the program, authorizes $25 million in funding, and expands its existing mission.

In addition, the bill directs EPA and USDA to complete a study identifying pests that affect minor crops, identifying chemical control measures for such pests, and giving the status of the search for alternative means of control.

Finally, I would like to express my gratitude for the contribution made to this legislation by my late colleague, Senator Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii. His efforts on behalf of the minor crop growers of this State were just one more reason why all of us here in the Senate miss him very much.

Mr. President, I look forward to discussing these proposals with other members, farmers, consumers, environmental groups, and chemical manufacturers.

By Mr. PRYOR (for himself, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. EXON, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. KOHL):

S. 2605. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to provide mechanisms to control Medicaid drug prices while assuring that beneficiaries receive quality medical care, physicians' prerogrative to prescribe is protected and the role of pharmacists is enhanced; to the Committee on Finance.

PHARMACEUTICAL ACCESS AND PRUDENT PURCHASING ACT OF 1990

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, today I am formally introducing legislation to reduce prescription drug prices purchased by the $3.5 billion Medicaid Program, the Government's health insurance safety net for the poorest Americans. My bill is called the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990.

Mr. President, as I discussed on the floor just 2 days ago, the country faces a smoldering crisis of affordability that is about to become an inferno. The staff at the Senate Special Committee on Aging tell me they are getting calls from other Senators' and Representatives' offices every day, asking what they can do to answer their constituents' letters about high drug prices. Everyone of us in this Chamber has received complaints from sick elderly and poor people, States, physicians, pharmacists, and insurers about skyrocketing prescription drug costs.

The only representative of the health care industry satisfied with the current sysem appears to be the drug manufacturers. We must take steps to stop or at least control the unacceptable trend of prescription drug price increases tripling all other price increases.

My answer to this crisis has been to study the best business practices already being used by hospitals, HMO's and a handful of Federal Government agencies to negotiate lower drug prices for the American people. What I found was that the Department of Veterans Affairs, hospitals, and HMO's were obtaining 30 to 40 percent discounts under what the State Medicaid programs are paying. While no one would begrudge a nonprofit hospital serving indigent patients a discount, how can anyone argue that the Medicaid Prescription Drug Program serving millions of poor people should not have access to at least the same or similar discounts?

I have therefore concluded, as I hope and believe many of my colleagues will, that there is absolutely no reason why the financially destitute Medicaid Health Insurance Program should not also directly negotiate with the drug companies. However, despite the valiant efforts of States to do just that, the drug manufacturers have almost without exception denied them reasonable prices for desperately needed medications. It is time that we assist our State governments in getting the manufacturers to sit down at the bargaining table.

The Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act would facilitate negotiations while also reversing the common Washington presumption that our first recourse should be to tell the States how to run their programs. As a former Governor, I have worked for months to craft a bill that gives States both the necessary information and the incentives to negotiate with drug manufacturers while also improving the likelihood that the drug companies will finally take the States seriously when they ask to negotiate.

The legislation has what I call an "or else" clause that will take effect only if the combination of incentives and pressure on the industry fails. The "or else" clause provides that if the drug manufacturers continue to ignore the States' requests for a fair deal, the States will join together in big buying groups that the drug companies literally cannot afford to ignore. I hope that is never going to be necessary, but history teaches that most of the drug companies don't do anything for anyone that they don't have to.

Many of my colleagues on the Finance, Aging and Labor Committees, I gather, have been subjected to a barrage of lobbying activity by the drug companies about this bill that I am introducing today. In all the years I have been in the Senate, I have never seen such an extensive lobbying campaign against an idea that has yet to be formally introduced.

The drug manufacturers have all sorts of arguments against this bill. However, the only argument the industry doesn't come to the Hill with is the one reason why they are here: my legislation might slightly reduce their excessive profits by asking them—like everyone else—to share in the burden of Medicaid cost containment. To assist my colleagues in sorting out truth from the fiction that the manufacturers have been circulating, I have prepared a brief question and answer document that responds to the manufacturers outlandish arguments against my bill. In addition, I believe it is important to note that the very organizations who represent the interests of Medicaid recipients have not only rejected the manufacturers unprecedented lobbying efforts but have written me letters of support.

In the interest of time, I will not go through the numerous red herring arguments the manufacturers have raised. However, I would like to address the one argument that most of us have heard time and time again on the drug pricing issue. We have all heard how efforts to control drug prices will kill the drug industry and its investment in research and development. They say that my bill will choke the golden goose or research and development that may someday produce a cure for Alzheimer's disease, or AIDS, or cystic fibrosis. Perhaps we should expect such rhetoric from those who job it is to rally their legions of lobbyists. But what do cooler heads say about the impact of my bill?

One respected Wall Street investment analysis house recently concluded, "the Pryor bill is not a threat." The analysts wrote that even if the Pryor bill saves Medicaid $250 million a year, that "represents about three quarters of a percent of the total U.S. drug industry's sales. * * * If that is the hit the industry is looking at [he said] * * * it is not only manageable, it is trivial." A few weeks later, they revisited the same subject, saying, "even if it passed, the impact of PRYOR's bill would be immaterial for the industry."

That is Wall Street's assessment—$250 million is trivial and immaterial to the prospects of the industry. They're probably right. But $250 million isn't trivial to the poor people of this country, nor to the working man and woman who pay not only their own taxes, but also a substantial portion of the drug companies' taxes, too.

I know every Member has seen a good program get deleted in the present budget environment, and I don't want to dwell on all the programs I've seen go down in flames. But here are two examples of success stories that I hope will convey the importance of securing $250 million in savings with my bill. In the 1987 budget reconciliation bill, we were lucky to achieve a modest, voluntary program to insure poor pregnant women and their infants. For a total of $220 million over 3 years, we were able to purchase for thousands of these vulnerable citizens not only prescription drugs but also payment for doctor and hospital bills.

Two years later, in the 1989 budget bill, we were able to cover medical costs for all children up to age 6 as long as their family income didn't get above 133 percent of the poverty line. The cost: $210 million for 2 years. In my view, we could stand to do a lot more of this if we could just find a trivial few hundred million dollars in savings.

I have brought with me today two medicine bottles that illustrate the shameful situation we must correct. I would ask my colleagues to note that these two bottles are the same. They're the same because they contain the same quantity of the same drug to treat serious stomach ulcers—a drug called Zantac—and because they were both made by the same brand name manufacturer. But one of these bottles was purchased by the Veterans' Administration for $34, while the other was purchased by the Medicaid program for $68. An antiasthma medication made by Schering-Plough that is sold to the Veterans' Administration for $8 while an identical package of the drug commands three times as much—$24—from the fiscally struggling Medicaid Program.

And I could just as easily have brought in bottles of the very popular antihypertensive drug called Dyazide. This is a drug made by an international combine called SmithKline Beecham, which today has no generic competition in the United States because of the recent scandals involving the FDA and the generic drug industry. For 2 years now, the Veterans' Administration has negotiated a price of $50 for a 1,000 capsules, but Medicaid pays about $280 for the same package from the same company.

Mr. President, as talented as the negotiators at the Department of Veterans' Affairs are, they aren't the only people getting access to good prices for prescription drugs. Besides the vast majority of hospitals and HMO's in this country, other industrialized nations of the world are getting much better deals as well.

During the Aging Committee's investigation of drug prices, we found out what citizens of the European Economic Community pay. I asked a respected European consumer organization to compare the price on 25 of the biggest selling brand name drugs in both the United States and in the nations of the EC. They testified in November that Europeans pay two-thirds what Americans pay for the identical products.

What does all this mean? It means that of the financially destitute Medicaid Program pays—almost without exception—the highest prices for prescription drugs, not just in the United States but the highest drug prices in the world. It means that we need to find the toughest, smartest negotiators in the United States and put them to work for the public.

By now it may be obvious that while the drug companies don't want to negotiate drug prices with Medicaid programs, Medicaid isn't the issue. They are deathly afraid that the rest of the American public, those with workplace and retiree health plans, will be able to get the same deals by using the same negotiating strategy. In other words, they are afraid the idea will spread and catch on. Mr. President, I would like my colleagues to think about this for just a moment: when was the last time someone asked us to vote against an idea because it was so good it might catch on?

The manufacturers have the easy side in this debate. All they have to do is throw out so much confusing detail, red herrings, and blind-alley arguments that no Senator or staffer will be able to penetrate to the truth. But there is a simple business reality that they desperately hope we will be unable to communicate. And that is the fact that different drugs are used by doctors and hospitals to treat millions of different people every day who have the same illnesses. The people who are most familiar with that fact—outside of the drug companies of course—use this knowledge to make drug companies bid low prices to get their business.

This is how the Veterans' Administration, the World Health Organization, and hundreds of U.S. hospitals and HMO's make more informed purchasing decisions. The key to their success is organizing a group of doctors and pharmacists to advise them as to which drugs do the same things as other drugs, and can therefore be subjected to competitive bidding. These expert committees are called Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committees, and we need one too. With this vital information, drug products are purchased at tremendous discounts below the manufacturer's published asking price. As witnesses from Europe to the United States told the Aging Committee, this is the way to buy "me-too" drugs.

Mr. President, I do not want to be accused of being a man who knows the price of everything but the value of nothing. And I hope my colleagues can see now that I raise these issues not to embarrass the industry but to lay the groundwork for a fundamental reappraisal of the Government's cost-containment strategy for prescription drugs. We need to know these facts when the drug company lobbyists come around to tell us to save money by cutting back on the pharmacists, the poor and the middle-class employee health benefits plans—but to keep restoring their tax breaks. And when the drug companies say they need to charge an average of 49 percent more for new drugs in order to feed the golden goose of research and development, we need to remember that the FDA finds at least 60 percent of the eggs she lays on the market are more chrome and glitz than gold.

Most importantly, Mr. President, I want my colleagues to understand that I am not opposed to the drug companies' production of me-too drugs. I am opposed to their idea that American citizens must pay high prices for them. After a year of study, I believe that me-too drugs do indeed have value. But the value of me-too drugs lies not in their heavily advertised "New, Improved" labeling but in the price competition that they make possible. This is the key to my legislation.

In the end, when we part the last industry smokescreen, once we understand how the industry really works, we will be faced with a clear choice of policies. It's entirely within our power to use basic marketplace business principles to save American taxpayers and consumers of prescription drugs hundreds of millions of dollars. As any economist will tell you, whether conservative or liberal, there is nothing simple about making competition happen in the health care market. Just as surely as it takes two hands to clap, it takes both a smart seller and a prudent purchaser to make the marketplace hum. We already have very smart sellers—the drug companies have outsmarted us for years. The question is, are we willing to take the action needed to empower knowledgeable negotiators to act on behalf of the public? I repeat, it's our choice.

We can choose to secure for our constituents the benefits of the brains and savvy of all the doctors and pharmacists who work on hospital pharmacy and therapeutics committees. In so doing, we will ensure that employee benefit plans, health insurors and Medicaid programs alike can start negotiating drug prices. On the other hand, we can side with the sellers, the prescription drug manufacturers, and preserve their current pricing prerogatives. But if we do, we will have condemned the public to keep paying higher and higher prices—until few can afford prescription drug products, least of all our Government insurance programs for the sick, the elderly, and the poor. In the present system, we are all at the mercy of the manufacturers.

It is time to change the current situation in a way that is fair to all interested parties. I believe my bill accomplishes this goal. Having said this, I know of no major bill that has been signed into law without changes being made throughout the legislative process. As I have through the development of the legislation to date, I will continue to solicit and incorporate suggestions that strengthen the bill. During the last several months, representatives from the Medicaid advocate community, States, physicians, pharmacists, and insurers have contributed immeasurably to this bill. I look forward to continuing to work with them, as well as any manufacturers who wish to offer constructive suggestions.

Now is the time for us to untie our hands, take off our blinders, and use our knowledge and determination to achieve drug price discounts. I believe the choice is clear. I respectfully request the support of my colleagues in enacting PAPPA, the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990, into law.

Mr. President, I have several unanimous-consent requests.

First, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print the text of the bill in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2605

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This bill may be cited as the "Pharmaceutical Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990."

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) The Congress finds that—

(1) State Medicaid programs are under severe and increasing financial pressure as a result of drug price inflation;

(2) States have been forced to respond with undesirable measures, such as raising the required coinsurance, limiting or reducing reimbursement to pharmacists, and excluding categories of drugs from coverage;

(3) in the long run, these measures are self-defeating because they may reduce access to needed medications by those Americans who rely on the Medicaid program and may impair the ability of pharmacists to provide cognitive services which improve the quality of care for patients; and

(4) the Medicaid program has not fully exploited the potential benefits, in both health and cost control, of a marketplace mechanism for negotiating drug prices and of a drug utilization review program designed to make full use of pharmacists' cognitive services.

(b) The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to provide a mechanism, which States may adopt in their efforts to control the prices of drugs, to stimulate price competition among manufacturers of drugs which are therapeutic alternates;

(2) to encourage States to institute their own drug price control programs in lieu of the multi-State and federal programs available under this Act;

(3) to assure that State drug cost-control initiatives are focused on manufacturers' prices, and that pharmacists and the beneficiaries of Medicaid do not have to absorb the cost of such initiatives;

(4) to confirm that efforts to control drug costs do not adversely affect the access of the poor to necessary drugs;

(5) while controlling the price of drugs, to preserve physicians' prerogatives to prescribe as they deem medically necessary for their patients; and

(6) to enhance the role of pharmacists in providing quality medical care, through a comprehensive drug utilization review program.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act—

(a) AVERAGE MANUFACTURER PRICE.—With respect to a payment calculation period, the "average manufacturer price" for a covered outpatient drug is the average price paid to its manufacturer by retail pharmacies or by wholesalers for drugs distributed to the retail pharmacy class of trade, as determined in a survey pursuant to section 7(a)(2).

(b) COVERED OUTPATIENT DRUG.—Except as provided in paragraphs (4) and (5), the term "covered outpatient drug" means—

(1) a drug which may be dispensed only upon prescription and—

(A) which is approved for safety and effectiveness as a prescription drug under sections 505 or 507 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act or which is approved under section 505(j) of such Act;

(B)(i) which was commercially used or sold in the United States before the date of the enactment of the Drug Amendments of 1962 or which is identical, similar, or related (within the meaning of section 310.6(b)(1) of title 21 of the Code of Federal Regulations) to such a drug, and (ii) which has not been the subject of a final determination by the Secretary that it is a "new drug" (within the meaning of section 201(p) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act) or an action brought by the Secretary under sections 301, 302(a), or 304(a) of such Act to enforce sections 502(f) or 505(a) of such Act; or

(C)(i) which is described in section 107(c)(3) of the Drug Amendments of 1962 and for which the Secretary has determined there is a compelling justification for its medical need, or is identical, similar, or related (within the meaning of section 310.6(b)(1) of title 21 of the Code of Federal Regulations) to such a drug, and (ii) for which the Secretary has not issued a notice of an opportunity for a hearing under section 505(e) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act on a proposed order of the Secretary to withdraw approval of an application for such drug under such section because the Secretary has determined that the drug is less than effective for all conditions of use prescribed, recommended, or suggested in its labeling;

(2) A biological product which—

(A) may only be dispensed upon prescription,

(B) is licensed under section 351 of the Public Health Service Act, and

(C) is produced at an establishment licensed under such section to produce such product; and

(3) insulin certified under section 506 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

(4) The term "covered outpatient drug" does not include any drug, biological product, or insulin provided as, as part of, or as incident to, any of the following (and for which payment may be made under this title):

(A) inpatient hospital services;

(B) hospice services;

(C) dental services, except that drugs for which the State plan authorizes direct reimbursement to the dispensing dentist are covered outpatient drugs;

(D) physician office visits;

(E) outpatient hospital emergency room visits; and

(F) outpatient surgical procedures.

(5) NONPRESCRIPTION DRUGS.—Where a State plan for medical assistance, pursuant to section 1905(a)(12) of the Social Security Act, permits coverage of drugs which may be sold without a prescription (commonly referred to as "over-the-counter" drugs), if they are prescribed by a physician (or other person authorized to prescribe under State law), such a drug may be regarded as a covered outpatient drug for purposes of this Act, provided that it has been determined to be a therapeutic alternate to one or more non-multiple source drugs in the same drug use class.

(c) DRUG USE CLASS.—Means a group of covered outpatient drugs that has the same intended use, as determined by the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee, or by a State under section 8, based upon a nationally recognized system of classification.

(d) MANUFACTURER.—The term "manufacturer" means any person, partnership, corporation, or other institution or entity which is engaged in the production, preparation, propagation, compounding, conversion, or processing of prescription drug products, either directly or indirectly by extraction from substances of natural origin, or independently by means of chemical synthesis, or by a combination of extraction and chemical synthesis, or in the packaging, repackaging, labeling, relabeling, and distribution of prescription drug products. For this purpose, the term "manufacturer" does not include a wholesale distributor of drugs or a retail pharmacy licensed under State law.

(e) MULTIPLE SOURCE DRUG.—(1) For purposes of the reimbursement and coverage policy of each State plan for medical assistance, the term "multiple source drug" means, with respect to a payment calculation period, a covered outpatient drug for which there are 2 or more drug products which—

(A) are rated as therapeutically equivalent (under the Food and Drug Administration's most recent publication of "Approved Drug Products With Therapeutic Equivalence Evaluations"),

(B) except as provided in paragraph (2), are pharmaceutically equivalent and bioequivalent, as defined in paragraph (3) and as determined by the Food and Drug Administration, and

(C) are sold or marketed in the State during the period.

(2) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (1)(B) shall not apply if the Food and Drug Administration changes by regulation (after an opportunity for public comment of 90 days) the requirement that, for purposes of the publication described in subparagraph (1)(A), in order for drug products to be rated as therapeutically equivalent, they must be pharmaceutically equivalent and bioequivalent, as defined in paragraph (3).

(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection:

(A) PHARMACEUTICALLY EQUIVALENT.—Drug products are pharmaceutically equivalent if the products contain identical amounts of the same active drug ingredient in the same dosage form and meet compendial or other applicable standards of strength, quality, purity, and identity.

(B) BIOEQUIVALENT.—Drugs are bioequivalent if they do not present a known or potential bioequivalence problem, or, if they do present such a problem, they are shown to meet an appropriate standard of bioequivalence.

(C) SOLD OR MARKETED.—A drug product is considered to be sold or marketed in a State if it appears in a published national listing of Average Wholesale Prices selected by the Secretary, provided that the listed product is generally available to the public through retail pharmacies in that State.

(f) PAYMENT CALCULATION PERIOD.—The term "payment calculation period" means a calendar month.

(g) PREFERRED DRUG.—A drug shall be designated "preferred" by a prescription drug negotiating group or qualified State entity if, through negotiations with the manufacturer, the drug is available to the group or entity at a price which the group or entity has determined offers superior economic advantages relative to other drugs in the same drug class which are rated as therapeutic alternates. A prescription drug negotiating group or qualified State entity may determine—

(1) that a drug is preferred, based on a negotiated price that offers superior economic advantages, but which need not represent the lowest unit or per dose price, taking into account the total cost of medically necessary concomitant drug and/or other therapy, the length of time for which a price may be guaranteed, the likelihood of new drug approvals which may create opportunities for lower negotiated prices in the drug use class, and such other business factors as the group or entity deems appropriate, and

(2) that more than one drug in a drug use class is a preferred drug, provided that it finds that costs would not be substantially further reduced if only a single drug in the class were determined to be preferred.

(h) PRESCRIPTION DRUG NEGOTIATING GROUP.—A multistate entity jointly established by two or more State agencies for the purpose of negotiating drug prices, on behalf of the members, with the manufacturers of drug products (referred to as a "State prescription drug negotiating group"), or a Federal entity established by the Secretary pursuant to section 5(c) for the same purpose (referred to as a "Federal prescription drug negotiating group").

(i) QUALIFIED STATE ENTITY.—Means an entity formed by a State or States pursuant to section 8 to negotiate the price of covered outpatient drugs with manufacturers on behalf of the State or States.

(j) RESTRICTIVE PRESCRIPTION.—The term "restrictive prescription" means a prescription for a specific brand of a multiple source drug or for a non-preferred drug which the physician or other person prescribing the drug has determined to be medically needed by the individual for whom the prescription is intended, and—

(1) in the case of a written prescription, on which the physician or other person prescribing the drug has written by hand, in addition to his own signature, the words "(brand name) medically necessary," or

(2) in the case of a prescription issued by telephone, the physician or other person prescribing the drug, through oral use of the phrase "(brand name) medically necessary," or substantially equivalent words, states that the specified drug must be dispensed as prescribed and makes a written notation on the patient's medical records using the words "(brand name) medically necessary," and the pharmacist creates and maintains a written record of the prescriber's statement in a form and for the period which is required by State law or regulation for pharmacy records generally and, if applicable, for records of telephone prescriptions in particular.

(k) SECRETARY.—Means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(l) STATE AGENCY.—Means the agency designated under section 1902(a)(5) of the Social Security Act to administer or supervise the administration of the State plan for medical assistance.

(m) SUBSTANTIAL PRICE REDUCTION.—For a drug is achieved when, on a statewide basis, the portion of the State's total outlay for covered outpatient prescription drugs for a calendar year which is attributable to ingredient costs does not exceed the product of 0.85 and the projected outlay for that year based on the State's costs in the calendar year before its adoption of a drug price negotiating program.

(n) THERAPEUTIC ALTERNATE.—Two or more drugs are therapeutic alternates when the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee or a State under section 8 determines, based upon a review of available scientific and clinical data, that they contain different therapeutic moieties but are of the same pharmacological or therapeutic class and can be expected to have a similar therapeutic effect when administered to patients in a therapeutically equivalent dosage.

SEC. 4.—REIMBURSEMENT FOR PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

(a) PRESCRIPTION DRUG REIMBURSEMENT UNDER STATE PLAN FOR MEDICAL ASSISTANCE.—Title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. Section 1396 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REIMBURSEMENT FOR PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

"SEC. 1927. (a) As a condition of approval by the Secretary, each State plan for medical assistance which includes coverage for prescribed drugs, as authorized under section 1905(a)(12) of the Social Security Act, must provide no later than January 1, 1993, as follows:

"(1) PAYMENT AMOUNT.—The amount payable to a pharmacist under this part as reimbursement for a covered outpatient drug dispensed during a payment calculation period to a person entitled to benefits under this title shall be the lesser of

"(A) the actual charge for the drug, or

"(B) the 90th percentile of actual charges for the drug in the State, as determined by a survey of actual charges during the preceding payment calculation period, pursuant to section 7(a), but in either case to be reduced proportionately for each year by an amount necessary to recover, over the course of the year, the total excess reimbursement in the State for the prior year, if any, as computed by the process set forth in section 7(c).

"(b) Where prescribed drug has one or more therapeutic alternates, pharmacists shall be reimbursed under this title only for preferred drugs, except that reimbursement is authorized—

"(1) when the prescribing physician (or other person authorized under State law to prescribe medications) has issued a restrictive prescription for a non-preferred drug, or

"(2) when the prescription for a nonpreferred drug is not restrictive and the pharmacist has been unable, despite diligent efforts, to contact the prescriber or a physician responsible for the patient's care for verification pursuant to subsection (c)(1), but reimbursement in such circumstances may be made for no more than a three day supply of the non-preferred drug, to allow the pharmacist to contact the prescriber or a physician responsible for the patient's care.

"(c) When a physician (or other person authorized under State law to prescribe medications) has prescribed a nonpreferred drug but has not written a restrictive prescription, a pharmacist shall—

"(1) verify with the prescriber (by telephone or by such other means as the Secretary may authorize by regulation) either that a preferred drug in the same drug use class is acceptable for the patient, or that the prescription is intended to be restrictive; and

"(2)(A) maintain a record of the verification for the period required under State law for pharmacy records;

"(B) if authorized by the physician, dispense a drug identified by the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee or qualified State entity as a therapeutic alternate to the prescribed drug; and

"(C) if the preferred drug is dispensed, give written notice to the patient, in wording approved by the Secretary, that the therapeutic interchange has taken place.

"(d) SURVEYS OF ACTUAL CHARGES.—Each State agency shall itself, or through a contractor, conduct a survey to determine, as of any one day in each payment calculation period, the percentile distribution within the State of actual charges by pharmacists (and other persons dispensing prescription drugs) as reflected in claims submitted to the agency for covered outpatient drugs.

"(e) DETERMINATION OF AVERAGE MANUFACTURER PRICE.—Contracts between the State and manufacturers achieved through negotiations under section 5 shall provide that the States shall have a right of access, for each payment calculation period, to the average manufacturer price for preferred drugs. The Secretary may survey wholesalers and manufacturers that directly distribute their products, when necessary to determine the current manufacturer's marketplace prices in the States of State for the same product made available to any nonprofit entity, whether governmental or not, which is acting as a prudent purchaser, through negotiations or otherwise.

"(f) AUDITS BY STATES.—State agencies shall conduct annual audits of a representative sample of pharmacists surveyed under subsection (a). In all States which have State medicaid fraud control units as provided for in section 1903(q) of the Social Security Act, the audit may be performed by that unit. The audit shall compare actual charges for drugs, as determined under subsection (a), with the pharmacists' usual and customary charges during the same period for the same drugs to customers who are not persons entitled to benefits under this title and are not receiving pharmacy services under the terms of a contract. Based on the audit results, the States shall calculate, using statistically valid methods, the projected amount, if any, by which the actual charge statewide for drugs exceeds the audited customary and usual charge for the same drugs, and shall recover that amount as prescribed in section 6(a).

"(g) COMPLIANCE WITH SURVEY AND AUDITS REQUIRED. The Secretary may, as provided in subsection (e), impose a civil monetary penalty on a pharmacist or other person dispensing prescription drugs or on a wholesaler, manufacturer, or direct seller, either on his own initiative or at the request of the State agency, and the State may pursue any civil action authorized under State law, if—

"(1) the pharmacist (or other person dispensing prescription drugs) refuses a request for information about actual charges by a State agency (or a contractor conducting such a survey on behalf of the State agency) or intentionally knowingly provides false information in connection with a survey under subsection (a), or an audit under subsection (c), or

"(2) the wholesaler, manufacturer, or direct seller of a covered outpatient drug refuses a request for information about charges or prices by the Secretary in connection with a survey under subsection (b), or knowingly provides false information.

"(h) CIVIL MONETARY PENALTIES.—Upon the request of a State agency, a prescription drug buying group, a qualified State entity, or a State medicaid fraud control unit, or on his own behalf, the Secretary may impose civil monetary penalties on, or order restitution or repayment by—

"(1) a pharmacist (or other person dispensing prescription drugs), wholesaler, manufacturer, or direct seller of a covered outpatient drug who fails to provide information pertaining to actual charges or average manufacturer price, or knowingly provides false information, of not to exceed $10,000 for each such failure or item of false information; and

"(2) a pharmacy whose actual charge to the State for a covered outpatient drug, as determined by the survey conducted under subsection (a), is found to have been knowingly greater than its usual and customary charge for the same drug, during the same payment calculation period, to persons not entitled to benefits under this title and who are not receiving pharmacy services under terms of a contract, of not to exceed $10,000 for each such drug.

For this purpose, each request by the Secretary, the State agency, or a representative of either, for information about the actual charge or the average manufacturer price for a single covered outpatient drug which is refused shall be treated as a separate refusal, and each false response to a request for information about a single covered outpatient drug shall be treated as a separate instance of providing false information. The provisions of section 1128A (other than subsections (a) and (b)), shall apply to civil monetary penalties under the previous sentence in the same manner as such provisions apply to a penalty or proceeding under section 1128A(a). Civil monetary penalties under this provision shall be in addition to any other penalties that may be prescribed by law, including exclusion, pursuant to section 1128 of the Social Security Act, from participation in programs under title XVIII and title XIX of the Act, or criminal prosecution.

"(i) CONFIDENTIALITY OF CHARGE DATA.—Information gathered pursuant to this section shall not be disclosed publicly by the State agency, its contractor, or the Secretary, except as a research database with the identities of specific firms withheld, or as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out the purposes of this part. This shall not be construed as authority to withhold information from the Congress or the Comptroller General.

"(j) IN GENERAL.—A State, either individually or in cooperation with one or more other States, may, if it meets the conditions in this section, establish and operate its own prescription drug negotiating program. If the Secretary determines, prior to January 1, 1993, that a State—

"(1) is receiving substantial price reductions from the manufacturer on a significant number of non-multiple source drugs, or has received written commitments for such reductions to take effect no later than June 1, 1993;

"(2) if it is using a system involving a limited list of prefered drugs, complies with section 6(b), with respect to ensuring reimbursement when a restrictive prescription has been issued, except that prior authorization programs in effect at enactment may remain in effect;

"(3) if it is using a system involving a limited list of preferred drugs, complies with section 5(b)(1)(B), with respect to assuring access to a full range of therapeutic agents and distributing information about the preferred drug; and

"(4) complies with section 9 (with the exception of subparagraphs (b)(2)(B) and (b)(2)(C), with respect to standards for drug utilization review—

the Secretary shall designate the State prescription drug negotiating program as a qualified State entity.

"(k) USE OF COMPENDIA TO DETERMINE ACCEPTED INDICATIONS.—A State that implements a drug price negotiating program before the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee has made its determinations (as provided in section 4(c)(1)(A)), with respect to accepted indications shall define medically accepted indications as those identified by the compendia listed in section 4(a).

"(l) STATE PHARMACY AND THERAPEUTICS COMMITTEE.—A State that implements a drug price negotiating program involving a limited list of preferred drugs before the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee has determined (as provided in section 49(c)(1)(C)) which covered outpatient drugs are therapeutic alternates shall use the State drug utilization review board established pursuant to section 9 for that purpose, except that a State agency which has a State pharmacy and therapeutics committee on operation on the date of enactment of this act may continue to rely on that committee's determinations, provided that—

"(1) the preexisting State committee reviews the relative safety and efficacy, and comparability, of the drugs in each therapeutic class used by the State within two years of enactment and at least every three years thereafter, and

"(2) a group of individuals with recognized knowledge and expertise, including physicians and persons described in section 4(b)(1) (C), (D), (E), and (F), are retained to advise the Senate committee on these reviews.

"(m) IN GENERAL.—(1) The State plan shall provide for a drug utilization review program which complies with the minimum standards set forth in subsection (b) for prospective review, subsection (c) for retrospective review, and subsection (d) for educational outreach, to be in effect no later than January 1, 1993. The State drug utilization review program shall assess data on drug use against explicit predetermined standards and, as necessary, introduce remedial strategies, in order to improve the quality of care, to conserve program funds or personal expenditures, and to control fraud and benefit abuse. It shall be designed to educate physicians and pharmacists to identify and reduce the frequency of patterns of fraud, abuse, gross overuse, or inappropriate or medically unnecessary care, among physicians, pharmacies, and patients, or associated with specific drugs or groups of drugs, as well as potential and actual severe adverse reactions to drugs, including such reactions due to—

"(A) interaction of two or more drugs being taken concurrently;

"(B) concurrent use of two or more drugs from within the same drug use class;

"(C) excessive or subtheraputic daily dose;

"(D) allergies to drugs;

"(E) interaction of prescribed drugs with drugs available without a prescription (commonly referred to as "over-the-counter" drugs);

"(F) incorrect drug dosage or duration of drug treatment; and

"(G) interaction between a drug and an existing disease State.

"(2) The Secretary, under the procedures established in section 1903 of the Social Security Act, shall pay to each State an amount equal to 75 per centum of so much of the sums expended by the State plan during calendar years 1991 through 1993 as the Secretary determines is attributable to the statewide adoption of a drug utilization review program which conforms to the requirements of this section.

"(3) States which operate mechanized drug claims processing and information retrieval systems approved by the Secretary, as provided in section 1903(r) of the Social Security Act, and which submit the claims data to the Secretary for analysis as provided in subsection (e), shall not be required to perform retrospective drug utilization reviews.

"(4) States shall not be required to perform additional drug uitilization reviews with respect to drugs dispensed to residents of nursing facilities which are in compliance with the drug regimen review procedures prescribed by the Secretary for such facilities in regulations implementing section 1919 of the Social Security Act, currently at section 483.60 of title 42, Code of Federal Regulations.

"(h) STANDARDS FOR PROSPECTIVE DRUG UTILIZATION REVIEW.—

"(1) The State plan shall provide for a review of drug therapy before the prescription is filled or delivered to the patient, typically at the point-of-sale or point of distribution. Each State shall use the compendia referred to in section 4(a) and on peer-reviewed medical literature as its source of standards for safe and effective prescribing and dispensing of each covered outpatient drug.

"(2) As part of the State's prospective drug utilization review program, applicable State law shall establish standards for patient counseling by pharmacists no less stringent than the following:

"(A) A reasonable effort must be made by the pharmacist to counsel the patient or caregiver face-to-face whenever practicable, and otherwise to do so by telephone;

"(B) The pharmacist must offer to discuss with each patient or caregiver who presents a prescription all matters which in the exercise of his professional judgment he deems significant, to include but not limited to, the following:

"(i) name and description of the medication;

"(ii) route, dosage, administration, and continuity of drug therapy;

"(iii) special directions for use by the patient as deemed necessary by the pharmacist; and

"(iv) common severe adverse effects or interactions that may be encountered, and the action required if they occur; and

"(C) A reasonable effort must be made by the pharmacist to obtain, record, and maintain at least the following patient information:

"(i) patient name, address, telephone number, date of birth (or age), and gender;

"(ii) patient history where significant, including disease state(s), known allergies and drug reactions, and a current list of medications and relevant devices; and

"(iii) pharmacist comments.

"(o) STANDARDS FOR RETROSPECTIVE DRUG UTILIZATION REVIEW.—The State plan shall provide for a review which searches for patterns of fraud, abuse, gross overuse, or inappropriate or medically unnecessary care, among physicians, pharmacies, and patients, or associated with specific drugs or groups of drugs. For this purpose the program shall—

"(1) periodically examine claims data and other records; and

"(2) provide for educational interventions for prescribers or dispensers of prescription drugs, and for patients, and evaluate the success of the interventions and make modifications as necessary.

"(p) EDUCATIONAL OUTREACH AND INTERVENTION.—(1) The State plan shall provide for an active and ongoing educational outreach program, conducted by the State drug utilization review board, established pursuant to subsection (f). The board will assure the ready availability to physicians and pharmacists for information concerning which covered outpatient drugs are—

"(A) judged by the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee to be—

"(i) accepted for given therapeutic indications, and

"(ii) therapeutic alternates, and

"(B) designated as preferred drugs in the State.

"(2) The State drug utilization review board shall, either directly or through contracts with utilization and quality control peer review organizations, as defined in section 1152 of the Social Security Act, or with local medical societies, conduct ongoing educational programs for physicians and pharmacists, targeted toward problems or individuals identified in the course of the prospective and retrospective drug utilization reviews performed under this section.

"(q) ROLE OF THE SECRETARY AND THE STATE BOARD IN DRUG UTILIZATION REVIEW.—The Secretary shall use the information on individual prescription claims which is available in the mechanized claims processing and information retrieval system provided for in section 1903(r) of the Social Security Act in order to perform retrospective drug utilization reviews, as provided for in subsection (c), except that information which comes to the Secretary's attention through a State's mechanized claims processing and information retrieval system and which suggests a pattern of inappropriate or medically unnecessary prescribing or dispensing of covered outpatient drugs shall be referred to the drug utilization review board of the concerned State, which shall use the information as the basis for targeting educational outreach and intervention under subsection (d). This authority of the State board is not to be construed to limit any existing authority of the Secretary or the State to respond to problems identified in the course of the prospective drug utilization reviews performed under this section.

"(r) STATE DRUG UTILIZATION REVIEW BOARD.—As a condition of approval by the Secretary, each State plan which includes coverage for prescribed drugs, as authorized under section 1905(a)(12) of the Social Security Act, shall provide for the establishment of a drug utilization review board. The chairman of the board and a majority of the membership shall be practicing physicians. The remaining membership shall include clinical pharmacologists and pharmacists. All members shall have recognized knowledge and expertise in one or more of the following: the appropriate prescribing and dispensing of covered outpatient drugs; drug prescribing and dispensing; drug utilization review; and medical quality assurance.

"(s) STANDARD CLAIM FORMS.—The Secretary, in consultation with representatives of pharmacists and other interested individuals, shall develop a standard claim form and a standard electronic claim format (for use by States with such an electronic system), to be used in requests for payment for covered outpatient drugs under this title. The Secretary shall distribute sample copies of the standard claim form to pharmacies and other interested parties by not later than April 1, 1992, and shall distribute sample copies of the electronic claim format to pharmacies and other interested parties not later than October 1, 1991.

"(t) STANDARD REPORTING FORMS.—The Secretary shall develop, in consultation with State agencies and other interested parties, a standard reporting format to be used by States in reporting expenditures, results of drug utilization review activities, and other information concerning activities under this Act deemed necessary by the Secretary. The Secretary shall distribute a draft of the reporting format to State agencies for comment not later than October 1, 1991, and shall promulgate the final version, and provide copies to the States, not later than April 1, 1992.

"(u) ENHANCED FUNDING FOR STATE ADOPTION OF STANDARD CLAIMS AND REPORTING FORMS.—The Secretary, under the procedures established in section 1903 of the Social Security Act, shall pay to each State which adopts the standard forms developed under this section an amount equal to 75 per centum of so much of the sums expended by the State plan during calendar years 1991 and 1992 as the Secretary determines is attributable to the statewide adoption of, and conversion to the use of, such forms.

"(v) CONSOLIDATED FEDERAL DRUG PRICE NEGOTIATING ENTITY.—The Secretary shall evaluate the potential for uniting drug price negotiations carried out by the Departments of Defense and Veterans Affairs with negotiations by the Federal prescription drug negotiating group established pursuant to section 3(c), and report the results to the Congress no later than one year after enactment of this Act.

"(w) EVALUATION OF DRUG PRICE NEGOTIATING PROGRAMS.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall evaluate the States' programs under this law, and report to the Committee on Finance and the Special Committee on Aging of the Senate, and the Committee on Energy and Commerce and the Select Committee on Aging of the House of Representatives, no later than January 1, 1994—

"(1) an assessment of the States' effectiveness in securing favorable prices for prescription drugs found to have therapeutic alternates and in implementing a program of Drug Utilization Review; and

"(2) recommendations regarding changes in statutory and regulatory provisions that may improve the effectiveness of programs under this law.

"(x) STUDY OF ELECTRONIC POINT OF SALE CLAIM PROCESSING AND DRUG UTILIZATION REVIEW.—(1) The Secretary shall provide for the establishment in each of at least 10 states by January 1, 1992, of statewide demonstrations of point-of-service electronic claim management and prospective drug utilization review systems, involving participating pharmacists (and other participating persons authorized under State law to dispense prescription drugs), for the purpose of evaluating the efficiency and cost-effectiveness of these systems in performing eligibility verifications, claims data capture and adjudication of claims, and in assisting pharmacists (and other participating persons authorized under applicable State law) in applying for payment, receiving reimbursement, and fulfilling patient counselling obligations.

"(2) The Secretary shall also provide that each of the 10 statewide demonstrations utilize the most efficient and cost-effective available telecommunications network to establish a central electronic repository for capturing, storing, and updating electronic claim management and prospective drug utilization review data as described in section 7(b), and to permit participating pharmacists (and other participating persons authorized under State law to dispense prescription drugs) to access and retrieve these data from the central electronic repository.

"(3) The Secretary shall report to the Congress on the findings of each of the demonstrations no later than January 1, 1994.

"(y) STUDY OF COST-EFFECTIVENESS OF REIMBURSEMENT FOR PHARMACISTS' COGNITIVE SERVICES.—

"(1) The Secretary shall conduct a demonstration project to evaluate the impact on quality of care and cost-effectiveness of paying pharmacists, whether or not a drug is dispensed, for drug utilization review services. For this purpose, the Secretary shall provide for no fewer than five demonstration sites and the participation of a significant number of pharmacists.

"(2) The Secretary shall report to Congress the results of the demonstrations no later than January 1, 1995.

"(z) The Secretary shall enter into negotiations with the manufacturer of any drug, now or hereafter marketed, with respect to which the manufacturer seeks to require, as a condition of sale, that the purchaser pay for associated services, such as a patient monitoring system, to be provided only by the manufacturer or its designee. The Secretary shall also determine whether the Secretary of Veterans Affairs wishes to participate in the negotiations or to have the Secretary negotiate on his behalf also. The object of the negotiations is to reach agreement that nursing homes, federally funded hospitals, and appropriate selected outpatient pharmacies, will be authorized to purchase each such drug without the charge for the associated services and, in lieu of the manufacturer's requirement, to provide those services at their own expense.

"(aa) If the negotiations provided for in subsection (a) fail to achieve an agreement within 6 months of enactment for drugs now marketed, and for new drugs within 6 months of the manufacturer's establishment of the pricing structure which is the subject of the negotiations, the Secretary, as authorized by section 1498 of title 28, United States Code, shall enter into a contract for production of the drug for the use of the entities on behalf of which the negotiations were undertaken. The manufacturer or manufacturers to which this contract is awarded shall be authorized to apply for approval of the drug under the abbreviated new drug application procedure established by section 505 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.".

SEC. 5. ESTABLISHMENT AND FUNCTIONS OF NATIONAL PHARMACY AND THERAPEUTICS COMMITTEE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF A NATIONAL PHARMACY AND THERAPEUTICS COMMITTEE.—IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall contact with a non-governmental entity to establish a National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee, to begin operation within one year of enactment of this Act. The Secretary shall solicit individual or joint proposals for establishment of the Committee from, among others, the organizations responsible for promulgating the following compendia of drug information:

(1) American Hospital Formulary Service Drug Information;

(2) American Medical Association Drug Evaluations; and

(3) United States Pharmacopeia Dispensing Information.

(b) COMPOSITION OF NATIONAL PHARMACY AND THERAPEUTICS COMMITTEE.—

(1) Members of the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee shall comprise medical and scientific professionals with recognized knowledge of appropriate utilization of prescription and non-prescription drug therapies, and of the relative safety and efficacy of covered drug products. In addition to physicians, who shall form a majority of its membership, the Committee shall have at least one member from each of the following categories of health care professionals:

(A) dentists;

(B) nurses;

(C) pharmacists;

(D) individuals with special knowledge or expertise in geriatric problems associated with drug therapies;

(E) individuals with special knowledge or expertise in obstetric problems associated with drug therapies;

(F) individuals with special knowledge or expertise in pediatric problems associated with drug therapies;

(G) individuals with special knowledge or expertise in psychiatric or neurological problems associated with drug therapies;

(H) individuals with special knowledge or expertise in clinical pharmacology;

(I) individuals with special knowledge or expertise in pharmacoepidemiology;

(J) individuals with special knowledge or expertise in comparative clinical trials of drugs, including statisticians and biopharmaceutic specialists; and

(K) other categories of health care professionals that the Secretary or the Committee determines should be represented.

(2) Employees of manufacturers shall not be eligible for membership on the Committee or its advisory panels. Members of the Committee or its advisory panels who are receiving income from, hold an ownership interest (including stock holdings) in, or benefit directly or indirectly from grants of more than $25,000 from, manufacturers shall disclose these interests to the Committee.

(3) The Committee shall organize, and solicit advice and comments from, advisory panels, including a panel dedicated to problems and perceptions of consumers and including consumer advocates in its membership. The chairman of each advisory panel shall be one of the members of the Committee.

(c) FUNCTIONS OF THE COMMITTEE.—(1)—IN GENERAL.—The National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee shall continuously review and evaluate existing and newly available scientific and medical information pertaining to the relative safety and efficacy, and the comparability, of covered outpatient drugs approved for marketing in the United States. In its deliberations, the Committee shall take into consideration, for each drug, mechanisms of action, therapeutic indication, and such other differences among the drugs as the method by which they are matabolized, dosage ranges, known side effects, allergies, toxicities (frequency and type, prevention, risks and benefits), and other special precautions (contraindications and drug-to-drug interactions). Based upon the results of its review and evaluation, the Committee shall—

(A) using a nationally recognized drug use classification system, group each covered outpatient drug into one or more drug use classes, based upon its medically accepted indications;

(B) for each indication, determine whether there are one or more drugs that, for reasons of superior safety and efficacy, should be considered first whenever a patient presents the indication; and

(C) identify indications for which two or more covered outpatient drugs are therapeutic alternates and list these drugs in groups of therapeutic alternates within each drug use class.

(2) The Committee shall report to the Secretary its initial determinations pursuant to subparagraphs (1)(A) through (1)(C), no later than 24 months after enactment of this legislation, and report all changes and updates, based on the most recent data, at monthly intervals thereafter.

(d) LIMITATION OF COMMITTEE'S AUTHORITY.—The Committee shall not engage in drug price negotiations, nor define acceptable costs for any product.

(e) LIMITATION ON LIABILITY.—

No member of the National Pharmaceutical and Therapeutics Committee or of its advisory panels who has exercised due care shall be civilly liable to any person under any law of the United States or of any State or political subdivision thereof on account of any action taken by him in the performance of the functions required or authorized under this section. Section 1157(d) of the Social Security Act, which authorizes the Secretary to provide reimbursement for legal expenses, shall apply to members of the Committee and its advisory panels to the same extent as it applies to members of utilization and quality control peer review organizations.

(f) ROLE OF THE SECRETARY.—

(1) Within 30 days of receiving written notice of a determination by the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee, the Secretary shall cause the determination to be published for public comment, for not less than 60 days. The Committee shall make appropriate revisions upon consideration of the comments and then transmit a final version to the Secretary, who shall distribute copies to each State agency, and to organizations in each State representing physicians, pharmacists, and persons entitled to benefits under this title.

(2) The Secretary shall make no changes to the substance of any determination made by the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee but may comment during the public comment period, and may request reconsideration by the Committee of any determination.

(g) APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such funds as are necessary to implement this section.

SEC. 5. PRESCRIPTION DRUG NEGOTIATING GROUPS.

(a) STATE PARTICIPATION IN PRESCRIPTION DRUG NEGOTIATING GROUP.—The State agency in each State whose plan includes coverage for prescribed drugs and which has not been determined by the Secretary, by December 31, 1992, to have established a qualified State entity, shall participate, no later than June 30, 1993, in a State or Federal prescription drug negotiating group.

(b) NEGOTIATIONS.—(1) With respect to each drug use class in which two or more covered outpatient drugs are therapeutic alternates as determined by the National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee, or by the State pursuant to section 8, each State prescription drug negotiating group or qualified State entity shall—

(A) negotiate on behalf of the State agency or agencies with the manufacturer of each drug for a price for one or more preferred drugs in each group of therapeutic alternates that offers superior economic advantages compared to other drugs in the group, with any price differential to be paid to the State plan in the form of rebates from the manufacturer for purchases of preferred drugs, as provided in subsection (d), except that—

(i) negotiations shall not be required where it has been determined that because of the low volume or low cost of a particular drug, negotiation would not be economically feasible, and

(ii) a multiple source drug may be included in drug price negotiations pursuant to this section only if the drug has been determined to be a therapeutic alternate to one or more non-multiple source drugs in the same drug use class; and

(B) based on the outcome of these negotiations, identify at least one preferred drug in each group of therapeutic alternates, and circulate to the participating State agency or agencies, the Secretary, and State-level organizations representing physicians, pharmacists, and persons entitled to benefits under this Title, a list of such preferred drugs and the negotiated prices for those drugs, as well as the terms and conditions, if any, under which those prices are available.

(2) A qualified State entity or a State prescription drug price negotiating group may enter into an agreement with any organization or federal agency which conducts drug price negotiations with manufacturers, pursuant to which the organization or agency will conduct, on behalf of the entity or group, the negotiations provided for under paragraph (1). Federal agencies are authorized to enter into agreements to negotiate on behalf of State entities or prescription drug price negotiating groups on a reimbursable basis.

(c) FEDERAL PRESCRIPTION DRUG NEGOTIATING GROUP.—IN GENERAL.—Within one year after enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall establish a Federal prescription drug negotiating group which shall be bound by all requirements governing the formation and operation of negotiating groups or qualified State entities under subsections (b), (d), and (e). State agencies which, by December 31, 1992, are not participating in State prescription drug negotiating groups and have not been determined by the Secretary to have established qualified State entities, shall enter into agreements with the federal prescription drug negotiating group by June 30, 1993.

(d) REBATES FROM MANUFACTURERS.—(1) The negotiated agreement with the manufacturer of each preferred drug shall provide that the manufacturer will pay a rebate to the State agency, in an amount calculated as provided in paragraph (2), no later than thirty days after the State agency gives the manufacturer written notice of the amount.

(2) The rebate shall be equal to the product of—

(A) the documented number of tablets or other dosage form units of each preferred drug which has been dispensed to persons entitled to receive benefits under this title, and

(B) the difference between the negotiated price per tablet or per unit and the average manufacturer price per tablet or per unit.

(e) DISSOLUTION OR TERMINATION OF STATE PRESCRIPTION DRUG NEGOTIATING GROUPS AND QUALIFIED STATE ENTITIES.—(1) Members of a State prescription drug negotiating group may voluntarily leave the group, and a State prescription drug negotiating group or qualified State entity may be dissolved or terminated voluntarily by the members or the State respectively, provided that the members who leave or dissolve a group, or the State which established the qualified State entity, continue to meet the requirements of subsection (a).

(2) The Secretary shall have the authority to dissolve a State prescription drug negotiating group or revoke his designation of a qualified State entity under section 6, based upon a finding that the group or entity has failed, based on published criteria, to achieve significant economic advantages in its negotiations with manufacturers. The Secretary shall adopt such criteria to be used in evaluating the effectiveness of a prescription drug buying group or qualified State entity, but not before publishing them as a proposal and allowing at least ninety days for comments. Two or more of the States participating in a prescription drug negotiating group, or the State which established a qualified State entity, shall have a right to appeal from the Secretary's finding and order of dissolution or revocation under the procedures established by section 1869(c) of the Social Security Act.

(3) A State which, as the result of revocation by the Secretary under this section, or of voluntary dissolution, is no longer a member of a prescription drug negotiating group, or no longer operates a qualified State entity, shall establish participation in a prescription drug negotiating group, provided that the State shall continue to honor any existing contractual drug price agreements still in effect with manufacturers, until the date of termination of each such agreement.

(f) OVERSIGHT OF PRESCRIPTION DRUG NEGOTIATING GROUPS.—REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall report to the Congress, by January 1, 1995, the findings of a review and evaluation of the drug price negotiating performance of prescription drug negotiating groups and qualified State entities. The report shall include a determination of whether each prescription drug negotiating group (or individual State) has succeeded in achieving significant economic advantages, together with recommendations for how these programs may be improved with respect to expenditures and access to medically necessary drugs by persons entitled to benefit under this title.

Mr. President, I further ask unanimous consent that a summary of the provisions of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY OF PROVISIONS FOR SENATOR DAVID PRYOR'S PHARMACEUTICALS ACCESS AND PRUDENT PURCHASING ACT OF 1990 (PAPPA), APRIL 13, 1990

The Problem. State Medicaid programs are under tremendous financial pressure as a result of drug price inflation. During the 1980s, prescription drug price increases tripled the general inflation rate. As a result, by 1988, Medicaid paid $3.3 billion for prescription drugs, making it the third highest category of Medicaid spending—ahead of physician payments. Price inflation—not increased use by the poor—accounts for virtually all of the increased spending.

As costs of Medicaid prescription drug programs have increased at faster rates than almost any other State-covered service, States have been forced to react with short-term solutions that, at best, forestall immediate budget crises and, at worst, weaken the program by reducing access to needed medications. Examples incude raising coinsurance paid by recipeints for each prescription, limiting (or actually reducing) reimbursement to pharmacists for their services, and excluding whole therapeutic categories of drugs from Medicaid coverage. Such desperate actions, which can actually increase spending by compromising the health of the poorest Americans who rely on Medicaid, represent the current direction of U.S. public health policy in response to rising drug prices.

Objectives of Senator Pryor's Legislation. The PAPPA is designed to: (1) focus cost-saving efforts on the cause of increased program outlays—manufacturer's escalating drug prices—rather than on the retail pharmacist and the poor, who cannot control drug prices; (2) create an opportunity for States to establish money-saving Medicaid drug price negotiating programs of their own design; (3) preserve successful marketplace mechanisms for enhancing drug price competition, by building on time-honored business practices already in widespread use in the market (by the VA, hospitals, and managed care providers); (4) restore and enhance access to medically necessary pharmaceuticals for the poor who rely on Medicaid; and (5) preserve the physician's prerogative to prescribe medically necessary medications for individuals in their care.

THE PROPOSAL

Grandfather Period. The immediate objective of the PAPPA is to encourage States, either individually or in groups, to begin to negotiate drug price reductions with drug manufacturers by January 1, 1993. During this window of opportunity, States would have great flexibility to work with manufacturers to achieve lower drug prices.

State options include (but are not limited to) programs in which (1) a State asks manufacturers to charge Medicaid no more than the lowest price charged to hospitals or other entities serving the indigent in the State; or (2) a State may join with several other States to negotiate lower prices by establishing a list of drugs preferred for their cost-effectiveness over other drugs, as thousands of U.S. hospitals, physician outpatient clinics, HMOs and both the U.S. Veterans Affairs and Defense Departments now do. States establishing preferred drug lists would be bound by rules to protect each individual's access to medically necessary drugs.

Pharmacy Reimbursement and Rebates. To protect against short-sighted reimbursement cutbacks to pharmacists, the PAPPA provides that each State must pay pharmacies a market-based price (actual charges limited by the 90th percentile of charges). This reimbursement method makes it possible for today's highly-trained pharmacists to spend time with customers, so they can use their skills to identify costly and life-threatening adverse drug reactions, and seek the advice of a physician familiar with the patient's total care needs.

States would secure savings from drug price negotiations by periodically obtaining rebates from manufacturers of preferred drugs (a practice already used by buying groups today). The rebate would be calculated as the difference between the negotiated price and the Average Manufacturer's Price (AMP) for the drug, as determined by periodic surveys of the nation's wholesalers.

Access Guarantees/Physician Control of Prescribing. Any FDA approved drug product will be covered for Medicaid reimbursement, even if it is not a "preferred" drug, if the patient's physician simply handwrites on the prescription "[drug name] medically necessary". States must cover at least one drug in each group of drugs determined to be equally safe and effective therapeutic alternatives. In addition, all medically accepted uses of FDA approved prescription drugs are covered for reimbursement.

Telephone Verification of Prescriptions for Non-preferred Drugs. The following rule applies to all States that may employ a preferred drug list as a way to motivate drug manufacturers to negotiate competitive prices. Should a physician prescribe a non-preferred drug when a preferred drug is rated as safe and effective alternative, without writing on the prescription that the non-preferred drug is medically necessary, the pharmacist would call the prescriber and request a telephone order authorizing the preferred drug. At that time, the prescribing physician may either issue a telephone order for the preferred drug, or issue a restrictive prescription that states the non-preferred drug is medically necessary. This mechanism ensures that a patient's physician has absolute control over the drug dispensed when an individual patient's special needs make this important.

These conversations, when they occur, provide a valuable opportunity for interaction between the physician and pharmacist that may result in improved care, as well as reduced direct outlays for non-preferred drugs.

Drug Safety and Quality Assurance. States would be required to set up drug safety programs to save lives and prevent unnecessary and costly hospitalizations caused by adverse drug reactions and interactions.

Preliminary Savings/Cost Estimate. Special Committee on Aging staff have estimated that this program will achieve net savings of from $100 to $200 million/year. For illustrative purposes, California has independently estimated that drug price negotiations will save its Medicaid program $40 million/year, and New York believes a 10% across-the-board negotiated price reduction could save as much as $30 million/year.

NATIONAL DRUG PRICE NEGOTIATING SYSTEM—AFTER JANUARY 1, 1993

Any State that has successfully implemented a drug price negotiation program of some kind prior to January 1, 1993, may continue to operate that program. For example, if a State had persuaded manufacturers to charge the Medicaid program no more than the price charged to non-profit hospitals serving the indigent, this program could remain in effect.

However, after January 1, 1993, States that have not already acheived significantly reduced drug prices (through one means or another) would join with other States in one of several prescription drug buying groups, or join a Federal buying group set up by the DHHS Secretary (probably the Health Care Financing Administration).

Drugs Subject to Competitive Price Bidding. A "National Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee" (NPTC), modeled on the best practices of the pharmacy and therapeutics committees already in place at virtually every U.S. hospital, would determine which drug products are safe and effective alternatives for the same therapeutic purpose and can therefore be put up for competitive price bidding. Drugs that are not therapeutically equivalent could not be made to compete with each other on the basis of price.

The DHHS Secretary would invite key national organizations, recognized for their work in evaluating relative safety and efficacy of prescription drugs, to submit a joint proposal to operate the NPTC. These organizations include the American Medical Association, United States Pharmacopeial Convention, and the American Hospital Formulary Service. This non-governmental committee of clinical experts would have a purely scientific role in assessing the relative safety and efficacy of different drug therapies. The NPTC would become a beacon of objective information to help physicians make optimal use of prescription drugs. The NPTC would not negotiate prices nor determine which drugs are "preferred"—this is the States' job.

State Price Negotiations with Manufacturers. Once the NPTC determines which drugs are equally safe and effective, price negotiations begin. Buying groups would seek price bids from each manufacturer of drugs listed by the National P&T Committee as being equally safe and effective. Each State or buying group would list as a "preferred" drug the product(s) of manufacturer(s) which had offered the "best" price.

The lowest bid may not turn out to be the "best" price. The PAPPA provides that designation of a "best" price must take into account a variety of cost factors, such as the cost of other drugs that must be taken with a given drug, the value of sustained-release formulations for some populations, and business considerations.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a brief explanation of what this legislation does and does not do be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PRESCRIPTION DRUG PRICE FACT SHEET

PRESCRIPTION DRUG PRICE INFLATION AND ITS IMPACT

From 1980–87, 97% of increased spending on prescription drugs was directly the result of price increases. During this period, only 3% of the increase in spending on prescription drugs was due to increase use of drugs by the public.

Prescription drug prices more than tripled the general inflation rate in the last decade. From 1981 through 1988, prescription drug prices rose by 88% while general price inflation rose only 28%.

Skyrocketing drug price increases have contributed to public and private insurers hesitancy to provide insurance coverage to cover these costs.

The Congress repealed the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act, and the outpatient prescription drug program, largely because of the fear of out-of-control costs. (Note: drug costs represent the highest out-of-pocket cost for three of four older Americans, and over 15 percent of the elderly report they cannot afford the medications they need.)

The fact that over 60% of the elderly do not have private prescription drug insurance protection suggests that private insurers have been unable to offer insurance to cover the increasing cost of medications.

The price of a brand name drug product in a European country is, on average, one-third less than the U.S. price.

IMPACT OF DRUG PRICE INCREASES ON MEDICAID

By 1988, Medicaid paid $3.3 billion for prescription drugs, more than for physician payments, making it the third highest category of Medicaid spending.

As costs of Medicaid prescription drug programs have increased at faster rates than almost any other covered item or service, only limited cost cutting success has been achieved, almost entirely at the expense of those least responsible for cost increases—beneficiaries (through increased cost-sharing and restrictions on benefits) and pharmacists (through caps on reimbursement.)

In another response to skyrocketing costs, at least 22 states have implemented drug formularies (limited lists of preferred drug products). Medicaid formularies have been generally ineffective as cost control measures largely because they are rarely used to negotiate better prices with drug manufacturers.

Many states have made their formularies more restrictive but without adequate medical and scientific analysis. An unacceptable outcome has been that many poor people cannot get needed drugs through their state Medicaid programs. Since they also cannot afford drugs out-of-pocket, these restrictions can deny access to appropriate therapy and result in more expensive hospitalizations.

HCFA has put increasing pressure on State Medicaid agencies to decrease drug product reimbursement to pharmacists. These pressures could force pharmacists to drop out of the Medicaid program, creating further access problems for beneficiaries—particularly in rural areas.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

In 1988, the average new drug was priced 50% higher than the drug product(s) it was marketed to replace. There is substantial evidence, however, that most of these products of industry research and development add little or nothing in terms of therapeutic advantages over already-marketed drug therapies.

U.S. pharmaceutical manufacturers contend that they need high profits to fund research and development efforts. In the past, Congress has agreed, providing billions of dollars in tax breaks to the pharmaceutical industry and additional billions in excessively high prices through Medicaid, the health insurance program for the poorest Americans. However, the great majority of this taxpayer-subsidized research is producing high-priced therapeutically equivalent "me-too" drug products with little or no potential for therapeutic gain over existing therapies.

For example, 60% of the new molecular entities brought to market by the 25 largest U.S. drug manufacturers between 1981 and 1988 were evaluated by the Federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as "C"-rated, having "little or no" potential for therapeutic gain over existing drug therapies. FDA's finding of widespread therapeutic duplication is independently affirmed by thousands of hospital and HMO formulary committees across the United States.

In the period 1980–87, U.S. drug companies spent at least $15 billion on research and development of new drugs with little or no therapeutic advantage over existing drug therapies, the so-called "me-too" drugs.

According to industry insiders, only about 20–30% of the typical brand name drug manufacturer's research and development budget is spent on discovering new, innovative, breakthrough chemical entities. Another 25–30% is spent on further development of currently-marketed drug products (for example, developing new dosage forms or new uses for existing products). About 50% is spent on R&D for new "me-too" products.

BUSINESS PRACTICES IN THE UNITED STATES PRESCRIPTION DRUG MARKET

There are two domestic markets in the U.S. for most big-selling prescription drugs: a price-competitive market, characterized by deep discounts off the published list price (benefitting the Department of Veterans' Affairs, hospitals, and managed care plans, such as HMOs), and a high-priced market where retail customers, Medicare, and Medicaid purchase their prescription drugs.

In the high-priced, non-competitive market, once the patent on a brand name drug product expires and generic drug competition is introduced, the price of the brand name product does not fall; it generally increases and remains high. In contrast, however, in the price-sensitive market, buyers have succeeded in getting brand name drugs at generic drug prices.

Similarly, in the high-priced market, when a new patented therapeutically interchangeable drug (not a generic) comes onto the market, it is priced at an amount equal to or greater than its patented brand name competitor(s), whether or not it represents a significant therapeutic advance. Yet, in the price sensitive market, buyers have forced manufacturers of therapeutically interchangeable drugs to compete for market share by offering price discounts of 40% or more.

INNOVATIVE COST CONTROL STRATEGIES FOR HIGH DRUG PRICES

Hospital and managed care initiatives

Physicians and pharmacists in over 90% of the Nation's hospitals and at least 42% of U.S. health maintenance organizations (HMOs) have independently concluded that many prescription drugs are therapeutically interchangeable when used to treat patients suffering from the same ailment.

Using this information, hospitals and HMOs have employed limited lists of preferred drugs (formularies) and group purchasing to successfully negotiate prices with drug manufacturers that have yielded discounts in excess of 40% off the published wholesale prices.

In effect, the Medicaid program is indirectly benefitting from this negotiating process since hospitals have already implemented these sound business negotiating approaches. State Medicaid recipients, pharmacists, and other providers would further benefit from a similar negotiating process for Medicaid's outpatient prescription drug program.

Initiatives of the Department of Veterans' Affairs (DVA)

The Department of Veterans' Affairs (DVA) negotiates with manufacturers and obtains valuable discounts on drug products without centralized purchasing and distribution of these drug products.

DVA achieves an average discount of 41% off the manufacturer's published "Average Wholesale Price" (AWP) for single source drugs and an average of over 60% off the AWP for multiple source drugs. In contrast, Medicaid programs, in almost all cases, pay top-dollar (or at best, AWP minus 10%) for drug products.

DVA obtains these substantial discounts by negotiating low prices from the brand drug manufacturers, aided by the use of a preferred drug list.

DRUG MANUFACTURERS' RESPONSE TO THE MEDICAID COST CRISIS

Despite the fact that Medicaid purchases over 10% of the prescription drugs in the U.S., and ignoring Medicaid's critical public mission to serve the indigent, drug manufacturers have almost without exception refused to directly negotiate better prices with the States. In fact, drug manufacturers have waged an all-out national campaign to undermine and frustrate State efforts to negotiate lower prices for therapeutically duplicative drugs.

In late April 1990, following Federal and State threats of legislative intervention, Merck, Sharp and Dohme proposed to give States their lowest price for MSD drugs if the State would agree to list all of the firm's drugs on the state formulary (if it had one). This is significant because Merck has broken away from the rest of the drug manufacturing industry and, in doing so, has acknowledged the unacceptability of the financial crisis facing state Medicaid programs.

Merck's proposal, however, is likely to have little effect on the remainder of the industry. Because other drug companies offer much greater discounts than Merck, it is extremely unlikely that many companies will (voluntarily) follow suit. Pressure from the Congress, in the form of price negotiation legislation, offers the surest prospect of industry-wide price reductions.

OBJECTIVES OF THE PHARMACEUTICAL PRODUCT ACCESS AND PRUDENT PURCHASING ACT OF 1990 (PAPPA)

(1) Focus cost-saving efforts on the cause of increased program outlays—manufacturer's escalating drug prices—rather than on the retail pharmacist and the poor, who cannot control drug prices;

(2) Create an opportunity for States to establish money-saving Medicaid drug price negotiating programs of their own design. (Aging Committee staff estimate that such a program could save between $100-$200 million annually on a nationwide basis);

(3) Preserve successful marketplace mechanisms for enhancing drug price competition, by building on time-honored business practices already in widespread use in the market (by the VA, hospitals, and managed care providers);

(4) Restore and enhance access to medically necessary pharmaceuticals for the poor who rely on Medicaid;

(5) Preserve the physician's prerogative to prescribe medically necessary medications for individuals in their care; and

(6) Provide incentives for more manufacturers to offer discounts on drug products to State Medicaid programs.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a question and answer document on the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE PRESCRIPTION PHARMACEUTICALS ACCESS AND PRUDENT PURCHASING ACT OF 1990 (PAPPA)

WHAT PAPPA DOES AND DOES NOT DO

(Proposed by Senator David Pryor, Chairman, Special Committee on Aging)

The following fact sheet describes the objective of PAPPA, and is intended to clear up some common misconceptions about the bill's purpose and impact.

WHY IS THIS INITIATIVE NECESSARY?

Manufacturer drug prices have increased three times the rate of general inflation over the past decade. This phenomenon has resulted in draconian cost-cutting measures in the state Medicaid prescription drug programs—measures targeted primarily at patients and pharmacists instead of those responsible for price increases—the drug manufacturers. This initiative will help frustrated State Medicaid programs get manufacturers to do their part in containing the burgeoning cost of Medicaid drug programs.

WHAT ARE THE MAJOR OBJECTIVES OF THIS INITIATIVE?

a. Focus cost-savings efforts on the cause of increased program outlays—manufacturers' escalating drug prices—rather than on the poor and the pharmacists, neither of whom have any control over drug prices.

b. Provide strong incentives for States to establish money-saving Medicaid drug price negotiating programs of their own design.

c. Preserve successful marketplace mechanisms for enhancing drug price competition, by building on time-honored business practices already in widespread use in the market (by the Department of Veterans' Affairs, hospitals, and managed care providers).

d. Restore and enhance access to medically necessary pharmaceuticals for the poor who rely on Medicaid.

e. Preserve the physician's prerogative to prescribe medically necessary medications for individuals in their care.

f. Provide incentives for more manufacturers to voluntarily offer discounts on drug products to state Medicaid programs.

HOW MUCH MONEY WILL THIS BILL SAVE FOR THE MEDICAID PROGRAM?

Although a CBO estimate of cost savings is not yet available, it is realistic to expect savings of approximately $100-200 million dollars annually for the Medicaid program.

COULD STATES NEGOTIATE WITH DRUG COMPANIES WITHOUT USING A FORMULARY UNDER PAPPA?

Yes. In fact, the bill is designed to encourage States to move quickly to develop any kind of drug price savings plan they want, if it achieves significant savings on a substantial proportion of their drug purchases. Only if States refuse to do this—or if manufacturers continue to boycott negotiations with the States—will the buying groups and other features of the legislation take effect.

I'VE HEARD THIS BILL WILL SEVERELY HAMPER THE DRUG INDUSTRY'S RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT (R&D) EFFORTS. DOES IT?

No. This initiative will enhance initiatives for firms to invest in breakthrough drugs and products offering incremental advances. After PAPPA is enacted, however, the federal government will no longer simply pay a manufacturer's asking price for a duplicative product. Here's why PAPPA will help, not hurt, pharmaceutical R&D:

Though PAPPA's savings would be a big help to the financially strapped Medicaid drug budgets, it won't cost the industry enough to affect R&D adversely. A recent analysis of PAPPA by a respected Wall Street investment analysis firm said that the impact of the bill on drug company revenues "is not only manageable, it is trivial!" The analysis further said that even if PAPPA shaved $250 million dollars in savings from Medicaid drug purchases, that "represents about 0.75% of the total U.S. drug industry's sales".

The drug industry has continued to expand its R&D program while negotiating deep discounts on drug products with the Departments of Defense and Veterans' Affairs, as well as thousands of U.S. hospitals and HMOs. Sen. Pryor is confident the industry can accommodate the desperate need of Medicaid budgets for savings while continuing its important research and development.

The pharmaceutical industry currently invests about half of its research dollars in discovering compounds that offer little or no therapeutic advantage over existing drugs, because they cost less than truly innovative products to bring to market but can command high prices. Enactment of PAPPA provides the greatest opportunity for return on investment when companies introduce to the market truly innovative drug therapies that make a significant contribution to medicine.

WILL THIS BILL PERMIT INDEPENDENT THERAPEUTIC SUBSTITUTION OF DRUG PRODUCTS BY PHARMACISTS?

No. In a State with a Medicaid drug formulary, PAPPA will not authorize a pharmacist to substitute one therapeutically equivalent drug product for another. If a physician prescribes a less cost-effective drug, and fails to indicate on the prescription that it is medically necessary for this patient, the pharmacist will call and obtain permission from the physician to dispense the "preferred drug" for that patient. This mechanism insures that a patient's physician has absolute control over the drug dispensed when the patient's special needs makes this important.

WHAT IS THE CONCEPT OF THERAPEUTIC EQUIVALENCE? AREN'T ALL DRUG PRODUCTS DIFFERENT?

There are essentially two types of drug product equivalents: Pharmaceutical equivalents are drug products that contain the same amount of the same active ingredient in the same dosage form. These products are usually referred to as generic drug versions of the brand name drug. Pharmaceutical equivalents are expected to produce the exact same therapeutic effect in patients. Therapeutic equivalents are drug products which contain different active ingredients, but are expected to produce very similar therapeutic effects in patients (for example, two tranquilizers, or two diuretics—agents that remove fluids from the body, commonly used to treat hypertension). Therapeutic equivalents are chemically structurally different products, however, they may not be as different as drug company marketing (or lobbying) materials would suggest. Drug companies often make minor and inconsequential modifications on the basic structure of molecules to develop a "new chemical entity" so that the companies can compete for a share of a very lucrative therapeutic market, such as the tranquilizer market.

The concept of therapeutic equivalence is not new; it has been used by hospitals and HMOs for years to limit the number of drug products available within a particular institution, resulting in substantial improvements in patient care and (particularly where companies are asked to submit price bids to get listed on the formulary) financial benefits.

WON'T THIS BILL CREATE A SYSTEM OF SECOND-CLASS MEDICINE FOR MEDICAID BENEFICIARIES?

No. The unfortunate truth is that we already have begun dismantling the Medicaid program to the extent that drug benefits have deteriorated in some States to "second class" status. The reason for this is not PAPPA, but excessive and continual price inflation by drug manufacturers. In contrast, and to redress this situation, PAPPA ensures that at least one drug from every therapeutic class will be covered in a State that opts to have a formulary, unlike the current situation, and also provides that a patient's physician may override formulary restrictions for medical reasons.

WON'T THIS BILL ESTABLISH A NATIONAL RESTRICTIVE FORMULARY OF DRUG PRODUCTS COVERED BY MEDICAID?

No. This bill does not require individual States to establish formularies, much less mandate a national drug formulary. It does, however, establish a National Pharmacy and Therapeutics (P&T) Committee, composed of experts in drug therapeutics, who would use the best, most up-to-date scientific and clinical information available to determine which drugs are therapeutically equivalent for most people with certain medical conditions. States would then use the determinations of this Committee to negotiate with drug manufacturers for better drug prices.

A DRUG MANUFACTURER RECENTLY OFFERED DISCOUNTED PRICES TO MEDICAID. IS THERE STILL A NEED FOR THE PAPPA INITIATIVE?

Yes. One of the nation's largest research-intensive drug companies recently decided to offer discounted prices on its drug products to state Medicaid programs. We see this as an encouraging sign and an admissison by the drug companies that they can survive and prosper without having to charge state Medicaid programs high prices.

However, there is no indication that other drug companies will follow suit, nor is it guaranteed that these discounted prices will remain in effect after one or two years. We need to insure that good prices are continuously available to the nation's poor through the state Medicaid programs.

For more information about PAPPA, or if you have any questions, please contact:

U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging, SD G31, 224-5364.

Christopher Jennings, Deputy Staff Director; John Coster, PhD, Professional Staff Member.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article in the Washington Post by Spencer Rich, dated Thursday, May 10, 1990, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, May 10, 1990]

SENATOR SEEKS TO STEM RISE IN MEDICAID DRUG COSTS

(By Spencer Rich)

Last year, a typical veterans hospital paid $113 for 100 capsules of Feldene, a prescription drug used to treat arthritis. The same drugs cost Medicaid, the federal health program for the poor, considerably more: $162, counting a druggist's markup.

For Tenormin, a chest-pain drug, there was the same discrepancy: $39 versus $59, according to a study by the Senate Committee on Aging.

The main reason for the difference is simple: The Department of Veterans Affairs buys in bulk and decides which drug to use after sophisticated comparison shopping among companies that produce drugs with similar medical effects.

Many health care experts would like to adapt the same consumer mentality to Medicaid in an effort to reduce the program's skyrocketing costs. Last year outpatient drugs alone from the program cost $3.5. billion.

Using the same approach as the Department of Veterans Affairs could save Medicaid between $200 million and $400 million a year, according to staff members for Sen. David Pryor (D-Ark.), who plans to introduce a bill today to do that.

Under Pryor's proposal, Medicaid would determine when several different drugs are "therapeutically equivalent" for treatment of a given condition. Each state Medicaid program then would ask drug manufacturers to submit a bid, and the low-bidder's drug would be used almost exclusively in the state's program. At the end of every month, state Medicaid officals would calculate how much of the drug had been used by Medicaid patients and the manufacturer would reimburse the program with the amount of the discount.

The Bush administration has not taken a position on the bill. But the Pryor plan is strongly opposed by the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, which sees it as an opening wedge to cut prices everywhere.

"If these misguided policies were adopted at the federal level in Medicaid, you'd see a lot of attempts to move those policies into the private sector," said PMA president Gerald Mossinghoff.

Mossinghoff said any comparison between the prices a druggest pays and those paid by either veterans or private hospitals is misleading. The Department of Veterans Affairs buys "in large quantities and you just ship it" to a few major centers, while hospitals get discounts "to get the residents and interns to become familiar with the drug and get them used to using it."

But Mossinghoff said "the fundamental flaw" of the bill is the assumption that major classes of drugs are "therapeutically interchangeable," when the drugs involved are chemically different and have different properties and side effects for different people.

The Pryor bill aims to compel price competition. It does not affect cases where no competition is possible because there is only a single brand available for a given illness (for example, AZT for AIDS), and no cheap generic copies.

Nor does it affect a case where there may be a brand-name drug and one or more cheap generic clones that are basically chemically identical. Price competition already exists in that case.

It is designed for situations where there are several different drugs, produced by different manufacturers, that are chemically different but intended to treat the same condition, and no less expensive generic duplicates generally available. Drugs of this type now account for $500 million to $1 billion of Medicaid's drug outlays, according to Pryor's staff.

Tagamet, Pepcid and Zantac, for example, are chemically different but used for ulcers. At present many state Medicaid programs have open listings that enable each physician to prescribe any one he chooses at any price.

A system similar to the one proposed by Pryor is being used by many large hospitals such as Johns Hopkins, Brigham and Women's of Boston, and Medical College of Virginia. They make their own equivalency determinations and then buy the low-cost drugs.

Under the Pryor bill, a state that can get substantial discounts by other methods, as many are seeking, need not put the drugs up for bids. If a prescription specifies a costlier non-preferred drug but the doctor did not write in "medically necessary," the druggist cannot substitute the preferred drug but must check first with the physician.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter dated May 8, 1990, from the National Council of Senior Citizens in support of the legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF SENIOR CITIZENS,
Washington, DC, May 8, 1990.

Hon. DAVID PRYOR,
Chairman, Special Committee on Aging, U.S. Senate, G-31 Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you very much for introducing the Pharmaceutical Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990 (PAPPA). The National Council of Senior Citizens (NCSC), representing over five million older Americans, is very supportive of this legislation which will help guarantee access to proper pharmaceutical therapy to Medicaid recipients.

Over three and a half million seniors are receiving prescription drug coverage through the Medicaid program. With many states providing some form of restricted formularies, myriad seniors are being denied therapeutic medications their physicians would normally prescribe. Unable to pay for these drugs themselves, they have no recourse but to rely upon the medications provided under the state formulary which may not be the therapeutic equivalent. Your legislation would put a stop to that, while holding Medicaid costs of prescription drugs down.

It seems lately that all too many people are blaming the patient for increased health care costs. Quite frankly, NCSC finds this trend rather disturbing. Various organizations and individuals seem to feel that, by increasing copayments and deductibles, health care costs can be kept down. But from 1980-1987, 97 percent of increased spending on prescription drugs was directly the result of manufacturer price increases. Only three percent of the increased spending was due to an increased use of drugs by the public. PAPPA places the burden where the blame should lay: on the pharmaceutical manufacturers, not on the local pharmacist nor the consumer.

Unfortunately, due to the rapid increase in the costs of prescription drugs (which more than tripled the general inflation rate in the past decade), over 60 percent of the elderly do not have private insurance to cover medication. Insurers are increasingly hesitant about providing coverage for a product whose prices continue to go through the roof. By providing states who purchase over ten percent of all drugs through the Medicaid program with the ability to negotiate the lowest possible prices for therapeutic medications, your legislation will help keep prescription drug prices down for everyone—especially the elderly who use a disproportionate share of prescribed medication.

NCSC is also pleased that PAPPA would:

1. Preserve the physicians' prerogative to prescribe medically necessary medications for individuals in their care;

2. Provide incentives for more manufacturers to offer discounts on drug products to state Medicaid programs;

3. Create an opportunity for states to establish money-saving Medicaid drug price negotiating programs of their own design; and

4. Ensure that drugs which are not therapeutically equivalent cannot compete with each other on the basis of price.

Again, thank you for providing the leadership necessary on such an important piece of legislation. I am looking forward to working very closely with you on this.

Sincerely,

LAWRENCE T. SMEDLEY,
Executive Director.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter from Families USA, Families United for Senior Action, dated May 9, 1990, be printed in the RECORD in support of this legislation.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FAMILIES UNITED FOR SENIOR ACTION,
May 9, 1990.

Hon. DAVID PRYOR,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR PRYOR. As executive director of Families USA, I am pleased to offer our wholehearted support for the Pharmaceutical Product Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990. This legislation will help ensure that Medicaid dollars are spent wisely and that access to needed health care remains the first priority in Medicaid spending—not drug manufacturing profits.

Pharmaceutical price increases have consistently run at rates far in excess of increases for all other health care costs. At the same time, industry profits have been astronomical as well. Your legislation will arm state Medicaid programs against these price increases, giving them for the first time the collective purchasing power necessary to bargain for the lowest price on the best drugs.

While every provider should receive fair and adequate payments for products and services rendered under the Medicaid program, no provider or company should reap excessive profits while the poor go without basic care. Your bill will free-up scarce Medicaid dollars, better directing them toward care and access for low income populations.

Again, our sincere support for your legislation in this area and our thanks for your continuing leadership on issues of importance to the elderly poor in America. We look forward to working with you on this issue and others.

Sincerely,

RONALD F. POLLACK,
Executive Director.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter dated May 9, 1990, from the American Association of Retired Persons supporting this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AARP,
Washington, DC, May 9, 1990.

Hon. David Pryor,
Chairman, Special Committee on Aging,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN PRYOR: The American Association of Retired Persons commends your leadership in the introduction of the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990. This legislation would have the important effect of lowering the cost of prescription drugs to the Medicaid program and improving Medicaid patients' access to needed medications.

Over the last decade (1980-89) prescription drug prices rose 128 percent, with an average annual increase of 9.5 percent. During the same period, the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for all items rose just over 50 percent, or 5.6 percent annually, on average. This ten-year increase in prescription drug prices (128 percent) is even more striking in that it has also exceeded the 99 percent increase in the medical care component of the CPI over the same period.

The effect of these increases on consumers has been to make precription drugs a burdensome and, in some cases, unaffordable form of medical treatment. Low-income persons and older Americans—those most likely to be Medicaid beneficiaries—are particularly vulnerable to rising prescription drug costs, both because they tend to be sicker and because they often live on fixed incomes. A recent survey by AARP found that the cost of prescription drugs was the second most important reason why older Americans do not get their prescriptions filled.

Contributing to the sharp and frequent price increases for prescription durgs is the appearance on the market of high-priced new drugs, the therapeutic effects of which are not significantly different from existing, lower-priced medications. These new drugs, however, can command a high price and, in turn, drive up the prices of older drugs. The Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act (PAPPA) cold help curtail the use of costly new drugs which add little to the quality of medical care by reducing the amount Medicaid spends on these drugs when their therapeutic equivalents can be purchased for much less. Put simply your bill would make it possible for the Medicaid program to take advantage of the substantially lower prices now paid by hospitals, HMOs and the Veterans Administration.

At the same time that this legislation reduces Medicaid costs for prescription drugs, it also takes several precautions to ensure that Medicaid recipients will receive quality medical care. In this regard, the PAPPA would require that decisions about whether different medications are therapeutically equivalent be made by experts in the field of pharmacology. It would also protect the ability of physicians to prescribe the medications they believe will be most effective. These provisions will be important components of any final legislation.

AARP applauds the introduction of the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act. We welcome the opportunity to work with you to ensure that this legislation protects—even improves—the quality of care Medicaid beneficiaries receive, and at the same time ensures that low-income Americans have access to the prescription medications they need.

Sincerely,

HORACE B. DEETS.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter dated May 10, only today, from the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LEADERSHIP COUNCIL OF AGING ORGANIZATIONS,
Washington, DC, May 10, 1990.

Hon. DAVID PRYOR,
Chairman, Special Committee on Aging,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN PRYOR: On behalf of the undersigned members of the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations, I want to express our strong support for your introduction of the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990. Your proposed legislation would help constrain the growth of Medicaid spending for prescription drugs and at the same time improve Medicaid recipients' access to the prescription drugs they need. Your proposal offers great promise by encouraging states to employ money-saving practices already used widely by hospitals, HMO's and the Veterans Administration, such as negotiating with manufacturers for lower prices.

Prescription drugs are one of the most important medical care treatments available today, but their increasing cost is a growing barrier to quality medical care. In 1988 Medicaid paid $3.3 billion for prescription drugs. This was the third highest category of Medicaid spending, after nursing home costs and inpatient hospital care. Between 1975 and 1986 Medicaid payments for prescribed drugs grew from $815 million to $2.7 billion—230 percent, but the number of Medicaid recipients using prescription drug coverage rose by only 4 percent.

Faced with this growing financial pressure, some state Medicaid programs—which pay for a portion of the prescription drugs used by Medicaid-eligible individuals—have responded by imposing a coinsurance requirement on Medicaid recipients, limiting the number or dollar amount of drugs covered, or excluding from Medicaid payment whole therapeutic classes of drugs. The effect of the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act on these states would be to lower Medicaid expenses for prescription drugs, thereby making it possible for them to completely remove or lessen these requirements.

At the same time that the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act takes steps to reduce prescription drug costs, it includes several important mechanisms to protect Medicaid recipients' quality of care that will be important components of any final legislation. Significantly, it would protect physicians' ability to prescribe the medications their patients need and Medicaid payment for these prescriptions. It would also draw upon experts in the field to determine which drugs are therapeutically equivalent.

The rising cost of health care is one of the greatest barriers to access to health care. The Leadership Council of Aging Organizations congratulates you for your leadership in introducing the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act, and is pleased to support the steps it proposes to ensure that low-income Americans have access to the prescription drugs they need.

Sincerely,

HORACE B. DEETS.

The following organizations have signed-on to this letter in support of the Pharmaceuticals Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990:

American Association of Homes for the Aging.
American Association of Retired Person.
Catholic Golden Age.
Families USA.
National Association for Families Caring for their Elders, Inc.
National Association of Area Agencies on Aging.
National Association of Nutrition and Aging Services Programs.
National Association of Retired Federal Employees.
National Association of State Units on Aging.
National Council of Senior Citizens.
National Hispanic Council on Aging.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, if I might add, the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations consists of the following: The American Association of Homes for the Aging; the American Association of Retired Persons; Catholic Golden Age; Families USA; National Association for Families Caring for Their Elders, Inc.; National Association of Area Agencies on Aging; National Association of Nutrition and Aging Services Program; National Association of Retired Federal Employees; National Association of State Units on Aging; National Council of Senior Citizens; and the National Hispanic Council of Aging.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter in support of this legislation representing the local independent retail pharmacists, NARD, the National Association of Retail Druggists, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RETAIL DRUGGISTS,
Alexandria, VA, May 9, 1990.

Hon. DAVID PRYOR,
Chairman, Senate Special Committee on Aging, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN PRYOR: The Pharmaceutical Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990 (PAPPA) addresses long standing priority concerns of the National Association of Retail Druggists.

The PAPPA will provide the $3.3 billion Medicaid outpatient drug program equal access to manufacturer prices already available to other Medicaid components and nonprofit entities generally; including hospitals, HMO's, and mail order firms. By enabling the state Medicaid programs to access the current nonprofit manufacturer prices the program burden of cost containment will be shifted from the beneficiaries and will improve beneficiaries access to pharmaceuticals and pharmacy services which may have been reduced or eliminated by misguided cost containment approaches.

The PAPPA marketplace pricing reimbursement will encourage providers to continue to participate in the state Medicaid programs so that sufficient pharmacy providers are accessible for Medicaid beneficiaries. Such specifications of the terms of reimbursement by law will prevent future misguided attempts to reduce the Medicaid cost for prescription drugs, by cutting pharmacy reimbursement which has virtually no effect on overall Medicaid prescription drug expenditures.

We support efforts to ensure equal access to equitable prescription drug prices for all American consumers.

The PAPPA is landmark legislation. It will help assure equal access for the poorest among us while also relieving the extraordinary fiscal pressures on the Medicaid outpatient drug program.

The enactment of PAPPA is our number one legislative priority. The NARD Executive Committee has unanimously endorsed PAPPA.

We look forward to working closely with you and the many health care and consumer groups supporting your objectives.

On behalf of the 40,000 independent retail pharmacies that we represent and the 75,000 pharmacists practicing in these independent settings, we pledge to leave no stone unturned in assisting you, Majority Leader Mitchell and your cosponsors in the enactment of this long overdue bipartisan legislation.

With warm regards,

CHARLES M. WEST, P.D.,
Executive Vice President.
JOHN M. RECTOR, ESQ.,
Vice President of Government Affairs and General Counsel.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter, dated May 10, 1990, from the National Association of Chain Drug Stores in support of this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CHAIN DRUG STORES,
May 10, 1990.

Hon. DAVID PRYOR,
Chairman, Senate Special Committee on Aging, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR PRYOR: NACDS commends your efforts to examine and understand all aspects of the pharmaceutical industry and marketplace including research, manufacturing, pharmacy practice, and retailing. Your legislative proposal "Prescription Pharmaceutical Access and Prudent Purchasing Act of 1990 (PAPPA)" reflects the thoughtfulness and thoroughness of these efforts.

NACDS is very enthusiastic about and supportive of your legislative proposal. The proposal reflects a blend of vision and practical day-to-day marketplace reality.

We are particularly pleased with your acknowledgement that market pricing should be the basis of Medicaid reimbursement of prescription drugs. Your recognition of pharmacy's role in health care delivery is timely. Finally, bringing brand name drug manufacturers into the cost containment equation is an important step forward.

We would also like to acknowledge the unprecedented time and cooperation afforded us by Chris Jennings, David Schulke, John Coster and your other staff in working through the legislative proposal.

As you will understand, final endorsement of the legislation introduced today is subject to review by our policy committees and Board of Directors. This will occur in the very near future.

Sincerely,

RONALD L. ZIEGLER,
President and Chief Executive Officer.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a supportive letter from the American Pharmaceutical Association, dated May 9, 1990, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN PHARMACEUTICAL ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, May 9, 1990.

Hon. DAVID PRYOR,
Chairman, Senate Special Committee on Aging, Dirksen Senate Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The American Pharmaceutical Association (APhA), the national professional society of pharmacists, commends you on your comprehensive research into prescription drug pricing. Your study of prescription drug pricing practices provides a solid basis for meaningful legislation relating to the Medicaid program. We are pleased that you gave us an opportunity to work with your staff in the development of an appropriate legislative package. Many positions that APhA has strongly advocated are now included in the legislative proposal you are about to introduce.

By calling for marketplace pricing for pharmacists, the legislation takes into account the intense competition that exists in pharmacy. This competition helps to provide cost-effective pharmacy services while maintaining reasonable access by patients to necessary care. As you have learned, pharmacists are not responsible for the significant increases in prescription drug prices which have occurred in recent years. You have also found that pharmacists have too often been asked to accept reductions in reimbursement from Medicaid to make up for state program shortfalls caused by manufacturers' price increases. The situation has become intolerable for many pharmacies across the country. We concur that penalizing pharmacists for manufacturers' price increases is unfair to pharmacists and their patients.

In addition, your draft legislation calls for demonstration studies into supporting cognitive services of pharmacists. This provision has very encouraging prospects for patient care. Pharmacists provide many essential professional services that do not always relate to the actual dispensing of a prescription drug product. We believe the proposed study will demonstrate that reimbursing pharmacists for drug utilization review (DUR) services would be both cost-effective and beneficial to the health care needs of the patient.

Your proposed legislation also calls for use of therapeutic interchange of various drug products under a validation arrangement in which pharmacists and authorized prescribers interrelate on behalf of the care of their patients. The APhA House of Delegates adopted policy in support of this concept of therapeutic interchange in 1987.

We look forward to reviewing the specific legislative language contained in your legislation when it is introduced. While APhA Board of Trustees has not yet adopted an official position on your proposes legislation, we anticipate that it will be brought before our board shortly.

Again, we commend you for your leadership in this area. At a time when Medicaid has been buffetted by insufficient funds and increased costs, your proposed bill offers relief for the indigent in their pressing needs for access to vital pharmaceutical services.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM M. HERMELIN,
Director of Government Affairs.

By Mr. BURNS (for himself and Mr. BAUCUS):

S. 2606. A bill for the relief of Conwell F. Robinson and Gerald R. Robinson; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

PRIVATE RELIEF BILL

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill which will put to rest an issue that has remained unresolved for two decades. The Robinson brothers, who are in their seventies and live in Great Falls, MT, previously owned a 130-acre tract of property in Glacier National Park in northwestern Montana. However, their property was taken from them in a condemnation proceeding by the U.S. Government in 1967. The Robinson brothers lived on their property in the summers throughout most of their lives until 1984, at which time the Government refused them further use of their property. This property was homesteaded by their maternal grandparents prior to the creation of Glacier National Park. It has been the established policy of the National Park Service to grant life estates to private owners of property who sell their land to the Government and who request use of their property for the rest of their lives. That policy was not followed in the case of the Robinson brothers.

A similar bill was introduced by my predecessor in the last Congress and was unanimously passed by the committee and the full Senate on a voice vote. My predecessor, John Melcher, tried to resolve the issue and I believe he should be commended for his efforts. Unfortunately, the House failed to act on his bill but I am here to see that the resolution to this problem is carried out.

One area of dispute with Senator Melcher's earlier bill was its associated fee. After meeting with National Park Service officials, it was decided that the fairest manner to solve this problem was to set a value for the interest to be transferred by this bill. Accordingly, my bill includes a new value based on the following study which I ask unanimous consent to be included in the RECORD at this point:

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

C. ROBERT WHITE, MAI,
APPRAISER—CONSULTANT,
Helena, MT, February 14, 1990.

Re. Conwell and Gerald Robinson, Glacier Park Cabin Site.

R. STEVEN BROWNING
Browning, Kaleczyc, Berry and Hoven, PC
28 N. Last Chance Gulch
Helena, MT,

DEAR MR. BROWNING: This is in response to your request for consultation regarding the above captioned real estate.

A reiteration of the facts as I understand them, is as follows. Murray C. Lind, real estate appraiser, from butte, made an appraisal of subject 130 acre tract as of September 8, 1967, wherein he estimated Market Value at $124,500. The Park Service subsequently rejected this appraisal. The Park Service appraised the property in 1967 at $64,500 and subsequently increased that figure to $71,500. The Governments right of eminent domain was exercised and the Park service took ownership of the property on May 27, 1969. Compensation paid was $83,500 which broken down amounts to $9,450 for building improvements and $74,050 for land. The Robinson brothers received $30,500 for there ownership share in the property. The Park Service issued a special use permit on July 1, 1969 for five years with a five year renewal to the Robinson's. This 10 year period was exercised and another five year permit was issued which expired on July 14, 1984. At that point the Park Service would no longer issue a special use permit and the Robinsons were forced to leave the property.

In 1988, while under Park Service ownership, a guest cabin, water tower and laundry/shower room burned and were completely destroyed.

The Robinson brothers are proposing to purchase a life estate from the Park service due to alleged improprieties involved in the 1969 taking. The real estate involved is a 3.01 acre tract on which the remaining buildings are located. due to the alleged improprieties in 1969, the value of the property and subsequent cost of the life estate is proposed to be based on the actual condemnation award in 1969 prorated down to the 3.01 land size and to the remaining improvements.

Compensation paid for the improvements, according to Conwell Robinson was $9,450. Murray Lind's 1967 appraisal of the improvements was $9,125. Compensation paid then was 104 percent of his appraised figure. Mr. Lind's values for the burned buildings is shown as follows:

Two room guest cabin	$1,550
Water tower & tank	700
Laundry/shower room	340
Total	2,590

$2,590 × price paid adjustment of 1.04 = $2,694.

Thus, price of the burned buildings was approximately $2,694 and since they no longer exist should be subtracted from the $9,450 price paid for all building improvements. That leaves the price of the remaining building improvements at $6,756.

The price paid for the land of $74,050 divided by 130 acres = $569.62 per acre. This amount times 3.01 acres = $1,715.

Total consideration based on the price paid for the property to be held under the life estate is then $6,756 plus $1,715 or a total amount of $8,471.

Life estates are based on actuarial tables establishing the approximate length of time the estate will be held. Gerald Robinson is the youngest of the two brothers and was born August 28, 1919. The younger brother would have the longer life expectancy and the life estate should be based on his current age of 70 years. The following actuarial data was obtained from Mr. Joe Biehl, an agent for the Principal Financial Mutual Life Insurance Company. Tables used are the "Commissioners Standard Ordinary" or CSO. According to the 1980 CSO, which I understand is the most recent, Gerald Robinson, age 70, has a life expectancy of 11.11 years. That assumes he is a non-smoker. If he smokes life expectancy is reduced to 9.25 years.

Geralds life expectancy in 1969, according to the 1958 CSO, was 23.23 years whether a smoker or not.

A telephone conversation with Mr. Charles Swanlund, Chief Appraiser for The National Park Service in Lakewood, Colorado confirmed the following formula. A one time fee of 1 percent of the purchase price per year of life expectancy is the cost of a life estate. The usual procedure is illustrated as follows. The Park Service purchases an inholding for say $100,000 and the life expectancy of the youngest owner is say 25 years. 1% of $100,000=$1,000 times 25 years=$25,000. The Park Service would then issue a check for the difference between the purchase price and fee for the life estate, in this example $75,000.

Thus, assuming the right to purchase a life estate is restored to the Robinson brothers and the above policy formula is followed, the calculation would be as follows:

$8,471×.01=$84.71×11.11 years=$941.13
Cost of the life estate $941.13

Various other scenarios could come into play such as the Park Service, 1) not allowing a deduction for the burned buildings, 2) requiring the life estate to be based on 1969 life expectancy, etc. However, the above figures and formula should make possible a recalculation in most any event.

It is acknowledged that the above figures may or may not have any correlation with present market value. The consideration here appears to be more of a legal nature, except for the above proration, than of a valuation nature. Thus, the numbers set forth above are in no way to be construed as being Market Value as of February, 1990.

Sincerely,

C. ROBERT WHITE, MAI.

CERTIFICATION

I certify that, to the best of my knowledge and belief:

1. The statements of fact contained in this report are true and correct.

2. The reported analyses, opinions and conclusions are limited only by the reported assumptions and limiting conditions and/or those found in the appraisal/consultation contract, and are my personal, professional analyses, opinions, and conclusions.

3. I have no present or prospective interest in the property that is the subject of this report.

4. My compensation is not contingent on an action or event resulting from the analyses, opinions, or conclusions in, or the use of, this report.

5. My analyses, opinions and conclusions were developed, and this report has been prepared, in conformity with the Code of Professional Ethics and the Standards of Professional Practice of The American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers.

6. The use of this report is subject to the requirements of The American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers relating to review by its duly authorized representatives.

7. As of the date of this report, I, C. Robert White, have completed the requirements under the continuing education program of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers.

8. I have not made a personal inspection of the property that is the subject of this report.

9. No one provided significant professional assistance to the person signing this report.

C. ROBERT WHITE, MAI.

FEBRUARY 14, 1990.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I could present extensive additional material in support of this legislation. However, much of the documentation for this claim was supplied to the Energy Committee in the last Congress and is available in committee print (No. 88-921, Senate hearing 100-764). To sum up the record, let me put it this way: the Robinson brothers are asking only that they be treated as others have been treated. Specifically, my bill would allow the Robinson brothers to use, during their lifetime, a small portion of land homesteaded by their grandparents, an interest similar to that which the Government had issued to the Robinson brothers from 1969 through the summer of 1984. My bill does not transfer any ownership rights to the Robinson brothers beyond allowing them the use of the property described in this bill.

I realize that in-holder land ownership issues can be complex and burdensome for the Park Service. I do not wish to add to the Park Services' administrative burdens, nor do I seek to establish a precedent that will jeopardize the Government's legal position in subsequent controversies over private property claims within the boundaries of Glacier National Park. The intent and, I believe, the effect of my bill is simple: to allow two senior citizens the right to use their family homestead until their death.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague from Montana, Senator BAUCUS, be added as an original cosponsor. I would further ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2606

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. RIGHT OF USE AND OCCUPANCY OF A CERTAIN LAND TRACT IN GLACIER NATIONAL PARK.

(a) RIGHT OF USE AND OCCUPANCY.—The Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") shall grant Conwell F. Robinson and Gerald R. Robinson a right of use and occupancy for the property described in subsection (c) for a term ending on the date of the death of Conwell F. Robinson or Gerald R. Robinson, whichever is later.

(b) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The right granted pursuant to subsection (a)—

(1) shall be for the reasonable use of the property;

(2) shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe (including termination) to insure that such right does not unreasonably diminish the scenic, historic, and other values for which Glacier National Park was established; and

(3) shall vest upon payment of an administrative fee of $941.13.

(c) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The property described in this subsection is a parcel of land containing approximately 3 acres, in Government Lot 7, Section 9, Township 35 North, Range 21 West, and more particularly described in the United States Department of the Interior Special Use Permit numbers 2-117-59, 2-117-110, and SP1430-9-0068.

By Mr. CRANSTON (for himself, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. KERRY, and Mr. SANFORD):

S. 2607. A bill to amend the International Claims Settlement Act of 1949 to provide for the payment of claims of nationals of the United States against Vietnam; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

VIETNAM WAR CLAIMS

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce, together with the distinguished ranking member of the Subcommittee on East Asian and Pacific Affairs, Senator MURKOWSKI, Senator KERRY of Massachusetts, and Senator SANFORD, legislation to provide compensation for American citizens and businesses whose property was confiscated more than 15 years ago in Vietnam.

I believe that now is the time to resolve the plight of those Americans who remained in Vietnam, many of them at the urging of our Government, long after prudence would have dictated that they leave and who in 1975 lost millions of dollars of property as a result. Before it is appropriate to permit or encourage U.S. businesses to invest in Vietnam again, we must first make good on our obligation to those Americans who have been certified by the U.S. Government as entitled to compensation for their losses. This legislation accomplishes that goal, and does so at no cost to the U.S. taxpayer.

In 1980, at the direction of Congress, the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission, an agency of the Justice Department, began the process of adjudicating more than 500 claims submitted to it from American citizens and businesses. After 6 years of reviewing each claim carefully, the Commission determined that 192 claims were valid, and further certified the amounts that were due each claimant. The claims themselves, therefore, are not in question. The only problem with the FCSC process is that it provides no funds to satisfy the awards. Fortunately, there is a solution available, together with the necessary funds to complete the compensation process which Congress began in 1980. Experts on international claims law have assured the Congress that there is legal justification and historical precedent for the solution provided in the legislation.

At the time of the fall of the South Vietnamese Government, the United States Treasury Department ordered that South Vietnamese Government assets in this country be blocked. Those assets were primarily in the form of central bank funds on deposit in U.S. banks, and they continue to be blocked today. The total value of these funds, including the interest they have earned, is more than sufficient to compensate fully the claimants as well as to cover the Government's expenses associated with their administration.

This legislation, Mr. President, directs the President to vest the blocked assets and, in effect, to distribute them in so far as is necessary to satisfy those claims that have been determined by the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission to be valid. Any remaining funds would remain blocked and be subject to future negotiations with the Republic of Vietnam.

Prof. Richard B. Lillich of the University of Virginia Law School, widely recognized for his expertise in international claims law, prepared an extensive analysis of this legislation when it was the subject of a hearing last year in the House. He stated that the bill is completely consistent with international law, and that the United States has always supported the principle of self-help in those cases where a foreign country expropriates property without prompt, adequate, and effective compensation, as in this case.

We have, in fact, abided by that principle in the past. There is clear precedent for the procedure called for in this legislation. After World War II, Congress directed that claims of United States citizens against Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania, and Czechoslovakia which had been certified by the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission be paid from certain assets of those governments which had been blocked by the United States Government.

Normally these claims would be the subject of negotiations whenever the United States and Vietnam entered into discussions leading to a normalization of relations. The difficulty with that process is that these claimants have already waited 15 years and they should not have to wait many years more in order to receive their just due. In addition, it is the unfortunate result of many of these negotiations that claimants receive only a small percentage of the value of their claims. We have a unique situation here where there are more than enough blocked assets to satisfy the claims, and that being the case, there is no reason why each claimant should not receive the full amount he is due.

We have been extremely careful in drafting this legislation to insure that it not interfere with any humanitarian concerns which we are pursuing in Vietnam, particularly the effort to seek as complete an accounting as possible of our servicemen and civilians missing in action. Senator MURKOWSKI has been a leader in this effort, and I appreciate the contribution he has made to this bill by suggesting a provision which would grant the President the authority to defer the vesting for 1 year at a time up through his full term, if in his judgment humanitarian concerns warrant such a deferral. It is a good provision and I gladly include it in the bill.

Mr. President, these claimants have waited more than 15 years for the Government to act on their behalf. Some have already died and others are quite elderly. That they deserve compensation is not in dispute. That we have the legal and financial means to meet these claims without reaching into our Treasury should provide us with the impetus to move this legislation quickly. I hope my colleagues will support Senator MURKOWSKI and me in this effort.

By Mr. GLENN (for himself, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. KOHL, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. METZENBAUM, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. SASSER, Mr. COHEN, Mr. NUNN, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. HARKIN, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 2608. A bill to amend the Inspector General Act of 1978 to clarify the authority of Inspectors General to conduct audits and investigations; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

CLARIFICATION OF CERTAIN AUTHORITIES OF INSPECTORS GENERAL

● Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, although the Inspector General Act of 1978 has received comparatively little public attention and credit, it has been over the past decade, one of the real and substantive success stories of government in fighting and rooting out fat, fraud, waste, and abuse. It was an experiment that worked, sufficiently so that we expanded the IG Act in 1988 to include more agencies and branches of government.

For 11 years prior to March 1989 IG's doggedly pursued under the Inspector General Act fraud, waste and abuse relating to the programs of the individual departments. The IG Act's broad authority led IG's to conduct thousands of investigations which resulted in thousands of criminal convictions in cases prosecuted by the Department of Justice.

In short, the unambiguous words of the inspector general law worked well to provide the IG's with the necessary broad discretion and authority to conduct any investigation they believe necessary to carry out their mission.

However, on March 9, 1989, the Department's Office of Legal Counsel issued on opinion which reinterpreted the Inspector General Act and imposed a hitherto unknown limitation on IG's—according to OLC, in order to undertake an investigation the IG's must find Federal dollars being expended, or a Federal employee engaged in misconduct. What the DOJ opinion leaves out are whole categories of criminal cases previously worked by IG agents: for example fraud relating to false certifications, and false applications for nonmonetary Government benefits such as a Federal license, job, visa, passport or other benefit. It even leaves out less common but necessary investigations, such as those directed at persons impersonating agency officials.

As a result, the jurisdiction and ability of the inspector general [IG] offices to fight fraud and investigate crime is under full scale reduction from the U.S. Department of Justice, the very agency we would expect to be most supportive of the successful IG program. The end result will be the fumbling of thousands of investigations directly affecting the health and welfare of the people of this country. With the DOJ ruling, persons who criminally certify false test results of generic drugs they seek to have licensed are now more likely to go unpunished for putting ineffective medicine in the cabinets of the American people; workers in unsafe factories or mines may die as criminal conduct in the OSHA or MSHA Program occurs; and persons fraudulently selling State Department visas will be able to do so with far less risk of investigation and interference by agents of the Government.

The OLC opinion further overturned the law by creating a type of investigation purportedly off-limits to the IG. The end result of DOJ's drawing this line in the sand has been widespread confusion, which can only benefit persons intent upon breaking the law. Now DOJ OLC has become the arbiter of their own false interpretation of the act's intentions, granting IG's authority to conduct investigations in certain cases, and saying no in others. As a result, agency officials and IG's have struggled to protect ongoing investigations. For example, the Secretary of Health and Human Services sought to protect FDA related investigations being conducted by the HHS IG by delegating the Secretary's felony investigative authority to the IG, as a supplement to the IG's powers under the IG Act. However, DOJ objected to this and pressured the Secretary to rescind the delegation. Now, IG's are so desperate to protect their investigations that they are contemplating detailing their personnel to agency managers to complete the investigations—a step which could significantly undermine their independence and the mission Congress established for them.

Why now? Why does DOJ move, after 12 years of excellent work by the IG's, to so seriously limit their ability to continue? I cannot authoritatively answer that question, but it does seem to be a strange coincidence that DOJ would move so forcefully against the IG community after IG Act coverage was extended to cover DOJ itself, coverage strongly fought by DOJ.

It is all so unnecessary to have this current wrangle. The words of the IG Act which provide broad authority to the IG's to make whatever investigations they believe are necessary were crystal clear to the DOJ 3 years ago when the Department was unsuccessfully resisting the institution of an IG in DOJ. Before me, in this committee room, Stephen Markman, then Assistant Attorney General of the Office of Legal Policy, stated:

> Extending the Inspector General Act to the Department [of Justice] would diffuse these responsibilities and lessen accountability. * * * The Inspector General would have authority to make whatever investigations he or she might deem appropriate, and the Attorney General would be without authority to halt or redirect those investigations.
>
> Heads of other agencies where statutory Inspectors General already exit, of course, face similar intrusions on their authority. [emphasis added]

Although I disagree with his tone, Mr. Markman's characterization of the IGs' authority then is not consistent with the limitations Justice seeks to impose now.

I also find discouraging the rather tortured approach to legislative history undertaken in the OLC opinion. Let me give a specific example: On page 7 of the OLC opinion a single sentence is selectively quoted from the Senate Report which accompanied the passage of the 1978 Inspector General Act: "The [Inspector General's] focus is the way in which Federal tax dollars are spent by the agency, both in its internal operations and its Federally-funded programs". This alone might imply that DOJ's opinion limiting IG authority to cases where a Federal dollar is spent, is correct. However,

DOJ has disingenuously chosen to drop the preceding and following sentences, which thoroughly undermine the narrow point. Let me read the sentence they chose, in context:

However, the committee intends that the Inspector and Auditor General will assume a leadership role in any and all activities which he deems useful in order to promote economy and efficiency in the administration of programs and operations or prevent and detect fraud, abuse and waste in such programs and operations.

The Inspector and Auditor General's focus is the way in which Federal tax dollars are spent by the agency, both in its internal operations and its federally-funded programs. Such a responsibility obviously encompasses countless issues. The Inspector and Auditor General should obviously be involved in identifying patterns and perpetrators of programmatic fraud.* * * S. Rep. No. 1071 at 27.

As chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee with jurisdiction over the IG community and their operations and needs, I have held a series of hearings in an attempt to jog the Administration into settling this OLC problem, including a hearing on April 25, 1990, with five IG's and Justice Department witnesses. I offer for the record the statements of these five IG's demonstrating the current problem. As the testimony reflects, the IG's stated their belief that nothing short of legislation will solve this problem at this time, and after hearing testimony from the Justice Department, at this point I must agree. At the hearing, the committee also heard testimony from the Honorable SILVIO CONTE of Massachusetts, the ranking minority member on the House Appropriations Committee. Mr. CONTE has introduced identical legislation in the House to overrule the OLC opinion, and clarify the authority of the IG's to conduct audits and investigations.

I urge my colleagues to give this bill their full support.●

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise in support of the inspector general bill introduced today by the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Governmental Affairs, Senator GLENN. This bill will go a long way to clarify the authority of agency IG's.

The IG's are charged with the statutory duty of rooting out fraud, waste, and abuse in Federal programs. They are supposed to be tough, and they are supposed to be independent. They are the "junk yard dogs" of the Federal Government.

Unfortunately, the authority of agency IG's has been placed in question by a recent opinion issued by the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel. This opinion concludes that, because IG's are not authorized to exercise "program operating responsibilities," they have no power to investigate fraud, waste, and abuse against agency regulatory programs by private parties. In particular, the opinion concludes that the agency IG's have the authority to investigate only: First, recipients of Federal funds, such as contractors and grantees, and second, the policies and actions of the Departments and their employees.

I agree with OLC's premise that IG's should not be running the programs they oversee. However, this premise does not justify the narrow jurisdictional conclusion reached by the OLC opinion; it is far too simplistic to conclude that an IG is exercising "program operating responsibilities" simply because it is investigating fraud against the program. For example, the FBI clearly has the authority to investigate program fraud and regulatory violations unrelated to the expenditure of Federal funds—but OLC does not worry that the FBI is usurping the role of program officials.

Indeed, the Office of Legal Counsel itself has recently acknowledged, in response to specific issues raised by IG's and in testimony before the Governmental Affairs Committee, that the investigative authority of IG's is not limited to the two categories specified in its original memorandum. For example, OLC has indicated that IG's have the authority to conduct investigations of:

First, persons who pay or are liable to pay money to the Government under Federal programs;

Second, recipients of nonmonetary benefits from the Government under Federal programs;

Third, program fraud within the scope of the Program Fraud Civil Remedies Act;

Fourth, allegations of regulatory violations that are raised by Federal employee whistleblowers;

Fifth, specific regulatory violations—as "spot checks" of agency enforcement;

Sixth, specific regulatory violations, within the authority of investigative units that were merged with agency IG's at the time of their creation.

Unfortunately, the Office of Legal Counsel has not modified its original opinion to acknowledge that IG's have the authority to conduct investigations in these additional areas. Instead, OLC has stated that it will examine IG investigations on a case-by-case basis, with the assistance of agency counsel, to determine whether they are authorized. This is directly contrary to the Inspector General Act, which provides that IG's shall not report to, or be subject to supervision by, any agency official other than the agency head or his deputy.

The OLC opinion also creates practical problems by addressing IG investigative responsibilities as a jurisdictional mater, rather than as a matter of discretion and administrative practice. At least one IG subpoena has already been challenged by a private party as being beyond the IG's authority. OLC has concluded that the IG was operating within its authority, but the company clearly has a colorable argument to quash the subpoena, based on the broad language of the original OLC opinion. Until that opinion is withdrawn or revised, similar challenges are likely to recur.

While this is a problem that needs to be addressed, there is still room for compromise, and I hope that this legislation will ultimately prove unnecessary. In particular, I believe that it would be extremely constructive if OLC were to revise its legal opinion to: First, incorporate the additional IG investigative responsibilities that it has recognized since the original opinion was issued; and second, clarify that the limitations on IG investigative responsibilities are a matter of administrative discretion, rather than a binding jurisdictional matter.

I commend Senator GLENN for his attention to this important issue, and for his commitment to defending the agency IG's. We simply cannot afford to undermine these watchdogs of the public interest.●

By Ms. MIKULSKI:

S. 2609. A bill to establish a national Advanced Technician Training Program, utilizing the resources of the Nation's 2-year associate-degree-granting colleges to expand the pool of skilled technicians in strategic advanced-technology fields, to increase the productivity of the Nation's industries, and to improve the competitiveness of the United States in international trade, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

NATIONAL ADVANCED TECHNICIAN TRAINING ACT

● Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I am introducing today the American Leadership in Technology Act [ALTA]. This bill will increase the National Science Foundation's support for undergraduate science and engineering programs.

To compete in the global marketplace, our country must maintain a world-class work force, one that is competitive across the broad spectrum of technological and industrial change. However, if we look at the statistics, America is facing a critical loss of leadership in both science and technology.

And if we look at the education sector, America is also facing a shortage of young Americans who are capable and willing to major in science and engineering. In the year 2000, a large percentage of our population will be women and minorities. We need to ensure that these young people are included in the pipeline that feeds the science and engineering work force.

American industry, government, education, labor, small business, and the general employer community must work together to increase not only the number of Ph.D. scientists in this country, but also the number of lab technicians and engineers.

My bill, ALTA, addresses this challenge by authorizing $30 million in the first fiscal year of operation, for the National Science Foundation to expand and improve advanced technician training programs in community colleges or associate-degree-granting colleges. The colleges must match each Federal dollar with priviate funds or inkind contributions.

These programs will expand and improve training in critical fields such as microelectronics, hydraulics, lasers, computers, and chemical technology.

The NSF would also designate 10 centers of excellence among community colleges to serve as clearinghouses and model training programs.

Community colleges have the most experience in providing work force training and technological training in our education system. Community colleges can tailor programs to meet local industry needs. They are also able to meet the needs of students who need this training the most: the adult workers displaced by plant closings; working people and parents who need flexible scheduling; handicapped people with special needs; high school graduates; and high school dropouts,

Our country must take advantage of every resource we have. The Nation's community college system has a demonstrated record of training industry's labor needs and this bill helps us put our resources where it works.

I hope that my colleagues will cosponsor this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2609

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "National Advanced Technician Training Act".

STATEMENT OF FINDINGS

SEC. 2. The Congress finds that—

(1) the United States is at a technological disadvantage in global economic competition because many competitors have workforces with stronger technical education;

(2) the quality of mathematics and science education has a direct and pervasive bearing upon the quality of the Nation's skill base, particularly in technician training;

(3) the United States has no national competitiveness strategy to develop and maintain the technically trained workforce needed for self-sufficiency in strategic advanced-technology fields, to improve productivity, to make industries competitive in international markets, and to revitalize declining industries;

(4) there are shortages of technically trained workers to produce, operate, and service highly technical equipment, systems, and processes;

(5) many dislocated workers and unemployed adults who lack the training to meet industry's technological needs face uncertain career prospects;

(6) the United States' increasing dependence on foreign producers for advanced-technology equipment is undermining the United States' self-sufficiency, economic independence, and national security;

(7) the Nation's workforce needs continual upgrading to produce, operate, and service advanced-technology systems to increase the productivity and profitability of industry;

(8) the Nation's associate-degree-granting colleges have become American education's leading source of the competency-based technical training and short-cycle retraining which is required to meet industry needs and the skill demands of advancing technology;

(9) a national strategy is needed to intensify collaboration among associate-degree-granting colleges, private industry and labor to develop skilled advanced technicians needed for economic growth, industrial development, and reindustrialization;

(10) national security can be enhanced by advanced technician training, designed to produce technicians in strategic advanced-technology fields and to increase national self-sufficiency in these fields; and

(11) a national advanced technician training program will give men and women from all backgrounds more opportunities to gain competencies consistent with the needs of business and industry.

PURPOSE

SEC. 3. It is the purpose of this Act to establish a national advanced technician training program in the Nation's associate-degree-granting colleges, with matching non-Federal funds, to—

(1) expand the skilled workforce needed to make the Nation self-sufficient in strategic advanced-technology fields, to increase the productivity of our Nation's industries, to improve the competitiveness of the United States in international trade, and to increase the Nation's national security;

(2) prepare technicians and skilled craftsmen, retrain persons whose skills need updating, and upgrade employed technicians in strategic advanced-technology fields; and

(3) provide a highly skilled workforce capable of producing, operating, and servicing the advanced technology needed to modernize the Nation's industrial complex and to revitalize the Nation's economy.

NATIONAL ADVANCED TECHNICIAN TRAINING PROGRAM

SEC. 4. (a) The Director of the National Science Foundation (hereinafter referred to as the "Director") is authorized and directed, in accordance with section 6 and the other provisions of this Act, to carry out an advanced technician training program under which accredited associate-degree-granting colleges, using matching non-Federal funds, will provide training in technical competencies in strategic fields. Such program shall include emphasis on collaborative programs with local employers and technical occupational training and shall place emphasis on attracting men and women to the program who are in need of retraining or upgrading in order to retain their jobs, or who are unemployed, especially workers dislocated by plant closings and technological change, and persons who have recently completed high school or who left high school prior to graduation.

(b) In carrying out the national advanced technician training program, the Director shall—

(1) award grants on a competitive basis to accredited associate-degree-granting colleges which demonstrate the ability to provide competency-based technical training; and

(2) work with the Nation's network of associate-degree-granting colleges to establish and maintain, at the National Science Foundation or by contract, a readily accessible inventory of advanced technician training programs which are serving public and private employers and addressing the changing workforce demands of technology.

(c) Each college awarded a grant shall provide an associate degree training program in designated advanced-technology occupational fields in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

(d) No grant awarded under this section shall exceed $500,000 per year.

(e) To assure that the national advanced technician training program is consistent with the needs of industries, the Director shall appoint a 15-member National Advisory Council on Advanced Technician Training, which shall have the responsibility of advising the Director on the goals and implementation of the program, reviewing the effectiveness of the program, and reporting annually to the Director and the Congress. The Council shall include representatives of industry, labor, associate-degree-granting colleges, the military, and economic development organizations. The chairman of the Council shall be a president or governing board chairman of a associate-degree-granting college.

(f) The Council and the Director shall prepare and submit to the National Science Foundation, and directly to the Congress without review by the National Science Foundation or the Office of Management and Budget, an annual report on the national advanced technician training program, together with—

(1) a review and evaluation of the effectiveness of the program;

(2) a catalog of the associate-degree-granting college programs identified by the required inventory;

(3) a recommendation on the feasibility of expanding the program; and

(4) such other recommendations, including recommendations for legislation, as the Council and the Director deem necessary.

(g) In carrying out the duties imposed by this section, the Director shall consult, cooperate, and coordinate with the programs and policies of the Department of Commerce and other relevant Federal agencies including the Departments of Labor, Education, and Defense.

(h) The national advanced technician training program shall give emphasis to training programs described in subsection (c) which—

(1) include flexibility in scheduling in order to accommodate working people and parents; and

(2) take steps to meet the adaptive and training needs of handicapped young people and adults.

NATIONAL CENTERS OF TECHNICIAN TRAINING

SEC. 5. (a) The Director shall designate 10 centers of excellence among associate-degree-granting colleges. Five such centers shall be associate-degree-granting with exceptional programs of advanced technician training, which will serve as national and regional clearinghouses for the benefit of other colleges that are striving to upgrade their technical education programs. Five such centers shall be other associate-degree-granting colleges that excel in undergraduate education in mathematics and science, which shall serve as national and regional clearinghouses for the benefit of both colleges and secondary schools that are striving to upgrade mathematics and science courses. These centers shall be geographically distributed and chosen by a competitive application process from among colleges that pledge operating resources, in cash or in kind, to match the Federal grants made under subsection (b).

(b) The Director shall make no fewer than 20 grants annually, to associate-degree-granting colleges for the purpose of developing and strengthening partnerships in mathematics and science education with secondary schools in the community served by the college. These grants shall be made by a competitive application process from among colleges that pledge operating resources, in cash or in kind, to match the Federal grants made under this subsection. No grant made to a college under this subsection shall exceed $500,000.

USE OF FUNDS

SEC. 6. Funds appropriated to carry out this Act shall be used—

(1) to establish, strengthen, and expand under section 4 the advanced technician training capabilities of associate-degree-granting colleges, including—

(A) the development of associate degree and training programs in advanced-technology occupations by accredited associate-degree-granting colleges, and by consortia of such colleges, with particular emphasis on model instructional programs to prepare and upgrade technicians and to retrain dislocated workers in state-of-the-art competencies in advanced-technology occupations;

(B) the development in such colleges of faculty and instructors, both full- and part-time, in advanced-technology fields such as laser technology, robotic technology, nuclear technology, computer technology, and fiber optics, and in advanced-technology applications that integrate and synthesize emerging and existing technologies;

(C) the establishment of innovative partnership arrangements among associate-degree-granting colleges, the private sector, and the government to enhance the exchange of technical and scientific personnel, including programs providing faculty opportunities to have short-term assignments with industry;

(D) the development of cooperative advanced technician training programs with business, industry, labor, and government;

(E) the purchase or lease of state-of-the-art instrumentation essential to training and education programs designed to prepare and upgrade technicians in advanced-technology fields;

(F) the stimulation of private sector participation in advanced technician training programs in associate-degree-granting colleges through the sharing of program costs, equipment loans and donations, and the cooperative use of laboratories, plants, and other facilities as training sites and to provide relevant state-of-the-art work experience opportunities for students enrolled in such programs; and

(G) the development and dissemination of instructional materials in support of advanced technician training programs in degree-granting colleges; and

(2) to make grants to establish the centers of excellence and the partnerships described in section 5.

Of the funds appropriated for any fiscal year to carry out this Act, 60 percent shall be expended for activities described in section 4 and 40 percent for activities described in section 5.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 7. For purposes of this Act—

(1) the terms "advancing technology" and "advanced-technology" include or refer to advanced technical activities such as the modernization, miniaturization, integration, and computerization of electronic, hydraulic, pneumatic, laser, nuclear, chemical, telecommunication, and other technological applications to enhance productivity improvements in manufacturing, communication, transportation, commercial, and similar economic and national security activities; and

(2) the term "associate-degree-granting college" means a postsecondary educational institution that has authority to award an associate degree or comparable technical certificate and has the mission of offering comprehensive education and training services to meet the needs of a prescribed community, including a two-year junior college, technical institute, or other postsecondary institution offering comprehensive associate-degree programs in technical fields.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 8. There are authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for the fiscal year 1990 and $40,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1991 and 1992 to carry out the provisions of this Act.

By Mrs. KASSEBAUM:

S. 2610. A bill to protect the free flow of commerce on the Missouri River; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

PROTECTING THE FREE FLOW OF COMMERCE ON THE MISSOURI RIVER

● Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I rise today to offer legislation to maintain the free flow of commerce on the Missouri River. The importance of unobstructed commerce along the Missouri River is such that a Missouri River riverboat is included in the Kansas State seal.

Yesterday a Federal judge issued an injunction which will effectively render the Missouri River unnavigable to commercial river traffic. The enormity of this decision cannot be understated. Grain prices have already begun to fall in reaction to the loss of this efficient form of transportation. Loss of the river will be higher transportation costs to bulk shippers. Who pays the cost of higher shipper costs? It will come out of the pockets of farmers and consumers.

Long before the Louisiana Purchase, the Missouri River has served as one of the major arteries in our national transportation system. We all have an interest in maintaining the free flow of commerce along the Missouri River. Our national transportation requirements should not be circumvented for local or parochial interests.

Since colonial times the Federal Government has taken action to protect the free flow of commerce in navigable waterways. These waterways are precious national assets. I believe the Federal Government must continue its role of protecting navigable waterways and must reverse the precedent of this injunction. Time is of the essence and the failure to act swiftly will be an economic disaster. Within an hour of the court's injunction the flow of water into the Missouri River was substantially restricted. Towboats are hurrying to move barges downstream. By Sunday the waterway could be unnavigable above Kansas City.

Mr. President, if we are going to be competitive in an increasing international economy we must protect the unrestricted flow of interstate commerce. At a time when Europe is recognizing the value of removing barriers to interstate commerce decisions such as this injunction establish new barriers to our interstate commerce and handicap the ability of our industries and farmers to compete in a global market.

This bill simply provides for the continued maintenance of navigable levels of water along the Missouri River to protect the free flow of commerce and I look forward to working for its swift enactment.●

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 9

At the request of Mr. DOLE, the name of the Senator from Maine [Mr. COHEN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 9, a bill to amend title II of the Social Security Act to phase out the earnings test over a 5-year period for individuals who have attained retirement age, and for other purposes.

S. 501

At the request of Mr. D'AMATO, the name of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BIDEN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 501, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to make permanent, and to increase the amount of, the exclusion for amounts received under qualified group legal services plans.

S. 1587

At the request of Mr. HELMS, the names of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. BOSCHWITZ], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. SHELBY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], the Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. COATS], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIXON], and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] were added as cosponsors of S. 1587, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide for the designation on income tax forms of overpayments of tax and contributions to reward the return of a Vietnam POW/MIA.

S. 1860

At the request of Mr. BOREN, the names of the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DURENBERGER] were added as cosponsors of S. 1860, a bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to require the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to furnish outpatient medical services for any disability of a former prisoner of war.

S. 1890

At the request of Mr. THURMOND, the name of the Senator from Kentucky, [Mr. MCCONNELL] was added as a cosponsor of S. 1890, a bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to provide relief from certain inequities remaining in the crediting of National Guard technician service in connection with civil service retirement, and for other purposes.

S. 2056

At the request of Mr. HARKIN, the name of the Senator from New York [Mr. MOYNIHAN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2056, a bill to amend title XIX of the Public Health Service Act to provide grants to States and implement State health objective plans, and for other purposes.

S. 2083

At the request of Mr. KERRY, the name of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2083, a bill to bring about a negotiated end to the war in El Salvador, and for other purposes.

S. 2111

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, the names of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. RUDMAN] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] were added as cosponsors of S. 2111, a bill designating the month of May as "Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month."

At the request of Mr. SIMON, the names of the Senator from Florida [Mr. MACK] and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] were added as cosponsors of S. 2111, supra.

S. 2161

At the request of Mr. HATFIELD, the name of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. THURMOND] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2161, a bill to establish within the Department of Education an Office of Vocational and Adult Education and Community Colleges.

S. 2215

At the request of Mr. HARKIN, the name of the Senator from Washington [Mr. ADAMS] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2215, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for the development and operation of center to conduct research with respect to contraception and centers to conduct research with respect to infertility, and for other purposes.

S. 2222

At the request of Mr. BRADLEY, the name of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2222, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to the tax treatment of payments under life insurance contracts for terminally ill individuals.

S. 2229

At the request of Mr. DODD, the name of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIXON] was withdrawn as a cosponsor of S. 2229, a bill to reauthorize the Head Start Act for fiscal years 1991 through 1994, and for other purposes.

S. 2252

At the request of Mr. SIMON, the name of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. RIEGLE] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2252, a bill to encourage and facilitate entry into the teaching profession, and for other purposes.

S. 2356

At the request of Mr. SYMMS, the name of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2356, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow tax-exempt organizations to establish cash and deferred pension arrangements for their employees.

S. 2384

At the request of Mr. BOREN, the name of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2384, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to the treatment of certain real estate activities under the limitations on losses from passive activities.

S. 2497

At the request of Mr. DECONCINI, the name of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2497, a bill to establish a demonstration program to allow drug-addicted mothers to reside in drug abuse treatment facilities with their children, and to offer such mothers new behavior and education skills which can help prevent substance abuse in subsequent generations.

S. 2579

At the request of Mr. D'AMATO, the name of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. HUMPHREY] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2579, a bill to to amend the Export Administration Act of 1979.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 235

At the request of Mr. HUMPHREY, the name of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] was added as a cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 235, a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to limit congressional terms.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 267

At the request of Mr. THURMOND, the names of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBB] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 267, a joint resolution to authorize and request the President to designate May 1990 as "National Physical Fitness and Sports Month."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 284

At the request of Mr. BYRD, the names of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 284, a joint resolution to designate the week beginning September 16, 1990 as "National Give the Kids a Fighting Chance Week."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 289

At the request of Mr. SIMON, the names of the Senator from California [Mr. WILSON], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. REIGLE], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DURENBERGER], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER], the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], the Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 289, a joint resolution to designate October 1990 as "Polish American Heritage Month."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 297

At the request of Mr. SIMON, the names of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHAFEE], and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 297, a joint resolution designating September 1990 as "National Craft Month."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 304

At the request of Mr. SHELBY, the names of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. COATS], the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. LAUTENBERG], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL], the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BRADLEY], and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS] were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 304, a joint resolution to designate October 17, 1990, as "National Drug-Free Schools and Communities Education and Awareness Day."

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 305

At the request of Mr. THURMOND, the name of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] was added as a cosponsor of Senate Joint Resolution 305, a joint resolution to designate the month of September 1990, as "National Awareness Month of Children with Cancer."

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 111

At the request of Mr. HARKIN, the names of the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH], and the Senator from Washington [Mr. ADAMS] were added as cosponsors of Senate Concurrent Resolution 111, a concurrent resolution to express the sense of the Congress with respect to contraception and infertility.

SENATE RESOLUTION 231

At the request of Mr. BRADLEY, the names of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. METZENBAUM], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BINGAMAN], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. REID], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY], and the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE] were added as cosponsors of Senate Resolution 231, a resolution urging the submission of the Convention on the Rights of the Child to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

AMENDMENT NO. 1575

At the request of Mr. CRANSTON, the name of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. THURMOND] was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 1575 intended to be proposed to S. 2100, a bill to increase the rates of compensation for veterans with service-connected disabilities and the rates of dependency and indemnity compensation for the survivors of certain disabled veterans; to amend title 38, United States Code, to improve veterans' compensation, health care, insurance, and housing programs, and to provide for transitional group residences for veterans recovering for substance-abuse disabilities; and for other purposes.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 129 SETTING FORTH THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET FOR THE U.S. GOVERNMENT FOR FISCAL YEARS 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, AND 1995

Mr. SASSER, from the Committee on the Budget, reported the following original concurrent resolution; which was placed on the calendar:

S. CON. RES. 129

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress determines and declares that the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1991 is established and the appropriate budgetary levels for fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, and 1995 are set forth.

MAXIMUM DEFICIT AMOUNTS

SEC. 2. The following levels and amounts in this section are set forth for purposes of determining, in accordance with section 301(i) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974 (as amended by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 and the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Reaffirmation Act of 1987), whether the maximum deficit amount for a fiscal year has been exceeded, and as set forth in this concurrent resolution, shall be considered to be mathematically consistent with the other amounts and levels set forth in this concurrent resolution:

(1) The recommended levels of Federal revenues are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,180,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,258,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,349,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $1,427,700,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $1,507,900,000,000.

(2) The appropriate levels of total budget authority are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,420,400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,453,000,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,528,900,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $1,585,000,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $1,656,700,000,000.

(3) The appropriate levels of total budget outlays are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,228,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,263,900,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,301,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $1,336,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $1,371,400,000,000.

(4) The amounts of the deficits or surpluses are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: −$47,500,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1992: −$5,300,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1993: $47,900,000,000 (surplus).
Fiscal year 1994: $91,500,000,000 (surplus).
Fiscal year 1995: $136,500,000,000 (surplus).

DEBT INCREASE AS ONE MEASURE OF DEFICIT

SEC. 3. The amounts of the increase in the public debt subject to limitation are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $184,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $146,700,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $107,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $76,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $45,700,000,000.

DEFICIT LEVELS EXCLUDING TRUST FUND SURPLUSES

SEC. 4. (a)(1) The amounts of the surpluses of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $74,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $85,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $97,400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $111,700,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $127,100,000,000.

(2) The amounts of the deficits or surpluses excluding the receipts and disbursements of the Federal Old-Age Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: −$121,800,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1992: −$90,400,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1993: −$49,500,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1994: −$20,200,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1995: $9,400,000,000 (surplus).

(b) The amounts of the deficits excluding the receipts and disbursements of all Federal trust funds are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: −$185,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: −$148,700,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: −$104,800,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: −$74,000,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: −$42,900,000,000.

BUDGET ACCOUNTABILITY AS WOULD BE REQUIRED BY S. 101

SEC. 5. The Congress finds that while the annual deficits, as currently defined, appear to be decreasing, the Federal debt continues to increase annually by significantly greater amounts. The following levels and amounts in this section are set forth to show this discrepancy, as would be required by S. 101:

Fiscal Year 1991:
(1) Retirement funds budget:
Fiscal year surplus: $129,900,000,000.
Trust balances at end of fiscal year: $783,800,000,000.
(2) Operating budget:
Surplus for fiscal year: $97,400,000,000.
(3) Debt and interest budget:
Debt at beginning of fiscal year: $3,112,100,000,000.
Debt at end of fiscal year: $3,296,400,000,000.
Gross interest: $274,700,000,000.
Debt increase (Deficit): $184,300,000,000.
Fiscal Year 1992:
(1) Retirement funds budget:
Fiscal year surplus: $138,900,000,000.
Trust balances at end of fiscal year: $922,700,000,000.
(2) Operating budget:
Surplus for fiscal year: $142,100,000,000.
(3) Debt and interest budget:
Debt at beginning of fiscal year: $3,296,400,000,000.
Debt at end of fiscal year: $3,443,100,000,000.
Gross interest: $286,300,000,000.
Debt increase (Deficit): $146,700,000,000.
Fiscal Year 1993:
(1) Retirement funds budget:
Fiscal year surplus: $150,000,000,000.
Trust balances at end of fiscal year: $1,072,700,000,000.
(2) Operating budget:
Surplus for fiscal year: $193,800,000,000.
(3) Debt and interest budget:
Debt at beginning of fiscal year: $3,443,100,000,000.
Debt at end of fiscal year: $3,550,200,000,000.
Gross interest: $296,000,000,000.
Debt increase (Deficit): $107,100,000,000.
Fiscal Year 1994:
(1) Retirement funds budget:
Fiscal year surplus: $163,500,000,000.
Trust balances at end of fiscal year: $1,236,300,000,000.
(2) Operating budget:
Surplus for fiscal year: $231,800,000,000.
(3) Debt and interest budget:
Debt at beginning of fiscal year: $3,550,200,000,000.
Debt at end of fiscal year: $3,626,500,000,000.
Gross interest: $303,900,000,000.
Debt increase (Deficit): $76,300,000,000.
Fiscal Year 1995:
(1) Retirement funds budget:
Fiscal year surplus: $178,100,000,000.
Trust balances at end of fiscal year: $1,414,400,000,000.
(2) Operating budget:
Surplus for fiscal year: $268,100,000,000.
(3) Debt and interest budget:
Debt at beginning of fiscal year: $3,626,500,000,000.
Debt at end of fiscal year: $3,672,200,000,000.
Gross interest: $309,700,000,000.
Debt increase (Deficit): $45,700,000,000.

RECOMMENDED LEVELS AND AMOUNTS

SEC. 6. (a) The following budgetary levels are appropriate for the fiscal years beginning on October 1, 1990, October 1, 1991, October 1, 1992, October 1, 1993, and October 1, 1994:

(1) The recommended levels of Federal revenues are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $871,700,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $928,900,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $996,900,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $1,051,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $1,107,100,000,000.

and the amounts by which the aggregate levels of Federal revenues should be increased are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $25,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $25,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $27,400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $27,800,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $29,400,000,000.

and the amounts for Federal Insurance Contributions Act revenues for hospital insurance within the recommended levels of Federal revenues are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $74,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $79,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $85,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $91,000,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $97,000,000,000.

(2) The appropriate levels of total new budget authority are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $1,111,400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,123,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,176,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $1,208,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $1,255,200,000,000.

(3) The appropriate levels of total budget outlays are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $993,500,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $1,019,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $1,046,400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $1,071,800,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $1,097,700,000,000.

(4) The amounts of the deficits or surpluses are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: −$121,800,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1992: −$90,400,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1993: −$49,500,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1994: −$20,200,000,000 (deficit).
Fiscal year 1995: $9,400,000,000 (surplus).

(5) The appropriate levels of the public debt are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991: $3,296,400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $3,443,100,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $3,550,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $3,626,500,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $3,672,200,000,000.

(6) The appropriate levels of total Federal credit activity for the fiscal years beginning on October 1, 1990, October 1, 1991, October 1, 1992, October 1, 1993, and October 1, 1994, are as follows:

Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $21,200,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $106,700,000,000.
(C) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $85,700,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $18,000,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $110,100,000,000.
(C) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $85,400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $18,300,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $112,700,000,000.
(C) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $88,600,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $18,700,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $116,100,000,000.
(C) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $91,900,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New direct loan obligations, $18,900,000,000.
(B) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $119,500,000,000.
(C) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $95,500,000,000.

(b) The Congress hereby determines and declares that the appropriate levels of new budget authority and budget outlays, and the appropriate levels of new direct loan obligations, new primary loan guarantee commitments, and new secondary loan guarantee commitments for fiscal years 1991 through 1995 for each major functional category are:

(1) National Defense (050):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $285,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $293,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $285,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $289,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $285,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $285,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $285,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $287,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $285,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $282,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

(2) International Affairs (150):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $19,100,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $16,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,000,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,200,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $19,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,200,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $20,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,500,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $21,300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,200,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,800,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $22,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $19,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,300,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $8,100,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $500,000,000.

(3) General Science, Space, and Technology (250):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $16,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $16,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $17,300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $17,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $18,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $17,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $18,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $19,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $19,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

(4) Energy (270):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $6,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,000,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $5,300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,600,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $6,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,900,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:

(A) New budget authority, $6,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $5,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $6,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $2,300,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(5) Natural Resources and Environment (300):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $18,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $18,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $19,100,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $19,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $19,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $19,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $20,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $20,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $21,300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $20,700,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(6) Agriculture (350):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $20,200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $16,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $9,100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,000,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $23,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $17,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $8,900,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $7,300,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $20,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $16,300,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $8,700,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $6,700,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $18,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $15,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $8,700,000,000
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $6,700,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $19,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $15,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $8,500,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $6,800,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(7) Commerce and Housing Credit (370):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $44,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $44,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $6,200,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $63,300,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $85,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $14,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $3,500,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $65,500,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $85,000,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $26,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $14,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $3,600,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $67,800,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $88,200,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $15,100,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $2,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $3,700,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $70,300,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $91,500,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $16,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $3,800,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $72,800,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $95,000,000,000.
(8) Transportation (400):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $33,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $31,300,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $100,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $35,200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $33,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $36,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $35,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $37,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $37,700,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $39,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $39,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(9) Community and Regional Development (450):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $8,300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $7,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $8,100,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $7,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,200,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $8,200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $7,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,200,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $8,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $7,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,300,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $8,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $8,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $1,300,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(10) Education, Training, Employment, and Social Services (500):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $47,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $42,400,000,000.

(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $12,800,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $48,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $47,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $13,500,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $49,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $48,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $13,800,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $51,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $50,300,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $14,000,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $53,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $52,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $14,100,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(11) Health (550):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $65,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $64,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $300,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $73,200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $72,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $300,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $80,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $80,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $300,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $88,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $88,200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $300,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $97,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $96,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $400,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(12) Medicare (570):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $123,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $103,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $134,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $116,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $147,300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $129,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $161,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $144,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $175,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $160,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(13) Income Security (600):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $202,100,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $155,700,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $209,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $164,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $217,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $175,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $228,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $186,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $236,900,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $194,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $100,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(14) Social Security (650):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $3,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $3,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $4,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $4,900,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $4,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $5,300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $5,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $5,900,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $5,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(15) Veterans Benefits and Services (700):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $32,100,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $31,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $600,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $15,600,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $32,900,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $32,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $500,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $15,900,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $33,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $33,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $500,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $16,200,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $34,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $36,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $400,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $16,600,000,000.

(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $35,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $35,700,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $400,000,000.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $16,900,000,000.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(16) Administration of Justice (750):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $13,100,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $13,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $13,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $14,100,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $14,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $14,300,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $15,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $14,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $15,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $15,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(17) General Government (800):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $12,200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $10,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $13,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $11,700,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $13,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $12,300,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $13,900,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $12,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $14,400,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $13,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(18) Net Interest (900):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, $203,500,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $203,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, $210,600,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $210,600,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, $219,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $219,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, $225,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $225,000,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, $228,800,000,000.
(B) Outlays, $228,800,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(19) The corresponding levels of gross interest on the public debt are as follows:
Fiscal year 1991: $274,700,000,000.
Fiscal year 1992: $286,300,000,000.
Fiscal year 1993: $296,000,000,000.
Fiscal year 1994: $303,900,000,000.
Fiscal year 1995: $309,700,000,000.
(20) Allowances (920):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, −$200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, −$200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, −$200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, −$200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$200,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, −$300,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$300,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(21) Undistributed Offsetting Receipts (950):
Fiscal year 1991:
(A) New budget authority, −$43,900,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$84,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1992:
(A) New budget authority, −$45,200,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$65,400,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1993:
(A) New budget authority, −$45,900,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$91,500,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1994:
(A) New budget authority, −$47,700,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$103,900,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
Fiscal year 1995:
(A) New budget authority, −$49,000,000,000.
(B) Outlays, −$118,700,000,000.
(C) New direct loan obligations, $0.
(D) New primary loan guarantee commitments, $0.
(E) New secondary loan guarantee commitments, $0.

RECONCILIATION

SEC. 7. (a) Not later than July 20, 1990, the committees named in subsections (b) and (c) of this section shall submit their recommendations to the Committees on the Budget of their respective Houses. After receiving those recommendations, the Committees on the Budget shall report to the House and Senate a reconciliation bill or resolution or both carrying out all such recommendations without any substantive revision.

SENATE COMMITTEES

(b)(1) The Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(2) The Senate Committee on Armed Services shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $220,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $310,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $320,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $340,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $360,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(3)(A) The Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $570,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $910,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $780,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $830,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $910,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(B) The Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase revenues: $90,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $100,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $100,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $110,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $110,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(4) The Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $300,000,000 in budget authority and $300,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $330,000,000 in budget authority and $330,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $340,000,000 in budget authority and $340,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $350,000,000 in budget authority and $350,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $350,000,000 in budget authority and $350,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(5) The Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $210,000,000 in budget authority and $160,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $220,000,000 in budget authority and $220,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $220,000,000 in budget authority and $220,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $230,000,000 in budget authority and $230,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $230,000,000 in budget authority and $230,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(6) The Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $220,000,000 in budget authority and $220,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $240,000,000 in budget authority and $240,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $250,000,000 in budget authority and $250,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $260,000,000 in budget authority and $260,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $270,000,000 in budget authority and $270,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(7)(A) The Senate Committee on Finance shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $2,000,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $3,620,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $5,180,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $6,830,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $8,650,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(B) The Senate Committee on Finance shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase revenues: $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(C) The Senate Committee on Finance shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase contributions: $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(8) The Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $1,710,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $1,510,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $850,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $930,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $1,000,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(9)(A) The Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(B) The Senate Committee on Labor and Human Services shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase revenues: $110,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $230,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $280,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $330,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $380,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(10) The Senate Committee on Small Business shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $50,000,000 in budget authority and $50,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; 60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(11) The Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $400,000,000 in budget authority and $380,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $450,000,000 in budget authority and $450,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $460,000,000 in budget authority and $480,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $460,000,000 in budget authority and $490,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $490,000,000 in budget authority and $510,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

HOUSE COMMITTEES

(c)(1) The House Committee on Agriculture shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $0 in budget authority and $0 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(2) The House Committee on Armed Services shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $220,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $310,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $320,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $340,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $360,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(3)(A) The House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $570,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $910,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $780,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $830,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $910,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(B) The House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase revenues: $90,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $100,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $100,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $110,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $110,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(4)(A) The House Committee on Education and Labor shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $70,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(B) The House Committee on Education and Labor shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase revenues: $110,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $230,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $280,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $330,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $380,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(5) The House Committee on Energy and Commerce shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $420,000,000 in budget authority and $420,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $470,000,000 in budget authority and $470,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $490,000,000 in budget authority and $490,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $510,000,000 in budget authority and $510,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $520,000,000 in budget authority and $520,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(6) The House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $210,000,000 in budget authority and $160,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $220,000,000 in budget authority and $220,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $220,000,000 in budget authority and $220,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $230,000,000 in budget authority and $230,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $230,000,000 in budget authority and $230,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(7) The House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $100,000,000 in budget authority and $100,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $100,000,000 in budget authority and $100,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $100,000,000 in budget authority and $100,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $100,000,000 in budget authority and $100,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $100,000,000 in budget authority and $100,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(8) The House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $1,710,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $1,510,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $850,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $930,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and 1,000,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(9) The House Committee on Small Business shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $50,000,000 in budget authority and $50,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $60,000,000 in budget authority and $60,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(10) The House Committee on Veterans' Affairs shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce budget authority and outlays as follows: $400,000,000 in budget authority and $380,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1991; $450,000,000 in budget authority and $450,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1992; $460,000,000 in budget authority and $480,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1993; $460,000,000 in budget authority and $490,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1994; and $490,000,000 in budget authority and $510,000,000 in outlays in fiscal year 1995.

(11)(A) The House Committee on Ways and Means shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction that provide spending authority (as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, other than as defined in section 401(c)(2)(C) of the Act, or any combination thereof) sufficient to reduce outlays: $2,000,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $3,620,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $5,180,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $6,830,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $8,650,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(B) The House Committee on Ways and Means shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase revenues: $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $13,900,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

(C) The House Committee on Ways and Means shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase contributions: $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1991; $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1992; $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1993; $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and $5,760,000,000 in fiscal year 1995.

SALE OF GOVERNMENT ASSETS

SEC. 8. (a) It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) from time to time the United States Government should sell assets to nongovernment buyers; and

(2) the amounts realized from such asset sales will not recur on an annual basis and do not reduce the demand for credit.

(b) For purposes of allocations and points of order under section 302 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, the amounts realized from asset sales or prepayments of loans shall not be allocated to a committee and shall not be scored with respect to the level of budget authority or outlays under a committee's allocation under section 302 of that Act.

(c) For purposes of reconciliation under section 310 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974, the amounts realized from asset sales or prepayments of loans shall not be scored with respect to the level of budget authority, outlays, contributions, or revenues reconciled under section 7 of this resolution.

(d) For purposes of this section—

(1) the terms "asset sale" and "prepayment of a loan" shall have the same meaning as under section 257(12) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (as amended by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Reaffirmation Act of 1987); and

(2) the terms "asset sale" and "prepayment of a loan" do not include asset sales mandated by law before September 18, 1987, and routine, ongoing asset sales and loan prepayments at levels consistent with agency operations in fiscal year 1986.

RESERVE FUND

SEC. 9. (a) It is assumed that, in the Senate, budget authority and outlays may be allocated to the Senate Committee on Finance for legislation that increases funding of programs within its jurisdiction if the Committee on Finance or the committee of conference on such legislation reports such legislation; provided that, to the extent that the costs of such legislation are not included in this resolution, the enactment of such legislation will not increase the deficit in this resolution for fiscal year 1991, and will not increase the total deficit for the period of fiscal years 1991 through 1995.

(b) Upon the reporting of legislation pursuant to subsection (a), and again upon the submission of a conference report on such legislation (if such a conference report is submitted), the Chairman of the Committee on the Budget of the Senate may file with the Senate appropriately revised allocations under section 302(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and revised functional levels and aggregates to carry out this section. Such revised allocations, functional levels, and aggregates shall be considered for the purposes of such Act as allocations, functional levels, and aggregates contained in this resolution. The Committee on Finance shall report appropriately revised allocations pursuant to section 302(b) of such Act to carry out this section.

RECONCILIATION OF REVENUES

SEC. 10. (a) The Congress finds that, according to estimates provided by the Congressional Budget Office, the revenue sources proposed by the President in his budget submission would actually result in $4,500,000,000 less revenue than the amount of revenue that he proposed in his budget.

(b) It is the sense of the Congress that the President should propose revenue sources that would result in the amount of revenue increases that he proposed in his budget submission.

SENATE RESOLUTION 282—RELATIVE TO HUMAN RIGHTS ABUSES IN LIBERIA

Mr. KENNEDY submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 282

Whereas the Republic of Liberia and the United States are bound by ties of mutual respect and friendship;

Whereas in recognition of this special relationship, the United States has provided Liberia with substantial economic and military assistance;

Whereas the Congress and the administration have repeatedly expressed concern about human rights abuses in Liberia;

Whereas United States assistance to Liberia has declined in recent years as a result of the Government of Liberia's persistent lack of progress in the protection of internationally-recognized human rights and in the implementation of needed democratic and economic reforms;

Whereas on or about December 24, 1989, a group of insurgents opposed to the government of President Samuel Doe entered the eastern county of Nimba and killed a number Liberian officials and unarmed civilians;

Whereas Liberian troops and provincial security forces were dispatched to Nimba County to counter the insurgency and indiscriminately killed Liberian civilians without regard to the distinction between combatants and non-combatants;

Whereas media reports and international human rights organizations have estimated that more than 200 persons, primarily members of the Mano and Gio ethnic groups, have been killed by troops of the Government of Liberia during the countersurgency campaign; and

Whereas according to the estimates of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees and other relief organizations, more than 140,000 Liberians have been forced to flee their homes in Nimba County into the Republic of Cote d'Ivoire and the Republic of Guinea as a result of the recent fighting: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the Senate condemns the recent violence against unarmed civilians (particularly members of the Mano and Gio groups who have been singled out on the basis of their ethnicity) in Nimba County, Liberia, and calls on all parties to the conflict to comply with Article 3 of the Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War which establishes the right of noncombatants to humane treatment in the case of armed conflict; and

(2) it is the sense of the Senate that—

(A) the President should convey to the Government of Liberia the concerns of the United States about human rights abuses in Liberia since 1980, especially the recent killings of unarmed civilians by Liberian Government troops;

(B) the President should urge the Government of Liberia to quickly resolve the conflict in a manner which permits the thousands of Liberian refugees to return to their homes;

(C) the President should provide all necessary support to efforts by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and other relevant international and private voluntary organizations to meet the urgent humanitarian needs of Liberian refugees in neighboring countries;

(D) the President should not permit any United States military advisors to accompany Liberian troops in fighting the insurgency in Nimba County;

(E) the President should consider recent events in Nimba County in making the assessment, related to human rights in Liberia, required by section 549 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1990;

(F) in the event that the suspension of foreign assistance to the Republic of Liberia is no longer required by those provisions of law which restrict foreign assistance to countries which are in default on foreign assistance loans (commonly known as the Brooke amendment), the President should not resume military assistance to the Republic of Liberia until the Government of Liberia has—

(i) ended the indiscriminate killing of civilians by Liberian troops in Nimba County;

(ii) instituted a fair and impartial inquiry into human rights abuses in Nimba County and allowed credible international human rights organizations complete access to the affected regions;

(iii) taken steps to investigate and prosecute those individuals, including members of the Liberian armed forces, guilty of human rights abuses; and

(iv) made substantial progress in promoting the safe return of refugees to Nimba County; and

(G) the Government of Liberia should honor its commitment to hold scheduled elections in 1991 and ensure circumstances in Liberia that are conducive to a free and fair election process.

SEC. 2.

The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of this resolution to the President.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a Senate resolution condemning human rights violations in Liberia and urging the President to suspend all United States military assistance to Liberia until the human rights situation in that country has improved.

Congressman TED WEISS introduced a similar resolution in the House of Representatives on March 8, and it was passed unanimously by the House on April 24. I hope that the Senate will also recognize the importance of this measure.

The United States and Liberia have had a close and unique relationship for over 150 years. Modern Liberia was founded in 1822 by freed United States slaves, with the aid of President James Monroe and funds from Congress for the purchase of land from local chiefs.

Since that time, the United States and Liberia have been close allies and trading partners. Today, United States firms are the largest investors in Liberia. During the past decade, Liberia has received nearly $500 million in United States aid—more per capita than any other sub-Saharan African nation.

In light of our long history of friendship and goodwill with the Liberian people, it is imperative that the United States do all it can to prevent further bloodshed.

This past, December, a small group of political insurgents entered Nimba County, Liberia, from the Ivory Coast in an attempt to overthrow the government of President Samuel Doe. The group reportedly had been trained in Libya and was led by Charles Taylor, a former Doe cabinet member who had fled the country after being charged with corruption.

President Doe sent government troops into Nimba County to oppose the invaders. Two U.S. military officers accompanied the troops to advise the commanders on disciplinary matters.

Doe's army brutally suppressed the insurgency, decapitating and dismembering suspected rebels, and machinegunning and burning villages suspected of supporting them. Within a week, the army reported that it was in complete control of Nimba County.

After putting down the insurgency, the army went on a rampage, reportedly robbing, raping, burning, torturing, and killing hundreds of Nimba County residents. In one instance, troops allegedly buried alive 125 preschool children in a mass grave.

Human rights organizations report that as many as 500 civilians were killed in the early phases of the violence. More than 150,000 Liberians—over 5 percent of the country's population and more than half of Nimba County—were driven from their homes by the army and fled to the Ivory Coast and Guinea.

Some civilians fought back by ambushing government troops and joining forces with remaining insurgents. Much of the fighting has followed ethnic lines, with Gio and Mano tribes opposing the army, which has been recruited largely from Doe's Krahn tribe.

The violence continues today, and is such a significant threat to civilian security that the State Department has suspended the Peace Corps program in Liberia and is allowing American diplomats to leave the country with their families.

The vicious actions of Doe's forces are inexcusable. In addition, the presence of United States military advisers in Nimba County, even assuming the best of intentions, has risked United States complicity in the Liberian Army's brutality.

These human rights violations are all too typical of the Doe regime. Human rights organizations have reported numerous outbursts of unjustified violence by Doe's army during the past decade. Examples include the beating and raping of hundreds of peaceful university demonstrators in 1984 and the murder of hundreds of innocent civilians in the aftermath of the 1985 coup attempt.

Despite promises to the contrary, Doe has taken no steps to institute a multiparty democracy. Indeed, since Doe seized power in a coup in 1980, there has been no democracy of any form in Liberia. The only election held since his coup was fraudulent, and the legislature is subject to inordinate presidential influence.

In 1986, a GAO report disclosed that between 1980 and 1985 millions of dollars in United States aid to Liberia was deposited into private bank accounts. In response to this report and human rights violations by the government of President Doe, United States aid to Liberia has dropped significantly during the past 5 years. In 1985, economic and military assistance totaled $77.5 million. By 1990, this figure had dropped to $11.8 million.

The resolution I am introducing today condemns the violence in Liberia and calls on President Bush to suspend all United States military assistance to that Nation until human rights conditions have improved significantly. This measure will send a message to Liberia that Congress and the President consider human rights—and the Liberian people—a priority in our foreign policy.

United States military aid to Liberia is currently being withheld pursuant to the Boland amendment, which restricts foreign assistance to countries that are in default on foreign assistance loans. The resolution would add human rights conditions to this economic restriction.

It would also prohibit United States military advisers from accompanying Liberian troops fighting in counterinsurgency campaigns. The presence of United States advisers under such circumstances is misleading, since it conveys the impression that the United States endorses the actions of the Liberian troops.

The resolution also urges President Doe to permit human rights groups to conduct an impartial inquiry into human rights abuses committed in Nimba County and to prosecute individuals found to have committed such crimes.

In addition, it calls on the President to support the efforts of the United Nations Commissioner for Refugees and other international and private voluntary organizations seeking to aid Liberian refugees and facilitate their safe passage back to their homes.

With respect to the national elections scheduled in Liberia for 1991, the resolution urges the Government of Liberia to honor its commitment to hold these elections and to take steps to ensure that the election process is free and fair.

I urge President Doe to recognize the wisdom of holding free elections in Liberia. The ballot box has played a crucial role this year in resolving longstanding differences in countries ranging from Namibia to Nicaragua. Free and fair elections can play a similar, positive role in Liberia.

The United States should lose no time in responding to the current situation in Liberia. If we want to build on our long and positive relationship with the Liberian people, we should make certain that we are supporting progress toward a democratic system that guarantees fundamental rights of freedom and liberty, not a military regime of repression and intolerance.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution on behalf of the Liberian people.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

HATCH ACT REFORM AMENDMENTS

DOMENICI (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1609

Mr. DOMENICI (for himself, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. LOTT, and Mr. MCCAIN) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 135) to amend title 5, United States Code, to restore to Federal civilian employees their right to participate, as private citizens, in the political processes of the Nation, to protect such employees from improper political solicitations, and for other purposes, as follows:

On page 4, line 4, strike out "An employee" and insert in lieu thereof "(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b), an employee".

On page 4, line 11, strike out all beginning with the comma through "organization" on line 19.

On page 4, insert between lines 21 and 22 the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) An employee of any department or agency described under paragraph (3) (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may not request or receive from, or give to, an employee, a Member of Congress, or an officer of a uniformed service a thing of value for political purposes.

"(2) No employee of any department or agency described under paragraph (3) (except one appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate), may take an active part in political management or political campaigns.

"(3) The departments and agencies to which the provisions of this subsection apply are:

"(A) Department of Justice;
"(B) Central Intelligence Agency;
"(C) Internal Revenue Service;
"(D) Federal Election Commission;
"(E) National Security Council;
"(F) National Security Agency/Central Security Service;
"(G) Merit Systems Protection Board;
"(H) Office of Special Counsel;
"(I) Customs Service;
"(J) Bureau of Tobacco, Alcohol and Firearms;
"(K) Secret Service;
"(L) Defense Intelligence Agency; and

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'active part in political management or in a political campaign' means those acts of political management or political campaigning which were prohibited for employees of the competitive service before July 19, 1940, by determinations of the Civil Service Commission under the rules prescribed by the President.".

SIMPSON AMENDMENT NO. 1610

Mr. SIMPSON proposed an amendment to the bill S. 135, supra, as follows:

On page 4, line 19, strike out "Federal employee organization" and insert in lieu thereof:

"Federal labor organization as defined under section 7103(4) of this title or a Federal employee organization which as of the date of enactment of the Health Act Reform Amendments of 1990 had a multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441(a)(4)).".

On page 4, line 13, strike out all beginning with the word "Federal" through "organization" on line 14 and insert in lieu thereof:

"Federal labor organization as defined under section 7103(4) of this title or a Federal employee organization which as of the date of the enactment of the Hatch Act Reform Amendments of 1990 had a multicandidate political committee (as defined under section 315(a)(4) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441(a)(4)).".

ROTH AMENDMENT NO. 1611

Mr. ROTH proposed an amendment to the bill S. 135, supra, as follows:

On page 4, line 4, strike out "An employee" and insert in lieu thereof "(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b), an employee".

GLENN AMENDMENT NO. 1612

Mr. GLENN proposed an amendment to the bill S. 135, supra, as follows:

On page 4, line 21, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon and "or" and the following:

"(4) knowingly solicit or discourage the participation in any political activity of any person who—

"(A) has an application for any compensation, grant, contract, ruling, license, permit, or certificate pending before the employing office of such employee; or

"(B) is the subject of or a participant in an ongoing audit, investigation, or enforcement action being carried out by the employing office of such employee.

NOTICES OF HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON SMALL BUSINESS

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I would like to announce that the Small Business Committee will hold a full committee hearing on Wednesday, May 16, 1990, to examine problems in the Small Business Administration's Small Business Investment Companies [SBIC] Program. The hearing will be held in room 428A of the Russell Senate Office Building and will commence at 2 p.m. for further information, please call John Ball, staff director of the committee at 224-5175.

COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the public that a hearing has been scheduled before the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

The hearing will take place Thursday, May 17, 1990, at 9:30 a.m. in room SD-366 of the Senate Dirksen Office Building in Washington, DC.

The purpose of the hearing is to hear testimony on S. 2362, to enhance the survivability and recovery of the insular areas from severe storms.

For further information, please contact Jim Beirne at (202) 224-2564, or Pat Temple at (202) 224-4756.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

SUBCOMMITTEE ON NEAR EASTERN AND SOUTH ASIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs of the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, May 10, at 2 p.m. to receive a closed briefing on the situation in Kashmir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON CONSUMER

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Consumer Subcommittee of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on May 10, 1990, at 10:30 a.m. to hold a hearing on S. 1400, the Product Liability Reform Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Select Committee on Intelligence be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, May 10, 1990, at 2 p.m. to hold a closed hearing on intelligence matters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Select Committee on Indian Affairs be authorized to meet on May 10, 1990, beginning at 2 p.m., in 485 Russell Senate Office Building, to consider the nomination of Anthony J. Hope for the position of Chairman for the National Indian Gaming Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS, NATIONAL PARKS AND FORESTS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Public Lands, National Parks and Forests be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate, May 10, 1990, 2 p.m. for a hearing to receive testimony on S. 1767, to reimburse Montana and individuals for expenses incurred to test cattle for brucellosis organisms carried outside Yellowstone National Park by elk and bison, and for other purposes; S. 2343, to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating a segment of the Clarks Fork River in the State of Wyoming as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System; and H.R. 2809, to provide for the transfer of certain lands to the State of California, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Armed Services be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, May 10, 1990, at 9 a.m. to receive testimony on alternatives for increasing the utilization of Reserve forces in the Department of Defense, in review of S. 2171, the Department of Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 1991.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON STRATEGIC FORCES AND NUCLEAR DETERRENCE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Armed Services Committee, Subcommittee on Strategic Forces and Nuclear Deterrence be authorized to meet in closed session on Thursday, May 10, 1990, at 2 p.m. to receive testimony on the B-2 low observability and counterstealth analyses, in review of S. 2171, the Department of Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 1991.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON AVIATION

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Aviation, of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on May 10, 1990, at 2 p.m. to hold a hearing on the reauthorization of the National Transportation Safety Board [NTSB].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY AND SPACE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Science, Technology and Space, of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on May 10, 1990, at 2:30 p.m. to hold a hearing on the NASA space science and applications.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be authorized to hold a business meeting during the session of the Senate on May 10, 1990, at 11 a.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, May 10, at 10 a.m. to hold a nomination hearing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Thursday, May 10, at 2 p.m. to hold a nomination hearing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

EAST COAST LAW ENFORCEMENT RUN

● Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a group of fallen heroes who have served this country: our law enforcement officials. This month we will each have the opportunity to honor these men and women who have given their lives so they might protect the lives of others when the east coast law enforcement run comes to Washington.

In conjunction with the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial fund and East Coast Peace Officers Organizations, the nearly 500 mile run from Boston to Washington will raise funds for the National Law Enforcement Memorial currently under construction in Washington. The memorial will honor the nearly 30,000 law officers who have been killed in the line of duty.

On May 10 over 100 police officers from Massachusetts will begin the long run toward Washington. After crossing the Commonwealth from Springfield to Boston, they will travel down the coast to Warwick, RI, through the buroughs of New York City, into Trenton, NJ, through the neighborhoods of Baltimore, and finally to our Nation's Capital.

At each of these stops they will be joined by other officers on this very special journey. With each step these individuals run, they will carry with them the memories of those whose lives ended too soon. For the family of Sherman Griffiths, they will carry with them the memory of a father, husband, and brother who gave his life fighting the scourge of drugs which plague countless communities in our country today. A Boston police officer assigned to the drug control unit, Sherman Griffiths knew the perils of his job. Yet he spent every day of his life as an officer seeking to protect people from those who hold the law, and too often life, in contempt. One night while executing a search warrant into a house suspected of dealing drugs, Sherman Griffiths was shot and killed.

The family of Sherman Griffiths has organized this run to honor his memory as well as the memory of so many other officers who lost their lives in the line of duty. Far too often in our Nation's history we forget to honor those who serve this country. With the national law enforcement run, the family of Sherman Griffiths, as well as the family and friends of over 30,000 officers in this country who have lost their lives in the line of duty, will never be forgotten.●

TOM MANN, RECIPIENT OF 1990 CIVIL LIBERTARIAN OF THE YEAR AWARD, RETIRING

● Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise today to salute one of the great leaders in advocating civil rights and justice in the State of Iowa: Mr. Tom Mann, who is retiring after serving 8 years in the Iowa State Senate.

Mr. Mann was born in Tennessee. He received his J.D. from the University of Iowa in 1974 and his B.S. at Tennessee State University. He has distinguished himself by serving as an assistant attorney general of Iowa and was appointed executive director of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission. He has served with honor in both the Iowa and Polk County Bar Associations.

In 1982, Tom Mann made history in Iowa as the first black elected to the Iowa State Senate. He honorably served as chairman of the business and labor committee and the ethics committee. He also served as vice chairman of the judiciary committee. In addition, he was honored by his peers by his election as president pro tempore of the Senate.

Finally, Senator Mann received the 1990 Civil Libertarian of the Year Award. This esteemed award truly reflects the great contributions that Senator Mann made to the State of Iowa.

I congratulate and commend Mr. Mann on his exceptional accomplishments and service to the people of Iowa.●

SOVIET REFUSENIKS

● Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, as part of the continuing Congressional Call to Conscience for Soviet Jewry, I want to share a story with my colleagues.

Ioselevich Iakov lives in Leningrad with his family. He and his wife, son and mother first applied for visas to leave the Soviet Union in 1979. His son married a German woman and now lives in the West, but Ioselevich, his wife and mother have been repeatedly refused permission to leave the country.

The official explanation is that Ioselevich used to work for the Radio Ministry. But he left that job 12 years ago, he never worked on military projects, and the Ministry itself has repeatedly confirmed that there is no reason why he should not be permitted to emigrate. Eleven years after his first request, Ioselevich and his family are still awaiting a decision which would allow them freedom to live where they choose.

Ioselevich Iakov is the victim of a discriminatory and capricious Soviet system directed against Jews who wish to emigrate or who simply wish to live according to their own religion and culture. When I last visited with Soviet refuseniks in July, I was told that their freedom had increased but that Soviet authorities kept the Jewish community off-balance by suddenly withdrawing newly granted liberties. Since then, however, the situation has gotten even worse.

Glasnost can be a wonderful thing—an opening up of expression, a freedom to speak. But glasnost also provides a broad forum for those who spout hatred. Anti-Semitism has always flourished when economies founder, especially in Eastern Europe. In this time of rising anti-Semitism and persecution, the rights of minorities must be most scrupulously protected. The fundamental right to emigrate has never been of greater importance to Soviet Jews. We must all stand together to reaffirm that right, for Ioselevich Iakov and thousands of others like him.●

TRIBUTE TO ELLIS AND SYLVIA SEGAL

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to a distinguished couple, Sylvia and Ellis Segal of Moorestown, NJ. On June 12, 1990, they will be the recipients of the "Keepers of the Flame" award by the South Jersey Chapter American Associates, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev.

The Segals are founding chairs of the South Jersey Chapter, American Associates, Ben-Gurion University. Active in Jewish life, Ellis is a member of the American Associates, Ben-Gurion University National Board. He and Mrs. Segal support a scholarship endowment fund and have selected the university's scholarship program as the recipient of this year's dinner proceeds.

A prominent businessman in the appliance industry, Ellis is on the board of directors of the Nationwide Television and Appliances Association and in 1987 was honored by the Federation Allied Jewish Appeal—Electronics/Appliances Division.

Throughout his life, Mr. Segal has participated actively in local, national, and international Jewish affairs as a member of the executive board of Beth Jacob-Beth Israel, B'rith Sholom, B'nai B'rith, the Israel Tennis Centers and the Golden Slipper. The recipient of many awards, in 1983 he was honored as B'nai B'rith's Man of the Year, and in 1986 by Beth Jacob-Beth Israel at its Rabbis Dinner.

Mrs. Segal is founder and past president of the Southern New Jersey Chapter of Cystic Fibrosis, and is involved in many community programs. A financial supporter of the Jewish Federation Women's Division, she and Ellis funded the Beth Jacob-Beth Israel Synagogue library in memory of their parents.

It is fitting that the Segals be recognized on this occasion, the 20th anniversary year of Ben-Gurion University of the Negev. Inspired by the vision of Israel's statesman, David Ben-Gurion, the university was given the task of spearheading the development of Israel's vast desert area, the Negev.

Today, the university has inspired many young people to carry on the love of learning through its many excellent scholastic programs. These young people are the scientists, educators, engineers, and students, the Keepers of the Flame who will help lead Israel into the 21st century.

It is fitting therefore, that Sylvia and Ellis Segal, an outstanding and generous couple be recognized in this manner. They are most deserving honorees of the Keepers of the Flame Award.

Through their efforts and love of Israel, Jewish life, and education, many have benefited. I congratulate them, and join their family, friends, and colleagues in acknowledging their special contributions.

May the good work of the South Jersey Chapter continue to give young people an opportunity for learning at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, an outstanding educational and research institution.●

CARROL HENDERSON, SUPERVISOR, MINNESOTA DEPARTMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES NON-GAME WILDLIFE PROGRAM

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to recognize the outstanding achievements of Carrol Henderson, who developed the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources' Non-game Wildlife Program. Under his guidance, this program has become into one of this Nation's model non-game wildlife programs. On May 16, 1990, Mr. Henderson will receive the Chevron Conservation Award as one of the Nation's top 10 conservationists.

When Minnesota's Non-game Wildlife Program was established in 1977, it was given no money. It was up to Carrol Henderson, its first and only supervisor, to create the program out of nothing but an idea to protect Minnesota's wildlife. In 1980, the "chickadee checkoff" was added to Minnesota's tax forms. This allowed citizens to designate $1 or more from their income tax for nongame purposes. Today, Henderson supervises a program with a budget of $1.2 million and staff of six.

When Carrol Henderson began to build Minnesota's Non-game Wildlife Program, the wildlife protection movement was just beginning in this Nation. Today, Minnesota's program serves as a model for other States. This is a tribute to Carrol's dedication and devotion to his life-long concern for all wildlife. Mr. President, Carrol was profiled recently in the Saint Paul Pioneer Press and I ask that this article be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks. Everyone should know about the person behind Minnesota's Non-game Wildlife Program and its success.

The article follows:

NON-GAME WILDLIFE CHIEF RIGHT MAN AT RIGHT TIME

(By Wayne Wangstad)

Wildlife management is a vocation traditionally known for its highs and lows—high job satisfaction and low pay—which seems an appropriate way to introduce Carrol Henderson.

"There's never been a big profit motive in my career. I've always been more interested in providing long-term benefits to wildlife," said Henderson, the energetic and innovative supervisor of the Minnesota Natural Resources Department's non-game wildlife program.

The program, which is concerned with conservation of feathered friends and furry creatures not sought by hunters, was created in 1977 with no legislative funding and Henderson as supervisor. In reality, there was no program; it was up to Henderson to create one.

Three years later, Minnesota became the third state to fund non-game wildlife programs by allowing citizens to designate $1 or more from their income tax for non-game purposes, a procedure that quickly became known as "the chickadee checkoff."

Today, the non-game program has a $1.2 million budget and a regional staff of six. In all, a dozen people are working on non-game wildlife programs in Minnesota. The Minnesota non-game wildlife program has become a model for other states. Thirty-four states now have similar programs and funding.

On May 16, Henderson will travel to Washington, D.C., to receive the Chevron Conservation Award for the programs he developed over the 13 years he has headed the Minnesota program. The award, which originated 36 years ago, is presented annually by Chevron Corp. to the nation's top 10 conservationists.

Henderson, 43 traces his interest in wildlife and conservation to his youth on a 132-acre farm near Zearing, Iowa, a community of 500 some 25 miles northeast of Ames. He recalled how his father pointed out bird nests in the field, how he helped his grandfather build bird houses and how he and his five siblings received nature guides and bird books as presents.

As he grew up, Henderson became interested in other wildlife activities, including trapping, which provided pocket money during his teen-age years. "Trapping is looked down on by people today, but while I was growing up, trapping was one of the avenues by which I became interested in helping wildlife as a adult," he said.

KNOWN AS A DOER

If Henderson has a reputation, it is as a doer, and it was undoubtedly honed in high school. He was on the track team, was a soloist in musical groups, played the tenor saxophone and clarinet, and was editor of the yearbook and newspaper. He also was class valedictorian—a class, he quickly added, that numbered only 44.

It was on to the University of Iowa then for a degree in zoology and a minor in botany, and a growing interest in wildlife conservation as a career. The next stop was the University of Georgia and a broad three-year program that led to a master's degree in forest resources, although his course of study was broader than just forestry.

His work at the University of Georgia included five months of studying Costa Rican wildlife. It was in Costa Rica that he met his wife, Ethelle. They have a 17-year-old son, Craig, who is a junior at Blaine High School.

Degree in hand, Henderson spent three years in the Air Force as a communications maintenance officer. When he was stationed at Biloxi, Miss., and Altus, Okla., he taught evening classes on natural resource conservation at local universities.

Out of the Air Force and unemployed, Henderson was offered a job as an environmental consultant to measure the impact a Georgia highway project would have on fish and wildlife. The highway was not built.

In 1974, Henderson left Georgia to become assistant manager of the Lac Qui Parle Wildlife Area in western Minnesota and established his affinity for placing job satisfaction before cash. "I left a job paying $15,000 a year to take one that paid $10,000 a year. The company I was with offered to cut my salary so I could stay in Georgia," he recalled with a grin.

For the next three years, he was involved in game law enforcement, wildlife surveys, restoration projects, building fences and myriad other activities. "It seemed like no two days were the same," Henderson said.

It seems Henderson was the right man at the right place at the right time with the right education and experience when the non-game wildlife program was established. Creating the program, Henderson said, was an acknowledgement of broad public interest in all species of wildlife.

"I think the public now wants to be looking out for all species," he said, adding that concern for non-game species stems in part from concern for endangered creatures, and the impact various things have on wildlife.

"If you have a good non-game program, it becomes a preventative program that prevents species from becoming endangered . . . it is proactive and not a reactive approach. It is like preventive medicine. I think people can relate to that," said Henderson, who is former president of the Non-game Wildlife Association of North America.

During the three years when there was no legislative funding, Henderson surveyed non-game wildlife with the help of volunteers, issued status reports, gave speeches to various groups "and quickly learned the importance of grassroots support."

When the Legislature created the "chickadee checkoff," Henderson said, "it created an instant opportunity for a tremendous amount of progress in non-game conservation."

SUPPORT IS EVIDENT

He cites a survey by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service when he argues there is "enormous public support" for non-game wildlife, such as songbirds, in Minnesota. "A total of $237 million was spent in 1985 in Minnesota alone on wildlife photography, birdwatching, bird feeding and wildlife related tourism. In that same year, $217 million was spent on hunting-related recreation," he said.

His reputation as a doer serves Henderson well when he admits it is at times difficult to determine where his work ends and his pleasure begins.

For example, he still gives at least one speech a week. Yet he has found time to write two books about his hobbies, "Landscaping for Wildlife," which explains what to plant to attract wildlife to your land, and "Woodworking for Wildlife," which details how to construct various wildlife structures. The landscape book sold more than 25,000 copies the first year. The woodworking book has sold more than 50,000 copies. Henderson does not receive any royalties.

Wildlife photography also is among his avocations, and for the past six years Henderson has led groups on wildlife photo and birdwatching tours to Costa Rica. He also is an avid hunter and a taxidermist, and numerous birds he has mounted are displayed in his work cubicle and elsewhere in the DNR headquarters building at 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul. In addition, he maintains a bluebird trail with 25 birdhouses in Anoka County.

Henderson admits his program is small compared with other state programs, and he acknowledges he cannot do everything he would like to help wildlife. But he sees that as an opportunity or "a conduit to get others involved, either through fundraising or volunteering."

ABOUT CARROL HENDERSON

Age: 43.

Home: Blaine.

Education: Graduate of Iowa State University and the University of Georgia.

Family: Wife, Ethelle, and son, Craig.

Quote: "The way I feel (about people opposed to hunting and trapping) is that much of this is a red herring that diverts attention away from significant wildlife problems."●

COORS' LITERACY CAMPAIGN

● Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, I rise today to applaud the efforts of the Coors Foundation for Family Literacy, established by the Coors Brewery of Golden, CO, for its campaign to eliminate illiteracy in America. On its own initiative, Coors has implemented a community outreach program, called Literacy—Pass It On, to teach the skill of reading English to those who lack it. Illiteracy rates are alarmingly high, currently affecting one in every five adults. The fact that an estimated 30 million people in the United States are functionally illiterate and another 45 million are marginally illiterate is simply unacceptable, and Coors has taken a bold step in helping to address this problem.

The Coors Foundation for Family Literacy has already made three initial contributions of $250,000 each to existing, broad-based literacy organizations which expect to teach 30,000 people to read this year. The project is anticipated to run 5 years and will teach 500,000 people to read. Toward this end, Coors plans to donate $8 million of its own resources for this ambitious project. In this way, Coors is acting to reduce illiteracy rates while many others merely talk about it. This program not only serves a tremendous need in this great Nation of ours, but will also enhance communication and understanding among all peoples.

It is precisely these goals which were envisioned by the Senate when we passed the National Literacy Act—S. 1310—earlier this year.

It is with great pride that I represent the State of Colorado where private industry is dedicated to making this a totally literate nation and helping to open new doors of opportunity for all our citizens.●

FORMER MEMBER OF CONGRESS AND SECRETARY OF THE ARMY JOHN O. MARSH ENDORSES CONGRESSIONAL TERM LIMITATION

● Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, support for congressional term limitation continues to grow. The recent addition of Senator HELMS as a cosponsor to Senate Joint Resolution 235 brings the total up to 14. I would like to share with my colleagues a letter I have recently received from former Congressman and Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh, endorsing term limitation. It is an idea whose time has come, and I urge the remaining 76 Senators who have not yet cosponsored to reconsider this urgent reform.

I ask that Mr. Marsh's letter appear in the RECORD.

The letter follows:

HAZEL THOMAS FISKE,
WEINER, BECKHOM & HANES,
Falls Church, VA, May 2, 1990.

Hon. GORDON J. HUMPHREY,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR GORDON: You wrote me concerning my views on limiting the terms of the members of Congress. This is a matter in which I agree with you, and you may add my name to that list of others who share this position.

The twelve-year maximum for both Houses would, I think, be a good rule. A suggestion that might be given consideration is giving House members a three-year term and dividing the House into two classes, which would mean that occasionally you would have elections in odd-numbered years, but House members would still be limited for four terms. I bring this up as food for thought.

I'd like to drop by and talk with you sometime.

Sincerely,

JOHN. D. MARSH, JR.●

A PARTNERSHIP TO PROTECT WOMEN

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, this Sunday, millions of Americans will celebrate Mother's Day. For most of us, this will be a day of joy. But for the families of the 40,000 women who have died from breast cancer over the past year, this may be a difficult day.

One out of every ten women in the United States will develop breast cancer. With those percentages, there cannot be one among us who has not had a spouse, a mother, a sister, a daughter who has had to face either the possibility or the reality of breast cancer.

If the cancer has not spread, the 5-year survival rate is 90 percent. If, however, detection comes too late, the 5-year survival rate drops to 66 percent. Nationwide, breast cancer is the second leading cause of death among women; in my home State of Illinois, breast cancer kills more women than any other illness.

There is no question that the key to reducing the number of breast cancer related deaths is early detection. The mammogram has become a very safe, highly effective method of detection—sometimes finding precancerous conditions months before any serious problems might have developed. Yet millions of women either have no health insurance or have health insurance that will not cover mammograms for preventive, rather than diagnostic, purposes.

A number of prominent women have lent their energy and talent to the fight to win the war against breast cancer—Betty Ford, Nancy Reagan, Marilyn Quayle, Jill Ireland. And more and more women are beginning to understand that the tools are available to provide early detection of breast cancer and, through this, save thousands of lives every year.

But there are still millions of women to be reached. Knowing of the education and outreach that must proceed, it was great to see that two local businesses—Columbia Hospital for Women and Le Printemps, a flower shop, are offering "Mammograms for Mother's Day." The "Perfect Arrangement" adds a certificate for a screening mammogram at the Betty Ford Comprehensive Breast Center at Columbia Hospital for Women to floral arrangements being delivered for Mother's Day. What a wonderful message to send to those important women in our lives. I send both Columbia Hospital and Le Printemps not only my congratulations, but my thanks for the lives they may well save through this simple but highly effective gift.●

IN SUPPORT OF S. 2207, THE EXPORT ADMINISTRATION REFORM ACT

● Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, the dramatic political and economic changes occurring in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, the inevitable unification of East and West Germany and the creation of an economically integrated European Community in 1992 represent tremendous economic opportunities for United States exporters. Equally great, however, will be the consequences to our exporters, to our economy—indeed to our Nation—if we do not act quickly to take advantage of these opportunities.

Unfortunately, our current regime of export laws and regulations is needlessly restricting the ability of U.S. businesses to get a foothold in these new and expanding markets, thereby hampering U.S. efforts to aid in that region's economic rebirth.

The political stability and democratization we seek in Eastern Europe will never occur unless the economies of these countries are modernized and the basic human needs of their citizens are satisfied. This region of the world, Mr. President, need U.S. goods, ingenuity and appropriate technology far more than they need U.S. foreign aid. We must act now to ensure these needs are met.

Just as the events of the past year are calling us to reevaluate and redefine our foreign policy regarding Eastern Europe, so too must we rethink our concept of national security. We must put aside the worn out geopolitical thinking of East versus West and the belief that national security can be defined exclusively in terms of bombs and bullets. Our national security is also a product of the political stability and economic vitality of countries throughout the world. The political revolution which has occurred in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union can only be maintained if it is followed by the economic rebirth of that region of the world. Failure by the United States to move decisively in liberalizing our export control laws puts that economic development at risk.

Also at risk is the future vitality of Cocom, the 17-member nation Coordinating Committee on Multilateral Export Controls, which regulates technology sales to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. It is no secret that our Cocom allies are quite concerned about U.S. recalcitrance in moving to substantially reform this complicated network of export control laws and regulations.

The President's recent proposal to streamline the Cocom control list and ease restrictions on sales of advanced computers, telecommunications equipment and other high-technology items to the East bloc is a welcomed first step—but it is a first step only. If the United States does not exert its leadership at the next Cocom meeting in June to more substantially reduce restrictions on technology trade, the future of Cocom will be in jeopardy. Certainly the disintegration of Cocom is in no one's best interest, least of all the United States and our exporters.

Mr. President, it is no small irony that in the name of "national security," our export control laws prevent U.S. manufacturers and exporters—particularly U.S. electronics and high-technology companies—from providing the very means by which our goal of national security can actually be enhanced: Improving the quality of life in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Mr. President, we have an opportunity to address this issue when the Senate considers the reauthorization of the Export Administration Act later this session. One such legislative reform proposal is S. 2207, the Export Administration Reform Act of 1990, introduced by Senator CRANSTON earlier this year. I am pleased to be a cosponsor of S. 2207 and rise in support of this effort to remove the legal shackles from U.S. businesses seeking to compete in the international marketplace.

I am particularly pleased that this legislation contains the following essential reforms:

First, the bill calls for the administration to reevaluate the status of all currently controlled—for export purposes—countries; that is, the Soviet bloc, and to reevaluate the criteria for determining which countries should be controlled. Administration findings are to be reported to Congress;

Second, a new technology threshold level is established for items that can be exported to Eastern Europe without multilateral approval. Specifically, the bill would permit items which can be exported to China without approval—the so-called China Green Line—to also be exported to Eastern Europe without approval;

Third, the Secretary of Commerce is directed to identify sectors in the Soviet Union that would benefit from increased United States technology exports without jeopardizing our national security. These economic sectors would then be eligible for increased U.S. exports;

Fourth, the bill will also permit technology to be exported to Cocom member countries without the need for obtaining an export license. A license-free Cocom is absolutely essential, particularly in light of the fact that the European Community will soon eliminate all internal trade barriers; and Fifth, as to items which are dual-use; that is, commercial products which could also have a military application, the bill will eliminate the bureaucratic squabbling between the Departments of Commerce and Defense by clarifying that Commerce has sole authority to determine what is dual use. A dispute settlement mechanism is also created that will settle disputes which might arise between the two agencies.

Mr. President, S. 2207 is a remarkably moderate reform proposal which should serve as the starting point in efforts to streamline and revitalize our system of export controls. The time to make such reforms is now, we delay at our peril.●

COLORADO SPRINGS RATED ONE OF THE BEST PLACES TO RAISE FAMILIES

● Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, I would like to bring to your attention the city of Colorado Springs, which has recently received the honor of being rated among the top five U.S. cities in which to raise children. Parenting magazine, which in March listed the rankings, based its selections on several criteria. The Springs placed highly for its year round recreational opportunities, its climate, low housing costs, diverse cultural offerings from two colleges, and a campus of the University of Colorado. I salute Colorado Springs as a model representative of Colorado and ask that an article on Colorado Springs be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the Rocky Mountain News, Feb. 15, 1990]

SPRINGS RATES AMONG TOP 10 FOR FAMILIES, MAGAZINE SAYS

(By Dick Foster)

COLORADO SPRINGS.—Many cities in this "Top 10" may not interest the "rich and famous" crowd, but if you're a parent, this list is more important, and Colorado Springs is on it.

The March issue of Parenting Magazine names the nation's 10 best cities for families raising children, and Colorado Springs was the only city in the state to make the list.

Boulder was the only other Colorado city considered by the magazine, said spokeswoman Lenora Wiener, but it was estimated because of its proximity to Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, "That was a strike against it, in my view," said Wiener.

"Parenting is committed to the lifestyle of our readers in terms of cities being safe and clean, and what we found was that the only places that were viable were small cities," Wiener said.

"It's our premise that living in New York and Chicago and L.A. is difficult for parents, and there has to be a better kind of living for them. What we tried to do was pick cities that provide the best of both worlds: an urban panache—the recreational opportunities and the cultural amenities—without the urban hassles," she said.

The magazine compiled its list from a group of 30 cities selected for their quality of life by Zero Population Growth of Washington, D.C.

"We decided that of all of the issues, our primary concern is schooling, so we took those cities that had high ratings in education and from that point looked at the other issues." she said.

Colorado Springs drew high marks for its students' consistent, above-average scores on college-entrance exams and for a volunteer program that links local experts with students interested in given fields.

"A 10-year-old with an interest in astronomy, for instance, may be matched up with a volunteer from the nearby Air Force Academy to work on a science project," the magazine said.

Colorado Springs placed highly for its year-round recreational opportunities, its climate, low housing costs, diverse cultural offerings from two colleges and a campus of the University of Colorado.

If a cloud darkens Colorado Springs' sunny forecast, it's the defense-laden local economy, the article said. Many people have already lost their jobs and more may with defense budget cuts likely to continue.

TOP 10 PLACES TO RAISE KIDS

1. Austin, Texas: a laid-back place with fine schooling, good music and a great outdoors.
2. Boise, Idaho: acres and acres of parks and everything growing but the crime rate.
3. Cedar Rapids, Iowa: top drawer schools, a small-town place.
4. Colorado Springs: plenty of hiking and skiing, and it may be easier to find a day care here than anywhere else.
5. Omaha, Neb.: even transplants from the coasts find that Omaha has its own kind of urban panache.
6. Portland, Ore.: a museum to amaze, roses ablaze and a lot less rain that you might think.
7. Roanoke, Va.: not only a hub of industry, it has the Blue Ridge Mountains in its backyard.
8. Stamford, Conn.: great schools and the urban shine of a town twice its size.
9. Syracuse, N.Y.: proves that vibrant neighborhoods and lively arts are not a down-state monopoly.
10. Tallahassee, Fla.: In a state known for palm trees and pink flamingos. Tallahassee stands alone as a southern-style family town.●

EASTERN EUROPE: ENVIRONMENT AND ECONOMY

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, as the world's leading democracy, the United States has been looking for ways to assist the developing democracies of Eastern Europe resurrects their economies. While this debate continues, one important factor must be considered: Eastern Europe's environment.

As we look at Eastern Europe, we see environmental devastation. The rivers are contaminated; the air polluted; and the lands disemboweled of their natural resources. As the people of Eastern Europe and the Baltic States express their legitimate and commendable dreams of self-governance and market economy, in the same breath they state their concern about the environment. They will judge their new governments by the quality of life they can create, and the clear air and water will be central to that determination.

I believe that the industrialized nations of the world as we fashion economic assistance programs, are obligated to assist these emerging democracies tackle their environmental problems. This calls for liberal sharing of pollution control technology, joint development of alternative and less polluting production methods, and financial resources available for environmentally sound economic development.

The May 7, 1990, New York Times published an article which outlines some of the environmental problems facing Eastern Europe. This story shows the magnitude of the challenge which faces the new governments of Eastern Europe and should underscore our need to be part of the solution.

Mr. President, I ask that this article be printed in the RECORD and urge my colleagues to consider carefully the crucial role environmental issues must play in the economic development of Eastern Europe.

The article follows:

[From the New York Times, May 7, 1990]

BEFOULED TO ITS ROMANTIC DEPTHS, DANUBE REACHES A TURNING POINT

(By Marlise Simons)

ESZTERGOM, HUNGARY.—Swollen and pearly gray, the Danube makes a spectacular turn here, pushing into gentle woodlands as it surges south toward Budapest. It is the river at its most seductive: winding through the valleys of Central Europe, where it has inspired poets and composers and generations of painters who still work on its banks today.

But love and splendor have not shielded Europe's grandest waterway from abuse. From its source in Germany's Black Forest, sweeping through a catchment area of 80 million people and eight countries, it runs a gauntlet of urban sewage, discharge from factories and runoff from farms.

Along its 2,000 miles, it is continuously fed by polluted tributaries. Slowly it loses life until, sluggish and befouled, it reaches the Black Sea.

Scientists are just beginning to study the entire length of the Danube's rich and changing ecosystem, its myriad islands, the content of its nutrients and its dragging movement through the Balkans. Such investigations were severely restricted under Communist rule, and the results were kept secret.

"We could never get access to the Soviets' own studies of the lower Danube and the estuary," said Kasimon Salevich, a specialist in Danube water management in Austria.

But self-interest is beginning to stir concern in Moscow for the far-off Danube. The Soviet Academy of Sciences recently sponsored a conference on the plight of the river, and last year Soviet scientists talked to their Hungarian and Bulgarian counterparts about the need to stop contaminating it.

NEAR BIOLOGICAL DEATH

The scientists agreed that an enormous volume of pesticides, fertilizers, detergents and other chemicals had turned the Danube into one of the main polluters of the Black Sea. They also warned that phosphates and nitrates are causing a record amount of algae blooms in the shallow and land-trapped sea.

Despite the extent of pollution in the Danube, specialists say the waterway seems robust compared with the grid of rivers that drain the northern plains of Eastern Europe and spill into the Baltic Sea. Industries built over the last three decades, they say, have pounded the Elbe, the Oder, the Neisse and the Vistula to near biological death.

Environmentalists say the poisoning of the Danube and other rivers in Eastern Europe suggests that pressure to fulfill Communist production quotas has been as rapacious to nature as capitalism's urge for profit. The difference, they say, is that pressure groups in the West have forced capitalist industries to start cleaning up.

The West, it appears, has now also accepted the task of rescuing the marred waters of formerly Communist countries, whose new governments have neither the capital nor the technology to clean up the mess.

West Germany, which shares the Elbe with East Germany, plans to start work on the lower river this year and build a sewage-treatment plant at Dresden. Experts in Bonn said the Elbe is in a "dramatic state": in addition to a concoction of lead, copper, zinc, phosphates and sewage, it carries about 25 tons of mercury, more than eight times the load of the polluted Rhine.

ENVIRONMENTAL CONTRACTS

Although Bonn has signed several environmental contracts with its neighbors in the last two years, "they would never discuss the Elbe or give us the information we needed," said Marlene Muhe, an official with the West German Environment Ministry.

Sweden has pledged help to Poland, whose rivers are a major source of pollution in the Baltic Sea. The Oder and the Neisse begin as pristine streams in the mountains of northern Czechoslovakia. By the time they turn north and become the long-disputed border between Poland and East Germany, they are already laced with discharge from Bohemian and Moravian pulp, steel, glass and ceramics works.

The Vistula is still a modest stream when it reaches Cracow. Already the color of molasses and heavy with brine, it plods past this city. Poland has turned its main artery into the nation's principal dumping ground.

Upstream from Cracow, Silesian coal mines permeated with salt pour more than 200 liters of alkaline discharge into the river each day. Recent studies have shown that this brew has contaminated groundwater and wells. It is also gnawing at the foundations of Cracow and its fine medieval and Renaissance monuments.

BLISTERS ON ANCIENT WALLS

"The buildings are attacked from above, from the sulphur dioxide in the air, but they are also sucking up the salt and other corrosives from the contaminated ground water," said Prof. Zdzislaw Malecki, pointing to blisters and damp stains on ancient walls. Professor Malecki, director of the local Institute for Environmental Engineering, is participating in Cracow's restoration. "Every building has become a pollution-absorbing device," he said. "There is even more damage from below than from the top."

As the Vistula pushes north, it collects effluents, chemicals and sewage from each factory and town along the way. It is now unfit for irrigating land, or even for industrial use, because it kills soil microbes and plants and corrodes pipes and tanks.

By the time it reaches Gdansk and the Baltic Sea, "the pollution is just flabbergasting," a Swedish diplomat said. "We are not innocent either, but already 25 percent of the Baltic Sea is dead." Sweden will supply equipment for some water-treatment projects, he said, but cleaning the Vistula will require hundreds of millions of dollars.

In Budapest, the eye is drawn to seven magnificant bridges over the Danube, but hidden pipes are spitting the raw sewage of two million inhabitants into the water. Neither Bratislava, nor Belgrade, nor most other towns along the waterway treat their waste. In Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Romania and Bulgaria, industries freely spill oil, cellulose and chemicals into the Danube.

The barrage of pollution, specialists say, is rapidly diminishing the river's capacity to cleanse itself. The contaminants come in small and large doses, some easily absorbed in the great volume of water, others permanently polluting its environment.

The Danube, at the center of Europe, may appear to have no obvious guardian. But tens of thousands of people have become devoted to its protection in recent years. One of their greatest successes came in 1989, when they halted construction on the giant Nagymaros hydroelectric dam complex.

Environmentalists, citing studies by engineers and biologists, argued that the impact of the complex would be devastating: it would drown 50 islands and miles of forest, disturb the flow in tributaries and interfere with the sandy layers that clean the drinking water for Budapest.

Raising the groundwater level would also damage the foundations of Esztergom, a 12th-century city that lies downstream. And Hungarians complained that much of the electricity generated would go to Austria as payment for the dams.

Members of the Danube Circle, Eastern Europe's first large environmental group, say they fear that the project may still be alive. The three nations involved have already invested millions of dollars and plan new contractural negotiations.

RADIOACTIVE LEAKS

In the meantime, environmental leaders have other pressing concerns. They report that a Czechoslovak nuclear power plant on the Vag, a Danube tributary, is raising the water's temperature and has leaked radioactive material.

"There is a lot of unrecorded contamination," said Andras Lukacs, a geophysicist who heads the Foundation for the Protection of the Environment in Budapest. While most industries in the Danube basin lack adequate filter installations, at least they are there to be seen. But "much of the used oil from vehicles is not collected," Mr. Lukacs said. "Many storage tanks of petrol stations and depots leak. Toxic waste is badly stored.

All this gets into the groundwater or into the river. We know that much of Hungary's groundwater is polluted."

Environmentalists in Yugoslavia are demanding that Serbian industries contain their fallout. They have charged that the drinking water in much of Yugoslavia is not safe. In Bulgaria, the environmentally oriented political group Eco-Glasnost has begun a campaign against a caustic soda plant in Giurgiu, Romania, that contaminates both the Danube and the air. Everyone agrees that cleaning up the river will take years and a fortune that is not available.

As the barges and pleasure boats arrive again with spring, defenders of the Danube are planning to step up their more modest campaign among people who find pleasure and rest in the river's beauty. In Austria, environmental groups have begun a drive to outmaneuver developers by buying land along the banks and creating nature reserves.

"It is going very well, we already bought two parks," said Gunther Lutschinger, a biologist with the World Wide Fund for Nature, who manages the two reserves. "We are going to raise more funds. We see that many people love the Danube.●

THE RESCUE OF THE DANISH JEWS

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, recently, at my alma mater, Dana College in Blair, NE, a conference was held on "The Rescue of the Danish Jews." Last month was the 50th anniversary of the Nazi invasion of Denmark, and a remarkable thing occurred in Denmark as in no other occupied country. The Danish people saved virtually all the Danish Jews.

It is a remarkable story of heroism.

I had the chance to attend the first day of the 2-day meeting, and it was fascinating to hear both rescuers and rescued tell their stories. The Chief Rabbi of Copenhagen was among the participants.

At the end of my remarks I will ask to have printed in the RECORD the press release of the conference issued by the college, but it is worth noting the conclusions that were made at the meeting.

First, they concluded that the Holocaust occurred because ordinary people failed to intervene, though in Denmark they clearly did intervene.

Second was that understanding and tolerance have to be encouraged much more all over the world and that minorities have to be integrated into mainstream life. "Ghettos," which interestingly did not exist in Denmark, must be less and less a part of the landscape.

Finally, they stressed that because of racial and cultural prejudices the opportunity for atrocities to occur is prevalent so long as we have fear, hatred, and misunderstanding.

I ask that the news release from the Dana College about the conference be printed in the RECORD.

The release follows:

HUNDREDS PARTICIPATE IN RESCUE OF DANISH JEWS CONFERENCE AT DANA COLLEGE

BLAIR, NE., April 24, 1990.—Approximately 250 people from Denmark and seventeen U.S. states gathered at Dana College last weekend, April 22-23, to participate in an international conference on "The Rescue of the Danish Jews." The conference centered on how the Danish people rescued more than 90 percent of the Jewish population during the German occupation of Denmark in World War II.

Paul Simon, U.S. Senator from Illinois and a member of the Dana Board of Regents, opened the conference which, by design, occurred on Yom HaShoah, the international Jewish Day of Remembrance of the victims of the Holocaust. "We gather here to honor a people who did show compassion and courage", said Simon. "We gather to remember and ask the question why in Denmark alone were almost all of the Jews saved? We must learn lessons that will help all of humanity."

The two-day conference began with a solemn Service of Remembrance led by Dana College Pastor Linda Walz and Rabbi Bent Melchior, Chief Rabbi of Copenhagen.

During the conference a panel of experts examined the Jewish rescue from a religious, political, and moral perspective.

Rabbi Melchior began the proceedings with a historical perspective on the life of the Jews in Denmark prior to World War II. His presentation was followed by several first hand accounts by Danish rescuers and those who were rescued during the occupation. Those relating their personal experiences included Dr. Leo Goldberger, moderator of the conference and professor of psychology at New York University; Herbert Pundik, Chief Editor of Politiken, Denmark's largest newspaper; Knud Dyby, former member of the Danish resistance; Ernest Harbo, former member of Denmark's Royal Guard and Danish Resistance; and members of the audience were invited to share their personal stories.

Throughout the remainder of the conference several different perspectives of the rescue were offered by a distinguished panel of experts.

Dr. Paul Hammerich, journalist, historian and member of the Danish Prime Minister's Advisory Group on the Future provided an overview of the fate of Scandinavian Jews and gave background information about the rescue from a Danish point of view.

Herbert Pundik later gave an account of the rescue efforts from a Jewish perspective.

Elsebet Jegstrup, a member of the Department of Political Science faculty at Loyola University in Chicago shared views of the rescue from a political point of view.

Dr. Carol Rittner, R.S.M., Director of the Elie Wiesel Foundation for Humanity in New York, introduced a movie which she coproduced entitled, "The Courage to Care," a film which provided personal accounts of the rescue by people throughout Europe and Scandinavia.

Dr. Franklin Sherman, Director of the Institute for Jewish Christian Understanding at Muhlenberg College in Pennsylvania, offered a presentation dealing with the implications of the rescue for Jewish-Christian relations.

The final presentation of the conference entitled "Implications for Contemporary Moral Conduct" focused on the many lessons learned from the conference and the rescue. Those lessons included, but were not limited to:

1. The Holocaust occurred, in part, because of the failure of ordinary people to intervene. People today need to assume responsibility for what is morally right and be prepared to take personal action to ensure crimes against humanity such as those that occurred during the Holocaust are never repeated.

2. It is vital that understanding, cooperation, and tolerance of and between minorities must exist and continue to improve. There must be a concerted effort by people of the world to integrate minorities into mainstream life.

3. So long as racial and cultural prejudices exist there is the opportunity for atrocities to occur in all parts of the world and at any time.

Major funding for the Rescue of the Danish Jews was provided by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation of Chicago, the UPS Foundation of New York City and No-Frills Supermarkets in Omaha.●

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I have several unanimous-consent requests. I am advised by the Republican staff that they have been cleared by the Republican leader. He had to leave the floor momentarily for another engagement and has authorized me to proceed.

AMTRAK REAUTHORIZATION AND IMPROVEMENT ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on H.R. 2364 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2364) to amend the Rail Passenger Service Act to authorize appropriations for the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by a majority of the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of May 2, 1990.)

Mr. EXON. Madam President, on May 1, the House and Senate conferees on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990, overwhelmingly ratified the conference report. The House approved the conference report by a vote of 322 to 93. Today, I urge you to join with our House colleagues by voting in favor of maintaining a balanced transportation network.

Regrettably, the administration's budget proposal for fiscal year 1991 would eliminate all funding for Amtrak. The administration has similarly opposed the funding included within this bill. I cannot accept this as the direction we should be taking. The effect of this would be to end nationwide passenger rail service. To do so would deny the considerable achievements of Amtrak just as it would deny to the United States a form of transportation that is considered vital in virtually every industrialized nation.

Amtrak will celebrate its 20th anniversary this year. It was created 20 years ago to preserve a national rail passenger system. Since then, it has demonstrated a growing market for its energy efficient, environmentally benign alternative to increasingly congested highways and crowded skies.

As demand for Amtrak service has increased, Amtrak has become more and more efficient and is today covering a higher percentage of its own costs than any other rail passenger system in the world. Amtrak now covers 75 percent of its costs—up from just 48 percent in 1981. In contrast, the Canadian rail passenger system is covering less than 30 percent of its costs. In addition, Amtrak revenues in fiscal year 1989 were $1.27 billion, double that of just 9 years ago. There is also an increasing public demand for Amtrak service. Passengers traveled more distance on Amtrak last year than on all the many private passenger railroads crossing this country in 1970, the year before Amtrak commenced service.

The Amtrak Authorization and Improvement Act of 1990 would authorize the appropriation of critically needed capital funding for fiscal year 1991 and 1992. Appropriations at the levels included in the bill would enable Amtrak to order new long-distance passenger cars, to modernize several antiquated maintenance facilities, and to replace locomotives that have been worked double time to meet the demands of the Nation's rail passenger system.

Opponents of Amtrak argue that rail passenger service is unnecessary and outmoded. To the contrary, Amtrak serves critical transportation needs, particularly in much of small town and rural America. At present, Amtrak serves roughly 500 communities—more than the major airlines combined. In many areas nationwide, Amtrak is the only passenger service which operated during severe weather. Some 109 communities served by Amtrak have no air service. According to Amtrak, it serves 15 communities that lost their essential air service subsidy as of January 1, 1990, and air service to those communities likely will cease.

Some 101 Amtrak-served communities have no direct intercity bus service. Seventy-nine of those communities do not even have connecting bus service to transportation hubs, and these numbers increased recently as a result of the Greyhound bus strike. Thirty-one Amtrak served communities have neither air nor bus service.

Contrary to the belief of some that argue that Amtrak is primarily a Northeast corridor operation, nearly half of Amtrak's riders, three-fourths of its passenger miles, and two-thirds of its revenues come from its noncorridor operations. These are largely long-haul services, whose passengers are disproportionately poor and elderly travelers. Thirty percent of Amtrak's long-haul passengers have family incomes of under $20,000, while 51 percent have family income below $30,000. Thirty-five percent of long-haul passengers are 55 and older, and 18 percent of long-haul passengers are 65 and older.

The administration has expressed concern about a provision in the Amtrak conference report which would require that acquisitions of major rail carriers by noncarriers be reviewed by the Interstate Commerce Commission [ICC]. Adoption of this provision, which applies only to the largest railroads, of which there are currently 16, merely closes a loophole that exists in the Commission's authority to review line sales to ensure adequate commitments to maintenance and preservation of the rail system. Amtrak's president supports this provision as a means to help ensure the preservation and maintenance of the national freight railroad infrastructure on which Amtrak trains must operate.

The loophole this provision would close is glaring. Under current law, the ICC has authority to review acquisitions of any rail carrier by another carrier as well as acquisitions of any portion of a railroad by a noncarrier, an entity which does not already own rail interests. However, the Interstate Commerce Act fails to provide clear authority for the ICC to review the proposed acquisition of an entire railroad by a noncarrier. In other words, it any noncarrier seeks to acquire as little as one mile of an existing rail carrier, the proposed transaction would be subject to the jurisdiction of the ICC. Yet, if that same noncarrier is large enough to acquire the entire railroad, there is no clear authority for the ICC to review the transaction to ensure that adequate commitments to service and maintenance of the line are present. The ICC's authority would be invoked only after the transaction was consummated. The problem is that, at this point, it may be too late to protect the public interest. There may be no option but for the ICC to approve abandonment requests or reductions in service by a then failing carrier.

The provision within the conference report would give the ICC clear authority to review these matters before problems arise. It would also mandate that this review take place on an expedited basis, within 90 days of publication in the Federal Register. In addition, it limits this authority to acquisitions of class I carriers. There are currently only 16 of these large carriers, however, a failure by any one of these would have a significant impact on the public and on Amtrak service which operates over the lines of these carriers.

Let me dispel a few final myths about this proposal. First, it does not give the ICC ultimate authority to select who shall purchase a class I carrier. The ICC is charged simply with reviewing proposals to ensure that minimum public interest criteria are satisfied. Any and all proposals which satisfy these criteria may gain approval, at which point the shareholders of the carrier are free to select the best offer, as in the ordinary course of business.

Second, this provision is neither opposed by ICC, nor is there any unified industry opposition to this proposal. At our hearing on this measure last year, the ICC testimony did not take a position on this legislation, although the former chairman of the Commission expressed her personal opposition to additional legislation. However, the current chairman of the Commission was considerably more sympathetic to this proposition at his confirmation hearing held earlier this year, although he has not taken a formal position on this bill, to the best of my knowledge.

There is, similarly, no unified industry opposition to this provision. The Association of American Railroads declined a Commerce Committee invitation to testify on this matter last year. I might add, so did the Department of Transportation—another reason why I find the Department's current reservations hard to understand.

Finally, this provision is not reregulatory, particularly when it is viewed in light of the existing regulatory structure for the rail industry. In that context, the regulatory impact of this provision is minimal, at most, although the risks to the public are great if we do not close this loophole.

In conclusion, Amtrak has made significant improvements in its performance in recent years, now covering 75 percent of its costs with its own revenue, a record superior to the performance of any other passenger railroad system in the world. Amtrak has further established a goal to eliminate the need for any Federal operating support by the year 2000. In light of this progress, I urge your support for the continued advancement of our Nation's transportation network through passage of the conference report accompanying H.R. 2364, the Amtrak

Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990.

Mr. ROBB. Madam President, yesterday the House of Representatives adopted this conference report by a vote of 322 to 93. A majority of the Members of both parties voted in favor of the bill.

I hope that that bipartisan show of support will be repeated here today in the Senate, and I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

This bill is important in the macrosense, because it commits the Nation to continued funding for Amtrak, at a time when we are struggling with crumbling infrastructure and congested highways and airports. With the multiyear authorization included in this bill, Amtrak will be able to make some needed capital investments that will result in both expanded and improved service across the Nation.

But, this bill is also important to many Senators in the microsense. Senator WARNER and I are most interested in a provision that will finally enable commuter trains to run from Manassas and Fredericksburg, VA into Union Station, concluding a process that began in 1984 when I was Governor of Virginia.

As anyone who commutes to the Capitol from Virginia on I-95 or I-66 knows, gridlock does not begin to describe the traffic conditions during rush hour. When service begins, the Virginia Railway Express will carry up to 4,000 passengers a day, or the equivalent of a lane of traffic on I-95, into Union Station.

We hope that this bill will be enacted quickly, given the strong support for Amtrak in both Houses of Congress.

The Virginia congressional delegation would like to again thank the distinguished chairman of the Commerce Committee, and the chairman and ranking member of the Surface Transportation Subcommittee and their staffs for their assistance on this seemingly parochial matter.

We would also like to thank the distinguished chairman and members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and their staffs for their help in addressing the needs of commuter rail in northern Virginia.

Mr. DANFORTH. Madam President, on May 1, House and Senate conferees completed their work on H.R. 2364, the Amtrak Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1990. I did not sign the conference report because it contained a provision requiring Interstate Commerce Commission [ICC] preapproval of nonrailroad purchases of railroads.

Historically, the ICC's approval has been required only for railroad acquisitions of other railroads. ICC review of these acquisitions focuses on antitrust concerns. The ICC review provision in H.R. 2364 would extend this requirement to transactions that do not present antitrust concerns. The ICC is given 105 days to review factors such as the transaction's effect on transportation, the total fixed charges resulting from the transaction, and the interests of the employees affected by the transaction.

This far reaching review of acquisitions that do not present competitive problems is unnecessary and counterproductive. Transactions could be held up for months during the ICC review. Moreover, under this provision, terminated workers could receive up to 6 years' full salary. The potential for expensive labor protection payments and review related delays will drive down the value of railroads' equity.

A review designed to focus on railroad debt ignores the fact that railroads must have flexibility to acquire financing. Railroads have very large capital needs for their track and equipment and they need cheap capital to survive. Limiting railroads' access to debt will drive up their cost of capital. Moreover, concern about debt loading in this industry is not supported by the record. An ICC study found that railroads have the lowest debt load of any of the 38 major industries surveyed.

Some have argued that this provision is necessary to ensure railroad financial stability and prevent taxpayer bailouts such as the federalization of Northeast railroads in the 1970's. History has demonstrated that increased regulation is not the way to ensure financial stability of the railroads. In the late 1970's, almost one-quarter of the U.S. railroad industry was in bankruptcy. At that time, the ICC tightly regulated railroad prices and entry and exit from rail markets. In 1980, the Congress passed the Staggers Act to improve the railroads' economic health. The Staggers Act eliminated ICC regulation except in those instances where regulation was needed to ensure competitive rates. Staggers has worked. A less regulated environment has led to a healthier industry, in which railroad return on investment has almost doubled. This strengthened financial condition is reflected by the very fact that railroads have become the focus of market interest. Shippers have benefited as well. According to an ICC study, rail rates have declined in real terms by 22 percent since the Staggers Act's enactment.

Now is not the time to legislate increased regulation of the railroads. We should not impede the progress the railroads have made under the Staggers Act. We should not impose burdensome economic review and labor protection requirements on acquisitions that do not raise competitive concerns. Special rules for the railroad industry might have made sense 50 or 100 years ago when it dominated the American economy, but such rules do not make sense today.

Secretary of Transportation Samuel K. Skinner has recommended that the President not sign an Amtrak bill that contains this ICC provision. I ask unanimous consent that his May 1 letter on this subject be printed in the RECORD at the end of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. DANFORTH. Madam President, I oppose the Amtrak conference report because it contains this counterproductive ICC review provision. It is bad law.

EXHIBIT 1

THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION,
Washington, DC, May 1, 1990.

Hon. ERNEST F. HOLLINGS,
Chairman, Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As the Amtrak Conference committee meets on differing versions of H.R. 2364, I want to clear up what may be some confusion over the Administration's position on the provision in the House version that requires approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission of Class I railroad acquisitions by non carriers.

As the Administration communicated earlier in its floor position on H.R. 2364, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget and I would recommend that the President not sign an Amtrak reauthorization bill containing unjustified new authorization levels and new regulatory strictures on capital restructuring in the railroad industry. Regarding Amtrak, my concern is that we adopt a long-term course for Amtrak that provides a stable future for needed services and moves Amtrak toward self-sufficiency. The increasing authorizations (from $656 million in FY 1990 to $712 million in FY 1992) send the wrong message to Amtrak management, its labor organizations, and the private capital markets.

The single hearing on non-carrier acquisitions developed no evidence that such regulation was needed or would be effective. The Interstate Commerce Commission testified that it has adequate authority and that the legislation is unneeded.

The President's National Transportation Policy recognizes freight railroads as an integral and growing component of the U.S. transportation network. Without doubt, the rejuvenation of the industry since 1980 is attributable to Congress' decision to lift outmoded and counterproductive government oversight from railroads, creating a favorable environment for a significant capital investment in plant and equipment for the first time in decades.

Current law directs the Commission to evaluate mergers between carriers for their competitive consequences. In addition, the Commission has authority to review the issuance of securities or the assumption of an obligation or liability by a carrier to finance a non carrier's acquisition to determine, among other things, whether the issuance or assumption will impair the financial ability of the carrier to provide service. What the law does not do and should not do is mandate that the Commission evaluate the financing, control, and related details of a transaction when neither a merger nor carrier financing is involved.

This country must hone its competitive posture in world markets, and the cost and availability of transportation to produce and ship goods is critical to our success. For this reason, a fundamental tenet of our National Transportation Policy is that government regulation should intervene in private decisionmaking only where necessary to achieve national goals and only where necessary to achieve national goals and only in a way that achieves public benefits at least sufficient to offset the costs imposed. The provision in question not only fails this test, but also counters the favorable climate for investment in the railroad industry brought about by the Staggers Rail Act. An unwarranted "prior approval" requirement by the government of railroad acquisitions by noncarriers will discourage investment in the rail industry, by introducing uncertainly over the outcome of the regulatory process, and may delay the infusion of badly needed funds in railroads during the 100-day review period.

The first significant transportation legislation under our new policy must not set back the regulatory clock. Rather, we must continue to trust our abilities to meet future challenges with the talent and determination that have made our transportation system the envy of the world. This provision of the House version is not innocuous and I do not view it as such. Accordingly, I must advise you that I would continue to recommend that the President not sign an Amtrack authorization bill containing "prior approval" authority of acquisitions by non carriers and unjustified authorizations.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that, from the standpoint of the Administration's program, there is no objection to the submission of this report for the consideration of the conference committee, and that the enactment of H.R. 2364 in its current form would not be in accord with the program of the President.

Sincerely,

SAMUEL K. SKINNER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

THE ROBERT S. VANCE FEDERAL BUILDING AND UNITED STATES COURTHOUSE

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the Environment Committee be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 3961 redesignating the courthouse in Birmingham, AL, as the Robert Smith Vance Federal Building and United States Courthouse and that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The bill will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 3961) to redesignate the Federal building at 1800 5th Avenue, North, in Birmingham, AL, as the "Robert S. Vance Federal Building and United States Courthouse."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be offered, the question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill (H.R. 3961) was ordered to a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

ROBERT SMITH VANCE

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I would like to add a very brief personal note about Robert Smith Vance.

He was the Federal circuit court judge who was killed by a bomb some months ago, thereby causing loss to our Nation of an outstanding judge and human being. It was my pleasure to have known Robert Vance for well over 20 years and to have been a good personal friend of his.

I extend to his family, again, the deepest sympathy of all Members of the Senate and hope that in this case justice will be done.

MEASURE INDEFINITELY POSTPONED—S. 2068

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that action on S. 2068 be vitiated and the measure be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

APPOINTMENT BY THE VICE PRESIDENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, on behalf of the Vice President, in accordance with 22 U.S.C. 1928a-1928d, as amended, appoints the following Senators as members of the Senate delegation to the North Atlantic Assembly Meeting during the 2d session of the 101st Congress, to be held in Paris, France, May 11-14, 1990:

The Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD];

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. MCCLURE];

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI]; and

The Senator from Washington [Mr. GORTON].

APPOINTMENT BY THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, on behalf of the President pro tempore, in accordance with provisions in Public Law 99-603, appoints Mr. Clarence E. Martin III, of West Virginia, to the Commission on Agricultural Workers, vice Mr. Russell Pitzer, resigned.

APPOINTMENT BY THE VICE PRESIDENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, on behalf of the Vice President, in accordance with 22 U.S.C. 1928a-1928d, as amended, appoints the following Senator as a member of the Senate delegation to the North Atlantic Assembly Meeting during the 2d session of the 101st Congress, to be held in Paris, France, May 11 to May 14, 1990: The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK].

MEETING OF THE BUDGET NEGOTIATING TEAM

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, it is my understanding that the first official meeting of the so-called budget negotiating team will meet next Tuesday with the President at the White House.

I am not certain of the exact time but I understand the meeting will last about an hour, an hour and a half. I hope that we might have a rhetoric cease-fire between now and then because I know there has been some concern about certain statements that appeared in publications by different persons, some unnamed, some named, and it seems to this Senator that one way to make certain we do not succeed is to continue statements that might throw us off course.

The primary purpose, as I understand our getting together on a bipartisan basis, or a nonpartisan basis, is to come together on a package that would mean economic growth for the United States. In my view, it is very important we do that. I think that is shared by most Republicans and most Democrats. There are some on each side who have different views. Some do not think it is necessary. Some have already taken a stand on certain portions of any deficit reduction package.

But it would be my hope that between now and Tuesday we could focus on the positive. It is going to be a very difficult job at best. We do not want to make it more difficult with certain statements that may or may not have been made. So I pledge from my standpoint that anything I say I hope will be viewed as a positive statement to further this very serious and very difficult effort.

If anyone thinks it is easy to get 51 Senators, a bipartisan group, to vote for what could be a very difficult package, it is very difficult to do. I can recall in 1985 at 2 o'clock in the morning a vote on a budget resolution that was tough, and the vote was 50 to 49. And to get 50, one person had to go into the hospital and one had to come out. It just happened that it worked that way. So it is not easy.

It will not be easy even if the two leaders agree. We have had experience with catastrophic health insurance when we stood up and tried to save something. We still think we were right, but we did not win. So it is going to take the cooperation of the President, members of his staff, the leaders in the Congress and members of our staffs.

I have now indicated that on this side Senator DOMENICI, Senator PACKWOOD, Senator HATFIELD, Senator GRAMM, and myself will represent the Republicans. The majority leader has already announced his selections.

As far as I know, the two leaders in the Senate are in harmony. We have not tried to discuss it. I have not said anything about Democrats, and nothing has been said about Republicans. It seems to me that if we are serious about this, our work is cut out for us.

So I look forward to working together. I pledge the President my support. We may not succeed. I will repeat again, it is like putting humpty-dumpty back together again.

It is not impossible but it is almost impossible. So we need all the goodwill we can muster in the weeks ahead.

Madam President, I thank the majority leader.

(Mr. LAUTENBERG assumed the chair.)

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I share the feelings expressed by the distinguished Republican leader. I hope very much that we can work to create an atmosphere in which these very difficult negotiations can succeed.

As is clear to all of the participants, perhaps clearer to them than anyone else, this will be a very difficult task under the best of circumstances. The circumstances are not the best if each side is trying to gain advantage outside the negotiating process.

It is my hope that between now and Tuesday nothing more will be said to make it more difficult, and that we can proceed in good faith, as best we can, to reach agreement on what is a very serious problem of confronting not just the Members of Congress, and the President, but all of the American people.

ORDERS FOR TOMORROW

RECESS UNTIL 9:30 A.M.; THE JOURNAL; RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME; CONSIDERATION OF S. 137

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stands in recess until 9:30 a.m. Friday, May 11; that following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be deemed approved to date; that the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day; and, following the reservation of the two leaders' time, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 485, S. 137, the campaign finance reform bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SCHEDULE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, as I indicated last evening following discussions with the distinguished Republican leader, it is our intention that tomorrow will be used for debate only on the campaign finance reform bill. By our understanding, there will be no amendments offered and no votes. I hope that there will be an informative discussion on it.

Under the existing agreement, prior to the close of business on tomorrow, I will move to proceed to the emergency AIDS bill, and will file a cloture motion on the motion to proceed.

AUTHORITY FOR RECORD TO REMAIN OPEN

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the RECORD remain open until 5:30 p.m. today for the purpose of filing the reported budget resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL TOMORROW AT 9:30 A.M.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, if the distinguished Republican leader has no further business, and if no other Senator is seeking recognition, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess under the previous order until 9:30 a.m. tomorrow, Friday, May 11.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 5:09 p.m., recessed until tomorrow, May 11, 1990, at 9:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 10, 1990:

PANAMA CANAL COMMISSION

GILBERTO GUARDIA FABREGA, A CITIZEN OF THE REPUBLIC OF PANAMA, TO BE ADMINISTRATOR OF THE PANAMA CANAL COMMISSION, VICE DENNIS P. MCAULIFFE.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

SYLVIA ALICE EARLE, OF CALIFORNIA, TO BE CHIEF SCIENTIST OF THE NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION, VICE MELVIN N.A. PETERSON, RESIGNED.

U.S. SENTENCING COMMISSION

THE FOLLOWING-NAMED PERSONS TO BE MEMBERS OF THE U.S. SENTENCING COMMISSION FOR THE TERMS INDICATED:

FOR THE REMAINDER OF THE TERM EXPIRING OCTOBER 31, 1991:

MICHAEL S. GELACAK, OF VIRGINIA, VICE MICHAEL K. BLOCK, RESIGNED.

FOR A TERM EXPIRING OCTOBER 31, 1995:

A. DAVID MAZZONE, OF MASSACHUSETTS, VICE STEPHEN G. BREYER, TERM EXPIRED.

NATIONAL FOUNDATION ON THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES

THE FOLLOWING-NAMED PERSONS TO BE MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON THE HUMANITIES FOR THE TERMS INDICATED:

FOR A TERM EXPIRING JANUARY 26, 1994:

BILLIE DAVIS GAINES, OF GEORGIA, VICE JEFFREY HART, TERM EXPIRED.

GARY L. MCDOWELL, OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, VICE RITA RICARDO-CAMPBELL, TERM EXPIRED.

JEANNE J. SMOOT, OF NORTH CAROLINA, VICE ELLIS SANDOZ, TERM EXPIRED.

FOR A TERM EXPIRING JANUARY 26, 1996:

BRUCE D. BENSON, OF COLORADO, VICE KATHLEEN S. KILPATRICK, RESIGNED.

IN THE AIR FORCE

THE FOLLOWING NAMED INDIVIDUAL FOR APPOINTMENT AS RESERVE OF THE AIR FORCE (ANGUS) IN THE GRADE INDICATED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTIONS 593 AND 8351, TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, WITH A VIEW TO DESIGNATION UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 8067, TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, TO PERFORM DUTIES AS INDICATED. (EFFECTIVE DATE FOLLOWS SERIAL NUMBER):

MEDICAL CORPS

To be lieutenant colonel

FELIPE G. VIDELA, [redacted] 3/4/89

THE FOLLOWING MIDSHIPMEN, U.S. NAVAL ACADEMY, FOR APPOINTMENT AS SECOND LIEUTENANTS IN THE REGULAR AIR FORCE, UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTIONS 541 AND 531, TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, WITH DATES OF RANK TO BE DETERMINED BY THE SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE.

DAVID H. FOGLESONG, [redacted]
JOSEPH S. KIEFER, [redacted]
TIMOTHY R. REHMEL, [redacted]
TYLER W. SHEPPERD, [redacted]

IN THE ARMY

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS, ON THE ACTIVE DUTY LIST, FOR PROMOTION TO THE GRADE INDICATED IN THE U.S. ARMY IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 624, TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE:

JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S CORPS

To be colonel

JOSEPH R. BARNES, [redacted]
DAVID BORNHORST, [redacted]
FRED E. BRYANT, [redacted]
JOSEPH CIRELLI, [redacted]
DAYTON M. CRAMER, [redacted]
THOMAS M. CURTIS, [redacted]
FRANK B. ECKER, [redacted]
JAMES GRAVELLE, [redacted]
BRENT P. GREEN, [redacted]
MARSHALL KAPLAN, [redacted]
GERALD LEELING, [redacted]
JAMES D. LONG, [redacted]
WILLIAM MCGOWAN, [redacted]
DONALD MORGAN, [redacted]
KENNETH PANGBURN, [redacted]
JOYCE E. PETERS, [redacted]
NICHOLAS RETSON, [redacted]
LEE D. SCHINASI, [redacted]

THE FOLLOWING-NAMED INDIVIDUALS FOR APPOINTMENT IN THE RESERVE OF THE ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES, UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTIONS 593(A), 594 AND 3353:

MEDICAL CORPS

To be colonel

ROY T. BERGMAN, [redacted]
WILLIAM E. PATE, [redacted]

To be lieutenant colonel

PEDRO M. ARRIOLA, [redacted]
ROBERT J. BLOK, [redacted]
JAMES B. BORDEN, [redacted]
FRANK L. BUONO, [redacted]
RAYMOND C. BUSH, [redacted]
JOHN R. CLARK, [redacted]
LEONIDES A. DIZON, [redacted]
JAMES C. DUNN, [redacted]
WAYNE C. FARMER, [redacted]
AMOS G. HALL, [redacted]

RALPH A. HERMS, xxx-xx-xxxx
WUN H. HO, xxx-xx-xxxx
ROY W. HOLAND, xxx-xx-xxxx
GERALD E. KAKASCIK, xxx-xx-xxxx
LEONARD D. KASPEROWICZ, xxx-xx-xxxx
LAWRENCE O. LARSON, xxx-xx-xxxx
ANTONIO S. LICATA, xxx-xx-xxxx
JACKSON W. LIND, xxx-xx-xxxx
STEPHEN G. MACISAAC, xxx-xx-xxxx
MOSHE NMI MARKEWITZ, xxx-xx-xxxx
DOMINICK A. MINOTTI, xxx-xx-xxxx
DAVID C. NADEN, xxx-xx-xxxx
BRUCE L. PFUETZE, xxx-xx-xxxx
PETER W. PICK, xxx-xx-xxxx
FRANCIS J. TROST, xxx-xx-xxxx
SURENDRA K. VARMA, xxx-xx-xxxx
JOHN M. WHITELAW, JR., xxx-xx-xxxx
JOSEPH F. YETTER, III, xxx-xx-xxxx
PETER K. YEUNG, xxx-xx-xxxx

IN THE MARINE CORPS

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICER OF THE MARINE CORPS FOR PERMANENT APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE OF MAJOR UNDER TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTIONS 624 AND 628:
MITCHELL A. COOK

IN THE NAVY

THE FOLLOWING NAMED ASTRONAUT FOR PROMOTION TO THE PERMANENT GRADE OF CAPTAIN UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF ARTICLE II, SECTION 2, CLAUSE 2 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

To be captain

CDR. MICHAEL J. MCCULLEY, U.S. NAVY, xxx-xx-xxxx/1310

THE FOLLOWING NAMED ASTRONAUTS FOR PROMOTION TO THE PERMANENT GRADE OF COMMANDER UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF ARTICLE II, SECTION 2, CLAUSE 2 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

To be commander

LT. CDR. PIERRE J. THUOT, U.S. NAVY, xxx-xx-xxxx/1510
LT. CDR. JAMES D. WETHERBEE, U.S. NAVY, xxx-x... xx.../1310

THE FOLLOWING AIR FORCE CADETS TO BE PERMANENT ENSIGN IN THE LINE OR STAFF CORPS OF THE U.S. NAVY, PURSUANT TO TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTIONS 531 AND 541:

JAMES M. BEEKER
PETER M. BERNSTEIN
GEOFFREY L. GRIZZARD
MATTHEW A. KNAPP
JEFFREY D. LIPSKY
ROBERT W. LYONNAIS
THOR H. OSTEBOE

IN THE MARINE CORPS

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS OF THE MARINE CORPS FOR PERMANENT APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE OF LIEUTENANT COLONEL UNDER TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTION 624:

CHARLES R. ABNEY, xx...
CHARLES W. ADAIR, xx...
MICHAEL J. ADAMS, xx...
ROBERT P. ADELHELM, xx...
FREDERICK P. ADKINS, xx...
THOMAS M. ADKINS, xx...
MICHAEL C. ALBANO, xx...
PAUL C. ALLEN, xx...
JAMES L. ANDERES, xx...
ALAN S. ANDERSON, xx...
JAMES C. APLIN, xx...
CHARLES W. ARNOLD, xx...
MALCOLM ARNOT, xx...
HENRY ATTANASIO, xx...
BERWICK P. BABIN, xx...
JESUS M. BAEZ, xx...
PETER J. BALDWIN, xx...
RENO C. BAMFORD, II, xx...
THOMAS D. BARKER, xx...
WILLIAM C. BARNEBEE, xx...
JAMES F. BARNES, xx...
ROBERT B. BARNES, xx...
THOMAS N. BARNHOUSE, xx...
JAMES A. BARRETT, xx...
MICHAEL E. BARRINGTON, xx...
DAVID A. BARTLETT, xx...
JOHN H. BEADLING, xx...
CHARLES H. BEALE, III, xx...
JESSE L. BEAMON, JR, xx...
RAYMOND BEAULIEU, xx...
MICHAEL D. BECKER, xx...
MATTHEW BEGERT, xx...
RANDY B. BELL, xx...
THOMAS A. BENES, xx...
WILLIAM J. BERGER, xx...
JAMES A. BOLLENGIER, xx...
MICHAEL D. BOONE, xx...
DONALD J. BORJE, xx...
CARL R. BOTT, xx...
JOHN M. BRADY, xx...
RONALD W. BRANN, xx...
TOMMY L. BRAY, xx...
JERRY P. BREEN, III, xx...
RANDY W. BRICKELL, xx...
PAMELA A. BRILLS, xx...
JASON A. BRITT, xx...
GREGORY D. BROWN, xx...
JOHN R. BROWN, xx...
JAMES R. BRUBAKER, xx...
JENTZEN E. BULL, xx...
RONALD K. BURNS, xx...
RAYMOND CANNATA, xx...
LAWRENCE J. CARINO, xx...
STEPHEN A. CARNES, xx...
JAMES P. CAROTHERS, xx...
ROBERT T. CARRESE, xx...
JAMES W. CASFORD, xx...
JOHN M. CASSADY, JR, xx...
WILLIAM D. CATTO, xx...
THOMAS S. CECI, xx...
LYNN M. CHAMPAGNE, xx...
ROCKY J. CHAVEZ, xx...
CARY R. CHESTON, xx...
LEROY CHEVIS, xx...
MICHAEL A. CICERE, xx...
STEELE C. CODDINGTON, JR, xx...
JOHN T. COGGIN, xx...
JEFFREY U. COLE, xx...
KENNETH J. CONATSER, xx...
MARK E. CONDRA, xx...
DANIEL A. CONWAY, xx...
TIMOTHY C. CONWAY, xx...
CHARLES E. COOKE, xx...
BRIAN M. COOKER, xx...
DONALD K. COOPER, xx...
MICHAEL L. COOPER, xx...
CHRISTIAN B. COWDREY, xx...
LEON CRAIG, JR, xx...
FRANK CRILLEY, xx...
JOSEPH A. CROOKSTON, xx...
GLENN K. CUNNINGHAM, xx...
CHARLES K. CURCIO, xx...
JOHN P. CUSHING, JR, xx...
DANIEL D. CUSHMAN, xx...
GEORGE C. CUTCHALL, xx...
BRYAN M. DAVIS, JR, xx...
JACK G. DAVIS, xx...
JAMES W. DAVIS, JR, xx...
MARK S. DAVIS, xx...
JOSEPH W. DAVISSON, xx...
DAVID A. DEBRUYNE, xx...
ALBERT J. DIEHL, III, xx...
ROBERT K. DOBSON, JR, xx...
ANDREW M. DOMARASKY, III, xx...
STEVEN B. DONNELL, xx...
PAUL S. DOSTAL, xx...
BRUCE M. DOUCETTE, xx...
CARMEN DRAGOTTA, xx...
CHARLES W. DRIEST, xx...
DANIEL A. DRISCOLL, JR, xx...
WALTER C. DRIVER, JR, xx...
LESLIE F. DUER, xx...
PATRICK J. DUNCKHORST, xx...
KENNETH D. DUNN, xx...
RICHARD C. DUNN, xx...
GUY DURAND, xx...
RONALD V. DUTIL, xx...
MICHAEL A. EINSIDLER, xx...
CARL J. ERICSON, JR, xx...
PETER T. FAIRCLOUGH, xx...
LEE H. FARMER, xx...
ROGER T. FARMER, xx...
THOMAS K. FARRELL, xx...
GEORGE P. FENTON, xx...
FLETCHER W. FERGUSON, JR, xx...
JEFFREY A. FINLEY, xx...
GEORGE M. FINNERTY, xx...
DONALD E. FLEMING, JR, xx...
JAMES F. FLOCK, xx...
JOE FLORES, JR, xx...
SUSAN J. FLORES, xx...
GEORGE J. FLYNN, xx...
EDWARD T. FORTE, xx...
ROBERT T. FORTE, xx...
WILLIS R. FOSTER, xx...
PETER O. FRANCESCON, xx...
MARC E. FREITAS, xx...
JOHN M. GARNER, xx...
WILLIAM B. GARRETT, xx...
WALTER E. GASKIN, SR, xx...
JERRY G. GELLING, xx...
WILLIAM S. GERICHTEN, II, xx...
ROBERT E. GERLAUGH, xx...
KERRY K. GERSHANECK, xx...
NORMAN C. GILLETTE, III, xx...
CLARENCE R. GILMAN, JR, xx...
GARY G. GISOLO, xx...
KENNETH J. GLUECK, JR, xx...
HENRY T. GOBAR, xx...
KENNETH E. GREGORY, xx...
ROBERT C. GRIFFIN, xx...
BARNEY A. GRIMES, III, xx...
JOHN L. GRIMMETT, xx...
STEVEN P. GROHSMEYER, xx...
CHRIS J. GUNTHER, xx...
PATRICK K. HALTON, xx...
EDWARD J. HAMILTON, xx...
ERIC G. HANSEN, xx...
DONALD V. HARLIN, JR, xx...
JOHN C. HARRIS, xx...
FRANK C. HART, III, xx...
ROBERT L. HAYES, III, xx...
ELLEN B. HEALEY, xx...
ALAN P. HEIM, xx...
ROBERT E. HEINZ, xx...
DENNIS J. HEJLIK, xx...
DOYLE W. HENSLEY, II, xx...
JOSEPH F. HICKEY, JR, xx...
MICHAEL K. HICKS, xx...
JOHN W. HIETT, xx...
STANLEY E. HITCHCOCK, xx...
NICHOLAS J. HOFFER, xx...
CARL W. HOFFMAN, JR, xx...
JOHN J. HOGAN, III, xx...
CARLOS R. HOLLIFIELD, xx...
GARY R. HOLMQUIST, xx...
MONT K. HOOVER, xx...
LARRY D. HOSLER, xx...
DAVID C. HOUSTON, xx...
JACK L. HUGHES, xx...
DAVID W. HURLEY, xx...
RICHARD J. INGOLD, xx...
CATHY A. JAGGARS, xx...
ROBERT L. JENNINGS, xx...
CARL B. JENSEN, xx...
MICHAEL J. JINNETT, xx...
DAVID W. JOHNS, xx...
DALE K. JOHNSON, xx...
LARRY A. JOHNSON, xx...
RICKY B. JOHNSON, xx...
WILLIAM D. JOHNSON, xx...
JOSEPH B. JONES, xx...
JEFFREY H. KAMMERER, xx...
THOMAS R. KELLY, xx...
WILLIAM M. KENNEDY, xx...
EARL L. KENT, III, xx...
GARY J. KENTER, xx...
MICHAEL J. KERRIGAN, xx...
JAMIL S. KHAN, xx...
DAVID L. KIFFER, xx...
DAVID A. KING, xx...
ERICA F. KING, xx...
DAVID B. KIRKWOOD, xx...
MICHAEL J. KNOWLES, xx...
KENT D. KOEBKE, xx...
JOSEPH C. KOEN, xx...
RICHARD W. KOKKO, xx...
PETER D. KOPF, xx...
JOSEPH E. LAFOREST, xx...
JOHN F. LARKIN, xx...
LEIF R. LARSEN, xx...
LAWRENCE L. LARSON, xx...
ROBERT D. LARSON, xx...
JAMES M. LEAVIS, xx...
JOHN D. LEHOCKEY, xx...
SCOTT E. LEITCH, xx...
CHARLES A. LEMAY, xx...
DYER T. LENNOX, xx...
PAUL J. LEON, xx...
EDWARD J. LESNOWICZ, JR, xx...
GARY C. LEUPOLD, xx...
GARRY W. LEWIS, xx...
THOMAS C. LINN, xx...
DENNIS M. LOFTIS, xx...
ROBERT S. LOFTIS, xx...
RONNIE R. MADRID, xx...
KELLY J. MAHONEY, xx...
GREGORY N. MAISEL, xx...
DAVID R. MALTBY, xx...
NICHOLAS P. MAMMARELLA, xx...
ALBERT J. MARTIN, xx...
JACK L. MATTSON, xx...
A. J. MCANELLY, xx...
JOSEPH J. MCCLOSKEY, xx...
JAMES E. MCCORMICK, JR, xx...
MICHAEL E. MCCORMICK, xx...
DANNY J. MCDANIEL, xx...
THOMAS J. MCELRATH, xx...
JOHN T. MCGAUGHEY, JR, xx...
EDWARD J. MCKAY, JR, xx...
PATRICK J. MCKAY, xx...
MICHAEL E. MCKENZIE, xx...
JOSEPH J. MCMENAMIN, xx...
MARK S. MCTAGUE, xx...
WILBURN E. MEADOR, JR, xx...
EDWIN D. MILLER, xx...
MARK A. MILLIGAN, xx...
TIMOTHY P. MINIHAN, xx...
THOMAS E. MINOR, xx...
JOHN MOISUK, JR, xx...
RICHARD MONREAL, xx...
PATRICK J. MULLIN, xx...
HARRY M. MURDOCK, xx...
PAUL J. NAGY, xx...
ORVAL E. NANGLE, xx...
GARY P. NEWELL, xx...
RICHARD E. NICOLAI, JR, xx...
WILLIAM J. NIEMASIK, xx...
MICHAEL J. NOLAN, xx...
DANIEL C. OBRIEN, xx...
WILLIAM J. OCONNELL, xx...
ANDREW W. OHARA, xx...
THOMAS M. OLEARY, xx...
TOMMY L. PATTON, xx...
JOHN M. PAXTON, JR, xx...
JOHN J. PELLICONE, xx...
EDWARD F. PESIK, JR, xx...
MARK A. PETERSON, xx...
STEVEN J. PICCIRILLI, xx...
CLEVE B. PILLIFANT, xx...
EARL W. POWERS, xx...
ROBERT C. PRICE, xx...
WILLIAM E. PRICE, xx...
JOHN R. PRIDDY, xx...
PAUL R. PUCKETT, xx...
MICHAEL J. QUINLAN, xx...
DAVID L. RAMSEY, xx...
DOUGLAS C. RAPE, xx...
ARLEN D. RENS, xx...

HOWARD E. RICE, JR., xx...
ROLAND G. RICHARDELLA, xx...
THOMAS A. RICHARDS, xx...
DONALD A. RICHARDSON, xx...
JAMES D. RIEMER, xx...
LEONARD D. ROBERTI, xx...
SAMUEL E. ROBERTS, xx...
CHARLES ROBINSON, xx...
RONALD D. ROGERS, xx...
JAMES T. RONAGHAN, JR., xx...
RONALD P. ROOK, xx...
RICHARD C. ROTEN, xx...
ROBERT O. ROWLAND, xx...
IRA S. RUSSELL, III, xx...
JOHN E. RYAN, xx...
GLEN R. SACHTLEBEN, xx...
WILLIAM N. SAUNDERS, xx...
STEPHEN L. SAYKO, xx...
RICHARD F. SCHALK, xx...
RUSSELL O. SCHERCK, xx...
JAMES E. SCHLEINING, JR., xx...
STEVEN J. SCHNEIDER, xx...
FRANK M. SCOTT, xx...
CALVIN L. SCOVEL, III, xx...
RAY L. SECKINGER, JR., xx...
JOHN W. SERGEANT, xx...
JAMES S. SFAYER, xx...
JOHN P. SHARPLES, xx...
GARLAND L. SHARPLESS, JR, xx...
STEVEN V. SHOOK, xx...
PHILIP F. SHUTLER, III, xx...
LUCIANO S. SILVA, xx...
GEORGE T. SIMPSON, I, xx...
SPENCER H. SMITH, xx...
WILLIAM L. SMITH, xx...
FRANCIS M. SNOW, xx...
GEORGE C. SOLLEY, xx...
DENNIS C. SORRELL, xx...
RICHARD L. SOUDER, xx...
HARRY C. SPIES, xx...
DANIEL C. SPURLOCK, xx...
WILLIAM H. STARK, xx...
GERALD W. STERNALL, xx...
FRANK M. STEWART, xx...
JEB E. STEWART, xx...
RICHARD E. STPIERRE, xx...
HERBERT STRAUSS, xx...
WADE C. STRAW, xx...
JOSEPH L. STYONS, xx...
ROBERT J. SULLIVAN, xx...
JOHN F. SWEET, xx...
DANIEL W. SWINDELL, xx...
JOHN R. SYKES, xx...
ELEK J. SZKALAK, xx...
STEPHEN C. TAGG, xx...
TIMOTHY J. TANNER, xx...
LARRY D. TARBET, xx...
NORMAN B. TAYLOR, xx...
DUANE D. THIESSEN, xx...
JAMES E. THIGPEN, xx...
ROBERT TIBERG, xx...
RALPH F. TICE, xx...
EARL W. TIMPE, JR, xx...
LEONARD E. TODD, JR, xx...
STEVEN J. TOMISEK, xx...
ALEXANDER M. TORRANCE, xx...
PHILIP D. TRACY, xx...
GEORGE J. TRAUTMAN, III, xx...
MITCHEL T. TRIPLETT, xx...
PAUL A. TULLY, xx...
WILLIAM D. TYRA, III, xx...
JACK VANDEBRUINHORST, xx...
ALLEN C. VELO, xx...
TERRY L. VERMILLION, xx...
JAMES P. VOSS, xx...
JOHN P. WAGEMANN, xx...
LAWRENCE E. WAGGONER, xx...
GARRY W. WALKER, xx...
MARTIN W. WALKER, II, xx...
WALLACE F. WARRINER, xx...
STEPHEN P. WATSON, xx...
ROBERT J. WEIMANN, II, xx...
ROBERT M. WELTER, xx...
JOHN R. WESTBROOK, xx...
RICHARD M. WHALEY, xx...
MICHAEL G. WHITTEN, xx...
RICHARD P. WILKS, xx...
EDWARD G. WILLIAMS, xx...
WILLIE J. WILLIAMS, xx...
ROBERT E. WILSON, JR., xx...
JOHN A. WOODWARD, xx...
ROBERT O. WORK, xx...
RICHARD H. ZALES, xx...
RICHARD ZEE, xx...
ANTHONY J. ZELL, xx...
RICHARD C. ZILMER, xx...

IN THE NAVY

THE FOLLOWING-NAMED LIEUTENANT COMMANDERS IN THE LINE OF THE NAVY FOR PROMOTION TO THE PERMANENT GRADE OF COMMANDER, PURSUANT TO TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE, SECTION 624, SUBJECT TO QUALIFICATIONS THEREFOR TO AS PROVIDED BY LAW:

UNRESTRICTED LINE OFFICERS

To be commander

ROBERT JOHN ABEL
JAN MARIE ADAMS
WILLIAM ROBERT ADAMS
MICHAEL PATROCINIO AGOR
JACKIE DAVID AISHMAN
JAMES HARVEY ALEXANDER, JR
DAVID MILTON ALLAN, III
WILLIAM HOWARD ALLEN
THOMAS ROBERT ANDERSON
MARK H. ANTHONY
DAVID H. ARMS
RICHARD JOSEPH AYALA
CLINTON BERNARD BAKER
ROY JOSEPH BALACONIS
CARLTON M. BALDWIN, IV
CRAIG JOHN BARANOWSKI
DAVID RICHARD BARCLAY
LYLE L. BARNGROVER
JOHN HARRY BARRETT, III
DANIEL ARTHUR BATH
RUSSELL ARNO BAUER, JR
EDWARD MARTIN BAUMGARTNER
ROBERT P. BAUMSTARK
DAVID ELLIS BEALER
KENNETH D. BEEKS
PAUL K. BENFIELD
MARK MARVIN BENSON
LOU BERNSTEIN
JOHN MILLER BIRD
DAVID MARSHALL BIRDWELL
MARGARET ANNE BLACK
STEPHEN J. BLASER
PATRICK M. BLOOMFIELD
ELLIOTT LAWRENCE BLOXOM
JEFFREY R. BOGER
GORDON WILLIAM BOOKER, JR
JOHN SEARLES BOULDEN, III
CECIL DOUGLAS BRADLEY
KATHLEEN MARY HANCE BRADY
THOMAS J. BRENNAN
PHILIP BRISCOE, JR
RICHARD N. BRITNELL
GEORGE GILBERT BROWN, JR
GORDON RUSSELL BROWN
JOHN MARTIN BROWN
JOHN MICHAEL BROWNELL
MARK ANDREW BRUDER
DAVID LLOYD BRUECK
JEROME ADDISON BUCK
KIM SMITH BUIKE
FREDERICK W. BURGESS
JEFFREY D. BURKE
WILLIAM S. BURNS
CHARLES THOMAS BUSH
MARVIN E. BUTCHER, JR
JAMES GEORGE BUTLER
ROBERT ALAN BUTT
FRED BYUS
JEAN MARIE CACKOWSKI
DEBRA SUZANNE CAMPBELL
THOMAS JOHN CAMPBELL
JOHN EDWARD CAREY
KEITH PENNINGTON CARL
JAMES GUY CARLTON, JR
MICHAEL ARTHUR CARNES
RUSSELL S. CARNOT
JOHN ROSS CARPENTER
RICKY LOWELL CARPER
J. JAVIER CARRIZALES
HAROLD T. CARTER
JAMES L. CASS
PAUL C. CASSANI
JOSEPH CELANO
TIMOTHY JAMES CEPAK
MICHAEL NORMAN CERINO
RICHARD LEE CERNOHORSKY
ROBERT S. CHAPMAN
KEVIN R. CHEESEBROUGH
JOSEPH STAN CHLEBANOWSKI, JR
THOMAS MICHAEL CIRILLO
BILLY LYNN CLARK
RANDALL CLARK
JAN MARIE CLAUSEN
CHARLES RIVERS CLEVELAND
DONNIE LEE COCHRAN
DAVID ELIOT COGGAN
JOHN EDWARD COLVILLE
BYRON P. COMPTON
TIMOTHY J. CONCANNON
DONALD DENTON CONKLIN
STEPHEN ALAN CONN
ROBERT JEFFREY CONNELLY
JOHN WILLIAM CONNER
THOMAS LEE CONNER
VINCENT W. CONVERSE
JAMES DONALD COPE
GENE J. CORINI
WALTER FRANK CORLISS, II
PETER ALAN CORNELL
STEVE A. CORRELL
JOSEPH ALBERT CORSI, JR
LAWRENCE S. COTTON, JR
SHERRY TIMOTHY COWEN, III
STEVEN E. CRIME
JOHN MICHAEL CROCHET
JOHN P. CRYER, III
CRAIG T. CUNINGHAME
DAVID THOMAS CUNNINGHAM
BRUCE JEFFREY CUPPETT
PHILIP E. CURRY, JR
MARY WILSON DASPIT
PETER RANDALL DASPIT
LARRY H. DAVIS
THOMAS WAYNE DAVIS
JIMMY LEVORGIA DAVISON
WILEY ROBERT DEAL, JR
FRANKLIN EUGENE DECKER
DAVID FOSTER DEFORD
CHARLES GRAY DEITCHMAN
THOMAS EDWIN DENHAM
KEITH JAY DENMAN
DIRK POMEROY DEVERILL
MICHAEL SCOTT DIAL
CONRAD BRUCE DIVIS
ROBERT HARRISON DIXON
STEPHEN MICHAEL DLUGOS
MARTIN FRANCIS DOHERTY
JOHN E. DOLENTI
GIUSEPPE DONADIO
DANIEL LAFAYETTE DONOVAN, II
PAUL RODERICK DORIN
ROBERT ALEXANDER DORMAN
THOMAS ALEXANDER DOWELL
KEVIN P. DOWLING
FRANK MILLER DRENNAN
DONALD LESLIE DUPLESSIS
MICHAEL LYNN DVORSKY
CHRISTOPHER ROBERT EARL
MARGARET RANDOLPH EARLE
ROGER C. EASTON, JR
MICHAEL D. EDMONDS
MICHAEL JAMES ELISON
ROBERT WENDELL ELLIOTT
MARK T. EMERSON
JAMES HOWARD ENGLER
RANDY LANE ETTER
PAUL RALPH EVANCOE
STEPHEN ALLEN EWELL
WELCH CALVIN FAIR, JR
WILLIAM R. FARAWELL
RICHARD ALAN FECKLER
CALVIN JON FELTE
DAVID W. FENNELL
NICHOLAS LOUIS FLACCO
MICHAEL FLENTJE
GEORGE TERRANCE FOSTER
BRUCE E. FRANCE
CURTIS JOHN FRANCIS
DENNIS WAYNE FRANKLIN
DON ALAN FRASIER, JR
THEODORE DAVID FREDRICK
MICHAEL FREEMAN
KEVIN WILLIAM FRITCH
EDWARD FRITZ
FRED OLAV FRODESEN
CARL TERRY FROEHLICH
THOMAS JOHN GADZALA
KURT D. GARBOW
MARCIAL EDWARD GARCIA
ERIC S. GARDNER
THOMAS ALLEN GARDNER, JR
JAMES EDWARD GARVEY
BRUCE WILSON GARWOOD
THOMAS STEPHAN GEHRING
DAVID ALAN GELENTER
PATRICK JOSEPH GIANCATARINO
JAMES WILLIAM GIBSON
JO ANNE LOFLIN
GILCHRIST
KENNETH L. GINADER
ROBERT EMERY GLENDINNING
THEODORE LEBOUTILLIER GLENN
THOMAS EUGENE GLENN
JOHN STEPHEN GODLEWSKI
SCOTT WILLARD GOODSON
GRAHAM H. GORDON
JOHN PATRICK GORMAN
WALTER HARRISON GORRELL, JR
JAMES M. GRAHAM
RICHARD BRIAN GRAHLMAN
JEROME EDWARD GRAUSE, JR
DAVID REYNOLDS GRAY, III
JOHN ROBERT GRAY
JAMES E. GRAYSON
JOHNNY WAYNE GREEN
RACHEL NMN GRIFFIN
DEBRA ANNE GROSS
ALLEN WOODROW GROVES
VICTOR GUILLORY
CARL RAMOND GULL, II
GARY DAVID HAGEN
MARSHALL ANDRESS HALL
STEVEN CLARK HALL
ARCHIBALD C. HALSALL
JOHN J. HAMMERER, JR
CHRIS MICHAEL HANDLEY
RALPH E. HANEY
CRAIG I. HANSON
MARK WILLIAM HANSON
ROBERT C. HARDEE
BOBBY P. HARGRAVE
GEORGE T. HARGROVE
STEVEN ALVA HARMON
GARY DOUGLAS HARRELL
COLLEEN ANN OCONNOR HARRIS
JAMES MARTIN HART
JULIAN L. HART
DANIEL NEWMAN HARTWELL
DUANE B. HATCH
GERALD MICHAEL HATHON
DAVID A. HAWKINS
WILLIAM O. HAWN
JOHN G. HEGEMAN
DAVID KENNETH HEGLAND
KARL RUSSELL HEINZ
OTTO ERICH HEISE
WILLIAM D. HENDERSON
MICHAEL CURTIS HERB
EDWARD WILLIAM HERBERT, III
ALAN B. HICKS
RICHARD DALE HIGH
ALEX SETH HILL, JR
RICHARD CALDWELL HILL, III
THOMAS JOHN HIRSCH
DEBORAH DUGGIN HIRSH
STEVEN DEAN HISSEM
PAUL NOEL HIXENBAUGH
MICHAEL GROVE HLYWIAK
JOHN SCOTT HOFFMAN
ROY LEE HOLBROOK, III
ROBERT D. HOLLAND
RICHARD THOMAS HOLLOWAY
CHRIS LANSING HOLM
LAWRENCE G. HOLMES
WARREN C. HONAKER
ROBERT MARK HONEY
FRED BOWEN HORNE
ANDREW JAMES HOWARD
KARROLL LYNN HOWARD
CRAIG MICHAEL HUBER
MICHAEL C. HUETE
RONALD DOUGLAS HUGHES
THOMAS GERALD HUNNICUTT
RICHARD MORGAN HUNT
RICHARD WAYNE HUNT
KENNETH WILLIAM HUNTER
DAVID VIRGIL HUTSON
JAMES FRANCIS HUTTON, JR
DALE ROBERT IMMEL
JOHN THOMAS ANDREW INGRAM
JENNETTA W. JACKSON
ROBERT CHARLES JACKSON
CARL LEON JACOBS
JAMES WILLIAM JACOBS
PATRICK ALAN JACOBS
CHRISTOPHER ALAN JANIEC
RALPH EARL JANIKOWSKY
MARTIN EDWARD JENKINS, II
WILLIAM EDMUND JEZIERSKI
CHRISTOPHER MARK JOACHIM
JOANN NMN JOGANIC
DAVID LEFEVRE JOHNSON
FREDERICK GROVE JOHNSON
MICHAEL A. JOHNSON
SAMUEL D. JOHNSON
ALLAN ROPER JONES
PATRICK WALKER JONES
SCOTT L. JONES
JOE MICHAEL KACZMARSKI
DANIEL KEOLAMAULOA KALILI
THOMAS E. KATANA
JEROME LEO KAUPHUSMAN
ROBERT OSCAR KEDNEY, JR
JAMES RICHARD KEIM
JOHN W. KELLEY
DAVID MICHAEL KENNEDY
THOMAS SAMUEL KENNEDY
TIMOTHY GENTER KETCHUM
DANIEL THOMAS KEUHLEN
EDWARD KILBOURN
PORTIA BAIRD KING
ROBERT LAWRENCE KING
JOSEPH GERARD KLEEFISCH
WILLIAM LEWIS KNIGHT, JR
DONALD J. KNIZE
JOHN BENEDICT KOLBECK
GRAYSON LEROY KOOGLE
CHRIS WARREN KOPANG
DENNIS ANDREW KRANYAK
STEVE MARTIN KREUTNER
EDWARD J. KRIEWALDT
WILLIAM MARK KROSHL
JOHN LEIGHTON KUEHN
BRUCE E. KUHSE
JANICE LAI
JEFFREY SCOTT LAMBERT
DAVID ROBERT LANDON
JOHN HOWARD LANE, III
FREDERIC ALAN LANES
JOHN MARK LANGDELL
PATRICK R. LANIER
CYRUS RANDY LARGE
WILLIAM JED LARSON
KEITH SCHUGARD LASER
STANLEY CHANDLE LAVENDER, JR
NORMAN GENE LAWS, JR
ALTMAN LEE LAWSON
ANDREW WEST LEBOEUF
JEFFERY SCOTT LEE
MICHAEL ANGELO LEFEVER
TIMOTHY DAVIS LEIGHTON
ROBERT BRADFORD LEININGER
GARY RICHARD LENNON
MICHAEL JOE LEVESKAS
JOHN THOMAS LEWIS, III
JAMES ALAN LIBBEY
HORATIO ALONZO LINCOLN
THOMAS EDWARD LISOWSKI
CHARLES H. LITZ
JOHN DEWITT LOBDELL
JOHN TAYLOR LOCKS
ERIC A. LOFQUIST
DAVID L. LOGSDON
KENNETH LOMBART
WOODROW W. LONG, JR
ROBERT W. LOONEY
JEFFREY SCOTT LOVING
JOHN FRANCIS LOYE, III
MICHAEL WAYNE LUGINBUHL
SCOTT ELIOT LUSTIG
DALE EDWARD LYLE
DAVID CAMERON LYON
ROBERT BURNE MACDOUGALL
JAMES A. MACKOWSKI
JOHN G. MAHONEY
PETER ALLEN MAHONEY
MANUEL AMBROSI MALAGONFAJAR
CHESTER JOSEPH MALINS
PETER M. MALONEY, II
CHARLES HERMAN MANN,

JR
DONALD PATRICK MARCOTTE
JOSEPH FRANCIS MARK
EDWARD JAMES MARQUEZ
DAVID EDWARD MARSHALL
JOHN CAMPBELL MARTIN
RONALD BYRON MARTZ
RICHARD THORNE MATHEWS
TIMOTHY LEE MATTHEWS
WILLIAM WALTER MATZELEVICH
GERARD MAJELLA MAUER
ZACHARY PHILLIP MAY JEFFREY MAYDOSZ
WILLIAM PATRICK MCBRIDE
JAMES JEROME MCCALLUM
ROBERT MORTON MCCARTHY
KIM CHRISTOPHER MCCAULEY
JOHN K. MCCLAIN
DANIEL WRIGHT MCDONALD
DOUGLAS D. MCDONALD
RICHARD O. MCHARG
JOHN FRANCIS MCKERNAN
RONALD CANNADY MCLEOD
RONALD EDWIN MCMURDY
KEVIN P. MCNAMARA
WILLIAM H. MCRAVEN
DONALD R. MELICK
MICHAEL WAYNE MENTAS
HILARIO NMN MERCADO, JR
GILBERT STEWART MICHAEL CURTIS EDWARD MIDDLEBROOK
WILLIAM K. MIDGETTE
DAVID EARL MILLER
EDWARD M. MILLER
JAMES RUSSELL MILLER
PETER GEORG MILLER
ROBERT LEE MILLER, JR
GARY BOND MILLS
MICHAEL ROBERT MITTLEIDER
DAVID CHARLES MOORE
CARL ALLAN MORRIS
JOHN J. MORROW
JOANNE MARIE FLETCHER MOSIG
REX MYRON MOTT
THADDEUS JOSEPH MOYSEOWICZ
ROBERT E. MOZO, JR
BARRY V. K. MUHLENBERG
FRANK MICHAEL MURPHY
HENRI WILLIAM NAEGER, JR
RONALD E. NASMAN
ERIC CHRISTIAN NEIDLINGER
DOVARD WAYNE NELMS
STEVEN WILLIAM NERHEIM
MARK CULLEN NESSELRODE
GERALD LEONARD NICHELSON
DRURY C. NIMMICH, JR
RICHARD RILEY NOBLE
JOHN NOELL
TIMOTHY S. NORGART
RICHARD JAMES NORTON
FORREST ERNEST NOVACEK
ROBERT OBRIEN
SHERMAN LOUIS OBRIEN
STANLEY ROBERT OCONNOR
JAMES ELLIS OGDEN
PATRICK B. OKEEFE
DAVID LEE OLBERDING
MICHAEL A. OLENICK
RANDALL GEORGE OLIVER
DAVID BRIAN ONEILL
PETER BERNT OPSAL
MICHAEL H. ORFINI
SHAWN T. OROURKE
WILLIAM CHARLES OSTENDORFF
MILTON ARTHUR OUTTEN
MICHAEL JOHN OWENS
RICHARD A. PABST
JOHN RICHARD PAGAN
ALAN GEORGE PALAZZO
RICHARD A. PALMER
DONALD SCOTT PARCHER
THOMAS ANTHONY PARKER
KENNETH P. PARKS
JAMES RODERICK TA PATTERSON
TORKEL LLOYD PATTERSON
PERTH FRANKLIN PEARSON, JR
GERALD CARLTON PEEBLES
JOHN ALAN PERRY
MARCIA LYNN PERRY
ROBERT CLAYTON PETERMAN
WAYNE DOUGLAS PETERS
ANDREW J. PITTS
KELLEY DANIEL PLATZ
JOHN V. PLEHAL
WILLIAM JEFFERY POLLARD
JAMES LESLEY POOLE, JR
LAWRENCE RICHARD PRATT
RICHARD WEILAND PRENDERGAST
THOMAS HOWARD PRICE
THOMAS MCCLINTOCK PRICE
PHILIP SEAN PRITULSKY
WALTER NOEL PROCTOR
KENNETH SCOTT PUGH
THOMAS EDWARD PURDY
RAYMOND PAUL PUTT, JR
RICHARD KENT PYELL
GREGORY A. QUEEN
MICHAEL ALLEN RAAB
FREDERICK VAUGHN RALEY
PATRICK FLETCHER RAMMEL
HENRY TERENCE RAUCH
PATRICK ROBERT REARDEN
THOMAS JOHN REILLY
DAVID GEORGE RENAUD
TRUMAN ANCLE RICHEY, JR
DAVID EVAN RIPKIN
TOMMY LEE RINICKER
TIMOTHY CLIFFORD RIVERS
ROBERT LEE ROBERTS, JR
CARL DEAN ROBERTSON
GARY L. ROEMMICH
STEPHEN JOSEPH ROESENER
ERNEST J. ROESKE
RICHARD BRUCE ROLFE
STEPHEN WAYNE ROSE
LEE HAROLD ROSENBERG
JOHN LEROY ROSS, JR
JEFFREY D. RUSINKO
ANTONIO MARCOS SALAZAR
GARY MATHIAS FRANCI SALAZAR
JAMES A. SANFORD
JOHN FRANCIS SARAO
CLAY S. SAYERS, II
JOHN ANTHONY SCHAEFER
JOHN W. SCHEFFLER
DANIEL CARL SCHLUCKEBIER
ALBERT WILLIAM SCHMIDT
ALBERT OLEN SCHNABEL, JR
RONALD CARL SCHULLER
JOHN J. SCHWANZ
RICHARD FRANCIS SEARS
MARK A. SEELENBINDER
ALFRED RALPH SEIFERT
MICHAEL LEWIS SEIFERT
DAVID ALAN SELECMAN
ANDREW GEORGE SEVALD
JAMES LESTER SHELOR
THOMAS EDWARD SHERRY
DANIEL R. SIGG
WILLIAM E. SIMPKINS
WILLIAM JACK SIMPSON, JR
STEVEN ONEAL SINGLETON
PAUL ODIN SKOOG
RANDALL J. SLACK
DON EUGENE SLATON
CHARLES JAY SLAUGHTER
WILLIAM ALAN SMART
BERT LARAWAY SMITH, III
BRUCE E. SMITH
DAVID PAUL SMITH
GEORGE JOSEPH SMITH, JR
JAMES CHAPIN SMITH
RICHARD PAUL SMITH
THOMAS JOHN SMITH
WILLIAM BENSON HARER SMITH
STEPAN LANI SMOLSKI
RICHARD L. SNEAD
RICHARD LOUIS SNOW
JAY SNYDER SNOWDON
JONATHAN WILLIAM SNYDER
ROBERT EDWARD SNYDER
DAVID PETER SOLLIDAY
RALPH M. SOTO
WILLIAM STEVEN SPAGNA, JR
GARY ALAN SPECHT
TIMOTHY JAY SPROWLS
LARRY JAMES STACK
GEORGE ROBERT STANDRIDGE
GARY LEE STARK
GEORGE KEITH STARNES
JAMES STAVRIDIS
JOEL FRANKLIN STEADLEY
WILLIAM S. STETSON, JR
JAMES WARREN STEVENSON, JR
THOMAS NEWTON STEWART
WILLIAM BRANTLY STEWART
DEBRA ANN STRAUB
DANIEL H. STRUBLE
GARY ROBIN STRUL
JAMES CLAYTON STULLER
STEPHEN M. SULLIVAN
MARK E. SWIRMICKY
JAMES A. SYMONDS
JON SITTON TANDY
RANDALL E. TANNER
JAMES HOWARD TAPLETT
ROBERT PERRY TATE
JOHN FLEMING TAYLOR, III
GINA MARIE TECCO
JAMES CHESTER TELLEPSON
JOSEPH ANTHONY TENAGLIA
ARTHUR ROBERT TERRELL
DAVID H. THIEMAN
KEVIN JAMES THOMAS
RICHARD LAUREL THOMAS
JAMES HAMILTON THOMPSON
DAVID K. TIBBETTS
RUSSELL PETER TJEPKEMA
ALLAN RANDOLPH TOPP
PATRICK ALAN TRACY
WILLIAM J. TREON
ROBERT J. TRZECIAK
HANSFORD D. TYLER, III
MARK ALAN UHRON
GERALD EDWARD VANDAM
WAYNE RICHARD VANDOREN
KENNETH LEONARD VANOURNEY
PETER STEVEN VARSANYI
ALBERTO E. VASQUEZ, JR
MAURICE VALDIVIESO VAZQUEZ
CLIFFORD L. J. WADE
RANDALL WAYNE WALDRIP
LARS ALLEN WALLIS
KEITH ALLAN WALLS
PATRICK M. WALSH
TERRY L. WALSTROM
DANNY LEE WATERMAN
DONALD PAUL WATKINS, JR
MICHAEL N. WELLMAN
LENNART WENDEL, JR
JEFFREY F. WEPPLER
RICHARD WEYRICK
HAROLD R. WHALEN
RUSSELL PHILLIP WHEELER, JR
WILLIAM WHEELER
CHARLES E. WHITMAN
STEPHEN NELSON WILEY
DANNY BEN WILLIAMS
LEROY GEORGE WILLIAMS
MELVIN WILLIAMS
PETER JAMES WILLIAMS
EDMOND GEORGE WILSON
ANTHONY L. WINNS
ERICH HAUSER WINTER
DAVID L. WIRT
MARK E. WISNIEWSKI
MICHAEL ALLAN WITT
JILL DONAHUE WOLFE
WILLIAM ALAN WOLTERS
GEORGE LESLIE WOOD, III
WILLIAM CUTLER WOODFIN
HUBERT P. WOODS, JR
EDMUND TYLER WOOLDRIDGE
WILLIE LAWRENCE WORTHAM
WILLIAM EDWARD WRIGHT
FRANK PAUL YASMENT
GUILLERMO AUGUSTO YORK
ERIC DONALD YOUNGBORG
JOSEPH ZACHARZUK, JR
WILLIAM C. ZOBEL

ENGINEERING DUTY OFFICERS

To be commander

TED GLEN ACHORN
MICHAEL ALFRED BALLARD
RICHARD LEWIS BERKMAN
KENNETH WILLIAM BLEVINS
JAMES JAY BOLON
RICHARD L. BOOTH
MICHAEL LANE BOSWORTH
ROBERT LAVERNE BRUCE, JR
WILLIAM ARTHUR BRY
GREGORY RUSSELL BRYANT
CHARLES ARTHUR BUSH
JOSE CALAHORRANO
WILLIAM E. CASEY
JOSEPH VINCENT CLOSS
MARK CONTI
JOSEPH RUSSELL COSTA
THOMAS MICHAEL COUMES
STEVEN FLOYD DAUGHETY
FREDERICK DAVENPORT, JR
DWIGHT DAVID DEW
JAMES PETER DULLEA
DANIEL CARTER ELLIOTT
STEPHEN KENNETT ELLISON
DAVID ROSWELL FLEISCHMAN
DANIEL ALFRED FORKEL
FRANK KENNETH FORKEL
JOHN R. FRIEND
DANIEL GALIK
JOHN WELCH GEARY
THOMAS E. GORSUCH
PETER MCPHERSON GRANT, III
WILLIAM EUGENE GRAY, JR
CHARLES DENNIS GRINER
JOHN M. HAMPEY
THOMAS SHANNON HARTMANN
JOHN SUTHERLAND HEFFRON
RICHARD DANIEL HEPBURN
BONIFACIO G. HERNANDEZ, JR
CHARLES DEAN HETTEMA
JAMES M. HUNN
FRANK EDWARD HUTCHISON
JAMES LOGAN JENKINS
STEVEN NEAL JUREY
DOYLE RAY KITCHIN
DONALD RAY LOWERY
KATHLEEN MARIE LYMAN
DAVID C. NEILY
LAWRENCE GREGORY NEWMAN
LEE LEWIS OLIPHANT
STEPHEN BRUCE OSTER
ROBERT P. PETROKA
WILLIAM ROY REID
JOHN RESKUSICH
JEFFREY R. SANDER
GEOFFREY EMERSON SCHWARTZ
TIMOTHY MICHAEL SPENCE
ROBERT DOUGLAS STEELE, JR
THOMAS LEO STOWELL
STEVEN MICHAEL THOMAS
ROBERT MICHAEL THOMPSON
GREGORY BRAN TODD
EDWARD RICHARD TURNER
CARL ALZEN WALES
CHARLES J. WARNER
TIMOTHY SCOTT WETTER
WARREN WRIGHT
WILLIAMS
THOMAS DAVID WILLSON
ROBERT J. WINKLER
RACHEL LUCINDA YOBS

AERONAUTICAL ENGINEERING DUTY OFFICERS (AERONAUTICAL ENGINEERING)

To be commander

WILLIAM RICHARD ADAMO
MICHAEL ALLEN BAKER
ANTHONY J. BENN
EMORY LEIGH CHENOWETH
ALFRED WAYNE CLARK
SCOTT FRIEDRICH GRAVES
BRIAN ROLAND GRITTE
GENE GYGAX
CRAIG BLAINE LUIGART
LEOPOLDO MANCILLA MAYORAL
SCOTT EDWARDS MCCARTY
DALE ALAN MILTON
WILLIAM HENRY MUELLER, JR
KENNETH JOHN NELSON
JOSEPH WILLIAM POOLE
PATRICK JOHN QUINN
ALBERT LAWRENCE RAITHEL
EMMETT P. SCHLUMBRECHT, JR
ROBERT G. STRUTH, JR
MARK JOSEPH SWANEY
DAVID JOHN VENLET
JEFFREY A. WIERINGA

AERONAUTICAL ENGINEERING DUTY OFFICERS (AVIATION MAINTENANCE)

To be commander

EDWARD WILLIAM BLIND, JR
WILLIAM RALPH BRADBURY
MAURICE MICHAEL CALLINAN
WILLIAM RICHARD CROSBY
OWEN ROBERT FLETCHER, JR
MAURICE JOHN GALLAGHER
P. SEAN GORMAN
LAWRENCE EDWARD GOTTSCHALK
ROBERT SCOTT HEINICKE
ROBERT HOLDEN KANEWSKE
JAMES HILDRITH MARTIN
DONALD FREDERICK MOOREHEAD
RAY HOWARD RICE, III
HAROLD J. WOODBURN

AVIATION DUTY OFFICERS

To be commander

DANA ALAN HOWARD
ROBERT HENRY LITWINSKI
LANNY KAY MILLER

SPECIAL DUTY OFFICERS (CRYPTOLOGY)

To be commander

ALBERT LEO COUVILLION
JEFFREY D. FULLER
EDWIN JOHN KANERVA
ALEXIS SANDRIA LOO
GREGORY FREDERICK MANSFIELD
THOMAS M. MCCAFFREY
ROBERT ALLEN REESE
DAVID KEITH SHIMP
DAVID ALLEN SPIVEY
EDWIN HARRY SROKA
RONALD JOSEPH WOJDYLA

SPECIAL DUTY OFFICERS (INTELLIGENCE)

To be commander

ARMAND LOUIS BAPTISTA, JR
GARY CLYDE BARNES
KEVIN FRANCIS BUTLER
CHARLES WILLIAM COBERY
THOMAS EDWARD DOVE
JULIO JESUS GUTIERREZ
SCOTT CRAWFORD KEE
RICHARD JAMES KERCZ
MICHAEL JAN KUBAT
JOHN FREDERICK MADER
CHARLES ROBERT MARINEAU, JR
CHARLES PHILLIPS MOTT
DANIEL JAMES MUIR
ROBERT BRENDAN MURRETT
HAROLD LORD NEAL, III
MICHAEL A. NOLL
JOHN FRANCIS OBRIEN, JR
MARGARET ANNE SPATAFORE
JOSEPH GARFIELD THOMAS
ROBERT GARY WILLIAMS

SPECIAL DUTY OFFICERS (PUBLIC AFFAIRS)

To be commander

GEORGE KEITH ARTERBURN, JR
JOHN WILLIAM CARMAN
RYLAND T. DODGE, III
ALAN JAY DOOLEY
SHEILA ANN GRAHAM
STEPHEN NMN HONDA
MICHAEL W. JOHN
JAMES MATTHEW KUDLA
JOHN WILLIAM LLOYD
ALVIN D. MALCOMB
RONAL BRUCE MORSE
ROBERT LEE NASH, JR
ROBERT SCOTT PRITCHARD
WILLIAM B. SONNTAG
JOHN THOMAS TULL, JR
MARK ARDEN VANDYKE

SPECIAL DUTY OFFICERS (OCEANOGRAPHY)

To be commander

ROBERT LLOYD ALLEN, JR
THOMAS EDWARD BOSSE
WENDY LEE BRADFIELDSMITH
BARRY MATTHEW DONOVAN
CHARLES KENNETH HOPKINS
BAUKE H. HOUTMAN
MICHAEL LEROY KARL TERRY RUSSELL MCPHERSON
DENIS HOWARD MEANOR
CHARLES EDGAR SELLERS
STEVEN J. SUMMERS

LIMITED DUTY OFFICERS (LINE)

To be commander

THOMAS ORLIN BLACKMORE
JOHN E. BONNETTE
RICHARD AUSTIN BOYCE
ROBERT J. BOYLE
THOMAS MICHAEL BURCHPESSES
RALPH FRANCIS CALLAWAY
KEITH VAN CHAMBERS
PAUL KENNETH CLAUSEN, JR
WILLIAM LEE COCHRAN
JAMES ROBERT COOK

WILLIAM JAMES CORNWELL
WILLIAM S. COUCH
FRANKLIN J. DOOLING
PERRY DAVIS DRIVER
EUGENE MORGAN DUCOM
JAMES A. ELLIOTT
WILLIAM M. FITZSIMMONS
DONALD HENRY FLOWERS
WILLIAM CHARLES GERHART
JERRY DAVID HEACOCK
DAVID LAMAR HUNT
DOUGLAS M. ILES
JOHN R. KIEFFER
DOMINICK LICCIARDI, JR
RONALD ALEXANDER LLEWELLYN
ROBERT CLAUDE LONG
FREDERICK JAMES MAJOR, JR
DONALD EUGENE MCCLIMON
DAVID PATRICK MEYERING
CURTIS OWEN MURPHY
JERRY F. REA
GEORGE L. SCOTT
MICHAEL RANDOLPH SCOTT
WILLIAM D. SHUTTERS, II
MARION RONALD SISEMORE
WILLIAM WAYNE SPEER
JERRY W. SPILLERS
CHARLES W. STJOHN
MELVIN CLYDE SWARTZ, JR
BERTRUM W. WENDELL, JR
WILLIAM R. WHITE
DANIEL E. WHITING
WARDELL CONKLIN WRIGHT, SR
BRAD LEE WROOLIE
WILLIAM ROMAIN YOSHIDA
ADRIAN C. YOUNGBLOOD

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

HON. BRIAN J. DONNELLY

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the Committee on Ways and Means is currently in the process of considering modifications to the tax treatment of life insurance companies. At issue is a true measure of a life insurance company's income for purposes of imposing the Federal income tax.

As a member of that Subcommittee, I have been closely involved in this process, and I have been paying close attention to potentially disturbing trends in the industry. Clearly, our Subcommittee has two obligations during our deliberations: the first is to enact sound, legitimate income tax policy. The second is to insure that life insurance company policyholders are protected.

To that end, I would like to have printed in the RECORD an article from the July 10, 1989 issue of Forbes magazine entitled "You Bet Your LIfe." The article points out that all may not be well in the life insurance industry, and highlights some disturbing trends that all of us should be aware of during this debate. We should be cautioned by the debacle in the savings and loan industry and further cautioned by the fact that the Federal Government has no protection available to life insurance company policyholders who lose their investment if the company through which they own their policy goes bankrupt.

Perhaps the time has come for greater Federal regulation of the insurance industry generally. Certainly, the Federal tax laws are an appropriate place to start. Nonetheless, I think that the Forbes article bears close attention, and I urge my colleagues to study it carefully.

[From Forbes Magazine, July 10, 1989]

YOU BET YOUR LIFE

(By Gretchen Morgenson)

Of the 155 million Americans who own some form of life insurance, few are fully aware of the industry's eroding financial base and its rising rate of failures. This ignorance is not bliss. Unlike customers at banks and savings and loan institutions, people who trust their money to life insurance companies are not protected by a federal bailout mechanism.

No, we're not predicting massive failures among life companies, as happened with savings and loans and, to a lesser extent, commercial banks. But only an ostrich would ignore signs of a seriously deteriorating situation.

"The freewheeling approach of some in the insurance industry may put these companies on a crash course similar to the route taken by many of our nation's S&L's," says Thomas Wheeler, chief executive of Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., the nation's 11th-largest life insurer. Mass Mutual is widely regarded as one of the sounder companies, and Wheeler is referring to life companies that have been taking excessive risks in their investment portfolios.

Life insurance isn't supposed to be a risky business. But since 1987 some two dozen life insurance companies have defaulted. This marks a sharp departure from the previous two decades, when the failure rate was running at about one life insurer per year.

So far, the failed companies have been relatively small. The annual bailout costs have jumped from less than $9 milion in 1982 to about $70 million on average in the past two years. Most of the losses to policyholders have been made good by healthy insurance outfits under various state guaranty fund systems. But if the failures mount, this pro bono publico policy will give way to simple self-preservation.

If the problems were limited to a few highfliers, they could be fairly easily contained. Unfortunately, they are not. The same high-risk strategies and investments that forced some small insurers into insolvency are now nagging some of the bigname life companies like Equitable Life Assurance Society, Travelers Insurance and I.C.H. Corp. Across the industry, balance sheets have weakened dramatically. Five years ago all the life insurance companies followed by the rating agencies were rated Aaa; today only 40% have that top rating, according to Moody's Investors Service.

What are the trouble signs? Perhaps the most alarming is shrinking capital and surplus accounts, which are meant to cushion against unforeseen risk. One key measure compares capital with portfolio risk. Using 100 as an adequate level of capital needed to compensate for portfolio risk, an index compiled by Moody's shows a steady decline, from 110 four years ago to 96 today see chart, opposite).

Another dicey development is the fact that more and more mutual life insurers are being forced to reduce dividends paid to their policy holders—a clear indication of a profit squeeze. Last year Mutual of New York, with $24 billion in assets, reduced its dividend by 3.5%. Manufacturers Life Insurance Co., with $19.9 billion in assets has cuts its rates 4.3% over the past two years.

It is hardly reassuring to note that many insurance companies are starting to employ questionable accounting techniques to improve the look of their net capital positions. Late last year, for example, two large life insurers entered into unusual transactions with Citibank. General American Life Insurance Co. of St. Louis ($5.1 billion, assets) and Washington National Insurance of Evanston, Ill. ($1.9 billion, assets) sold Citibank future premiums worth $75 million and $30 million, respectively. These sales had the effect of boosting both companies' net capital positions because the insurers immediately booked as assets the $75 million and $30 million they received from Citibank. But what the bookkeeping entries didn't show was that both insurers had mortgaged some of their future cash flow.

Indeed, a few months ago the New York State superintendent of insurance ruled that the sale of future premiums is really a loan, and so an amount equal to the premium sale should appear as a liability on the insurer's balance sheet. The superintendent found the Citibank deals "inconsistent with statutory accounting principles." But the sales have not been officially disallowed, nor have the insurers restated their financials.

These transactions are nothing more than an effort to mask capital depletions. Without them, Washington National would have shown a $13 million statutory loss in capital for 1988, and General American would have had a $4 million decrease.

The stakes are mounting. The amount of money that changed hands in these transactions was relatively small. But word has it that similar premium sales are being considered by two industry giants. Equitable Life Assurance Society and the Massachusetts Indemnity & Life Insurance Co., a subsidiary of A.L. Williams. Warns Joseph Belth, editor of Insurance Forum newsletter, "When these guys begin to play games like this, you may be getting closer to a disaster."

What's behind the balance sheet deterioration? A classic profit squeeze. Life insurance marketing and sales expenses have continued to rise over the past few years, but the nation's increasingly sophisticated consumers are demanding products such as universal life policies and annuities, leaving insurers with slim profits, at best. Gone are the days when simple whole life policies made up the bulk of an insurer's business. Life insurers, pitted against mutual funds and brokerage firms for America's investment dollar, have in some cases resorted to wildly aggressive tactics.

A case in point is Equitable, the giant insurer that got into big trouble with guaranteed investment contracts. Back in the late 1970s and early 1980s premium inflow from consumers was slowing down, so Equitable took in money to manage from pension funds at huge companies like General Dynamics and General Electric. To attract the business, Equitable—and others—promised higher long-term rates of returns than their investment managers could realistically hope to generate.

Other examples are I.C.H., a publicly held Louisville, KY company that's big in universal life policies, and Integon, a sizable annuity seller that troubled Southmark agreed to sell in May. Both have seen the quality of their capital bases decline significantly. Knickerbocker Life Insurance, a 70-year-old company out of El Paso, failed in May. The company, which came up $22 million short in receivership, was a big seller of annuities with overly optimistic payout rates.

Low-profit and no-profit products—combined with cutthroat competition—have hit life insurers hard. Nationwide, the industry's returns on surplus capital—roughly equivalent to returns on equity for noninsurance companies—have steadily declined from 15% in 1984 to 9.5% today.

Balance sheets have deteriorated, too. During the 1980s, life insurers invested billions of dollars in junk bonds. Many companies were virtually forced to go for the highest yields because of the guaranteed investment contracts they have been selling. As a percentage of total assets, junk bonds held by most life insurers have more than doubled since 1982. But unlike mutual fund investors insurance policyholders can't find out if the junk bonds held by their insurance company had increased or decreased in value. Why not? Insurers don't have to mark the value of their bonds to current market prices; instead, they effectively keep them on the books at cost. Result: Even though the principal value in Drexel Burnham Lambert's junk bond composite has declined 5.46% since 1987, insurance companies' junk holdings look as strong as ever—on paper, that is.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

Bad real estate investments are taking a toll, too. But again, life insurers are not forced to mark their real estate assets to market. Still, since 1982, delinquency rates on commercial real estate mortgages held by the nation's top 21 insurers have more than doubled. Foreclosures have quintupled.

For the average policyholder it is difficult to spot these troubling trends. Many industry players—the mutual life insurers—are owned by policyholders, not stockholders. In effect, they are owned by no one, and management can do as it pleases.

What about the public companies? On Wall Street, stocks of the big life concerns are hitting new highs. Even First Executive Corp., the Los Angeles company run by Fred Carr with 54% of its portfolio in high-risk junk bonds, is trading at nine times earnings, near the high for the year. Monarch capital is heavily dependent on single-premium life policies, which Congress recently made unattractive from a tax standpoint. Yet, after two years of falling profits, it's trading at 27 times earnings.

Why does Wall Street love the life companies when the road ahead looks so rough? First, large stock companies like Aetna and American Family Life are probably in better financial shape than many of their mutual counterparts. Second, analysts care about immediate earnings growth more than a gradual decline in financial soundness. Earnings, right now, are stable.

Even on upbeat Wall Street, though, there is some skepticism. In 10 of the 14 life companies that Value Line follows, the premium over book that investors have been willing to pay has steadily declined the past three years.

Who will be hurt as more insurers fall out of bed? Policyholders, most likely. There is no federal guarantee fund to back up policyholders' investments. Various states do have guarantee pools, funded by insurance companies doing business in those states. But these are not especially deep pockets. Coverage is generally limited to $100,000 in cash value on a life insurance policy, $100,000 in present value of an annuity. The maximum payout per person is $300,000.

Note: There are no life insurance funds in Alaska, California, Colorado, the District of Columbia, Louisiana, New Jersey, Ohio and Wyoming.

If you live in any of these states or if you own a policy from a company domiciled in these states and your insurer goes under, you'll be just one of the company's creditors waiting to see what you get in a liquidation.

This is a $1.1 trillion (assets) business. Even if only a minor part becomes insolvent, the losses will be huge: An insolvency rate of only 15% among savings and loans created a $305.9 billion disaster.

Because of the federal deposit guarantee, it didn't matter which S&L you put money into, solvent or insolvent. Does it make a difference who insures your life? Darned right, because, if things go bad, you've no assurance Uncle Sam will bail you out.

NORMA ARNERICH—ALAMEDA, CA'S WOMAN OF THE YEAR

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Norma Arnerich, the winner of Alameda's 1990 Woman of the Year Award in California's Ninth Congressional District.

Ms. Arnerich personifies all the qualities appropriate for a woman of the year. She is committed to excellence and is always willing to help others. She has been married to vice mayor of Alameda, Anthony "Lil" Arnerich for 40 years. She is the mother of four children and the grandmother of 11. She was the first woman appointed to the Alameda Golf Commission and the first woman elected chairperson of the Golf Commission.

At age 63, Ms. Arnerich is responsible for the founding and success of the Alameda Golf Course's Tree Beautification Program. The Tree Beautification Program is more than just a display on the Alameda Golf Course—it is a living memorial. The program has become an Alameda landmark as it serves to remind people not only of cherished times in their lives but also of cherished people and places. Each tree memorializes a special person or event in the life of Alameda's residents. For example, there is a tree that memorializes the 25th anniversary of a Catholic school, the coach of a Babe Ruth championship team, a soccer coach, favorite teachers, birthdays, anniversaries, and golf feats.

In addition to the Golf Program, Ms. Arnerich is also involved with the St. Philip Meri Parents Guild, the Alameda High School Athletic Supporters and the Encinal Boosters Club.

Ms. Arnerich's leadership and vision have made Alameda a better place for everyone. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to recognize Norma Arnerich as Alameda's Woman of the Year for 1990.

AMERICA'S UNSUNG HEROES

HON. GERRY SIKORSKI

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. SIKORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to America's unsung heroes, our Nation's hard working and dedicated 20 million public servants, on the occasion of Public Service Recognition Week.

Public Service Recognition Week is a small way of acknowledging the contributions of our Nation's 20 million public servants—many of them friends, neighbors, and relatives. They work long hours and receive little thanks.

Public servants educate America, defend America, cure America, counsel America, and enlighten America. They have caused much of America's joy and they have borne much of its pain. And it's all part of their job.

Not too long ago, the clarion call to serve America was as good and clear and precious as the American flag. It stirred images of excellence, of challenge, of pride, or enthusiasm. It was a time when public service careers were viewed as challenging and prestigious and attracted the best and brightest to serve our Nation. Today, the many who rushed to answer President Kennedy's call of what they could "do for their country" have reached middle age and beyond. Few have taken their place.

Instead of that bold clarion call to public service today, we see a downward decline in the image of the work force that works for America. As we approach the 21st century, many in public service are demoralized and degraded. Government managers tell us that recruitment is becoming harder and harder. The trumpeted call to public service is fading.

It's not too hard to understand why. Millions of public workers face outdated pay scales, reduced benefits, and, in some cases, unhealthy work environments. In the last decade, we've seen Presidents Carter and Reagan successfully run anti-Washington, anti-Government campaigns for the highest office in the land. Johnny Carson and Pat Sajak get quick laughs at the public employee's expense. The words "bureaucrat" and "bureaucracy" are spit from mouths dripping with sarcasm, conjuring images of slow motion, low motive employees.

For some public employees, such as air traffic controllers, police officers, and drug enforcement and FBI agents, the hours can be both grueling and dangerous. For others, like secretaries at the Environmental Protection Agency—whose unpaid overtime gets the complaint filed that saves a community of 10,000 from hazardous waste in its drinking water, or the data processor who inputs grandma's Social Security information, or the teacher in an overcrowded school room with limited access to books and materials, the job is simply grueling. For far too many public employees the job is thankless, and the resources to do it repeatedly cut.

Yet today's careers in the public service are still challenging—the exploration of our solar system, education of our youth, discovery of AIDS cure, and preservation of our Nation's environment.

Recently, the U.S. House of Representatives Subcommittee on the Civil Service, which I chair, held a hearing examining the public image of civil servants. We heard extraordinary but rarely heard stories of dedication worthy of made-for-television movies. Most Americans do not know that:

It was a public servant who stood her ground against the use of the drug thalidomide, and saved thousands of our kids from horrible deformities.

It was a public servant who developed resistant strains of rice that feed hungry children in emerging nations.

It was a public servant who discovered sonar and radar which today protects both American travelers and America's national defense.

It was a dedicated public servant who took the first step on the Moon.

These are just a few examples, but without the dedication, hard work and talents of our millions of public servants—usually at low pay and no thanks—America would be much poorer.

As we rapidly approach the 21st century, the demands placed on public servants will become greater and greater. With every law passed, every new computer installed, every Iron Curtain falling, and every foreign purchase of American land and resources, the demand for an American public work force that is increasingly flexible, talented, and knowledgeable itself increases.

In over 300 cities across the Nation this week, celebrations are being held recognizing the contributions of our Nation's 20 million public servants. When you meet one say "Hi" and "thank you."

THIS IS NEXT YEAR

HON. WAYNE OWENS

OF UTAH

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, my friend and colleague MO UDALL recently wrote an article for Roll Call in commemoration of the 20 anniversary of Earth Day. MO calls on all of us to make a personal commitment to environmentally sound lives. I commend his insights to the attention of my colleagues.

THIS IS NEXT YEAR

(By Representative Mo Udall)

A story is told of the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball team in a bad slump. Each year, the Dodges would stumble to the World Series only to lose to the Yankees.

The fellow who kept the scoreboard in the outfield, a dedicated and loyal Dodgers fan, would put up a large banner that read, "Wait till next year!" Then after several bad years, the Dodgers pulled it off and beat the Yankees. The scorekeeper proudly displayed a new banner which read, "This is next year."

The planet Earth is in a bad slump.

We continue to witness the depletion of the ozone layer and the erosion of rain forests, wetlands, and other wildlife habitats. Air and water pollution are beyond commonplace, and the storage of radioactive and other hazardous wastes create problems which require immediate solutions.

The scoreboard is disheartening for the environmentalist. It's a near shutout. But there's hope in Mudville, and I'm here to report that for the environmental movement, "This is next year."

Most people are aware that April 22 is the 20th anniversary of Earth Day.

We are all aware that Congress will act on environmental legislation this year. The fight for clean air will be the premier battle of the 101st Congress. The armies are already assembling on K Street. Measures have been introduced to promote newspaper recycling, preserve topsoil, and protect the ozone layer.

These proposals are crucial to our environment. They form the basis of our national environment. They form the basis of our national environmental policy. They are, however, mere rhetoric if they don't have the strong backing of the public.

I do not want to paint a picture of complete apathy in America. In my Congressional district as in every district in this country, citizens have championed local environmental causes:

In California volunteers have rallied to save the endangered condor from extinction; activists from the Love Canal forced the federal government to develop programs for the disposal of hazardous wastes; and volunteers throughout the country continue to press for more stringent standards to guaranatee the cleanliness of our air and water.

It is also clear that the public is turning its attention to the environment. An ongoing survey by the Times-Mirror Center for the People and the Press noted that 52 percent of those surveyed paid very close attention to the Alaska oil spill news coverage. News of the greenhouse effect was followed very closely by 42 percent of the public. These numbers rival the amount of attention paid to Donald Trump's marital status.

They also signal an opening for leadership in the fight for the environment, an opportunity to capture the energy of a public increasingly aware of environmental concerns ranging from the disposal of toxic waste to finding new approaches to recycling in our communities.

While we in Washington are debating and discussing the legislation, the communities we represent have already begun the fight for a cleaner world. We have been so busy talking, we haven't noticed their efforts. We have a duty not only to recognize these efforts, but also to encourage them.

We need to understand that environmentalism cannot be legislated. Environmental responsibility must be encouraged by example and rewarded by results. Increased conservation will be the result of raising the consciousness of a willing public.

We are not a nation of benchwarmers. We have always felt the need to play an active role in the shaping of our society. I would encourage Congress to issue a nationwide call to our constituents to join with others in preserving, protecting, and restoring our country's resources.

I am not asking that each American become a tree-hugger or embark on a nationwide walkathon for the salvation of the rain forests. There is a more subtle alternative that would result in an equal, if not greater, contribution.

If Americans brush their teeth with the faucet off instead of on, they'll save up to nine gallons of water each time.

Washing the family car with a sponge and bucket instead of a hose would save over 100 gallons of water.

According to the American Paper Institute, the average American consumes about 120 pounds of newsprint annually. If every individual in the US recycled only their sunday papers, 25 million trees would be saved each year.

I learned about these steps in five minutes while reading a new book titled, Fifty Simple Things You Can Do to Save the Earth. Published by the Earth Works Group, it is an environmental how-to book which reminds the public that small contributions do not go unnoticed by the environment. Congress needs to take a similar stance.

The anniversary of Earth Day is a unique occasion. It allows us the opportunity to remember our victories in the environmental movement and to focus on our future challenges.

More importantly, it brings the opportunity to enlighten, to educate, and to encourage the American public.

More than a celebration of the past, it is a day for the future.

A CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO JOHN AND NANCY HOLLAND ON THE CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY OF THE SAN PEDRO HARBOR AREA SALVATION ARMY

HON. GLENN M. ANDERSON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to, and acknowledge my deep respect for, two giving and selfless San Pedro area residents. On Friday, May 11, 1990, the San Pedro Harbor Area Salvation Army will present John and Nancy Holland with the "Others Award" for their years of commitment. This occasion gives me the distinct pleasure to pay tribute to these outstanding individuals.

John and Nancy first met on a double-date with their church young adult group. Later, in August of 1952, they were married. Their years of commitment not only extend to each other, but also extend to the Salvation Army and other segments of the community.

Like his wife, John Holland has a special place in his heart for the Salvation Army. This is evident from his membership in the Salvation Army Advisory Guard for 25 years. He has served on the executive committee and has been the board chairman. During his time on the board, he has been active in fund raising activities, and giving legal advice. His other activities extend beyond the bounds of the Salvation Army. He has also spent 35 years with the San Pedro Toastmasters, past president of the San Pedro Y.M.C.A. and twice chairman of the San Pedro Hospital board of directors. He has also been past president of the Building Corporation, past master of Point Fermin Masonic Lodge, past president of the Harbor Bar Association, vice president of the Wilmington Boys and Girls Club, and past president of the Wilmington Rotary Club. While this list of community service activities may seem long, it is by no means complete.

The involvement of Nancy Holland, and her love for the Salvation Army, is no less gratuitous than her husband's. She is an original member of the Salvation Army's Women's Auxiliary. She has been an active member of the Auxiliary and is a past president. Like her husband, she has been actively involved in the raising of funds for the Army in San Pedro. Also, she has been very active in feeding the homeless in downtown Los Angeles, volunteering to go out on cold nights to feed the street people. Her other activities include chairperson of the administrative board of the First United Methodist Church, the PTA, and the Junior Assistance League, among others.

Throughout John and Nancy's lives, they have dedicated themselves to others. It is no surprise that the San Pedro Harbor Area Corps of the Salvation Army would bestow its "Others Award" on them. Mr. Speaker, there is not a day that goes by that we do not come face to face with someone needing help. While many of us may turn and look away, it is nice to know that individuals like John and Nancy Holland would stop and lend a hand. On this deserving occasion, my wife Lee, joins me in extending our heartfelt thanks and congratulations. They have truly made San Pedro, and this nation, a better place to live. We wish John and Nancy, their two sons, David and Donald, all the best in the years to come.

TEMPLE BETH SHOLOM SISTERHOOD

HON. JAMES H. SCHEUER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Speaker, for the past 10 years, the Flushing Council of Women's Organizations, Inc. has presented biennially its Wheel of Service trophy, the Helmsman's Wheel, to one of its member groups "which has attained the most impressive results or which is attempting the most significant challenge in fulfilling the diverse needs of our community."

I rise today to extend my appreciation as well to this year's "Helmsman's Wheel" recipient—the Sisterhood of Temple Beth Sholom.

The sisterhood is being recognized rightfully for having seen to it that 100 books—culled from a list of best sellers, academic works, and children's books supplied by the Jewish Braille Institute of America—have been recorded for visually-impaired individuals. The Sisterhood of Temple Beth Sholom, as well as other volunteers from the community who served as narrators for this "talking books" project, are to be commended for their noble, selfless efforts.

Fostering an exchange of ideas, developing a spirit of civic consciousness and community responsibility, and taking action whenever deemed advisable has been the mission of the Flushing Council of Women's Organizations, Inc. since its inception in 1928. The countless kind and charitable acts of the Sisterhood of Temple Beth Sholom are a visible embodiment of this credo. The Sisterhood has demonstrated its concern for the greater community, facilitating an exhange of ideas by making valuable reading materials available to sightless and visually impaired people.

DIRECTOR OF WHITE HOUSE POLICY: JOHN H. SAY NO NO

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, Ronald Reagan's famous line in the 1980 Presidential campaign was "well, there you go again." Well, Mr. Speaker, today in an ironic twist, it is my turn to say: here we go again.

When George Bush was running for President, he promised to be the environmental President. Convenient for the President and unfortunate for us, he never specified what he meant by an environmental President. We were unaware that he would slash funds for the cleanup of Boston Harbor. We were unaware that the President would promote clean air proposals that would benefit General Motors and ignore the wants of the general public. We were unaware that the President would specify a bigger share of the budget for "Stealth bombers" than the Environmental Protection Agency.

Well, Mr. Speaker, here we go again. This week, the President has rejected the advice of his environmental advisers and instead listened to White House Chief of Staff, John H. Sununu. Mr. Sununu, who is no friend of the environment and has battled the EPA for years, has advised the President to instruct the U.S. delegates at an international conference on chlorofluorocarbons [CFC] to reject a world wide ban. CFC's are dangerous products that when released into the atmosphere cause the depletion of the Earth's ozone layer. Without the Earth's ozone layer, we are vulnerable to the Sun's harmful ultraviolet rays and can expect a increase in the amount of skin cancer and eye problems.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the President to instruct the delegates to commit the United States for a ban on CFC's. Maybe the White House Chief of Staff wants to spend the rest of his life wearing sun glasses and sun screen, but I doubt that the rest of us want to. It is about time that the President start doing what is good for the environment and not yield policy according to, as Senator FRANK LAUTENBERG says, John H. "Say No No."

GLASNOST

HON. GERRY SIKORSKI

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. SIKORSKI. Mr. Speaker, What a year. Democracy breaking out all over Eastern Europe. The Iron Curtain ripped away as easily as flimsy old butcher curtains. Glasnost and peristroika becoming the key words of a new generation. But these aren't the only words that are coming out from behind the Iron Curtain.

We are also hearing the echoes of the early 1990's and the centuries that preceded it. We are hearing "dirty stinking Jews" and "kill the Yids."

The vaunted word "glasnost" has not eradicated anti-Semitism and political persecution of Jews in the Soviet Union. In fact, anti-Semitism is flourishing in the new glasnotized Soviet Union.

Leaflets have been handed out blaming Jews for the Soviet Union's economic and political problems. They proclaim "death to the Jews" and have called for a program on May 5. Thankfully that call was not heeded by the Soviet peoples, but that was little comfort for the Jews who found this pamphlet in their mailboxes.

Moscow's police have found it necessary to warn Jews to replace wood doors with nonflammable steel. As economic indicators decline, the potential for a backlash against the traditional scapegoats becomes more of a reality.

There are those who say it is the older generation who are scared by the unrest and want to maintain the relative of the status quo. Tell that to the school boy who begs to stay home from school rather than suffer the harrassment from the other boys when they see his circumcision in the school bathroom.

It used to be that Soviet anti-Semitism was a government of quasi-government activity. It was normal for a Jew, with government sanction, to be denied a job, an education, an apartment simply because he was Jewish or because he applied for immigration to Israel. But now that government sponsored anti-Semitism has been toned down and greater expression allowed, anti-Semitic groups have spawned all over the country. The Soviet government has failed to distance itself from it, condemn it, and act against it.

Pamyat, the largest of these anti-Semitic organizations, has had free reign to run with anti-Semitic propaganda. Pamyat had a mass demonstration in Red Square, President Gorbachev has named two outspoken Soviet anti-Semites to the 15 member Presidential Council, and the only form of denunciation came when Gorbachev was pressed by Western activists. He said: "I think we must do everything to prevent the spread of anti-Semitism and all the other isms." I only wish he would be as effective in eradicating anti-Semitism as he is at dismantling socialism.

Summit after summit, we argued, negotiated, and conditioned our agreements with the Soviet Union on the basis of Soviet Jews' and others' right to emigrate. Now is not the time to give our vigilance. We must continue to stress the importance of free emigration and allowing direct flights to Israel. We should not have the United States Information Agency using our tax dollars to bring noted Soviet anti-Semites to speak in the United States. But most importantly, we must clearly and forcefully indicate to the Soviet Union and to Gorbachev, that they better control and condemn this anti-Semitic outbreak. We should stand for nothing less.

Martin Luther King once said "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere." It is a call to action. It means, "Whatsoever you do to the least of my brothers and sisters, that do unto me." Whatever we allow to happen to Jews in the Soviet Union is allowed against us, and against principles on which America was founded.

SOLID WASTE DISPOSAL IN OUR NATIONAL PARKS

HON. WAYNE OWENS

OF UTAH

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. OWENS of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I applaud a true cooperative effort by the National Park Service, Dow Chemical and Huntsman Chemical, to reduce the serious threat and ugly plague of solid waste disposal in our national parks. Last week, this cooperative partnership launched in a recycling program holding promise for the aesthetic and environmental protection of our national parks. It truly was befitting the spirit of the celebration of Earth Day.

This partnership will establish recycling programs in four of our Nation's national parks. Recycling receptacles for plastic, glass and aluminum will be placed near campgrounds and picnic areas. Dow and Huntsman will arrange for the recycling of this material. Recycled products such as picnic tables will then be made available to the parks.

By educating the public while they are enjoying the natural splendor of our national parks, it is hoped that a recycling ethic will be taken home, along with the park memories.

I especially applaud one of Utah's premiere business leaders, Mr. John Huntsman, for his leadership and recognition of the environmental ethics chemical companies should foster as they help us maintain our standard of living in a world of finite resources. I commend and congratulate John for his recycling endeavors. I now urge Congress to turn the momentum of Earth Day into major recycling legislation this year.

GORBACHEV MUST SPEAK OUT AGAINST ANTI-SEMITISM

HON. GLENN M. ANDERSON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, with the flowering of democracy in Eastern Europe, and the beginnings of political liberalization in the Soviet Union, has come a deeply disturbing side effect. The specter of unbridled nationalism has raised its ugly head throughout the region, soiling the hands of otherwise noble ventures. The pressures of fervent nationalism are quickly cracking the facade of imposed stability in countries like the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. I find it ironic that the great democratization of Eastern Europe that has been the hope of the West for forty years is giving way to the divisive strains of militant nationalism. Worse still though is the development, or reappearance, of a trend that cannot be tolerated by the nations of this world. That trend is anti-Semitism. What we thought was buried and gone with the deaths of Nazi Germany Hitler, and Stalin was only muzzled, hidden from Western view by an efficient security apparatus.

From the Soviet Union come reports of Russian nationalist organizations issuing calls for pogroms against the Jews. Individual Jews speak of their great fear, the constant torment, and persecution by their neighbors and in the form of anonymous hate mail. An editorial by Irina Ginzburg in the May 5, 1990 edition of the New York Times, entitled "We Russian Jews Fear for Our Lives," states, "On TV, radio and in the newspapers, there is endless repetition of the words 'pogrom,' 'bloodletting,' 'civil war.' The Russians demand the death of the Jews, demand that they be forbidden to occupy any leadership posts, to defend their dissertations; they demand that they leave the Soviet Union immediately." Slogans scrawled on walls, not only in the Soviet Union, but throughout Eastern Europe, proclaim death sentences against the Jews and place the scapegoat's blame for every social failure on the backs of the Jews.

This haunting specter cannot be ignored. Even if only embryonic, this situation must be addressed now. As Yelena Bonner, the wife of Andrei Sakharov, said, "We cannot forget that Hitler and his thugs started in the beer halls of Germany." The Soviet Union and the countries of Eastern Europe have swept the history of the Holocaust under their national rugs. While the gruesome program of Hitler's genocidal nightmare is taught and reexamined in the West, no such soul-searching exists in the East. Communist East Germany always denied its Nazi past.

The world cannot turn its back on the Holocaust. To do so opens the possibility for its reoccurrence. I am heartened by a newly democratic East Germany's admission of responsibility and shame for the Holocaust. Countries like Hungary and Poland must, too, educate their people about the past. I believe, in this day of sweeping dialog with the Soviet Union, that it is not asking too much to request that Mr. Gorbachev speak out against the growing tide of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union must demonstrate to the world its moral integrity by condemning the anti-Semitic upsurge of hate and ignorance we now witness spreading across its land.

W.F. ALBRIGHT INSTITUTE OF ARCHAEOLOGICAL RESEARCH

HON. JAMES H. SCHEUER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Speaker, my distinguished colleague, ROBERT J. MRAZEK, and I have lent our names to support the efforts of the W.F. Albright Institute of Archaeological Research in Jerusalem. A lecture-dinner to benefit this valuable institution will take place on Sunday, May 20, at the Great Neck home of one of the institute's trustees, Lee Seeman, who is a constitutent of mine.

In recognition of this occasion, I would like to bring the work of the W.F. Albright Institute to the attention of my colleagues.

Founded 90 years ago as the American School of Oriental Research, it was renamed in 1970 after its most distinguished director, William Foxwell Albright. Under its auspices, a number of North American scholars have participated in Israeli academic life by engaging in research in ancient Near Eastern studies. Major endeavors with which the institute has been associated include the retrieval of the Dead Sea Scrolls in addition to excavations at such important, historical and archaeological sites as Samaria, Jericho, Gezer, Caesaria, Ashkelon and Ekron. The institute derives institutional support from a consortium of 170 leading American universities and institutions.

The W.F. Albright Institute carries out significant projects through a professional academic program involving Christians, Moslems, and Jews—working together to uncover their historic roots in the Holy Land.

THE SHIFTING TAX BURDEN

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, the recent budget negotiations between Congress and the administration have summoned up the specter of a dreaded income tax increase. I am sure that none of us is anxious to see this happen. However, if the U.S. Government is forced by the budget deficit to seek additional revenue in this manner, I urge my colleagues to keep fairness in mind and not impose a disproportionate share of an additional tax increase on those who can least afford it.

We must look closely at what has really happened to the majority of taxpayers over the last 8 years. In spite of Federal income tax decreases that were enacted during this time, most Americans are turning over more of their paychecks to taxes. In its April 14 Special Report, the Democratic Study Group [DSG] explained this issue quite well. I would like to briefly summarize its main points.

The DSG report points out that the changes in the Federal budget and tax policy changes enacted during the 1980's altered who pays taxes, how much and what kind of taxes are paid. The resulting shift in the tax burden hurt everyone except the wealthy. These changes in the Federal Tax Code, enacted by the Tax reform acts and budget reconciliation legislation, provided many families with a significant reduction in their income tax, but, some families benefited more than others. During the 1980's the 20 percent of households with the highest incomes saw their incomes increase by nearly one-third. These households now enjoy a tax rate on personal income that is 1.5 percent below the tax rate they had in 1980. On the average, this would result in a tax break of $1,578 in 1990. The data analyzed by the DSG also suggests that the decline in corporate tax payments have added to the tax cuts enjoyed by upper income taxpayers.

On the other hand, the 20 percent of households with the lowest incomes paid about $85 less in taxes in 1990 than they would have paid under the tax laws of 1980. Unfortunately, in 1990 their income is about 4-percent less, after adjusting for inflation, than the amount they received in 1980. The average American in 1980 received an income of about $30,000 in today's dollars and paid $2,430, or 8.1 percent of its gross income, in Federal personal income taxes. In 1990, a household of this type will earn approximately $31,000 and will pay $2,075, or 6.7 percent of this amount in Federal income taxes. While they are saving $350 in taxes, their gross income has only gone up by $1,000.

Changes in the Federal budget have further compounded the tax burden for middle and lower income households. An increasing share of Federal revenues now comes from payroll taxes, primarily Medicare and Social Security, which are regressive in nature, meaning that they are flat taxes which do not take low-income status into consideration. Income taxes, on the other hand are scaled to income and are considered progressive. The Government now depends more heavily on revenue generated from payroll taxes.

In 1980, Social Security and Medicare hospital insurance payroll taxes were set at 6.13 percent, and were levied on the first $22,900 of annual earnings. This figure represents just the amount deducted from the employees take-home pay. When employers contribution to Social Security and Medicare is considered, the total tax rate per employee was 12.36 percent in 1980. Today, the combined employer-employee tax rate is 15.3 percent and is applied on all earnings up to $51,300. This increase of nearly 25 percent in the payroll tax and the doubling of the base on which it is applied results in most families paying more overall Federal taxes on their incomes, in spite of decreases in Federal income taxes. In fact, for those households with income in the bottom 40 percent, the tax breaks are completely eliminated. For the middle 20 percent, three-quarters of the tax break was wiped out.

If both the employer and employee contributions to payroll taxes are counted as taxes on employees, the bottom 60 percent of American households are paying more in combined Federal taxes in 1990 than they paid in 1980. The next 30 percent of households are paying about the same amount. But the top 10 percent got an average tax break of about $12,500.

The growing reliance on payroll taxes means that the Federal tax system has become more regressive. As we can see, this type of tax disproportionately affects those with the lowest incomes. The taxes are a flat percentage rate and apply only up to an income level of $51,300. In addition, payroll taxes are levied against only employment income, not income from interest, dividends, and capital gains, which are important to those in the higher income brackets.

On top of this increased Federal burden now imposed on the average taxpayer, State and local taxes are also contributing to the pinch they feel. State and local taxes account for approximately 45 percent of all taxes paid. During the Reagan years, Federal expenditures were diverted from domestic needs and toward defense, and in the late 1980's also toward interest payments. As a consequence, State and local governments picked up a greater share of funding for public services to fill in the gap. In addition, State and local governments have been expanding, and in fact, spending by these entities has grown faster than the economy as a whole.

A decline in Federal contributions to State and local governments has necessitated that they raise taxes. Because States and local governments rely heavily on sales taxes, which are also regressive in nature, those at the lower income levels are disproportionately affected by these taxes as well.

The information contained in this report merely quantifies what my colleagues on this side of the aisle already know. During the 1980's, the rich got richer, while everyone else fell behind. Even without the tax changes, the top 1 percent of the income scale saw a real increase in their earnings of 75 percent between 1980 and 1990. During this same time, incomes for the middle 20 percent increased by only 3 percent. The 20 percent on the bottom saw their incomes actually decline during this time.

I have brought this information to the attention of my colleagues so that they might consider the plight of middle- and lower-income taxpayers during consideration of the budget. They have already suffered through a decade of economic decline. I urge you not to enact legislation that would hurt them further. Thank you.

IDAHO STATE LEGISLATURE HOUSE JOINT MEMORIAL 15: MFJ RELIEF

HON. LARRY E. CRAIG

OF IDAHO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. Speaker, I am here today to submit, for the record, a House joint memorial enacted by the State of Idaho's centennial legislature. House Joint Memorial 15 expresses Idaho's support to remove restrictions that were imposed on Bell operating companies by the modification of final judgment [MFJ].

The text of the memorial follows:

HOUSE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 15

(A joint memorial to the Honorable President of the United States, George Bush, to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, and to the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.)

We, your Memorialists, the House of Representatives and the Senate of the State of Idaho assembled in the Second Regular Session of the Centennial Idaho Legislature, do hereby respectfully represent that:

Whereas, advances in technology have brought our society to the threshold of the information age; and

Whereas, the national welfare will be greatly enhanced by bringing about the universal availability of the information age to the American people through the development and deployment of innovative technologies; and

Whereas, the provision of information services, and the removal of judicially imposed restrictions on the development and availability of such services, will stimulate and encourage use of information age technology by the American people; and

Whereas, it is the responsibility of Congress, rather than the courts, to determine communications public policy including its effect on economic competitiveness, national security, and foreign trade which are essential elements of a sound national telecommunications policy; and

Whereas, the continued economic growth and international competitiveness of American industry are dependent upon permitting all American companies to provide information services, to conduct research and to design, develop, manufacture, and market software, firmware, telecommunications equipment and customer premises equipment for all American residential, business and governmental telecommunications users; and

Whereas, it is imperative that American industry provide new and innovative telecommunications services and an efficient, reliable, state-of-the-art, and internationally competitive public telecommunications network to serve the growing needs of the people of the United States; and

Whereas, existing new and innovative telecommunications technologies are less accessible and less affordable in rural and small communities than in larger, urban centers; and

Whereas, the Federal Communications Commission is the appropriate federal agency, in conjunction with appropriate state regulatory agencies, to ensure fair competition in the telecommunications industry, while protecting the interests of the basic exchange customers; and

Whereas, the court order, referred to as the "Modification of Final Judgment" (MFJ) that broke up the former Bell System, prohibits the divested Bell operating companies from participating in certain telecommunications markets, namely, manufacturing and information services and long distance services; and

Whereas, the MFJ has prevented some two-thirds of America's domestically-owned telecommunications industry from competing with foreign telecommunications firms in the United States; and

Whereas, removal of MFJ restrictions on manufacturing of telecommunications equipment and customer premises equipment and on provision of information services would foster American competitiveness because:

(a) Removal would facilitate competitiveness with foreign telecommunications companies who are free to compete in markets in the United States;

(b) Removal would help bring needed telecommunications technologies that are already in existence, but which the Bell operating companies are prohibited from providing by the MFJ, to hearing impaired persons, rural schools and hospitals and others who might benefit from improved and affordable telecommunications;

(c) Removal would help stimulate the invention of a new and innovative telecommunications technologies and facilities access of said innovations to rural America;

(d) Removal would encourage investment in research, development, design and manufacture of telecommunications and customer premises equipment.

Now, Therefore, be it resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Centennial Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, that we urge the President of the United States, George Bush, and the Congress of the United States to remove restrictions that prohibit Bell operating companies from engaging in the manufacture of telecommunications equipment and customer premises equipment and the provision of information services, in the public interest of the citizens of the state of Idaho and the citizens of the United States of America, through the passage of appropriate legislation.

Be it further resolved that the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the United States, George Bush, and to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and to the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

HAVE WE WEIGHED THE RISKS OF U.S. INVOLVEMENT IN THE DRUG WAR IN PERU?

HON. PETER H. KOSTMAYER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. KOSTMAYER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call my colleagues' attention to two recent articles on the drug war in Peru. They both point to serious concerns regarding possible protracted United States military involvement in the drug war in Peru.

The first article is an editorial from the Miami Herald entitled, "U.S. Must Weigh Risks." It points out the difficulty in attempting to fight a drug war in Peru in an area controlled by the Sendero Luminoso. But it calls on the administration and Congress to not take lightly increased U.S. military involvement in a decade-old civil war. The editorial notes that dislodging Sendero will be no easy feat and could take several years. It also reminds us that sometimes U.S. involvement can play into the hands of the guerrillas by bolstering "the guerrillas' claim that they are engaged in an 'anti-imperialist' struggle."

The second article, by Juan E. Mendez, the executive director of Americas Watch, is entitled, "U.S. Joins Peru's Dirty War." Mendez points to another problem with U.S. military assistance to Peru, which is the fact that the Peruvian military is just as brutal as Sendero. "Human rights abuses by Peruvian authorities are almost too numerous to catalogue," says Mendez. He goes to on to say, "U.S. laws governing foreign aid are explicit in prohibiting assistance to forces that engage in a consistent pattern of gross violations of human rights. If the Bush administration has considered this ban at all, it has not explained Peru's exemption."

I agree with Mendez' assertion that Congress should insist on an explanation, and I urge my colleagues to read both articles.

[From the Miami Herald, Apr. 24, 1990]

U.S. MUST WEIGH RISKS

There is something eerily familiar about Washington's decision to expand the drug war by assisting in Peru's anti-insurgency effort. The plan conjures images of earlier unsuccessful U.S. efforts in Vietnam and El Salvador.

The Bush Administration wants to spend $35 million to build a new military-training base in the heart of Peru's coca-growing area. Part of the money also will pay to train and equip six Peruvian battalions totaling 5,500 troops and provide river-Patrol boats and 20 ground-attack jets to help fight the Maoist Shining Path guerrillas. The rebels have allied themselves with the coca growers and traffickers in the region, and are protecting them.

The Shining Path is the hemisphere's closest relative to Cambodia's murderous Khmer Rouge. Its members are cold-blooded and single-minded, making it virtually impossible for Peru's beleaguered authorities to wipe out the cocaine scourge at the source. Last year alone, the Shining Path was responsible for 3,188 deaths, and it has so intimidated local peasantry that it levies its own "war taxes." In such an environment, crop-substitution efforts—an essential tool for weaning Peruvian farmers away from coca cultivation—are futile.

Nevertheless, the United States cannot afford to embark hastily in such an adventure without first carefully weighing the stakes and odds involved.

Breaking the Shining Path's hold on Peru's countryside is no small task—and hardly something that can be achieved effectively without a long-term presence, as Pentagon officials are claiming. Furthermore, some experts believe that American involvement in Peru's decade-long civil war would bolster the guerrillas' claim that they are engaged in an "anti-imperialist" struggle. It could have the unwitting effect of turning them into a bona-fide nationalist movement.

Washington must be up front with the American people. It should concede that this sort of involvement carries with it the risk of becoming involved in another protracted guerrilla war in the Third World. Moreover, training and arming Peruvian anti-drug forces will achieve little or nothing unless the coca-growing peasants are helped to plant other crops—and unless their crop's users in this country are weaned from cocaine.

[From the New York Times, May 7, 1990]

U.S. JOINS PERU'S DIRTY WAR

(By Juan E. Mendez)

WASHINGTON.—Under the guise of drug interdiction in Peru, the U.S. is rushing headlong into one of the dirtiest wars being fought anywhere in the world today. If past experience in Vietnam and El Salvador is any guide, the U.S presence will exercise virtually no restraint on the murder, torture and other human rights abuses that are now routine in Peru. Instead, the U.S. will become a party to the crimes.

Administration officials candidly acknowledge that the left-wing Sendero Luminoso guerrillas are well entrenched in the Upper Huallaga region—where most of the coca consumed in the U.S. is produced. Moreover, the most recent disclosures by the Administration make it clear that the Peruvian armed forces are to be assisted with materiel, weaponry and training specifically to fight Sendero.

The plan includes a permanent base for U.S Green Berets in the contested jungle area, fighter planes, helicopters and boats and the training of virtually every Peruvian soldier to combat Sendero. This would turn the struggle against Sendero into a U.S., as well as Peruvian, war.

The war against Sendero is already 10 years old, yet this strange Maoist-Andean revolutionary organization continues to grow. Sendero is now attacking the Peruvian state in virtually every region of the country. It recruits easily among the young and the poor, its appeals undoubtedly enhanced by the collapse of the Peruvian economy and the steep deterioration of living standards.

Peruvians across the political spectrum know that Sendero threatens democracy and society. Yet hardly anyone in Peru—and certainly not the presidential candidates in the runoff election scheduled for early June—has proposed a way to deal with the insurgency. That, it seems, is left to the Peruvian Army.

Regrettably, the army is just as brutal as Sendero. For the third year, Peru heads the list of "disappearances" reported to the United Nations. In 1989 there were nearly 400 new cases, double the 1988 figure. In addition, the Peruvian Army occasionally reacts to ambushes and attacks by invading a community and killing dozens of young and old males; sometimes in full view of relatives.

The armed forces further complicate matters by encouraging villagers to form self-defense militias known as "rondas compesinas." If a village forms a ronda, Sendero punishes it for collaborating with the army; if it refuses, the army considers the community "red hot," meaning that it supports Sendero. In several massacres in recent weeks, Sendero units have murdered "ronderos" and ronderos have killed suspected "senderistas."

In the cities, the police arrest students and shantytown dwellers and charge them with terrorist crimes. The detainees are routinely and brutally tortured, while the court cases against them either languish or have to be dismissed for lack of evidence.

Human rights abuses by Peruvian authorities are almost too numerous to catalogue. In the process of putting down a June 1986 mutiny by Sendero inmates in three large jails in the Lima-Callao area, the armed forces killed almost 300 prisoners—most after they had surrendered. A lengthy investigation in the military courts has just ended in a whitewash.

In addition, right-wing death squads that have been linked to the governing party or to the army have targeted journalists, lawyers and human rights monitors; the headquarters of three prestigious human rights organizations were bombed in Lima in the last few weeks.

U.S. laws governing foreign aid are explicit in prohibiting assistance to forces that engage in a consistent pattern of gross violations of human rights. If the Bush Administration has considered this ban at all, it has not explained Peru's exemption. Congress should insist on an explanation.

If Peruvians need help in fighting Sendero, the authorities in charge of the fight should show that they have changed their ways. Promises won't do. A commitment to fighting a "clean war" must first be demonstrated in practice.

Once such a strategy is in place, the Peruvian authorities may succeed in reducing the appeal of Sendero, and American involvement may not be necessary.

ED DANKWORTH, ALAMEDA, CALIFORNIA'S MAN OF THE YEAR

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Ed Dankworth who is Alameda, California's Man of the Year for 1990. I would like to take this opportunity to commend Mr. Dankworth for his dedicated service to the city of Alameda in California's Ninth Congressional District.

Mr. Dankworth is a 69-year-old Navy veteran who was commissioned in the U.S. Navy in 1942. He became a naval aviator in 1945 and retired as captain in 1972 after 30 years of service. After leaving the Navy, he had made the concerns of Alameda his second career. He has made a significant contribution to the city and its people in a very short time.

Mr. Dankworth is married to the former Kitty Jackson and has two daughters, two granddaughters, and two grandsons. All of his grandchildren are currently attending college.

Mr. Dankworth's list of community accomplishments is endless. He is currently a member of the public utilities board, the Mastick Senior Center Advisory Board, the Alameda Red Cross board of directors, the Xanthos board of directors, and the Senior Housing Developing Committee. He is also an active member of Meals on Wheels, he is an American Association of Retired Persons income tax assistant to senior citizens, and is a member of the Red Cross disaster action team.

Mr. Dankworth also serves as president of the local Rotary, and Rotary's motto, "Service Above Self," is a fitting description of Mr. Dankworth's character. He is a dedicated community leader, and I am proud to recognize Ed Dankworth as Alameda's 1990 Man of the Year.

A CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO THE SAN PEDRO HARBOR AREA CORPS OF THE SALVATION ARMY

HON. GLENN M. ANDERSON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to, and acknowledge my deep respect for, the San Pedro Salvation Army. This organization, which has provided a great service to the area residents of San Pedro, will be holding its centennial celebration on Friday, May 11, 1990. In recognition of this special gala event, I would like to share with my colleagues some of the reasons why it is so important to the San Pedro community and the Nation.

In the year of 1989, the San Pedro Area Corps of the Salvation Army served 11,732 people in social services programs. Of this total, 1,410 included meals to the homeless and less fortunate. The youth and adult programs had 3,559 participants, and 107 young people spent 698 days at summer camp provided by the Army. At Christmas, 3,863 toys were given out, 5,328 people received Christmas aid, and over 4,500 volunteer hours were served. Throughout the Army's 100 years of service, hundreds of thousands of people in San Pedro, Wilmington, Harbor City, Lomita and Carson have been assisted.

Mr. Speaker, it is no secret that we live in a time when many citizens do not have shelter to sleep, clothes to wear, nor food to eat. The San Pedro Salvation Army has helped to alleviate some of these individual's suffering. Over the 100 years of Army history, many officers have come and gone, however, the needs of the people, and the service provided by the Army, have remained constant. And while the Salvation Army is a familiar and welcomed organization in San Pedro today, this was not always the case. During the Army's early history, organizers were met with hecklers shouting cat calls and boos as they attempted to fulfill their mission. As if the crowd was not enough, they were also met with a blinding sand storm. Fortunately, the Army persevered and is now warmly welcomed.

During this time of uncertainly, it is reassuring to know that the Salvation Army exists. The service that the organization, officers, staff, soldiers and volunteers have rendered, is done for the love of God and his children. The San Pedro Harbor Area Corps has in the highest tradition of the Army, extended their "heart to God and hand to man". In the Army's honor on its centennial celebration, my wife Lee joins me in extending our congratulations. We wish God's blessing for another successful 100 years.

SALUTING THE CLEVELAND CHAPTER OF THE ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DISORDERS ASSOCIATION

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, Alzheimer's disease is one of the most serious illnesses facing our elderly population. An estimated 2 million to 4 million Americans have Alzheimer's disease and the figures are expected to double by the end of the century. The disease causes progressive deterioration of memory, intellect, language, emotional control, and perception.

Research continues to be conducted on the cause of Alzheimer's disease. And, while this research is being undertaken, dedicated individuals and organizations across the Nation are providing important support networks and services for individuals and families who are confronted with this illness.

Mr. Speaker, at this I am proud to recognize an organization in my congressional district which was recently recognized for the leadership role it has assumed in the fight against Alzheimer's disease. The Cleveland Chapter of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association has been awarded the prestigious Anisfield-Wolf Memorial Award For Outstanding Community Service. The award recognizes the organization's efforts to provide education, family support, research and advocacy for those who suffer from Alzheimer's disease. Administered by the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, the Anisfield-Wolf Award is presented annually to an area philanthropic, community or charitble agency, and carries a $10,000 prize.

The Cleveland Chapter of the Alzheimer's Disease Association is now celebrating its 10th anniversary. Over the years, the 300-member organization has taken the responsibility for coordinating support groups, manning toll-free telephone hotlines, organizing speakers bureaus, providing training, educational meetings and conferences on Alzheimer's disease. The Alzheimer's Association also publishes a monthly newsletter and conducts funding research on the national and local level.

Mr. Speaker, I have maintained a close working relationship with the Cleveland Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association over the years. The organization has committed its resources, energy and talents to meeting the needs of those who suffer from Alzheimer's disease and their families. There efforts are very much appreciated by families who often cannot bear the financial and emotional burden alone. I am please that the Cleveland Chapter has been chosen for this important award and I take pride in saluting the membership. We are grateful and commend their efforts on behalf of those who suffer from Alzheimer's and who are in need of special care and understanding.

KEEP THE OSPREY FLYING

HON. RONALD K. MACHTLEY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I have come to the conclusion that in light of the threats posed by today's volatile world, our modern military should include weapons capable of quickly responding to low intensity conflicts such as terrorist attacks. Indeed, with the improvements in United States-Soviet relations, our national defense should begin to shift its focus from reliance on strategic nuclear weapons to more emphasis on versatile, mobile weapons and platforms.

For these reasons, I support the V-22 Osprey aircraft. This helicopter/plane is not only a unique addition to our national security, but will also spur developments in commercially applicable technologies. Such commercial application could not come at a better time, as our trade competitors such as Japan have already been serously exploring this technology. We should not be left behind in this effort.

I commend to my colleagues attention the below editorial endorsing the V-22 from the Providence Journal-Bulletin.

KEEP THE OSPREY FLYING

The current easing of world tensions is prompting a reappraisal of our nation's defense needs. Defense Secretary Richard Cheney is taking steps to see how and where Pentagon spending can be prudently cut. Presumably, there will be notable savings in such areas as overseas troop deployments and building new fleets of nuclear missiles.

As the scaling-back process moves forward, however, it's important to discern between programs that can safely be trimmed (or curtailed) and those that still have a valid purpose. In this regard, consider the proposed tilt-rotor V-22 Osprey aircraft that the Bell Helicopter division of the Textron Corporation and Boeing Corporation want to build jointly for the Marine Corps.

This revolutionary machine can fly straight up (like a helicopter) and then, by tilting its rotors to horizontal, zoom ahead in level flight, flying hundreds of miles under its own power. In the several prototypes that have been built and flown no serious design flaws have been found. The Marine Corps believes the Osprey is its aircraft of choice for many future missions, replacing helicopters for coping with potential local brushfire conflicts. Many foreign governments have shown strong interest in the plane.

Despite the arguments in favor of the Osprey, Secretary Cheney has sought to cancel the program. When Congress last year ordered him to proceed with it, he balked.

Although Mr. Cheney is showing admirable budgetary restraint, we believe that scrapping the Osprey program would be a serious mistake. This aircraft design represents a unique and valuable aviation technology. Its tilt-rotor feature, which permits it to take off and land almost anywhere, holds great potential for short- to medium-distance civilian flights, already being squeezed by congestion around big-city airports. An Osprey in civilian service could comfortably carry more than 30 passengers, and move them in and out of crowded airports with safety and fewer delays.

America faces intensifying competition from abroad wherever new technology is being applied. Whenever we cede that technological edge, we risk losing out on the profits and the competitive advantage that engineering breakthroughs confer. If America decides to shelve the Osprey program, some other nation—Japan, not inconceivably—is likely to adopt it for its own. The result, then? Chagrin in Washington at having let an innovative aviation design slip away.

ALAMEDA, CALIFORNIA'S 1990 CITIZEN OF THE YEAR—ADELINE TOYE COX

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Adeline Toye Cox, Alameda, California's Citizen of the Year for 1990. I would like to take this opportunity to commend Ms. Cox for a lifetime of dedication to the city of Alameda in California's Ninth Congressional District.

Ms. Cox grew up in the city of Alameda when it was still being served by the trains her father drove. She attended Alameda High School where she was the editor of the school newspaper, served on the debating team and was valedictorian of her graduating class. In 1912, concerned about the absence of organized sports for girls at her school, she formed a girls' basketball team and convinced the study body to purchase the ball.

Ms. Cox entered University of California at Berkeley in 1913 and received an AB in social economics. While in college, she wrote a paper that was highly critical of the way in which the county of Alameda was handling funds for the Mother's Pension Act, a government program which provided financial support to encourage widows to stay home with their children. The unpopularity of her stand may be what kept her from being tapped for the Honor Society.

In 1917, Ms. Adeline Toye married William Cox and traveled to the Philippine where her husband was a civilian employee of the Army. She worked as a teacher at the Bentley School. When the Bentley School relocated to Berkeley, Ms. Cox returned to the Bay Area, and taught until the birth of her first child.

The Cox's had three sons. Once the boys were enrolled in the public school system, Ms. Cox began her life-long involvement in the PTA and public school system. She is an honorary life member of both the California and the National PTA's. A participant for 46 years, she served for 16 years on the board of managers of the State of California Congress of Parents and Teachers.

This period also marked the beginning of a life devoted to teaching parents how to become involved in the education and development of their children. Ms. Cox went back to school and qualifed for certification in both child development and parent education. In concert with the Child Development Center at Mills College, she began innovative courses in parent education and child development. These classes were initially funded by the PTA and taught by student teachers. The success of the program eventually brought funding from the school district.

She later qualified for certification of teaching English to the foreign born and taught citizenship classes. She continued in this work for 40 years. Her devotion to the pursuit of citizenship—informing oneself of current events and all sides of political and social issues—influenced more than 500 students who have qualified for citizenship under her tenure.

Ms. Cox was a member of the founding board of directors of the bay area educational TV station, KQED, and has had a great influence on how the station was structured to provide community and educational services. She also led weekly current events discussions at the Christ Episcopal Church. She served as the Alameda representative to the Traveler's Aid Society and worked with the Alameda Hospital Auxiliary, the Camp Fire Girls. She is also an oral historian for the Alameda Historical Society.

While serving on the board of directors of the Alameda Red Cross, she became a Friendly Visitor, making weekly calls on isolated individuals. These visits, in conjunction with other social agencies in the city of Alameda, led to the founding of the Meal on Wheels Program. Ms. Cox had been a runner for the program, delivering meals for many years, before finally giving it up at age 93 when as she said, her "tottering ole legs" would no longer permit it.

Ms. Cox has also been an active member of the Alameda Adelphian Club since 1933 and served as its president from 1962 to 1964. She continues to give regular book reviews at the club. She herself was the subject of one of the U.C. Berkeley Press Oral History Series—Enhancing a Citizen's Influence, Community Service in Alameda 1917–81.

Ms. Cox is a founding member of the Almeda League of Women Voters and has served on the board of directors since its inception. This year, she was the league's chosen moderator for candidates night and, is always in demand as speaker for the pros and cons on State ballot measures.

At age 95, Adeline Toye Cox is still going strong. She continues to sit on the board of directors of the League of Women Voters and helps direct the organization's activities. She still continues as the league's speaker for the pros and cons at election time, but has given up working at the polling booth after many years of election day service. She continues to give book reviews at the Adelphian Club and can still be found giving the oral history of Alameda at the Historical Museum.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to recognize Ms. Adeline Toye Cox as Alameda's Citizen of the Year. As Alameda's League of Women Voters says, "To us, she is more than the citizen of the year–she is Citizen of the Century."

PROGRESS AT THE UNITED STATES-IRAN CLAIMS TRIBUNAL

HON. DONALD J. PEASE

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 1990

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, 3 weeks ago, in an op-ed article for the New York Times, I went public with specific ideas I have for ways in which President Bush could possibly set in motion a solution to our hostage problem in Lebanon. Today's Washington Post reports that Judge Abraham Sofaer and his legal staff at the State Department are very close to negotiating a package settlement of nearly 2,500 small claims on the backlogged docket of the United States-Iran Claims Tribunal. I applaud Judge Sofaer's initiative as well as his commitment to responsible action.

